The Ancient Lizard King thrashed a bit and let loose a long howl. Sounds of explosion spread throughout the entire space and the gourd-shaped mountain began to shake violently.

“Human, lead them in, time is running out!” The Lizard King’s consciousness permeated the air, but it was a pity that the lizardmen couldn’t understand the message.

“There is a passage here. All of you can hide inside and be safe from the explosion. Your ‘true God’ said the missiles won’t be able to hurt him. He will handle the rest.” Han Shuo quickly shouted after seeing the Redbud Knights enter to place the explosives in the cave.

The leader glanced at Han Shuo, still safe and sound at the feet of their “true God”, and seemed to believe his words. The leader rapidly fired something off in the lizardmen tongue to his brethren. They stopped hesitating and followed behind their leader to travel further into the ground via Han Shuo’s tunnel.

After all of the lizardmen had safely made their way into the tunnel, Ancient Lizard King once again filled the space with his words, “Human, don’t let those damnable invaders throw explosives in here. Even though I won’t die from the explosion, it will still injure me. Besides, that smell is highly unpleasant.”

There were seven caves leading from the mountain’s depths to this area.

The Redbuds Knight and the dark elf invaders also seemed frightened of the mountain-like Lizard King as they hadn't charged in here. Instead, they stood at the entrance and threw down the explosives.

Han Shuo summoned roughly a hundred dark creatures after hearing the Lizard King. They were everywhere, throwing back every missile that was thrown in. When the Redbud Knights and dark elves outside discovered that their bags of explosives had been thrown back out, they all fumed with rage.

The skeletal warriors naturally couldn't understand the rage outside the caves. They only knew that they should obey Han Shuo's every command, and continued to diligently throw out the missiles. The situation of the entire area had turned somewhat comical.

The remaining yin demon had been slowly trailing the Redbud Knights all along. As Han Shuo observed them for a while, he suddenly sneered, "Since you guys have set foot here, don't dream of escaping. Enjoy the craziness of the goblin missiles together with the mountain!"

Another incantation brought several bulky hate warriors into existence. They too joined the zombies and the skeletal warriors in throwing the missiles out of the cave. The hate warriors and zombies slowly moved forward, creating a blockade at the cave entrances. Once they'd sealed off the cave entrances, Han Shuo shoved some of the remaining goblin missiles into his space ring.

The knights and dark elves furiously attacked the dark creatures that had suddenly appeared. They picked up the goblin missiles on the ground and prepared to throw them back down at the Ancient Lizard King below, while vigorously cursing the dark creatures.

These goblin missiles were intricately made. They wouldn't explode unless ignited with a fierce flame, but once lit, they turned into a veritable ocean of flame. The invaders had strategically placed explosives so that they could chain the whole explosion. The mountain would be hard pressed to withstand such a large amount of goblin missiles going off all at once and would inevitably collapse.

The Ancient Lizard King was to be the main bearer of the explosion's brunt this time. Only when the explosives filled the area around him would the destructive effects be maximized. That was why the Redbud Knights were working so tirelessly to penetrate the dark creatures' blockade.

After all the lizardmen had evacuated through the tunnel and the caves were blocked by the undead creatures, the Ancient Lizard King became even more impatient, sending another message, "That's enough. Help me ignite a large fire and bury all these knights inside."

"Pleasure to be of service!" Han Shuo snickered coldly, a red flame shooting out from his hand. A zombie suddenly turned its body sideways, letting the flame pass through the gap.

"Fire, it's fire! Extinguish it!" The Redbud Knights, still fighting the dark creatures, suddenly lost their wits when they saw the fiery stream. Their loud screams turned into wails as they realized precisely how many goblin missiles had been placed around the mountain. They would be in dire straits if the explosion occurred before they withdrew from the gourd mountain.

A few more flames flew out from Han Shuo's hand, shooting through the gaps between the zombie warriors like arrows. They landed on the knights and dark elves who had yet to catch on fire.

Han Shuo's mind suddenly moved with a thought, a flame arcing directly into a goblin missile held by a hate warrior.

Chapter 343: Landslide

A loud crack followed Han Shuo's strategic retreat down the tunnel. Like a fuse, the first explosion led to a chained set of blasts. The entire mountain shook as the explosives shattered every corner, earth and rock shifting in the wake of the goblin missile detonation.

As explosions ripped through the air above it, the ten-meter long tail of the Ancient Lizard King danced like a python. Its colossal body struggled intensely, trying to break the imprisonment of the ancient formation.

Celt was still waiting for his subordinates outside when the blasts violently shook the mountain. Unprepared for the sudden explosion, it felt like his heart had been pounded by a gigantic mallet, even sending his breathing into chaos.

When he heard the thunderous explosion and saw the gourd mountain crumbling, the pupils of the gorgeously dressed noble dark elf Arlen dilated violently. He turned to grab Celt by his lapel, roaring, "How can this be, why did the goblin missiles explode now?! Damn it, you set us up, didn't you?"

Celt was even more furious than Arlen. Celt threw the latter away with such force that the dark elf stumbled. Celt's handsome visage was twisted into a ferocious grimace as he bit off, "Have you no eyes?! Do you not see my people inside too?"

Rumble.....

With one last rumble, the mountain finally collapsed in on itself. Dust wreathed around the rubble, slowly settling in the wake of the blasts. Celt and Arlen began to argue furiously, but was quickly interrupted by a series of loud cracks. Something deep within the mountain exploded upwards, throwing the gourd shaped mountain sky high into the distance until it smashed into the ground far away.

A new cloud of dust once again settled over the region. No longer did the landscape have a silhouette of a gourd-shaped mountain, just a pile of reddish brown rubble, a monument of ruin. The only other aftermath of the explosion was the scattered pieces of what was left of the Redbud Knights and the dark elves.

Celt shoved Arlen away rudely. The latter staggered back a step, staring blankly at the ruined gourd mountain, muttering, "Those were my most elite tribesmen! How could this be, how could this be!?"

Celt, on the other hand, was completely clear-headed. His expression was a vicious scowl as he shouted in fury, "Someone must have been stirring up trouble, otherwise that big lizard wouldn't have been able to escape the mountain and keep my knights from retreating! This matter is not that simple."

A light went off in Arlen's head when he heard Celt, following up with a shout, "Indeed, there must be something wrong! Those lowly lizardmen would have been no match for my brave tribesmen by themselves."

However at that moment, the object of Celt and Arlen's suspicions, Han Shuo, stood witness to an incredible sight. Creaks echoed around the chamber as the ancient magical formation started to collapse. The explosion had finally destroyed a key component of the formation while reducing the mountain to rubble. As the Ancient Lizard King thrashed like a being possessed, an enormous snap resounded. The ancient magical formation that had bound him for eons... had finally cracked open.

"Aowuuuu....."

An unearthly howl, unlike anything unleashed before, ripped out of the ruined remnants of the mountain. The Ancient Lizard King Degassi exerted every iota of his tremendous strength to further break the formation. The formation had already passed its breaking point from the goblin missiles, and the first crack spread like an errant spiderweb, reaching six of the eight corners.

The Ancient Lizard King brought his massive presence crashing down on every corner of the octagonal magic formation. As each corner crumbled, Dagassi's aura grew one bit stronger. There was a moment of silence when the last of the corners shattered, and Dagassi erupted from underneath the thousands of pounds of rocks that had previously buried him.

A mountain of corded muscle broke free from the rubble, accompanied by a roar that shook the earth and skies. The Ancient Lizard King took a moment to beat his chest and stamp his feet, giving full vent to his innumerable years of accumulated resentment.

Han Shuo, hiding within the tunnel, suddenly grew aghast. As each formation corner was destroyed, the presence of the Ancient Lizard King had become one notch corner. He had originally estimated the Ancient Lizard King to be as powerful as the Lord of the Flames, but he had been badly mistaken. With the formation in ruins, it seemed his true ability was far more terrifying.

“The ancient magical formation not only confined his body, but also suppressed his power. I didn’t expect this Ancient Lizard King to be so powerful. It may be that only demigods could defeat him!” Han Shuo was strangely terrified when he sensed the Ancient Lizard King’s power.

The lizardmen next to him were gibbering rapidly with excitement, each with an extremely fervent expression. The lizardmen all kowtowed when they saw the Ancient Lizard King’s thick thighs pull free from the cracked ancient formation like towering old trees.

Han Shuo no longer wanted to remain anywhere in the vicinity of this terrifying creature. He shot out from the tunnel that had been torn apart by the Ancient Lizard King. At the same time, his sharp eyes caught sight of a small ground pangolin sneaking out. It was carefully avoiding the furious Ancient Lizard King.

Han Shuo felt something odd when he saw this incredibly small pangolin. The pangolin suddenly shapeshifted into a hawk and put on a burst of speed, clawing frantically at the air to move faster. Han Shuo instantly identified it to be Kassel in disguise.

Standing at the feet of the mountain-like Ancient Lizard King, Han Shuo looked at the stunned invaders. He discovered that Kassel was flying back to Celt’s side, so he held off on dealing with him just yet.

Both the two leaders of the invasion, Celt and Arlen, had oddly colored expressions on their faces. Their lips grew dry when they saw the enormous monster climb out of the ruins, at a loss of what to do next.

“Human, didn’t you say the creature feared flame and missiles?! Why is the mountain gone, but he still alive and well?” Arlen suddenly felt that he had been toyed with. Truth be told, if it wasn’t for the Redbud Knights suffering a loss as big as his, he would’ve already thrown caution to the wind to attack Celt.

Celt was also at a loss for words when confronted with the massive creature who was embroiled in venting its anger amidst wild howls. He weakly stammered, “I, how would I know?”

Kassel flew over and shifted back to human form in a hurry. Before the two invaders could begin arguing again, he pointed at the nondescript figure that was Han Shuo, standing at the feet of the Ancient Lizard King. Kassel’s face was black as he said, “It’s him! He helped the old Lizard King escape! Otherwise, that big lizard would’ve definitely been finished.”

Only then did Celt, Arlen and the dark elf matriarch Dana notice the inconspicuous Han Shuo. Celt and Dana immediately recognized Han Shuo. Their blood hatred of Han Shuo nearly sent them charging straight at him, regardless of the consequences, when they saw him.

“It’s him again! His name is Bryan, a nobleman of the Lancelot Empire. I must personally kill him!” Celt growled between gritted teeth, his eyes fixed on Han Shuo as he explained to Arlen.

End of part 1 of the chapter!

“I know him! He ruined our plans last time, or else we could have made the lizardmen suffer a great deal!” The bewitching Dana was no different, screeching her fury as she pointed at Han Shuo.

“You shameless, despicable little invaders! I’m going to rip you to shreds right now to appease my anger!” The Ancient Lizard King finally took note of Celt and his band, causing the air to shake with his mental message. He threw his head back in a long roar to the heavens as he began to move towards them.

The earth shook with each foot he stomped down with. Dagassi moved several dozens of meters with each step as his colossal body moved with a speed that belied its size. He quickly caught up with the remnants of the invading army, flattening a group of heavy armor Redbud Knights into meat paste as he made his way over to where Celt was.

Dagassi's ten meter long tail writhed like it had a mind of its own. Several dozens of Redbud Knights and dark elves were batted into the air like twigs with each swing. The massive body of the Ancient Lizard King moved with an unparalleled presence, projecting an irresistible momentum.

He made the earth tremble with each step, trampling several knights into the mud with each footfall. His tail was like a deadly weapon, snapping in the air with each step, reaping the lives of the knights and dark elves one by one.

Celt and Arlen's underlings repeatedly fired magic spells at the Ancient Lizard King's body. However, his huge, rock-like body seemed to possess an outstanding anti-magic effect. That level of attacks simply couldn't hurt him at all.

Arrows, spears and lances couldn't pierce his durable body either. Only the two archers wielding strange bows next to Arlen could shoot out arrows possessing dark magic elements, penetrating his skin to leave a minor wound on the Ancient Lizard King's body.

It was a pity that that level of injury was like a mosquito bite to the Ancient Lizard King. Their effects were minimal, incapable of hindering him as he ravaged their forces. More and more Redbud Knights and dark elves were trampled into bits.

What was even more horrifying was the Ancient Lizard King's wondrous attacks. Waves and waves of strange, mental energy shot in all directions, even much more powerful now that the old Ancient Lizard King was unsealed. It only took two of these attacks to heavily injure a Redbud Knight, and three to kill one on the spot.

The dark elves were even worse off. Each successful attack meant the death of a dark elf. The only exception was Arlen, who could rely on defensive magics to withstand the attacks.

“Retreat, we all need to retreat!” Celt painfully gave a loud shout. He didn’t take out his artifact “Starry Sky”. He knew that even if he did, he still wouldn’t be able to defeat the Ancient Lizard King with the power he currently possessed. That was why he decisively issued a retreat order.

Needless to say, Arlen was absolutely out of his mind with terror, and just charged haphazardly. In his panic to survive, he even left Dana behind. It was a pity that Dana’s strength didn’t amount to much. In a moment of carelessness, she tripped when she was fleeing and saw a reddish black mountain loom into view as she scrambled to her feet. That was the last thing she saw before she was flattened into meat paste.

Following Dagassi, Han Shuo happily had the Demonslayer Edge absorb the power of the dead invaders. The yin demon was also closely observing Celt, waiting for the moment he lost focus to deliver a fatal blow.

By this time, Cecilia had led her Dark Mantle team to the site of the battle. They had hardly reached the battle when the enormous figure of the Ancient Lizard revealed itself and shocked them silly. They stood at a distance, completely stunned by the turn of events.

“That, what is that thing, it’s so big!” The fire journeyman mage Chrissie even cheered with a look of joy and excitement.

“This must be the creature inside the magic crystal mine. Such strong undulations of power, it should be close to a rank five super rank magic creature. How could such a powerful creature appear in this layer?” Cecilia couldn’t help but exclaim in shock as she watched the mountainous Ancient Lizard King pursue Celt and Arlen.

“Bryan, that’s Bryan!” Emily also exclaimed. She had flown into the sky using her levitation skills, which allowed her to see further. She shouted loudly upon seeing Han Shuo next to the waist of Ancient Lizard King.

Han Shuo had originally been near the Ancient Lizard King’s waist. He flew up to the Ancient Lizard King’s shoulder in the blink of an eye. Pointing at the panicked and escaping Celt and Arlen, he said, “These two fellows are the leaders. Kill them and you can avenge your children's deaths!"

"Aowuuuuu....."

Dagassi once again let out an earth-shattering roar. The sound wave itself was like a terrifying weapon, turning the shrubs and leaves into dust.

"Damn it, I definitely won't forgive that despicable human!" The noble dark elf Arlen had almost been injured by that sound wave, and couldn't help but curse when he heard Han Shuo egg the Ancient Lizard King onwards.

Celt was well aware of how powerful Han Shuo was. He believed that even without the Ancient Lizard King in the picture, Han Shuo would have no trouble annihilating Arlen. Celt kept his mouth shut, sneering inwardly at Arlen while frantically searching for a path to escape. He just wanted to get away from this terrifying Ancient Lizard King as soon as possible.

Dagassi had killed more than a thousand of Redbud Knights and dark elves by then. Only a few hundreds were left of the invaders, and they were bolting in all directions. Not a single one dared to look back, let alone stop to catch their breath.

So advised by Han Shuo, the Ancient Lizard King fixed his eyes on Celt and Arlen and no longer paid any heed to the small fry. His huge body seemed slow, but every step carried him dozens of meters. In addition, he was repeatedly using his presence to attack. The two fellows were being pursued miserably, as they hatefully cursed the instigator in their hearts. Their curses warmly greeted each and every one of Han Shuo's eighteen generations of ancestors.

"It's really that brat, why is he together with that monster?" Cecilia was floating next to Emily in the air using an unknown method, looking at Han Shuo sitting comfortably on the Ancient Lizard King's shoulder. Her heart was in turmoil and her feelings all disarray, as if jars of five-spice powder had been upended.

Cecilia actually hadn't found Han Shuo annoying in the beginning. On the contrary, she even somewhat appreciated his strength. However, Han Shuo had repeatedly gone against her, from the orc's shop in the Valley of Sunshine to this mission. He had never once let her conduct her business smoothly.

This made Cecilia, having become one of the three heavyweights in the Dark Mantle at a young age, extremely furious. In her heart, she wanted to see Han Shuo fail. The more he failed, the happier she would feel.

However, reality never pleased her. Earlier she learned from Chrissie that he had caused the loss of Celt's ear along with the green dragon. Now seeing him in high spirits with the big lizard chasing Celt, how was he failing as she'd wished?

The mission to deal with Celt was originally theirs, but now that the lone Han Shuo had inserted himself, he'd interrupted their plan. He hadn't even seemed to exert himself at all, yet was able to force Celt into such a miserable state. This was an embarrassment for Cecilia, who'd spent so much time on Celt but was still helpless.

"Ah, it's really Bryan, he is so handsome!" Chrissie finally saw Han Shuo and couldn't help but yell.

"You little boy-crazy girl, hurry up and shut your mouth. Don't lead that big lizard here!" Fearing the lizard would come, Cecilia snapped at Chrissie.

What one didn't want was obviously what one would get. The Ancient Lizard King didn't hear them, but the wicked Celt obviously did. He suddenly changed directions, leading the experts of the Redbud Knights straight in their direction.

Chapter 344: Deathly pursuit

“Not good, that blasted Celt! Everyone, be careful!” Cecilia’s pretty face paled when she saw Celt’s sudden change in direction. Celt led the group of knights as well as Arlen and his dark elves in an about face towards the stunned Cecilia.

“Master, that Bryan is also a member of Dark Mantle. He won’t dare to act impudently as long as we capture those women.” Kassel vigorously urged Celt along. The Ancient Lizard King’s appearance and subsequent brutality had struck a deep chord of fear within him.

“If they’re with Bryan, we can use them to force him to submit.” Celt responded tightly. He coldly rushed towards Cecilia as he drew “Starry Sky” from his space ring.

From his position atop the old Lizard King’s shoulder, Han Shuo quickly identified Emily from afar. Since the Redbud Knights and dark elves had made such a flashy mess of things, it was impossible to keep Dark Mantle in the dark. Their appearance at this juncture was well within Han Shuo’s expectations.

“You can’t let those ones leave alive, otherwise you can definitely expect this place to turn into a warzone in the near future!” Han Shuo whispered urgently in the old Lizard King’s ear. His eyes were fixed on the two leaders, a murderous glint flashing through his eyes.

“I don’t need you to remind me.” The Ancient Lizard King didn’t bother with audible speech, letting his voice echo within Han Shuo’s mind.

At this point, the Ancient Lizard King had left the corpses of more than a thousand knights and dark elves in his wake as he rampaged through the combined army. The lucky survivors bolted in every direction, doing their damndest to put as much distance as they could between them and the ferocious figure of the Lizard King.

Suddenly, russet colored light shone over the massive body of the Ancient Lizard King. Astonishingly, his enormous body began to shrink, the light folding inwards.

Still atop the Lizard King's shoulder, Han Shuo had front row seats to witness this transformation. A quick mental message from the old Lizard King assuaged his worries, the Lizard King was simply transforming into his human form. Han Shuo leaped off his perch, hovering in the air.

Dagassi's colossal body rapidly shrunk under the russet colored light. The twenty meter tall form of the prehistoric apex predator was replaced with a hundred and seventy centimeter tall old man within ten breaths. His face was flushed, and the only remnant of his previous form was a lizardman's tail extending from his spine. A red robe appeared out of nowhere, casually draping itself over him.

Dagassi's transformation had actually resulted in such an earth shattering change to his features. Nowhere could one see the behemoth that had slaughtered knights and elves like swatting flies in this small, normal looking old man. He looked up to see Han Shuo hovering in the sky above him. He stretched, shouting in the human tongue, "Get your friends somewhere safe, I'm going to exact my blood price from those invaders."

The old Lizard King had forgone mental transmission, instead using the common tongue. It seemed that the ancient magical formation that bound him had also sealed his ability to freely transform. Now that he could shift into a human form, he'd regained the ability to use the common human tongue.

As he spoke, he lifted himself haltingly off the ground. His actions seemed a bit out of practice, seemingly searching for that familiarity he once had in the air, the sense he'd lost from being sealed underground for so long.

Dagassi's reminder broke Han Shuo's fascination with the Lizard King's transformation. He looked up to see Celt and his group almost at Cecilia and her group's heels. Kassel had taken the opportunity to shapeshift into his favorite great earthen bear, causing the ground to crack beneath his charge as he charged Cecilia.

The noble dark elf Arlen gazed dumbstruck, eyes wide, at Kassel's transformation. Turning his head, he caught sight of “Starry Sky” in Celt’s hands. Apprehension grew in his heart as he remembered how arrogant he’d been in front of them earlier.

He broke out in a cold sweat. Arlen had been rudely woken to the fact that his men’s strength paled in comparison to that of the Redbud Knights during the Ancient Lizard King’s rampage earlier. With “Starry Sky”, he could admit that he was no longer Celt’s match. Now that this druid subordinate had revealed a transformation skill that allowed him to turn into a great earthen bear, Arlen realized that if he’d really come to blows with Celt, he really would’ve been defeated miserably.

While Arlen’s heart trembled with fear, a different sort of emotion was rousing within Cecilia’s heart. She cursed vehemently inside as she hovered in the air, shouting, “Move! Don’t just stand there, Celt is coming!”

Even in his current state, Celt was renowned as the leader of the Redbud Knights, one of the top ten knight troops, across the Profound Continent. The loss of his green dragon didn’t cause noticeable drop in his strength when he wielded “Starry Sky”. Cecilia may be one of the three heavyweights of the Dark Mantle, but she didn’t specialize in combat. With little experience to draw on, seeing Celt and his band form a charge immediately caused her to panic.

“Annoying women, don’t expect to leave here alive today!” Celt shouted. “Starry Sky” started to emit a blinding light as his charge turned into a full assault. It was like the stars had descended on the entire underground world. Off to the side, the great earthen bear Kassel also mounted his own assault to pressure Cecilia and her band.

In the face of this twin onslaught, a crimson light suddenly streaked through the sky. Even as it sped through the sky, its point rapidly coalesced into a dense orb of bloodlust. The blood colored orb of light began to rapidly spin, as its slivers began to rattle in warning. The enormous ball of prickly, crimson light shook as it continued to rapidly rotate in midair. Han Shuo had finally unleashed the “Bloody Radiance of Ten Thousand Cuts”.

The wails of weeping ghosts and howling wolves accompanied the “Bloody Radiance of Ten Thousand Cuts” as it shot out from the Demonslayer Edge. It careened through the air towards Kassel’s great earthen bear form. He was on the verge of lashing out in a powerful blow against Emily when he sensed the dense aura of killing intent locking onto him from behind. Quick as thought, Kassel changed targets, skidding to a stop as he turned to face the scarlet orb that was screaming through the air towards him.

Emily was no slouch, she quickly harnessed her levitation skills to throw herself out of harm’s way. Her dark hair danced in the wind as she chanted under her breath, magic staff in hand. Two massive Hands of Death appeared in mid air, swiping at Kassel’s transformed feet.

Kassel has zeroed in on Han Shuo’s Demonslayer Edge as the biggest threat, and didn’t expect Emily to launch a counterattack mid-retreat. Both of his feet were firmly grabbed by her two Hands of Death.

There was no time left to try and pry himself loose. Kassel could only grit his teeth and use his front claws to catch the spinning scarlet orb. The crimson light rotated madly in the bear’s claws, fiery sparks shooting out from its palms as the bear stamped his feet in agony.

After depleting thirty percent of its energy reserves in that one attack against Kassel, the Demonslayer Edge once again turned into a streak of red light and returned to Han Shuo, leaving behind the wailing Kassel with his two mangled bear arms.

Emily suddenly decided to not pursue Celt and dark elf Arlen either as she sped further away.

Boom.....

A strong force smashed down from the sky, abruptly trampling the ten meters tall bear into the ground. Dozens of attacking force waves simultaneously invaded Kassel’s body. He bled profusely from his nose and mouth, his body shrinking back into human form.

The one who’d attacked Kassel from above was indeed the Ancient Lizard King Dagassi, who descended from a red dot in the middle of the sky to land next to Kassel. "You are one of the main perpetrators, how could I let you escape!?" Dagassi was still using the form of a ruddy old man, so he stomped right on Kassel's head.

Kassel's skull shattered like a rotten watermelon with a crunching sound.

End of Part 1 of the chapter.

On the other side, Cecilia and the Dark Mantle members were desperately trying to evade Celt and Arlen's pursuit. The latter two were obviously unaware of Han Shuo and Cecilia's dubious relationship. The only reason Han Shuo had rushed over was to rescue Emily. He didn't care for the rest, and he watched Cecilia's group fleeing without offering a helping hand.

Only when he saw the fire journeyman mage Chrissie almost caught by a Redbud Knight's killing move did Han Shuo make a move, blocking the attack for her. He shouted from afar, "Chrissie, come over to my side! I will keep you safe!"

"Bryan, hurry and help Mistress Cecilia. Hurry!" Chrissie seemed to care very much for Cecilia. She didn't run to Han Shuo, instead disregarding her own safety to ask him to save Cecilia.

Emily was not too far away from Han Shuo at this moment. Knowing the grudge between him and Cecilia, her elegant black brows furrowed. She didn't say anything to persuade him, flying directly to Cecilia instead.

Standing proudly in the air, Han Shuo saw Emily flying to Cecilia without another word. He couldn't help but let out a low curse before rushing after her. He couldn't care less whether Cecilia lived or died. Emily however, was his woman. He absolutely didn't want anything to happen to her.

In actuality, Emily was secretly paying attention to Han Shuo's actions. A sweet feeling surged in her heart when she saw him fly after her. She knew Han Shuo had only followed to ensure her safety. He still wouldn't interfere even if Cecilia was in grave danger.

Celt was busily pursuing Cecilia, but Arlen saw Emily fly over. He immediately gave an order to the two dark elven archers behind him. The archers raised their bows and aimed at Emily, magical fluctuations coming into existence around the arrowheads.

The black magic scepter in Arlen's hand waved once as he chanted a spell in the dark elven tongue. An enormous black python formed from dark elements slithered out from the magic scepter. It shook its head and tail and sprang towards Emily, its blood maw gaping open.

"You want to die?!" Han Shuo roared, the Demonslayer Edge flying out of his right hand. Bloody light exploded out right in the middle of the enormous python.

The Demonslayer Edge was like a bloody mire, a terrifying suction force devouring everything around it. Even the air was no exception as the vacuum force began to increase. The black python was helpless in the face of such a power and was sucked in whole.

The two archers next to Arlen couldn't resist either. They shrieked, but simply couldn't control their bodies and were involuntarily sucked into the mire. The archers, along with the surrounding gravel and plants whirled into the air, heading straight onto the mire created by the Demonslayer Edge.

Arlen's soul seemed to have fled his body in his fright. He decisively stabbed the black magic scepter into the ground, tightly holding onto it with one hand. He took out a dark magic scroll with another hand. He quickly drew something on the scroll, and a mass of black mist rose from it to wrap around his body.

Many gas beings that resembled Arlen formed from the black mist, sent flying with the slightest gust of wind. These gaseous beings twisted like leaves in the wind, but they didn't seem affected by the Demonslayer Edge's suction force. Soon, they were drifting further and further away, about to vanish into the distance.

However, Arlen had obviously forgotten about the existence of the old Lizard King Dagassi. He'd been observing the changes in the scene without making a move. All of a sudden, he shot dozens of force waves underground.

A mournful cry came from the depths of the earth. When he heard it was indeed Arlen's scream, Dagassi cackled and murmured, "You despicable dark elves still dare to try and flee in my presence?"

"Dagassi, what are you just standing there for? Killing them was your responsibility, when did it shift to me?!" Han Shuo had long seen that the Ancient Lizard King had taken the position of a bystander, watching with an eye of interest. He couldn't help but yell loudly when he sensed Arlen being killed underground.

"Funny little human fellow, you alone seem capable of handling them. I'll just act as your assistant." Dagassi had suddenly developed an interest in Han Shuo, continuing, "I've lived for countless years, but this is the first time I'm coming across something like your combat style. This cultivation method of yours seems rather special, so I'm waiting to see how many more miraculous areas there are to you."

Dagassi was very powerful, and naturally his eyesight was rather sharp. He only needed a little bit of time to realize that Han Shuo's magic cultivation didn't resemble fighting aura nor follow the tenets of magical elements. He'd never seen anything like it in his life. As a result, Dagassi was immediately interested in Han Shuo, and decided to see what depths this human had. This was why he hadn't hurried to go on the offensive.

Hearing his words, Han Shuo snorted coldly, "If so, then just watch."

Han Shuo moved like lightning to Emily's side as his words fell on Dagassi's ears, grabbing her waist and stopping her from flying. He then shouted to Celt, "Celt, chasing those people is useless. I don't care if they die. If you don't run away, you'll be dead without a doubt. Are you crazy?"

Celt, who was diligently chasing Cecilia and her team, almost vomited blood in anger upon hearing Han Shuo's words. He looked back and saw no trace of Arlen, just Han Shuo standing there with a mocking look. Han Shuo appeared to have no intention of saving those people. He obviously wasn't joking.

“Damned Kassel, giving me false information!” Celt spat out a low curse. He took a moment to think, and quit chasing Cecilia. He gathered the remnants of his Redbud Knights and forged a path deep into the bushes.

“Emily, how did that Cecilia become one of the Dark Mantle’s three heavyweights? Her strength can’t compare with Candide or your brother Amyes!” Han Shuo asked Emily in surprise when he saw that Cecilia only knew how to duck and weave.

Han Shuo’s jeering had forced Celt to give up on chasing Cecilia. Emily struggled out of his embrace in embarrassment when she saw Cecilia was safe and sound. She timidly looked around, slowly floating down before finally replying to Han Shuo, who was still closely following her.

“Sister Cecilia doesn’t specialize in fighting. Moreover, her grandfather is one of the oldest veterans of Dark Mantle, and is also the only sacred magus of the Empire. You’ve even met him before.”

Han Shuo was stunned by her words. He exclaimed, “No wonder! I thought her power was too weak for her to hold this position at such a young age. She has so many strange magic artifacts, so it’s all thanks to her sacred magus grandfather. Oh right, I don’t remember meeting any sacred magus, where have I met him? You aren’t kidding me, are you?”

“Of course not, but I can’t tell you who he is since it’s a rule. Anyway, you’ll definitely meet him after you reach a certain rank in Dark Mantle.” Emily smiled delicately and said, seemingly amused at Han Shuo’s confused expression.

“Her grandfather, I have met him...?” Han Shuo’s thoughts raced. When he came up empty handed after a moment, he no longer spared effort thinking about it.

“You little brat, you’re definitely a scoundrel of the first degree, making an old man like me take action myself!” The old Lizard King’s voice rolled in waves from behind. Han Shuo then saw a red shadow shoot through the air in Celt’s direction.

“Right, Celt has an artifact and a space ring, we still need to take a look.” Han Shuo suddenly remembered the wealth that Celt carried. He hurriedly pulled Emily along and flew towards the two.

The earth elite zombie was still deep underground, following Han Shuo's orders. It tunneled towards Arlen's corpse, ready to strip him bare of his valuables.

As for Kassel, whose head had been crushed by Dagassi, Han Shuo couldn't care less. The druids worshipped nature and didn't like to collect weath. The traitor Kassel hadn't had any opportunities to collect magic crystal ores, and Han Shuo hadn't seen a space ring on his hands either. Obviously, he wasn't a generous sort.

Chapter 345: Rank five demigod existence

The power of Ancient Lizard King Dagassi was indeed horrifying. By the time Han Shuo and Emily arrived, he was kicking Celt around like a ball.

Celt's thick armor was far more durable and solid than ordinary armor. However, under Dagassi's blows, they dented like scrap metal. The sounds of bones cracking echoed from Celt's body.

The Redbud Knights were extremely loyal to Celt. They fearlessly went up against Dagassi, launching an offensive to buy enough time for Celt to escape.

Unfortunately, the power gap was too large. Dagassi didn't even need to use that much force to disembowel more than a dozen knights with explosions, killing them on the spot. The fighting aura from their swords and spears simply weren't enough to cause the Ancient Lizard King any harm.

Maybe if Celt had been one rank higher, combining the strength of a divine knight and his artifact "Starry Sky", he might have been able to pose a threat to Dagassi. However, it appeared he would never have this opportunity. His body had just crumpled to the ground when it was firmly stepped on by Dagassi.

A crunching sound resounded, and one last footprint was now imprinted on his chest. His internal organs splattered open with the impact, blood overflowing from the footprint. Celt's eyes rolled upwards as he lost all signs of life.

The cosmic light imbuing the "Starry Sky" dulled after Celt's death. The weapon lay quietly amongst the bushes. It didn't have any of the characteristics of a divine artifact.

Flying over with Emily, Han Shuo's eyes were shining as he stared at "Starry Sky", and he shot forward without a word. However before he could lay hands on it, the artifact lying in the bush suddenly flew into Dagassi's hand.

“What? You want this thing?” Dagassi looked at Han Shuo and asked, shaking the “Starry Sky” in his hand a bit.

Han Shuo nodded, feeling somewhat embarrassed. He gave a dry laugh, “I do want it.”

“I see the weapon in your hand is even more ferocious than this one, aren’t you a little greedy?” The transformed Dagassi wasn’t a monster without emotion anymore. On the contrary, he was very human as he spoke to Han Shuo with a teasing tone.

“I don’t need that sword, but I have a very good friend. If they can use that sword, their strength will improve by a lot.” Han Shuo relaxed, squinting at the joking Dagassi.

“Hmph, it’s for that chit Phoebe, isn’t it?” Han Shuo had been anxious to get to “Starry Sky” earlier, so he’d shot ahead and left Emily behind. She used her levitation skills and floated to his side, her delicate face obviously expressing some anger.

Hearing Emily’s words and seeing her jealous appearance, Han Shuo didn’t know what to say and just stood there, smiling dryly.

“This sword is indeed not bad, but I killed Celt, so it should belong to me!” The Ancient Lizard King Dagassi looked at Han Shuo with a smile on his face. He only continued when he saw the latter nod his head, “But this sword is of no use to me. If you really want it, I can give it to you. As long as you agree to some of my conditions, I will also give you that human’s space ring as well.”

Hearing that there was still room for negotiation in the Ancient Lizard King’s words. Han Shuo was startled as he asked, “Tell me about the conditions first.”

Dagassi was in no rush to speak. He swished his tail towards Celt, and the latter’s space ring flew into his hand. Dagassi glanced at the ring caught in his hand, and waves of strange energy surged into the ring.

With a snapping sound, the ring’s magical boundary was forcibly destroyed. Dagassi explored Celt’s ring a little, then squinted and laughed cheerfully at Han Shuo, "Lots of good stuff inside, hmm. An estimated value of at least a million gold coins. This fellow was quite the money maker."

Han Shuo's heart itched with greed when he heard Dagassi's words. However, the latter still hadn't stated his conditions, so Han Shuo also wasn't in a hurry to ask. He stared at Dagassi as he waited, knowing the latter would definitely bring up his conditions in a moment.

"All of the magic crystal ores below the gourd mountain, plus this priceless divine artifact and the wealth inside this space ring, they can all belong to you if you promise me a few things."

After taking a deep breath, Dagassi stated his conditions to Han Shuo.

"Name it!" Han Shuo said simply.

"First, protect the lizardmen in my stead as long as you're alive. Moreover, if we have the chance to meet again, I hope you will agree to one more condition. I will not say what it is for the time being, but you have to agree to it." Dagassi looked at Han Shuo and said solemnly.

"With you here, who would dare to touch the lizardmen? As long as you are willing to spend some time in the underground world, this layer can easily be dominated by the lizardmen. Why would you need my help then?" Surprised, Han Shuo couldn't help but give voice to his doubts.

Shaking his head, the Ancient Lizard King heaved a long sigh and said, "I cannot stay in the underground world. Otherwise, it may directly lead to the genocide of my children. There are some things you can't understand now. Maybe the next time you meet, you'll understand."

"Wait for me to talk to my children, then I will leave to take revenge on the one who imprisoned me. Perhaps we will never have the chance to meet again, as I'm likely to face death. However if we do meet a next time, I think your strength would far surpass now. By then, if I haven't yet died, you may be able to help me."

The power of Ancient Lizard King was even greater than that of the Lord of the Flames. Han Shuo couldn't even imagine the kind of people or creatures that could kill him. Dagassi seemed ready for death, and Han Shuo didn't know how his future self could help him. However for Han Shuo, the immediate benefits at hand significantly outweighed his future worries.

Therefore, he only hesitated a little then nodded readily in agreement, "I will help you take care of the lizardmen as long as I'm alive. However my ability is limited, and I can only try my best. On the other hand, next time we meet, I hope your condition won't be too difficult to achieve."

"Haha, good, very good!" The Ancient Lizard King laughed loudly. He didn't make Han Shuo swear a solemn vow to the gods. He readily threw "Starry Sky" and Celt's space ring to Han Shuo, saying, "I believe you. Let's go, I'll help you get the magic crystal ores and settle matters with my children."

Han Shuo held the space ring and checked it with his consciousness. He was immediately dazzled by the wealth inside. There were all kinds of translucent, sparkling crystals of different colors and piles of gold, silver and beautiful jade. Celt must have plundered them from the golden dragon or the underground world.

Aside from that, there were weapons and equipment that had the distinct aura of magic elements. They must have been forged by a great alchemist and were items of priceless value. There were also three ownerless crystal cards of a hundred thousand gold coins. Anyone could directly withdraw money from these cards.

Just as Dagassi had said, the total value of Celt's space ring was at least a million gold coins. If Phoebe sold this large number of crystals, gold, silver and jade, they'd possibly be worth more than a million gold coins.

"Alright, I'll go with you." Han Shuo said. However, he hesitated a little upon seeing the dead bodies littered over the ground, "The weapons and armor of the dead Redbud Knights and dark elves are very good. They may even have more gold coins in their pockets. If you don't mind, can I loot them all before we leave?"

A deep laugh bubbled out of Dagassi. He was about to agree when his eyes brightened suddenly, he said, “Those armors aren’t suitable for my children because of their body structures, but the weapons can be used. How about the armor and the other items to you, but the weapons to my children. What do you say?”

“No problem.” Han Shuo readily agreed, then laughed and said, “Wait a moment, I’ll collect these things quickly.”

Han Shuo took out the bone staff when he finished speaking, chanting a spell. Rows of white skeletal warriors walked out from thin air, scattering out like snowflakes and collecting the equipment and valuables on Han Shuo’s orders.

While Han Shuo took out the bone staff, the Ancient Lizard King Dagassi suddenly shot forward like lightning, screeching to a halt in front of Han Shuo, his eyes fixed on the bone staff. His expression was in absolute contrast to the relaxed one he had on before.

Han Shuo was scared stiff by this drastic change. Seeing the old Ancient Lizard King staring strangely at his bone staff, he hurriedly withdrew it. Taking a step back while feeling somewhat guilty, he asked, “What’s the matter?”

After Han Shuo put away the bone staff, all of Dagassi’s surprise and attention refocused on him instead. Han Shuo felt a bit uneasy by that shocked look, not knowing what was running through Dagassi’s mind.

The old Ancient Lizard King finally broke the tense silence with a loud laugh, “Little fellow, it seems we do have some shared fortune! Do you know the origin of that bone staff?”

Han Shuo was dumbfounded. He looked at the Ancient Lizard King in shock, gingerly asking, “Could it be that you know?”

“Heh heh, looks like you don’t know anything about it. That bone staff belonged to my previous master. Do you want to know its secrets?” The Ancient Lizard King asked Han Shuo, looking somewhat excited.

“Your previous master!” Han Shuo was shocked, then exclaimed, “You’re from the Calamity Church?”

“Calamity Church? What kind of organization is that? I’ve never heard of it.” The Ancient Lizard King replied with a frown, then sighed, “Since the bone staff is now in your hands, my master is either dead, or not on this plane. I wonder where the master is now, aii!”

When he heard that Dagassi didn’t know anything about the Calamity Church, Han Shuo thought for a bit then asked, “Just what realm are you? How long have you lived?”

“I was already following master when I was just a mutated lizard. I’m currently a rank five super rank magic creature. As for how long I have lived, even I myself don’t remember clearly. I only know that I have been sealed here for about five thousand years.” Dagassi explained to Han Shuo with a smile. His attitude toward the latter was even more cordial than before.

An old monster indeed! Han Shuo secretly exclaimed. No wonder he didn’t know about the Calamity Church. The Calamity Church had less than a thousand years of history, it wouldn’t be strange for the Ancient Lizard King to not know of them. It appeared the origin of this bone staff was even more ancient than the Calamity Church knew, and had deeper connections than just the Calamity Church.

“Can you tell me about the abilities of the bone staff as well as its origin?” When it came to the secrets of the bone staff, Han Shuo could only hope to slowly uncover the fog that surrounded it. He very much wanted to learn what secrets it held.

“Heh heh, when you figure out all the mysteries of the bone staff, you will naturally come to understand the matter of five thousand years ago. Whether master died on this plane or has already left it, master has definitely left an explanation of everything inside the bone staff. As long as you completely grasp the staff, it will tell you everything you want to know. Me telling you is useless, and what I know can’t be as detailed as what master has left inside the staff. You should figure it out on your own.” Just like that necromancy archmage Wolf, the Ancient Lizard King didn’t directly tell Han Shuo the secrets of the bone staff. He only left some clues for Han Shuo to use in digging out the truth on his own.

“You’ve reached the strength of a fifth rank creature. Isn’t that the same as a demigod, who else in this world could be more powerful than you?” While inwardly criticizing the Ancient Lizard King for not straight out telling him everything, Han Shuo suddenly remembered the Ancient Lizard King’s words earlier.

“I may seem powerful in the Profound Continent, but I can tell you, this continent is not as simple as you see it to be. Here, there’s no lack of beings like me. If the powerful existences from five thousand years ago are still around in the Profound Continent, then even more terrifying beings than me definitely exist. You should take precautions.” Dagassi looked deeply at Han Shuo, reminding him carefully.

Han Shuo was once again shocked by these words. The most powerful presences in the various human countries only stood at the sacred rank. Han Shuo had never heard of any existences surpassing the demigods. If he hadn’t met Dagassi here, he would never have known that his continent had a rank five super rank magic creature on par with demigods.

As far as Han Shuo knew, Dagassi’s level of power allowed him the freedom to do whatever he wished on the Profound Continent. But, his words didn’t have a trace of arrogance. Far from it, in fact, it actually seemed to hold a hint of trepidation when talking about those existences more powerful than him on the Profound Continent.

If Dagassi was already a rank five super rank magic creature with power equivalent to a demigod, then those that were even more powerful than him, how shockingly terrifying would they be... were they, “Gods”?

This was something Han Shuo simply couldn’t imagine at his level. His mind was a mess thanks to Dagassi’s words. When the bunch of skeletal warriors finished collecting the spoils of battle, he cast the issue to the back of his mind and said, “Who cares about those powerful beings? I just need to do my job well. I’m only a small character. Heh heh, I won’t get in any conflict with them.”

It’s not up to you to decide anymore since you hold the bone staff.

Dagassi sighed in his heart, but he didn't speak it out. He looked at Han Shuo with emotion, as if looking at his master. He hadn't known of his master's fate for the thousands of years they'd been apart. A strange light sparkled in his eyes.

"Bryan, should I go with you?" Emily had listened for a while and was similarly perplexed. When she saw Cecilia and the others who had escaped Celt slowly approach, she hurriedly maintained a distance from Han Shuo to avoid raising any suspicion.

This time, Han Shuo also saw Cecilia and the others walk over. They were obviously afraid of the Ancient Lizard King Dagassi's existence. Their postures were as unassuming as they could be, fearing the latter's displeasure.

Chapter 346: Collecting the spoils of war

Han Shuo was in no rush to leave. When Emily saw Cecilia and the Dark Mantle members slowly making their way over, she felt like she needed to be a bit cautious, maintaining an appropriate distance from Han Shuo to avoid rousing suspicion.

After all, Emily was the daughter-in-law of the Betteridge family. No matter what she felt towards Han Shuo in private, they couldn't let outsiders know of it. Be it Emily or Han Shuo, that particular bit of information would only bring them unnecessary troubles in the foreseeable future.

After he saw the bone staff in Han Shuo's hand, Ancient Lizard King Dagassi's attitude towards the latter had grown considerably better. His long years of life had also seemingly forged an incredible level of patience. His expression remained unchanged as he watched Cecilia and the others slowly inch their way over.

"I can just take care of these people if you think they're in the way, it won't take me too long." Dagassi casually remarked. A wicked grin crossed his face as he saw their timid approach.

Dagassi's attitude towards Cecilia and the others could only be described as extreme contempt. He wasn't afraid to let them overhear his conversation with Han Shuo. For a demi-god existence like himself, Cecilia's group were no different than ants, an eyesore that only needed a flick of a limb to eradicate.

Cecilia and her team had only approached the group because they saw Han Shuo and Emily getting along well with the Ancient Lizard King. Cecilia's face blanched when she heard Dagassi's offer. She couldn't help but take a few steps back and stare nervously at Han Shuo.

"No need, they are my colleagues." Han Shuo's answer allowed Cecilia to heave a sigh of relief. But only when she saw the Ancient Lizard King nod at Han Shuo did she slowly walk over to their side. She first nodded at Emily and then spoke to Dagassi, "Powerful being, I am of the Lancelot Empire and in charge of dealing with the enemy this time, I...”

“I have no interest in your words.” Dagassi interrupted before Cecilia could make much headway, let alone finish, “Puny human girl, those who dared to invade lie dead. Whatever happens in this area is under my control, and the underground world is not a place for you humans to set foot in. I won’t kill you since you are his colleagues, but if you value this temporary amnesty, I hope you leave this world as quickly as possible.”

“I...” Cecilia was about to say more, but was quickly stopped by Emily, “Alright little sister Cecilia, as far as I can see, we’ve successfully completed our mission. Even if it wasn’t exactly due to our actions, the name of the Redbud Knights will no longer be spoken on this continent. We should definitely leave. We’ve accomplished a great deed here.”

Emily desperately winked to signal Cecilia while saying this. Cecilia was no fool, she caught Emily’s signal and nodded. She then turned to Han Shuo and said bitterly, “I know you spent a lot of effort on this, and I will report it in detail to the higher-ups. However, our private grudge isn’t over.”

Shrugging, Han Shuo smiled blandly, “Whatever you want!”

Han Shuo didn’t care, but the Lizard King immediately rolled his eyes upon hearing that they had a private grudge. A mass of energy as weighty as a mountain emanated from his body, rapidly spreading out. The Ancient Lizard King didn’t even need to transform into his massive appearance to bring pressure down on Cecilia and her group.

“I think I’ll still help you kill them. She and you seemed to have some grudges. If they never leave the underground world, your words will simply become truth. Then, all your problems will be solved, how about that?” The Lizard King loudly laughed and looked at Han Shuo as he offered his help once again. His powerful presence alone made Cecilia feel great discomfort.

Han Shuo felt no goodwill towards Cecilia, however it wasn’t to the point of wanting to take her life. Moreover the relationship between Emily and Cecilia was very good, so Han Shuo couldn’t kill her in front of Emily.

Therefore, he again shook his head, "They're my colleagues. Although there are some misunderstandings, we are not enemies. Just let them leave."

As Dagassi took back his aura, the sweating Cecilia and her team were able to resume their regular breathing. This time, Cecilia didn't wait for Emily's wink before she turned around without another word. As she left, she glanced back at Han Shuo and whispered a sentence, "Thank you!"

Cecilia understood in her heart that if Han Shuo hadn't stopped him, Dagassi, who had killed enough Redbud Knights and dark elves to form a river of blood, would definitely have exterminated them all with a single gesture. Although she still had some negative opinions about Han Shuo, he'd definitely saved her life this time. Even if in she didn't want to thank her in the depths of her heart, she still had to.

Unconsciously, Cecilia's resentment for Han Shuo had dissolved a bit. Her heart was full of doubt, she didn't understand how Han Shuo could forge a relationship with such a powerful creature, or how he could make the Ancient Lizard King listen to his words so easily.

Her mind flashed as she suddenly remembered something else. As she left with Emily, Cecilia pulled on Emily's arm when no one was next to them and asked in a low, suspicious voice, "Are you with that Bryan?"

Emily's heart pounded, her cheeks uncontrollably flared with red. She pretended to calmly tell off Cecilia, "What nonsense are you sprouting? I only worked with him on a couple of occasions and developed a friendship."

"Is that so?" Cecilia stared at Emily, puzzled, "It feels odder the more I think about it. Bryan's relationship with me is selfish and unfriendly. He shouldn't have helped us last time Kassel pursued us, I only discovered later that it was because of you, big sister."

"It's the same this time. He went to the underground world, going through Chrissie just to look for you. He protected only you in the fight before, even that big lizard didn't target you with his murderous intent. I know that Bryan is no saint. I kept wondering what kind of relationship you two have to make him so concerned about you. I think he only did so because he loves you, isn't that right, big sister Emily?"

"Of course not. What are you guessing madly for? It's just that he wasn't as powerful before and I saved his life once. That's why he's helping me now. You can stop spouting random nonsense now." Emily strongly denied everything with all her might. She knew that she had to deny things no matter what, or the outcome wouldn't be good for either Han Shuo or her.

"Big sister Emily, look at yourself, why do you still not admit to things?" Cecilia stared at Emily in surprise. Her hand rose, holding a small mirror in front of the latter's face.

In the mirror, Emily's face was embarrassed and red with a secret delight, an unconscious response to when Cecilia said Han Shuo only did what he did because he loved her. Emily couldn't help the feelings in her heart from showing on her face. Looking at this bashful and flushing appearance, no one would believe her if she said she had nothing to do with Han Shuo.

Seeing that Cecilia's face showed absolute confidence in her theory of Emily and Han Shuo's intimate relationship, Emily softly sighed and said, "Little sister Cecilia, I do have some goodwill towards him. However, you know my situation. I'm the widow of the Betteridge family, and my age is greater than his. Even if I harbor affection for him, he won't bother with me. My identity dooms me to be forever avoided by men, aiii!"

Emily heaved and sighed pitifully. Hearing her explain, Cecilia was stunned and came to a sudden realization. To think her big sister Emily's love for Bryan was one-sided! Her thoughts spun to a close, and seeing Emily's desolate expression, she hastily spoke, "Big sister Emily, I'm sure this Bryan is far from ordinary. With his strength, sooner or later he will grasp immense power. You know that as long as he has enough power, nothing is impossible for him in the Lancelot Empire, rest assured. By then we will also have my grandpa, he can help you too!"

Emily was genuinely touched upon hearing Cecilia's words, and the last sentence in particular made her heart rejoice. Cecilia's grandfather held a distinguished identity in the Lancelot Empire. If she and Han Shuo were determined to be together in the future, things would go a lot smoother with the old man's help.

"Really? If Bryan and I can be together, you'll ask your grandfather to help me?" Emily asked, feeling happy in her heart.

"Of course, grandpa dotes on me the most. If I'm willing to help you, he'll help too." Cecilia proudly replied.

"Then I'll have to thank you in advance!" Emily was overjoyed.

"Hehe, us sisters shouldn't be so polite. Right, tell me about how you saved that cocky brat previously. Now I'm very interested in his matters!" Cecilia snickered.

While the two women leading the Dark Mantle members away, Han Shuo also crammed all the weapons, armor and money bags that had been sorted out by the skeletal warriors into his space ring. His space ring could only hold a part of them, the rest was stuffed into Celt's space ring.

Han Shuo remembered the space ring of the fire grand magus Marceau in the end. He conveniently asked the old Lizard King Dagassi to break its magical enchantment brand and harvested roughly three hundred thousand gold coins from it. There were also some valuable magical equipment, the most precious of which being a strange tent.

The tent looked as if it could only accommodate two or three people, however, when Han Shuo actually went inside, he discovered that the space was much wider than he'd imagined. It was divided into three levels, with a hundred rooms of various sizes. Each room was clean and brightly decorated, luxurious carpets covering the floor.

There were several magic laboratories containing magical equipment on the top level, along with a library on fire magic. There were even two storage rooms with a number of fire attributed magical items. This should be the place where Marceau normally carried out magic experiments.

The unassuming tent had turned out to be a valuable space treasure, the area inside no smaller than Han Shuo's residence in the City of Brettel.

This magical tent was definitely created by the combined effort of a space sacred magister and a grand alchemist.

The accommodations of this tent was even much larger than that of the space ring. More importantly, when used for traveling in the wilderness, hundreds of adventurers could stay in it when this tent was set up. For mercenaries who often went out for missions, this kind of space treasure was of a value that was comparable to a divine artifact.

“This thing is no artifact, but its practical value is even greater than one. If you want, it can sell for at least three hundred thousand gold coins.” The Ancient Lizard King told Han Shuo after understanding the tent’s marvelous ability.

“Such a magical treasure comparable to a divine artifact, I won’t be selling it. It’s better to keep for my own use.” Han Shuo replied to the Ancient Lizard King.

After stripping all the dead knights and dark elves of their valuables, Han Shuo and the Ancient Lizard King Dagassi returned to the ruins of the gourd-shaped mountain. Thanks to the earth elite zombie, a tunnel leading out of the underground space had been dug, and all of the lizardmen filed out through it.

“Where is our great ‘true God’?” The leader with the longest tail anxiously asked as soon as Han Shuo and the old Lizard King Dagassi arrived.

Pointing at Dagassi in human form, his long tail swishing through the air, Han Shuo smiled and explained, “Isn’t that him?”

Hearing Han Shuo’s words, the lizardmen appeared somewhat horrified as they looked at the Ancient Lizard King. Only when they felt a familiar presence from him did they feel relief and submit. Under the orders of their leader, the lizardmen kowtowed towards Dagassi, their mouths rapidly speaking in lizardmen tongue.

The old Lizard King was no longer bound by the ancient magical formation in his human form. He also rumbled forth in gibberish, conversing with the lizardmen in gratification. Han Shuo didn’t understand a thing, but refrained from speaking. He just stood there with a dry look.

The earth elite zombie stood there for a while after leading the lizardmen out and watched the bunch while crudely touching its head. It was even somewhat frightened of the Ancient Lizard King. Sensing the latter's powerful presence, it silently went to Han Shuo's side, pulling the corner of his clothes as it sent him a message, "Is there anything else ah? If not let me go back!"

Han Shuo was dumbfounded as he looked at the earth elite zombie who'd just sent a message to him. He had yet to open his mouth to speak when on the other side, the Ancient Lizard King's attention had been caught by the earth elite zombie. He was stupefied, and asked in disbelief, "Did, did this zombie warrior just communicate with you?!"

"Ehh... I think so." Han Shuo replied. He was also inwardly a little shocked. The earth elite zombie could originally communicate with him, but only in the form of listening and obeying orders. The messages had also been simple reports of the fights, unlike now when it'd expressed its own opinion.

It appeared that, unwittingly, the earth elite zombie was gradually developing an autonomy like the little skeleton. This also showed that it was getting stronger and stronger, otherwise it couldn't have developed its own ideas so quickly.

"If I didn't hear wrong, he wanted to take the initiative to return to the necromancy dimension. He is your summoned creature, but also has his own consciousness?" The Ancient Lizard King couldn't suppress his wonder. He could also sense the message sent by the earth elite zombie to Han Shuo.

"He is different from other ordinary undead creatures. You've also seen it, he can utilize the power of earth to move freely underground and create tunnels. Hehe, this has to do with my magical cultivation. I can use this art to alter the summoned undead. It not only gives them higher intellect, but also more power and even the ability to evolve." For some unknown reason, Han Shuo had a favorable impression of the Lizard King. He could feel the latter's passion and trust in him and understood in his heart that he wouldn't harm Han Shuo. Therefore, Han Shuo answered without concealing anything.

“Unbelievable. Unbelievable indeed. Even my master couldn't bestow undead creatures with intelligence and the ability to evolve. It seemed your techniques are even more incredible than I'd imagined.” Dagassi exclaimed.

“Hehe, I also think this art is amazing. I believe that once I break through again, I may possess power on par with yours.” Han Shuo confidently said. He remembered that Chu Cang Lan earlier could traverse the moon at the “nine changes” realm. He also understood that the “carnal” realm would definitely increase his power tenfold, or even a hundredfold.

“Very good. I look forward to our next meeting. If I'm still alive then, we will definitely have the chance to meet. Maybe you really can help me at that time.” Dagassi said contentedly. He turned back to the lizardmen and resumed his quick gibberish.

After the lizardmen leader listened to Dagassi's words, he turned to Han Shuo and said respectfully, “From now on, us lizardmen of the underground world will follow your instructions.”

Chapter 347: Becoming a Dark Sun envoy

Han Shuo stayed deep in the underground for several days. With the help of Ancient Lizard King Dagassi, he collected the magic crystal ores deep within the underground.

Han Shuo exited the gourd mountain ruins when his space ring couldn't hold any more. This trip to the underground world had bestowed him with rich harvest, not only was Celt dead, but, Han Shuo had even won the friendship of the lizardmen.

Han Shuo's space ring was also filled to the brim. He'd looted the Redbud Knights thoroughly, as well as the wealth that Celt had accumulated over many years, and some of Arlen's magic equipment as well. The total harvest, if converted to gold coins, would amount to more than two million.

"Alright, I will ttinave the underground world for now and collect the rest of the ores next time I come back. I'll also bring more weapons for you in my next visit, so you can resist the dark elves' invasion." Han Shuo said to the lizardmen leader.

"Next time you come, I should already have left this underground world. I hope for the chance for us to meet again. I also hope you can take care of them for me." Dagassi reminded as he looked at Han Shuo about to leave.

"Rest assured, I will help you take care of them." Han Shuo agreed with a vow.

In the past couple of days, Dagassi had been like a kind elder, imparting Han Shuo with many interesting things. Han Shuo had unconsciously developed favorable impression of Dagassi. Now as he was about to leave, he actually felt somewhat reluctant. From Dagassi words, Han Shuo knew that this time the old lizard didn't simply intend on leaving the underground world, he seemed to want to depart the plane containing the Profound Continent.

Dagassi only glossed over some of the deeper secrets and didn't tell Han SHuo much. Han Shuo couldn't understand the thoughts of the demigods, so he didn't pursue things to the end by asking too many questions. He only faintly understood that the power of Dagassi's enemy was just as much terrifying.

Han Shuo's farewell to Dagassi was cool, calm and didn't drag on. He didn't remain in the underground world after leaving the area. He followed the old road back to the surface by using his astounding memory.

Han Shuo didn't encounter anything out of the ordinary along the way. He occasionally met a few attempts of others races wanting to rob him and used heavy handed methods to kill them instead. He easily made his way back to the Dark Forest.

Having stayed in the underground world for more than ten days, Han Shuo felt a comfortable sensation as if he was being reborn when he saw the sun shining above his head. The warm sunlight shone down, lifting his mood into an extremely happy state.

The Dark Forest was rich with lush green trees mixed with exotic plants. Fragrance overflowed in the warm spring light and permeated the heart with a peacefulness that refreshed the mind. Han Shuo luxuriated in this warm and comfortable feeling that was a far cry from the gloomy humid, underground world, heading for the direction of the Cemetery of Death.

When he was back in the Cemetery of Death, Han Shuo didn't linger and went directly to Brettel City. Rich harvest in hand, he immediately set up a small meeting with little fatty Jack, Dorcas as well as Faulke and Chester.

"You were gone all of a sudden for more than ten days, where did you go?" Jack had the closest relationship with Han Shuo, so he started peppering the latter with questions immediately.

"Hehe, I made a trip to the Dark Forest. Have things been quiet in Brettel City recently?" Han Shuo smiled slightly and didn't hide his trip to the Dark Forest. Only the existence of the Cemetery of Death remained under wraps.

The Redbud Knights and dark elves had suffered heavy losses in the underground world. However, a small number of them had still escaped. News of Han Shuo's actions in the underground world must have spread already.

Dick, the local Dark Mantle liaison, bowed respectfully towards Han Shuo and said, "My Lord, I would like to report some information alone."

"This is all our own people here. There is no need to hide anything, you can speak directly." Han Shuo knew Dick must have gathered some information from his higher-ups. Jack, Dorcas, Faulke and Chester were all his trusted people. Since Faulke had been sent here by Lawrence, the latter must have mentioned Han Shuo's identity as a Dark Mantle member to Faulke already. Han Shuo had nothing to hide in front of him.

Jack and Dorcas had spent much time with Dick lately, so they more or less knew of his identity. The existence of Dark Mantle in the Lancelot Empire wasn't much of a secret. Although people didn't talk about it openly, they all knew about it in their minds.

"Master Candide relayed that your deeds in the underground world are highly appreciated. The Dark Forest is on the edge of the border of our Empire. For the Redbud Knights to suffer heavy losses, even though the Brut Business Alliance will likely be extremely indignant, they presumably won't make any radical responses. Master Candide told you to be at ease." Dick started his report when he saw Han Shuo was nonchalant about his privacy.

Nodding his head, Han Shuo smiled, "You may carry on."

Dorcas, Jack and Faulke listened but couldn't understand anything. However, Faulke and Dorcas knew that Candide was one of the three heavyweights of Dark Mantle. From Dick's words, they knew Han Shuo's relationship with Candide wasn't superficial. They were inwardly amazed.

"Master Candide said this time you achieved a great deed this time. His Majesty has approved that you will be a one star Dark Sun envoy from now on. You only need to visit the Dark Mantle headquarters to upgrade your badge. Congratulations to you, my Lord!" Dick's face was full of worship as he grew excited himself.

"Dark Sun envoy, hehe, it seems that Cecilia didn't conceal any of my credit. This woman knows what to do." Han Shuo smiled contentedly and murmured to himself.

Going from Star to Moon was one level, from Moon to Sun was another. Becoming a Dark Sun envoy meant that from now on, Han Shuo was officially a high ranked member of the Dark Mantle and was now able to enjoy even more special treatment. He could recruit his own subordinates and redistribute the organization's members in a location.

"My Lord, Dark Sun envoys have the rights to assign missions to Dark Star members, and can also can directly bestow credit on them and raise their level." Chester looked excitedly at Han Shuo and stated a reminder.

"Rest assured, now that I'm a Dark Sun envoy, you will naturally receive some benefits." Han Shuo laughed as he responded, then turned to Dick, "Anything else apart from this?"

"Master Candide said you don't have to worry about anything else, he will help deal with the detrimental remarks against you, you only need to take good care of Brettle City." Dick hesitated a little before answering this time.

Nodding his head, Han Shuo appeared to understand it completely. He was aware that Cecilia had reported everything correctly, even last time's matter when he stopped her from acting against the forest trolls.

"Alright, I understand." Han Shuo looked at Dorcas and Faulke, asked, "How is the situation in Brettel City recently? Have the mountain people come down from the mountain? Any action from the seven grand duchies?"

"A total of twenty thousand people have come down the mountain and are currently residing in Brettel City. The five chiefs of the mountain people are actively cooperating, so the process is going smoothly. The fighting in the seven grand duchies had slowly subsided, only Helen Tina of Helon Duchy has been struggling with the rebels within her land. However, it's drawing close to an end now." Dorcas replied.

Ever since Dorcas joined the army, he had gradually replaced Faulke's position due to his own efforts and Han Shuo's deliberate arrangements. Dorcas was a military man through and through and had never hidden this desire to fight. Due of many years of formal military education, he was much more adept in leading operations than Faulke, who had originally a knight.

Faulke also understood in his heart that Dorcas was supper to him in this aspect. Coupled with the fact that the latter had won Han Shuo's trust, Faulke was powerless against this gradual shift in power. Fortunately, Han Shuo didn't mistreat him, letting Faulke form his team of trusted confidants and strongest soldiers in Brettel into a brigade of a thousand knights.

Han Shuo provided this knight brigade with the most luxurious equipment. Their armor, weapons and equipment were all the most expensive in Brettel City. Han Shuo had poured a great deal of resources into this brigade as it was equipped with the best goods currently in the market. Currently, his investment stood at three hundred thousand gold coins. Except for a lack of horses, just based on the equipment alone, this brigade was no inferior to the official Royal Knights of the Empire.

Of course when compared to the top ten knights associations in the Profound Continent, this brigade was far inferior in whether fighting power or equipment. However in Brettel City or even in the seven grand duchies, this fledgling brigade couldn't be underestimated.

As a pure knight, nothing moved his heart so much as commanding an official knight brigade, so Faulke didn't feel too much unpleasantness at the loss in military power. On the contrary, he poured his heart into training the brigade.

"So for the time being, the seven grand duchies seem to have not enough power to deal with us?" Han Shuo asked with a smile.

Nodding his head, Dorcas confirmed, "The seven grand duchies won't do anything for at least a month. But when they start to act again, it won't be just one duchy coming alone. News of the four great bandit regiments suffering heavy losses has spread all over the seven grand duchies. Even if each duchy puts all their strength behind an attack, their power still can't compare to the combined force of the four great bandit regiments. With the bandits' defeat as a lesson, they definitely won't act rashly before they are completely confident."

Dorcas continued after a short pause, "In other words, the seven grand duchies won't act now, but once they do, I'm afraid Brettel City would face a hard battle!"

"Hmph! The seven grand duchies want Brettel City to be their hunting ground, I think it's time to change this perspective of theirs. Only when we kill each and every one that comes, will they commit this to their memories for the rest of their lives." Han Shuo said with a cold face. He was silent for a while after, then suddenly spoke to Dorcas and Faulke, "Make good use of this time period when Brettel is still safe to train your soldiers. Make the bandits that have invaded Brettel in recent years your target. I know that beside the four great bandit groups, there are also seven or eight smaller bandit groups. All of you can think of ways to make them spit out everything they looted from us."

Dorcas' eyes sparkled with a fierce light after he heard these words, he immediately replied, "My Lord, rest assured, I know what to do."

"Heh heh, from my trip to the underground world this time, I suddenly realized that in order for Brettel City to quickly become powerful, the fastest way is to plunder the resources from others. Train our soldiers on one hand, plunder others on the other. We get the best of both worlds in this world." Han Shuo made a fortune on dirty money in the underground world, he finally understood why there were so many bandits in the seven grand duchies. Even one of the top ten knight troops of the mainland, the Redbud Knights, didn't mind traveling thousands of miles all the way to the Dark Forest.

"My Lord, I have some interesting news." Dick put on a creepy smile as he spoke to Han Shuo with a smile.

When he saw Dick smile despicably, Han Shuo knew the words about to come out from his mouth were definitely nothing serious. He wasn't angry however, "What interesting news? I can't help but want to beat you after seeing that smile."

“Heh heh, the Narsen Duchy was originally friendly with the Helon Duchy, but they seem to have been extremely unhappy with each other lately. Grand duke Benedict of the Narsen Duchy didn’t even help Helen Tina with her internal strife. Do you know why, my Lord?” Dick looked at Han Shuo with an evil cackle.

Furrowing his brows, Han Shuo said, “Why?”

“It’s to your credit, my Lord. Now all the seven grand duchies know that you’ve had Helen Tina, Benedict, an ardent pursuer for many years, also knows. He has been pursuing Helen Tina for so long in vain, but my Lord was able to have her after having just arrived at Brettel City a few months ago.”

“For Benedict, a used woman has naturally lost her flavor. His attitude towards the Helon Duchy also changed greatly. He only stood on the sidelines to watch when Helen Tina faced her enemies.” Dick explained while laughing, then he sighed, “My Lord is very farsighted, easily splitting up the two most solid allies.”

“Indeed, my Lord has great vision. We are lack his charisma and definitely have to learn from my Lord!” Chester had the same look of admiration on this face as he nodded and sighed emotionally.

Han Shuo’s expression darkened. He looked at these innately dirty fellows and grunted, “So you spread this news, I didn’t think you would be so despicable.”

Chester and Dick laughed awkwardly without a word, while Jack was full of interest and said with envy, “Bryan, I heard that that woman is very beautiful, you are really blessed!”

It appeared these fellows wouldn’t believe his explanation, so Han Shuo didn’t try to explain himself anymore. He took out Celt’s space ring with all the armor from the Redbud Knights, along with an enormous amount of magic crystal ore, and said to Jack, “This ring is loaded with armor from the Redbud Knights and magic crystal ore. You go put them in the warehouse and keep the ring.”

“You are giving this space ring to me?” Jack looked with surprise at Han Shuo handing over the space ring, his voice high.

“Mhm, this ring originally belonged to the Redbud Knights leader Celt. The space inside is enough for you to transport goods.” Han Shuo smiled at Jack, then took out fire grand magus Marceau’s space ring and handed it over as well, “There are a number of crystals, jade and a variety of jewelry inside, worth nearly a million gold coins. They are to be used as the capital for Brettel’s operations, you have full control over them.”

Jack sensed Celt’s space ring and discovered the massive amount of armor and magic crystal ore inside, he smiled excitedly at Faulke, “Faulke, you can have even better armor now. The magic crystal ore inside is also enough for our magic crystal cannons to use for a while.”

“Very good, His Lordship took one trip outside and truly really rich harvest!” Faulke let out a happy cry hearing Jack’s words.

There were the harvested ore, armor from the dead Redbud Knights, plus the crystal, jade and gold coins that Celt had plundered from the underground world in Celt and Marceu’s space rings. Han Shuo had stored some magical equipment, the “Starry Sky” and the magical space tent in his own space ring.

The things he gave Jack were all related to money as they didn’t provide any practical uses for Han Shuo. Brettel City was currently his greatest asset, what he cared about the most was to make Brettel more powerful. These gold coins would fully demonstrate their value in Jack’s hands.

“Good, I’m counting on you to make good use of these things.” Han Shuo said to Jack and the bunch. With these things, he knew that Brettel City would become even more powerful.

Chapter 348: Demon-rearing

Five days passed, and Fabian arrived at Brettel City, followed by a group of merchants. They had brought far more goods this time than their previous trip. The enthusiasm of the merchants who had tasted an untapped market far exceeded Han Shuo's expectations.

Every merchant had brought along a caravan this time. Each had carriages pulled by earth dragons, laden with bags of various sizes. Inside the various pouches were goblin missiles and sacks full of crossbows and arrows.

The goods on the carriages at the rear were wrapped tightly in canvas. Although, from the look of the bulky packages, it didn't take a genius to figure out that each carriage held ammunition, and lots of it. Two large and slow-moving earth dragons pulled a carriage, each 5 meters wide and 10 meters long. Each of these gigantic carriages were large enough to accommodate 10 battle wagons or catapults.

The carriages being pulled by the dragons contained at least 20 battle wagons, while the 27 smaller carriages behind them were pulled by warhorses. Although these 27 carriages weren't as large as the ones pulled by the earth dragons, each was large enough to accommodate 3 battle wagons apiece.

Located even farther back were Cloudmound Beasts. Extraordinarily, these creatures were just as strong as the earth dragons, but also just as slow. They were twice as large as warhorses, each long leg as large as elephants. They carried sacks full of food and daily necessities. These should be able to replenish Brettel City's warehouses.

The number of merchants had doubled, compared to last time, each wearing a smile that only grew wider as they drew closer to the city. They all wore casual expressions, each talking about their soon-to-be profits.

They hadn't encountered a single corpse on the road from Seamist City to Brettel City, nor did they see hide nor hair of bandits. After Dorcas' extermination campaign, all the bandits had been eradicated. Those who cooperated had been conscripted as hard working janitors, working to keep the roads free of detritus.

When they noticed these subtle details, the merchants began to gradually relax. When they reached the city, Jack, Brettel City's finance minister, paid the merchants in one lump sum after completing an inventory of the delivered goods.

The merchants who had come such a long distance were utterly delighted to receive their money. They didn't immediately leave Brettel City, but nagged Jack to allow them to open a store in Brettel City.

"Jack, the Boozt Merchant Guild also plans to open a branch here, help us prepare a suitable location," Fabian said to Jack.

"Understood. The branch of the Boozt Merchant Guild will be the first to be arranged," Jack promised, smiling. Despite the objections of the nearby merchants, he covertly brought Fabian aside, sneakily asking, "These merchants have finally come to their senses and want to set up shop in Brettel City?"

"Aye. Ever since the four great bandit groups had been defeated, Brettel City has become known as a merchant's wonderland after our painstaking marketing campaign. To be frank, the mines surrounding Brettel City are rich in resources. As long as we have enough smiths, Brettel City will certainly be able to use these resources to create weapons."

"Brettel City is also the closest juncture to the seven grand duchies. As far as the nobility of the seven grand duchies were concerned, the Lancelot Empire's ornate clothing and porcelain were luxury products that they were willing to spend large quantities of money on. On the other hand, the hardy horses, furs and jewels produced by the seven grand duchies are also very much in demand by the Lancelot Empire."

If it wasn't for the fact that Brettel City's safety could not be guaranteed, the ideal location of this city would've propelled this city to becoming the place to be for merchants. Now that word of the four bandit groups' defeat is spreading, along with the guarantee of safe passage, many merchants will start to willingly seek out Boozt Merchant Guild to sell their wares

here.”

“Just wait and see, this is only the first wave. As long as Brettel City can give the merchants a sense of safety, more and more merchants will come flocking. At that time, we’d be hardpressed to even try stopping activity.” Fabian explained to Jack.

“It seems that our choice was a wise one.” The little fatty smiled until his small eyes were nearly creases upon hearing Fabian’s words, “Guess what, Bryan made a trip to the underground world a while ago. Do you know how many valuable things he brought back? Haha, I now have two million gold coins at my disposal! If we include the crystals and other valuables, then the money at my disposal reaches three million! I would never have thought that I would be able to one day control so much money!”

Fabian was visibly shocked upon hearing Jack say these words, then sighed, “Follow Bryan well, you little brat. The very fact that he’s given you so much money to look after is proof of his trust. As long as you work hard, becoming a noble is only a matter of time.”

“Rest assured, uncle, I know what to do. The crystals, gold, silver, jewels and other valuables have to be sold through the merchant guilds. Brettel City is an iron stronghold as long as we have enough money,” Jack replied.

“There are a couple of merchants here who probably have an interest in your products. You should find them and negotiate directly.” Fabian laughed, and said “We’re off to see Bryan, Phoebe asked me to bring him a few things.”

“Go on in. He’s waiting for you.” Jack replied.

Fabian soon found Han Shuo’s room after leaving Jack. Han Shuo was waiting impatiently, as he already knew that Fabian was coming. Han Shuo welcomed Fabian in as soon as the latter’s footsteps sounded. Smiling, he said “Mister Fabian. Did Phoebe ask you to bring me anything?”

“Of course. This space ring contains what you need.” Fabian laughed, handing Han Shuo the space ring. Han Shuo focused his mental strength into the space ring and immediately joined Fabian in laughter.

“Take this sword to Phoebe for me. Be careful, and make sure that nothing happens along the way.” Taking out the divine weapon “Starry Sky”, Han Shuo handed it over to Fabian with a warning, “This is the divine weapon, “Starry Sky”, formerly of the leader of the Redbud Knights, Celt. You should know its value.”

Fabian’s expression immediately grew serious as he realized what he was holding. He stored “Starry Sky” into his own space ring, saying, “Rest assured, I will definitely bring this sword to Miss Phoebe.”

“Tell Phoebe to continue collecting the things on this list.” Han Shuo once again took out a list and handed it to Fabian.

“Understood, I know what to do.” Fabian tucked the letter away, continuing to reassure Han Shuo.

After Fabian took his leave, Han Shuo found Chester and gave him some instructions, then returned to the Cemetery of Death.

The Cemetery of Death was immersed in the aura of death all year round. A large, oval hole had appeared amongst the white bones. The hole was surrounded by 12 colourful banners, each around 10 meters tall and still managing to flutter despite the complete lack of wind. Each banner was emblazoned with an exotic symbol.

The oval pit was filled with large bone spikes, all sticking upwards. Some of these bones had been pulled from the green dragon’s corpse by Han Shuo, while the others came from the taboo land from last time. All of the bones were from deceased powerful magic creatures.

Han Shuo dumped buckets of black and shimmering violet liquid into the oval pit. Bucket after bucket were dumped in, Han Shuo seemingly having an endless supply from his space ring. All of it went inside the pit.

This liquid was either metallic-smelling blood or juices of a much more gruesome nature. It came in many colors, and the smell was far from flattering. After tens of buckets had been dumped into the pit, Han Shuo took out a dagger and shallowly slit his wrist. He held it over the hole as drops of fresh blood dripped from his arm.

As Han Shuo's fresh blood splashed into the hole, the liquid began to emit red smoke. Surprisingly, the drops of Han Shuo's blood didn't diffuse, instead swimming around like red agates. The tranquil liquid began to bubble, catalyzed by Han Shuo's blood, as crackling filled the air.

Han Shuo tilted his head up and whistled, a long low dragon's cry that promised of sinister things to come. The Demonslayer Edge shot out from the nape of Han Shuo's neck, bringing with it the ghosts of the fallen. The silently flailing and screaming ghosts resembled a nest of snakes as they were drawn into the twelve banners. After hundreds of ghosts were absorbed by the banners, a killing aura began to drift out from the banner, slowly rising to the skies.

The killing aura seemed to be attracted to the liquid in the hole, arcing down into the hole at a speed visible to the eye. With the help of this killing aura, Han Shuo's originally emulsified blood gradually dissolved into the liquid contained within the hole, soon vanishing without a trace.

Taking a deep breath, Han Shuo circulated his magical yuan towards the wound on his wrist, watching as the cut made by his dagger rapidly healed.

Taking out the skeletal staff, Han Shuo began to rapidly chant an incantation. Three horsed evil knights suddenly appeared in front of Han Shuo. He pointed his staff at the hole in the ground. The contract-bound evil knights didn't hesitate, jumping in one after the other into the hole.

When the first evil knight and his horse landed in the pit, the previously silent knight and horse suddenly threw their heads back in a soundless roar. Not a sound came out of the pit as the two wailed, the knight's bronze colored armor and horse sizzling as they came in contact with the liquid. Both of them gave off clouds of smoke, which rose high into the air.

The evil knight and his mount appeared as if they were suffering the worst pain imaginable. The evil knight, who normally would not dare violate the contract, suddenly attempted to break the power of the contract, trying to leave the hole that caused him so much suffering, his body twisting and thrashing in his agony.

The evil knight wasn't a lowly existence like the skeleton warriors. These strong fighters had their own version of intelligence in their dimension. Although their prodigious strength was restricted by the magical contract, the harrowing pain that exceeded that of death forced him to instinctively struggle against the contract.

Han Shuo cursed under his breath as he held the skeletal staff. "How can you be reborn if you don't suffer this kind of pain? You don't know what's good for you. You'll know what this pain has brought you after you've been tempered and your body reforged. Just the materials required for this "Twelve Demon Rearing Fragments Formation" costs at least a hundred thousand gold coins. Stop struggling!"

As Han Shuo cursed, he used his consciousness to suppress the evil knight's struggles and force the other two evil knights into the pit as well.

Just like the first evil knight, the other two evil knights who were forced into the pit also began resisting due to the overwhelming pain, attempting to break the contract Han Shuo held over them.

Han Shuo could easily deal with a single evil knight's rebellion. However, if three evil knights and their steeds resisted as a group, then even he would have trouble dealing with them. Han Shuo was forced to use all of his available mental strength to firmly suppress their combined assault on the magical contract.

"Nine cycles of demon reincarnation, scattered souls return to your positions, reduce!" Even as Han Shuo used his mental strength to yank the evil knights back under control, he still had to split some effort out to manipulate the spell.

After he spat out the words, the killing aura drifting out of the twelve banners began to thicken. The mysterious patterns that the banners were inscribed with began to form faces. Under the infusion of the ghosts' power, twelve sinister demon faces gradually appeared. Although each demon's face was unique, they had one frightening similarity. They struck fear into the hearts of men and women alike.

These twelve demon faces were identical to the demon heads that had entered Han Shuo's body when he advanced to the separate demon realm. After the twelve grimacing demon faces had all appeared on the banners, twelve demon heads slowly emerged from Han Shuo's body, floating in front of their respective faces.

After the twelve demon heads had returned to the banners from Han Shuo's body, the killing aura exuded by the banners suddenly swirled into a vortex, gathering in the center of the central pit. The three knights and their mounts felt like their souls had suddenly been set afire. Their pain had doubled, and they began to struggle even more fiercely against the contract that bound them.

Han Shuo froze in place, barely managing to put the skeletal staff away. He sat in place in front of the pit, using every iota of his formidable mental strength to suppress the evil knights and their steeds. In the pit, the evil knights swung their bone lances wildly, as if wishing to decapitate Han Shuo that very instant.

Chapter 349: The dignity of the little skeleton in the other dimension

Despite the complete absence of wind, twelve large banner fluttered vigorously in the wind. Baleful aura swirled around, flowing like mercury towards the pit in the middle. Inside the pit, the liquid boiled like fire oil, searing the three evil knights and their mounts and sending smoke billowing into the air.

Han Shuo closed his eyes as he sat, facing three evil knights. His mental strength flowed like an unstoppable river, holding the three evil knights true to their contract. As the mounts of the evil knights were weaker, they gradually lost the strength to continue struggling fruitlessly.

Three enormous bone spurs continued to madly thrust at Han Shuo. A millisecond of relaxation, and the evil knights would ruthlessly exploit the advantage to pierce right through Han Shuo's head. Han Shuo was fully focused on his task, iron-willed to the end. Inextricable patterns of mental strength weaved into a formless net in the sky, grinding away at the mountain of resistance that was the will of the three evil knights.

The Cemetery of Death wasn't touched by either the sun or moon, eternally shrouded in faint, dim light. Hence, one could never sense the passage of time. After an indeterminate amount of time, the three bone lances struggling to reach Han Shuo slowly lost their strength. Like the bodies of the evil knights, they listlessly fell back into the pit.

Han Shuo's whole body looked like it had been carved from stone, not a single sign of life from his cross-legged position. The twelve banners still absorbed ghosts and radiated killing aura that converged on the pit. After what felt like a few days, the bodies of the three evil knights completely dissolved into the liquid, with not a trace left behind.

At long last, Han Shuo moved, a gasp of air escaping his lips as his eyes opened. His voice was haggard with exhaustion, "That was so damn tiring!". It had only been three evil knights and their mounts, but the process of reforming their bodies had already caused Han Shuo this much trouble. It seemed that Han Shuo's initial hypotheses were true. It was impossible to use demonic arts to reform every undead creature's body.

For one, this kind of refining used overly complex and highly precious ingredients. If the countless skeleton warriors and zombie warriors under Han Shuo's command were to all be refined, even his prodigious savings wouldn't be enough to support it. Just refining these three evil knights already cost at least a hundred thousand gold. Refining every skeleton warrior and zombie warrior would drive him to bankruptcy and beyond. Even then, he still wouldn't be done!

Also, refining undead creatures in this manner took too much of his time and energy, with very little benefits to such an enormous undertaking. After all, skeleton warriors and zombie warriors were essentially cannon fodder. Even he rendered them immune to light magic's corrosive effect, their usage was limited. As such, Han Shuo wasn't willing to waste mountains of gold on them.

Evil knights were currently the strongest undead creatures that Han Shuo could summon. Even within undead creatures, they were considered high level. They had great utility and flexibility once their fire-breathing steeds could take the field with them. Their monstrous innate strength could be combined with hardy armor to produce a combatant that was tougher than a human knight. Han Shuo had already had to use all of his mental strength to suppress the fierce resistance of three evil knights and their warhorses. While Han Shuo could summon bone demons and old fey zombies, he definitely couldn't refine three of them at one go. This was because the resistance from the Bone Devils and Old Corpse Demons would definitely be stronger.

Standing up from his cross-legged position, Han Shuo summoned the twelve demon heads from the banners with a thought. Howling, they reluctantly returned into Han Shuo's body. Since the bodies of the three evil knights were already merged into the pit, Han Shuo didn't need to suppress the matrix with his magical yuan any longer .

The twelve demon heads had formed when Han Shuo had reached the separate demon stage, using the large baleful aura within the Valley of Sunshine as a catalyst. These twelve demon heads innately contained vicious killing intent, every demon head formed from the last vicious obsession of many hateful souls. It was the best ingredient to refine the “mystical demons” that were one level above the “yin demons”.

Of the three previously refined yin demons, there was currently only usable one left. Han Shuo was convinced that one yin demon was far from adequate to maintain his battlefield advantage. When he'd advanced to the separate demon realm back at the Valley of Sunshine, Han Shuo had deliberately saved the boundless murderous aura, coagulating it into the twelve demon heads. When the ingredients needed to refine mystical demons were gathered, the twelve demon heads would be used as the base ingredient for the mystical demons.

After making sure the area would operate without supervision, Han Shuo headed for the specialized area for refining ‘original demons’ and “yin demons”. He first summoned the earth elite zombie, commanding it to modify the layout of the yin demon cave, molding it into a cave suitable for cultivation “mystical demons”. When the modifications were complete, Han Shuo took out the ingredients he needed, and placed them in the centers of the formation eyes around the cave.

Once he had completed all the preparations, Han Shuo dismissed the earth elite zombie and placed twelve drops of his own essence blood into the mystical demon cave. The blood essence began to revolve in mid air within the mystical demon cave. The twelve demon heads emerged from Han Shuo's body at his command, each swallowing a drop of blood essence. As if at some unknown signal, the cave's enormous energy began to activate. Han Shuo then summoned a few hundred wraiths and tossed in a few spirits from the Demonslayer Edge to act as fodder for the mystical demon's evolution.

Han Shuo then dug deep into his magical yuan reserves, pouring the remnants into the mystical demon cave to maintain its normal operations. When the twelve demon heads began to howl and rip at the wraiths and spirits in the matrix, the exhausted Han Shuo returned to the center of the Cemetery of Death.

The two matrices had now resumed normal operations. Han Shuo had not only expended a large amount of mental strength, but also used significant amounts of magical yuan and blood essence. This was even more exhausting than when he'd fought against Kosse at Brettel City. At that time, he had the little skeleton, the earth elite zombie, and the fire elite zombie assisting him. But something like this refining process was something only he could handle. As a result, he was bone deep exhausted.

Sitting on the ground in the Cemetery of Death, Han Shuo pondered for a moment and took out the skeletal staff, meticulously examining the tri-colored skeletal staff. He wanted to make use of this interlude to examine the secrets of the skeletal staff.

Calamity Church's necromancer archmage Wolf as well as Ancient Lizard King Dagassi had seemed to know traces of the skeletal staff's origin. This skeletal staff, which had transformed from the Eye of Darkness, was the key to opening the Cemetery of Death. It definitely held many hidden secrets.

Han Shuo hadn't possessed the skeletal staff for a long time. His understanding of the skeletal staff only went as far as seeing that it enhanced his necromancy magic. If not for the necromancer archmage Wolf using the skeletal staff's power to rejuvenate his life, Han Shuo would perhaps never have guessed that the skeletal staff could have such an effect.

"Skeleton staff, oh skeletal staff. How many secrets are you hiding!" Han Shuo mumbled to himself as he stroked the three colored skulls.

The exhausted Han Shuo fell unconscious. He semi-consciously felt like he'd been shrouded by the thi-colored light from the skeletal staff, spinning him around. Colorful lights streamed quickly past his body. It felt like he was falling from a great height into an endless abyss.

Just when Han Shuo felt nauseous from the dizzy feeling, he suddenly sensed a familiar smell intrude on his consciousness. This smell seemed to come from an area of the abyss he'd fallen into. Han Shuo's groggy consciousness latched firmly onto the familiar smell, gradually sinking back into unconsciousness.

There was an infinite black void in the distance. The surroundings seemed to have been forever shrouded in torpid grey, and grey and black cloud constantly rolled over the horizon. The whole area was filled with the smell of death, desolation and wilderness.

Swamps and tree husks that were void of branches and leaves dotted the landscape closer to him. A variety of undead creatures stumbled across the wilderness, aimlessly wandering in the desolate space.

There was no cycle of day and night in this desolate place, nor any sense of time. There was only loneliness and despair, deathly stillness and desolation.

For a moment, Han Shuo thought he was still within the Cemetery of Death. It was too similar to the Cemetery of Death's everlasting dusk. But when a pack of gargoyles soared over his head, followed by a horde of skeletons and zombies on the ground, Han Shuo was suddenly struck by the very real fact it wasn't indeed the Cemetery of Death.

He clearly remembered that he hadn't summoned these low level undead creatures in the Cemetery of Death. Han Shuo suddenly felt like he was in a dream. Only when he followed this line of thought to its end did he realise he didn't have a body, existing as just pure awareness. However, as soon as Han Shuo thought about his body, his exhausted mental strength slowly filled the area of his consciousness. A identical copy of his body rapidly coalesced into being.

His left hand touched his right, both hands obviously making contact. However, Han Shuo didn't feel any contact between his skin; everything felt so strange. But he felt a sense of intimacy towards the surroundings. As for what felt intimate, he couldn't quite place his finger on it.

The dense horde of undead creatures suddenly charged down from a bare mountain. These undead creatures were arranged neatly in order. Right at the front were skeleton warriors and zombie warriors, behind them were skeleton archers and rows of gargoyles. Even further back were two evil knights.

These undead creatures actually numbered three or four thousand. However, the majority of them were skeleton warriors, zombie warriors and ghouls, only a small portion were hate warriors and evil knights. Charging down from the towering mountain, they flocked towards a steep canyon.

Han Shuo's body and consciousness slowly floated into the canyon. Only when he reached the canyon did Han Shuo realise that the interior of the canyon was similarly flooded with undead creatures. Right down the center of the canyon was a pitched melee of undead creatures. Claws and teeth were used to their fullest potential as they wrestled and tore at each other, incapable of feeling pain and knowing retreat. It was a magnificent yet chilling scene.

When weak undead creatures such as skeleton warriors and zombie were completely destroyed, those low level souls would immediately disperse. But from hate warriors onwards, their souls wouldn't immediately disperse upon elimination. The undead creatures around them would fight to claim a part of that soul power, devouring it to strengthen themselves.

From the middle of the struggle rose a five meter tall, enormous mummy lord. Wrapped in strips of corroded white cloth which exuded a deathly aura, he slowly rose from deep within the ground of the canyon. This mummy lord seemed to be the leader of the undead creatures within the canyon. When he rose up from deep within the ground, his whole body unleashed an incomparable storm of death.

When the undead creatures charging down from the mountain came into contact with the death storm, they immediately turned into ashes. The strips of cloth around his body danced like weapons, cutting apart any hostile creature unfortunate enough to be caught in its path. Only an evil knight that descended was able to block the attack with his bone spear, driving his fire-breathing warhorse to retreat to the side.

In the hierarchy of undead creatures, mummy lords ranked higher than evil knights. As such, in skirmishes between undead creatures, a difference in level usually meant a foregone conclusion. Unless there were ten evil knights attacking the mummy lord, this battle had no suspense in its outcome.

End of part one of the chapter.

When the mummy lord emerged from the ground, the surrounding undead creatures that had charged down from the bald mountain were ground to dust by the death storm. More than seven hundred undead creatures turned into ashes in moments.

“The being who’s holing up on high ground, accept this challenge from the mummy lord Pharaoh! That mountain is not a height that can be held by someone as weak as you, so hand over the territory to me!” Mummy lord Pharaoh roared at the towering mountain as a large amount of mental strength swept through the whole area.

“My Lord Majesty, how can you tolerate the transgressions of that lowly mummy?” The evil knight that’d retreated on his fire-breathing warhorse hissed sternly.

The sounds of rocks shifting suddenly sounded from around the canyon. The incomparably familiar wood and fire elite zombie separately rode out on fire-breathing warhorses, dashing in from both sides of the valley.

An enormous shadow dived down from the tops of the mountain, the incredible undead porcupine full of bone spurs. The little skeleton was wielding a bone dagger that had transformed into a spear three meters long. The seven bone spurs stood upright from his spine. His grand aura covered the scene as he landed.

“Humble mummy lord, my territory is not a place where you can just casually trespass. Now, not only do I desire your soul’s dissipation, but from today forth, the north side of the mummy lord’s territory is also under my control.” The little skeleton’s thoughts exploded out like a raging flood, completely disproportionate to its tiny figure high in the sky.

“My Lord Majesty, you must unite and rule the darkness.” The evil knight that’d previously spoken dismounted, going down on one knee in front of the gallant figure of the little skeleton flying high above the battlefield. His face was filled with solemn worship.

This was the first time the mummy lord Pharaoh had set eyes on the rumoured superb mutated skeleton. The aura exploding from the little skeleton's figure instantly terrified Pharaoh. There was also the flaming fire elite zombie, seemingly tossing two fireballs from hand to hand while sitting on the back of the warhorse. The scorchingly high temperature caused the cold loving mummy lord Pharaoh to feel extremely uncomfortable.

Pharaoh suddenly felt like he'd fallen for a trap this time. He'd survived in this world for an extremely long time now, he wasn't like the typical trudging undead creatures around. He'd long since gained true intelligence.

That bad feeling he had solidified his decision to leave, and he attempted to return underground. However, the previously soft earth had suddenly become as hard as diamonds. Just as the mummy lord Pharaoh started to panic, the simple-minded earth elite zombie slowly emerged from the earth. Grinning at Pharaoh, it naively said, "You can't escape, right?"

The previously awe-inspiring mummy lord Pharaoh suddenly realised all his escape paths had been cut off. He howled furiously, "Despicable being, you are too sinister!"

The little skeleton didn't respond. The undead creature beneath him suddenly dove at Pharaoh. The little skeleton lifted the three meter long bone spear, the baleful aura in the surroundings surging into the bone spear. The bone spear absorbed a large amount of deathly aura, becoming as heavy as a mountain. As it pierced towards Pharaoh, the mummy lord threw back his head in a roar of defiance.

The strips of cloth on Pharaoh's body danced as it crushed everyone within its range. But when the little skeleton's bone spear descended, it tore straight through the strips wrapped around his body, piercing through to his chest in one strike, pinning him to the ground.

"Submit, or die!" The little skeleton coldly shouted as his huge aura fiercely bombarded every inch of the mummy lord pinned by the bone spear.

Unable to struggle loose, Pharaoh yielded to the little skeleton's viciousness after a mournful howl. He docilely bent his head to the little skeleton and said, "I, mummy lord Pharaoh, submit to My Lord."

The little skeleton wasn't in a hurry to remove the bone spear from the mummy lord's body. He drew a contract mark in the dusky air with his free left hand, making the mummy lord hand over some of his soul to brand the contract. Only then did he remove the bone spear without concern for the mummy lord's pain, turning around and saying, "Return to the mountain!"

The mummy lord didn't have any chance to resist now that the one-sided master and servant contract was formed. He struggled to his feet, lumbering off with slow steps behind the earth and wood elite zombies, his goal clearly the towering mountain.

Han Shuo had seen everything clearly and was filled with surprise. He finally knew where he was at this time. This was the other dimension in which the undead creatures lived.

Han Shuo never would have imagined that the little skeleton and earth zombie would actually have an enormous troop in the other dimension. It even looked like they were getting on rather well. No wonder the earth elite zombie had asked to return last time if there wasn't anything for him. Looking at this battle, it seemed that the little skeleton had brought along the earth, wood and fire elite zombies, and was conducting a mighty invasion in the other dimension.

A high level undead creature like the mummy lord could only be summoned by a necromancer archmage, similar to the bone demons. Yet the little skeleton had handled the mummy lord with a single strike. This fully proved that the little skeleton's level was higher than the mummy lord. This was something that Han Shuo never would have thought of.

When the mummy lord was subdued by the little skeleton, Han Shuo suddenly panicked. He suddenly remembered that he didn't know how to return to the Profound Continent. There weren't any people or things that Han Shuo was familiar with in this eternally desolate and still space.

If he could only remain in this foreign netherworld in his consciousness, it would be complete torture to Han Shuo. At present, even his body was formed by his consciousness, so not only could Han Shuo not control anything, he couldn't cast any magic either. This was an extremely unfavourable situation for Han Shuo.

Looking at the little skeleton fly towards the towering bald mountain, Han Shuo repeatedly screamed mentally in an attempt to contact the little skeleton. In the midst of that, a sharp pain suddenly spread across Han Shuo's whole body. This kind of agony was unbearable even to Han Shuo's tough nerves. As a result, his consciousness gradually dissipated.

The little skeleton, who was travelling towards the towering mountain with the elite zombies, suddenly paused, looking towards the area where Han Shuo's consciousness vanished. He suddenly turned the flying undead creature and flew towards the area where Han Shuo's consciousness had just been. The purple demon eye sparkled, filled with uncertainty.

The earth, wood and fire elite zombies all spurred their fire-breathing warhorses to pass through the ranks of the undead army to stand next to the little skeleton. The earth elite zombie asked innocently, "What's wrong?"

"Father was here." The little skeleton, who only had two holes for a nose, moved with a crunching noise and responded to the three special undead creatures.

"How can Father be here, this is our world!" The earth zombie looked naively at the little skeleton, trying to understand.

"I don't know, but I just felt the connection between Father and myself. He was just here!" The little skeleton swung the three meter bone lance in his hand, the tip of the bone lance stopping at the area where Han Shuo's consciousness previously stayed, saying, "Right here, if you sniff carefully, you can still smell Father's scent."

With this sentence from the little skeleton, the three undead creatures all drew close to the area. Among them, the wood and fire elite zombie shook their heads, having yet to fully develop their own consciousness.

They currently could only rely on the little skeleton to think. Only the earth zombie deeply breathed in a few breaths of air, as if really smelling Han Shuo's scent. It replied while shaking its head, "Yes. Father has truly been here!"

"Let's return to the mountain, Father has already left. We still need to take over Pharaoh's territories later." said the little skeleton, and then spurred the undead creature into the sky, howling as he made his way to the towering mountain.

Han Shuo shot to his feet as if his head had been struck by lightning. When he landed on the ground, he was covered in a cold sweat, his heart still palpitating with fear.

The skeletal staff that was in his hand fell to the ground at this moment. It rattled as it bounced on the smooth hard ground of the Cemetery of Death. There weren't any changes to the skeletal staff that was now quietly lying on the ground. However, Han Shuo knew that the skeletal staff had just brought him to another place.

Travelling to the desolate and still dimension had given Han Shuo a scare. What Han Shuo was afraid of wasn't the existence of and war in the other dimension. Instead, he was scared that he couldn't return to the Profound Continent. He had existed only as a consciousness in that paradise for necromancy, but his body had remained on the Profound Continent.

The effect on a necromancer like Han Shuo was obvious, he was unable to use much of his power there. If he was stuck eternally in that area, facing desolate and deathly undead creatures for the rest of his life would be akin to torture to Han Shuo.

Being used to the riotous colors of this world, Han Shuo couldn't easily adapt to the monochromatic other dimension. Besides, this world still had Han Shuo's close friends, who were made of flesh and blood like Han Shuo, unlike the creatures in the other dimension.

"That was close, this skeletal staff is really odd, luckily it finally sent me back. If not, my life would have been destroyed." Han Shuo spoke to himself for a while. Only then did he look at the skeletal staff again. His mind was thinking furiously as to how he had passed through the various layered planes, with his consciousness landing in that space.

Unfortunately, even after pondering for a long while, Han Shuo still didn't know how he'd done so. Shaking his head, Han Shuo didn't carry on thinking about this question. He instead recalled the little skeleton's amazing performance in that space. Han Shuo wanted to immediately use the skeletal staff to summon the little skeleton over, but had a lingering fear of the skeletal staff's previous changes. He temporarily gave up on the thought of immediately summoning the little skeleton.

"Who knew the little skeleton was actually so well established. He looks even more awesome than me in the Profound Continent! When did this fellow become so formidable, eh?" Han Shuo couldn't resist sighing. When he remembered the scene where the little skeleton had landed, and the looks of fear from a few of the low level creatures, he finally understood what was going on.

Chapter 350: The excited dark dragon

Han Shuo, who'd just returned from the necromancer's dimension, spent the next couple of days recovering. After he was fully rested, he went to the dark forest and caught a few magic beasts, continuing to practice the "Trembling Soul" magic.

After a few days of practice, Han Shuo was finally able to manipulate his mental strength at will. When a "Trembling Soul" spell was fired, a wild beast would simply fall down, blood flowing from its nose and mouth.

When Han Shuo could control "Trembling Soul" as he would, he began studying spells that higher ranked necromancers should be proficient in.

The most important matters were the summoning spells for bone demons, old fey zombies and mummy lords. As necromancers progressed, not only would the level of their summoned creatures grow higher, but they would also be able to summon other kinds of creatures. Necromancy archmages like Han Shuo should be able to call forth bone demons, old fey zombies, and mummy lords.

In reality, apart from a few differences in the incantations, there weren't many differences between summoning the three. Even though their soul brands were different, the strength required to summon any one of them were roughly the same. As long as Han Shuo mastered summoning bone demons, he would then be able to summon the other two undead creatures just by slightly modifying the incantation.

Although, just like the "Trembling Soul" spell, the farther a necromancer progressed, the harder the advanced spells would become to master. Han Shuo's understanding of necromancy magic from the deceased archmage Clayton was now useless.

Starting from this realm, Han Shuo would have to carefully study necromancy magic by himself. Luckily, the Cemetery of Death had many books that Han Shuo could peruse. The number of references concerning the essence of necromancy were too many to count.

As the three evil knights and twelve mystical demons were still being refined, Han Shuo used this time to study more advanced necromancy magic.

The days flew by. One day, Han Shuo suddenly sensed a familiar presence outside the Cemetery of Death whilst chanting his incantations.

Suddenly awakening from his deep contemplation, Han Shuo held the skeleton staff as he walked out of the Cemetery of Death, running into dark dragon Gilbert wandering outside, "What are you doing here?"

"Esteemed master, I felt your presence, and it just so happened that I was in the Valley of Sunshine. Hence I came over to find you." Dark dragon Gilbert cheered up when he saw Han Shuo appear.

Gilbert hadn't seem to have undergone any great changes. However, Han Shuo could feel from Gilbert's body that his aura seemed to have strengthened a little. After Gilbert walked into the Cemetery of Death, he immediately began chattering, reporting on what had happened in the Valley of Sunshine.

Han Shuo gradually came to understand the situation in Valley of Sunshine from Gilbert's stories. Ever since Han Shuo had previously schemed against the various powers that had converged on the hidden valley with the mithril mine, the four great powers had formed a temporary truce. Instead, they focused all their attention on crusading against the culprit behind the scenes.

Laureton had previously said that whichever faction was the first to find the culprit behind the scenes would hold power in the Valley of Sunshine. So, all the powers, large or small, were trying to find the culprit behind the scenes. However, even after so many months, there was still no results.

Trunks understood that the real culprit, Han Shuo, had long since left the valley. Towards this issue, he pretended to express concern, but also silently expanded the Soul Destroyer mercenary band. Unwittingly, the silent and unknown Soul Destroyers had gradually become the fifth great power in Valley of Sunshine thanks to its abundant funds and Trunks' prestige.

Having consumed one of Han Shuo's Rebirth Pills, Trunks' strength had advanced from swordmaster to great swordmaster. Out of all the different factions in the Valley of Sunshine, only Laureton, who could go thrice berserk, could beat him. Florida and Adam Melo were both inferior to Trunks.

This period of time was the Soul Destroyers' chance to rise. As they shot through the ranks of their peers, they absorbed even more outstanding experts. Trunks previous ruthlessness now had an added edge of insidiousness to it. He wasn't in a hurry to immediately deal with Florida, intending to slowly torment him a bit at a time.

Gilbert took on some missions with Trunks, completing every operation perfectly. In this process, Gilbert frequently visited many brothels, using the skills that Han Shuo taught him to secretly absorb some yin energy. Thus, his strength also rapidly improved.

After he finished listening to Gilbert narrate the situation in the Valley of Sunshine, Han Shuo was actually slightly worried. Currently, Trunks' Soul Destroyers were the fifth greatest power in the Valley of Sunshine. This also meant that Soul Destroyers had the right to participate in the fight for the leadership over the Valley of Sunshine. Previously, when the Soul Destroyers didn't have this level of strength, only Florida would spare no effort in suppressing him. Now that the Soul Destroyers truly had such strength, the other three sides naturally would place more attention on Trunks.

Even the Berserker Warriors' Laureton would unfortunately not be as friendly to Trunks as he previously was. After all, Trunks possessed the strength to threaten his Cairo mercenary band. There were no friends who were forever in this world. Once there was a clear conflict of interest, it was very possible that some dirty things would happen.

Han Shuo contemplated for a while, understanding in his heart that Trunks and the rest would perhaps find it more difficult to develop in the future. However, Han Shuo believed in Trunks' ability and didn't care too much about this. After thinking for a while, he smiled slightly and said to dark dragon Gilbert, "I have something for you."

“What is it?” After Gilbert explained the details of the situation in the Valley of Sunshine to Han Shuo, he was surprised by Han Shuo’s response.

Han Shuo took the green dragon’s magical core from his space ring, lustrous green energy whirling within. The massive amount of energy contained within immediately caused Gilbert to go mad with joy, loudly screaming with delight, “A supreme magical core?”

“That’s right. This is a green dragon’s magical core, I believe this magical core should be useful to you?” Han Shuo grinned at Gilbert and asked.

Unable to stop nodding his head like a chicken pecking rice, Gilbert was tremendously excited, his right hand already holding up the green dragon’s magical core in his palm, laughing boisterously, “Useful. Too useful! I can feel the enormous energy contained within. With this green dragon magical core that’s of a higher rank than me, I can definitely evolve to the second level!”

“That’s good, swallow it immediately and just evolve in the Cemetery of Death.” This green dragon’s magical core had obviously been specially prepared by Han Shuo for Gilbert. Seeing Gilbert looking surprised and excited to the point of madness, he smiled.

Apart from his lewdness, Gilbert could also be considered a loyal follower. Previously in the taboo land deep within the Dark Forest, he’d displayed loyalty that’d touched Han Shuo. If not, Han Shuo, who was berserk at that time, perhaps would have been lost forever.

“Thank you, Master. Master, you are too great! Your loyal servant praises you from the bottom of his heart...” Gilbert sang unceasing praises as he clutched the green dragon’s magical core. Gilbert had interacted with humans for a long period of time during this time. His boot-licking skills had greatly improved, and he almost didn’t repeat a single sentence.

“Alright, alright. Just swallow the green dragon’s magical core for me. Less of that nonsense.” Han Shuo interrupted Gilbert’s fawning, not knowing whether to laugh or cry.

Gilbert stopped his nonsense this time, animatedly nodding his head and speaking to Han Shuo, “Master, I need to transform to my original form, which might be inconvenient in the Cemetery of Death. I'll just proceed outside."

"Go, but you need to be careful. Don't mess up the formation I set up." Han Shuo frantically reminded him as Gilbert rushed excitedly for the entrance of the Cemetery of Death, the green dragon's magical core in hand.

"Be at ease, Master. I know what I should be doing!" Gilbert replied, greatly avoiding the two large formations Han Shuo had set up. He only swallowed the green dragon's magical core after reaching another area.

It looked like Gilbert would be able to become a level two super magical beast in the near future, Han Shuo mused. He decided to continue studying necromancy and practice incantations in the Cemetery of Death.

A few days passed when Han Shuo suddenly thought of the dwarves in the valley. Thinking of the dwarves' skills in forging weapons and remembering his promise to Ancient Lizard King Dagassi, he departed the Cemetery of Death, travelling to the valley where the dwarves resided.

Winter had passed, and the dwarves' valley was filled with the fresh smell of flora. The dwarves guarding the valley all recognized Han Shuo. Han Shuo smoothly entered the dwarf village, seeing a few dwarves brewing fruit wine. When the dwarves that were brewing wine saw Han Shuo appear, all of them cheered endlessly, regardless of adults or children.

Encouraged by a woman, a dwarf child less than a meter tall walked towards Han Shuo with a glass filled with fruity smelling wine. "Uncle Han, this is for you, it's very delicious." This dwarf child stood on his tiptoes, handing over the glass filled with wine to Han Shuo.

Kneeling down, Han Shuo rubbed the little dwarf child's head and received the glass with a smile. "Thank you!"

The dwarf child's smiling face blushed, as he shyly ran to his mother's side and said, "Uncle Han thanked me."

The honest dwarves, no matter young or old, all roared with laughter.

The village was filled with a cheerful atmosphere. It looked like the dwarves had been living pretty well during this period of time.

When Bennett who had heard the news and saw that Han Shuo had arrived, he shouted from afar, “Yo, Han. It’s been a long time since you’ve came!” He’d been forging weapons just now and was naked from the waist up. His face was covered in soot and he was holding a large mallet in his left hand.

“Hehe. I’ve been a bit busy recently. Have you all been well recently?” Han Shuo asked smilingly.

“Of course, spring has arrived. We haven’t even finished the food you provided us for the winter. There’s still a lot of bacon. We’ve mined some ore and I was just instructing the youngsters in the dwarf weapon forging skills. Life is much better than it was previously.” Bennett chuckled as he replied, looking visibly refreshed.

“Where’s the village chief? I’ve come to discuss a large deal with you all.”

“Han, the gates to the dwarf village are forever open for you. To forge weapons for you is an honor for the dwarves and doesn’t count as business.” Chief Calvin leaned on a cane as he stroked his braided beard with a beaming smile, walking out from a distant stone house.

Calvin looked visibly older, and his body was getting weaker. When one reached a specific age, struggles with walking were inevitable. Calvin’s beard was fully silver now and he had to rely on a cane. It looked like he similarly couldn’t resist the effects of aging.

However, Calvin was in high spirits, and his chuckling look made him seem full of benevolence. When two young dwarves saw Calvin appearing, they took the initiative to go up and support the chief. Bennett asked, “Elder, why have you come out?”

“Han is here, of course I have to come visit. Bennett, I’m not as old as you think, don’t you see I walked over on my own? Heh!” Calvin laughed and bowed towards Han Shuo. “The dwarves in this village will forever thank you for your favor. There’s no business between friends. We will forge all the weapons you need, this is our attitude towards friends.”

When he'd come over this time, Han Shuo had primarily wanted the dwarves to help forge some weapons for the lizardmen in the underground world. Han Shuo promised Ancient Lizard King Dagassi to help look after the lizardmen. Although the lizardmen had obtained some weapons from the corpses of the Redbud Knights, those weapons were far from enough for their use.

In addition, lizardmen were built differently than normal humans. Han Shuo wanted to ask the dwarves to forge them some weapons tailored for their use. Of course, Brettel City's city guards also needed the dwarven-forged weapons. This was because the weapons forged by the dwarves were much more outstanding than normal weapons.

Calvin listened carefully to Han Shuo's descriptions. When Han Shuo finished, Calvin smiled as he said, “Don't worry. The children are coincidentally very free recently. We still have enough food currently and don't need to hunt. I will make arrangements for them to forge the weapons you need.”

“Many thanks, Elder!” Han Shuo sincerely expressed his gratitude.

“Haha, there's no need for such polite words between friends. It's rare for you to have come, do try out our freshly brewed fruit wine.” Calvin proudly said, pulling Han Shuo towards the women brewing wine.

Chapter 351: Father?

In the blink of an eye, over a month had flown by.

One day, twelve consecutive rumbling sounds rang out in the sinister Cemetery of Death. Twelve enormous banners unfurled in the explosions.

Han Shuo sat cross-legged right in the center, his eyes fixed on the twelve flags in the middle of the pit. The liquid inside the pit had turned into a pitch black pool, bubbles of various sizes rising to the surface. Black mist churned and coiled out of it, drifting around the Cemetery of Death without dispersing.

As the bubbles popped and crackled, that pitch black pool of liquid was gradually absorbed by the three evil knights and their fire warhorses. The evil knights had originally been submerged deep in the liquid in the pit. Now they were sucking in the black liquid like they were dying of thirst. Finally, the three evil knights and their mounts had fully absorbed the liquid, revealing their figures. They were now inky black from head to toe, with the eyes of both the riders and the mounts glinting faintly red with the light of eternal flames.

Apart from the vicious deathly aura drifting around them, there was now another baleful presence swirling around them. Feeling the enormous changes occurring within their bodies, the three silently threw back their heads and howled to the heavens, the bone spears in their hands dancing madly.

Because they could no longer bear the deep agony in their souls, the three evil knights once again tried to attack the power of the contract as their bodies came clear of the liquid in the pit. They wanted to escape from Han Shuo and from the slavery.

“Hmph! High rank undead creatures are indeed a little annoying. At least you understand the concept of resistance!” Han Shuo coldly snorted, abruptly standing up from his cross-legged sitting posture. He then sent his mental strength crashing down on the three evil knights, forcing obedience on them while revolving the secret arts of demonic magic.

The three evil knights' mournful, miserable howls were abruptly cut short. As both riders and horses looked at Han Shuo in horror, the flames in their eyes became weak and feeble, like a candle in the midst of a tempest. Their bodies and souls seemed ready to dissipate at the slightest provocation.

The liquid inside the cave that enhanced their bodies had contained Han Shuo's blood essence. Since the three evil knights and their fire warhorses had completely absorbed it, Han Shuo's blood essence now flowed within their bodies. This meant that he was completely capable of turning them into dust without leaving behind the slightest trace.

Therefore, when Han Shuo punished and tortured the three evil knights and their steeds using his own blood essence, the fear that struck them was the most primal of them. The three evil knights had been ready to exert their everything to break away from Han Shuo's contract, but now all of them were crawling on the ground, their entire beings trembling.

Han Shuo could sense the feeling of fear and awe from the depths of the three evil knights' souls. He snorted coldly, stepping in front of the three evil knights who no longer dared to resist, and placed three "Dark Seals" on each of them. With this magic, he could directly summon them from the other dimension.

If Han Shuo hadn't imprinted the "Dark Seals" onto them, he wouldn't be able to call upon them in his next summons once he sent them back to the other dimension. Without an identifying brand on their bodies, the next summons would've chosen a random set of evil knights. In the vast, boundlessness of the other dimension, there was a countless amount of these low level existences. It would take a miracle to summon the same set once again.

However, as long as a "Dark Seal" was stamped onto their bodies, Han Shuo could find them anywhere in the other dimension through the brands. From there, he could bring the refined evil knights directly to this plane.

After branding the evil knights and their fire warhorses one by one, Han Shuo intended to send them back to the other dimension. However, he suddenly recalled how he'd seen undead creatures including the little skeleton, earth, fire and wood elite zombies thrive in that haven of necromancy during his trip last time.

Han Shuo understood that the little skeleton and the crew were vigorously carrying out an invasion in that dimension. As their strength was improving constantly, Han Shuo was well aware of the strong undead creatures in the other dimension, and how the mummy lord wasn't the strongest creature in the other dimension either.

When he reached the rank of grand magus necromancer, Han Shuo could call upon undead creatures such as the mummy lords, bone demons and old fey zombies. However, there were races beyond the undead creatures, above the mummy lords. Those super high rank undead creatures included creatures like bone dragons, skeleton kings and zombie kings. Only necromancers at the rank of sacred magus were able to summon them.

According to legend, necromancers beyond the rank of sacred magus could even summon undead creatures that wielded the strength of demigods from the strange world. How mighty were these undead creatures? What kind of form did they appear in? Even Han Shuo wasn't sure...

In the endlessly vast other dimension, Han Shuo didn't know whether or not undead creatures with the power of demigods existed. The little skeleton's strength was constantly being enhanced, but Han Shuo was still somewhat worried about him. This was why he wanted the little skeleton to take the three evil knights back to the other dimension, thereby increasing his strength again.

When his thoughts reached this point, Han Shuo took out the skeletal staff and started chanting an incantation. Since he'd last accidentally entered the other dimension, there had been a period of time when Han Shuo had had some apprehension towards this magic staff. However, after a few days studying it, he didn't find any differences when he started using it in chanting incantations again. Han Shuo didn't know how the previous matter actually occurred, and so decided not to care too much about it.

A black light flashed from the void. The little skeleton landed, still atop the spiky undead creature. When they arrived, the three evil knights instantly sensed the familiar air of death from this dimension. When they saw clearly that it was just a little skeleton commanding them, the three evil knights emitted the might of a high rank undead creature, as if wanting to terrify the little skeleton.

The little skeleton swept a glance over the three evil knights, his purple eye socket flashing with light. He lightly tapped the three meter long bone spur on the spiky undead creature. The latter suddenly turned to the three evil knights and let out a silent roar. A billowing surge of murderous intent abruptly rolled out.

The three evil knights, who had planned on showing off their strength in front of the little skeleton, suddenly felt the powerful might of that odd undead creature. They suddenly jolted in shock, their instinctive fear of higher level undead creatures causing them to retreat a few steps.

“Father!” After scaring off the three evil knights, the little skeleton leapt off from his undead creature. He ran straight to Han Shuo, joyously transmitting this message.

Han Shuo was shocked. He looked at the little skeleton who’d lived with him ever since the Babylon Academy of Magic and Force. The little skeleton had secretly helped him throw out garbage in the middle of the night. Now that Han Shuo heard the little skeleton call him like this, he was at a sudden loss of words.

“Father, you have been to my hometown, right?” The little skeleton stuck the three meter long bone spear into the ground as he walked up in front of Han Shuo. He looked up, blinking his purple eye socket at Han Shuo to transmit this message.

The word “father” that the little skeleton called him stunned Han Shuo. He suddenly found himself increasingly unable to see through the little skeleton. From simple communication to a conversation, this change had happened in only two years. Looking at the little skeleton in front of him with a sparkling purple eye socket, Han Shuo was shaken to the extreme.

He finally snapped out his shock after a while, nodding, "That's right. I visited the other dimension last time." Pausing for a bit, Han Shuo asked with some hesitation, "Do you finally have your own complete consciousness? Why do you call me father? What's going on?"

"You created me. Your blood runs within my body, and you've also always considered me your child. You are my father." The little skeleton blinked his purple eye and continued to send messages, "Father, not only do I have a complete consciousness, I also have some miraculous powers. These were all given by you."

Han Shuo had originally seen the tiny little skeleton as a little child. The latter's display of childish behavior had always reinforced this illusion, especially after leaving the Babylon Academy of Magic and Force. Perhaps that was why Han Shuo subconsciously considered the little skeleton his child. As for the little skeleton, he could feel the deep feeling of love through the spirit connection with Han Shuo and gradually took Han Shuo as his father.

Han Shuo's mind was a bit chaotic after the little skeleton's sudden thunderous call of "father". His heart was full of questions, but Han Shuo didn't know where to start. He fell silent for a while before saying, "I've enhanced the three evil knights so their power has increased quite a bit. Take them with you, they should be of help."

"Thank you, father! I will discipline them well." The little skeleton exclaimed in delight. He didn't have the arrogance in front of Han Shuo that let him look down on the world like he had in the other dimension. Instead, he acted more like a naughty child.

The little skeleton pulled the three meter long bone spur from the ground before walking towards the three evil knights. The closer he drew to them, the more violently the air of death around him surged. All of the deadly air from the Cemetery of Death seemed to churn like a whirlpool, the little skeleton firmly in the eye of the hurricane as he strode forward.

The three evil knights suddenly trembled. The flames in their eyes flashed as they stared at the little skeleton with seven spurs behind his back. They seemed to have figured out the little skeleton's extraordinary origin.

High level undead creatures possessed a might that any undead creature of lower ranks was simply incapable of resisting. The little skeleton walked proudly up to the three evil knights, tapping his huge bone spur on each one, fire warhorses included, seemingly issuing an order.

The bone spur rang out clearly as it tapped on the riders and mounts. The flames in their eyes flickered intensely as their postures turned submissive. It seemed they had all yielded to the little skeleton's might.

Han Shuo watched the little skeleton tame the three evil knights smoothly, feeling quite incredulous. Even Han Shuo himself had to use his blood essence to subdue the three evil knights when he dealt with them. He didn't expect the little skeleton to have no need of anything. He'd used his identity as a higher rank creature to the point where they didn't dare to lift their heads.

Whether it was because of different refining methods, or because the little skeleton, earth, wood and fire elite zombies had all started off at a low level, they had all readily accepted Han Shuo without any resistance during the demonic magic's refining process.

When he'd refined the little skeleton, Han Shuo had felt their souls interconnect. He dared to say so because the latter had inherited a portion of his memory in addition to some of his power. Otherwise, it'd be absolutely impossible for the little skeleton to skillfully display the Law of Activating Magic using the seven bone spurs on his back.

As for the fire, wood and earth elite zombies, they had been refined via the secret zombie refining process. In addition to Han Shuo painstakingly collecting the materials, they'd also absorbed the five extreme elements from the extreme places of their respective elements. Who knew how much power had been stored up in those locations? The enormity and rarity of that power was immeasurable.

Perhaps it was due to those reasons that the four undead creatures – the little skeleton, earth, wood and fire elite zombies could directly communicate with Han Shuo through their minds. They had extraordinary abilities to begin with, as well as the surprising ability to evolve. On the contrary, for those three evil knights or even higher rank undead creatures, Han Shuo could only give them orders, not communicate mentally with them.

End of part one of the chapter.

They likewise lacked the fortuitous chances of the little skeleton, and a part of Han Shuo's memories. Neither had they absorbed an enormous amount of elements from the heavens and earth like the other three zombie fellows. Moreover, because their starting rank was already much higher than the zombies and skeletons, they'd even tried to resist Han Shuo's effort to improve their physical bodies. Perhaps due to these reasons that despite being strong, they were still a far cry from the four of little skeleton inner circle – the undead creatures who Han Shuo had tempered first.

"Father, they will listen obediently from now on." The little skeleton pointed at the three trembling evil knights, saying to the silently pondering Han Shuo.

"Heh heh, you can take them back. My mind is a bit of a mess right now." Han Shuo smiled with the little skeleton. Then, when he was about to cast the spell, Han Shuo suddenly looked at the undead creature that was the little skeleton's steed and asked, "Right, what is this strange fellow? Why have I never seen it before?"

"Oh, he was originally a bone demon. Father found me lots of good bones last time. I dismantled this bone demon and used some of those fine bones to create its wings, so it turned out looking like this. Father, did I make it ugly?" After answering, the little skeleton asked Han Shuo, somewhat embarrassed.

"No, it looks very nice." Han Shuo replied, before sending the little skeleton and the three evil knights back to the strange world. With his connection with the little skeleton, Han Shuo sent the three evil knights to the little skeleton's territory. From now on, those three were destined to become its underlings, to be its vanguard in battle.

"When did you have the ability to refine undead creatures?" After the little skeleton and three evil knights disappeared, Han Shuo muttered with a heart filled with shock.

Although the little skeleton's enhancement on that bone demon was a simple dismantling and reassembly of the bones, Han Shuo could see from this action that the little skeleton was simply incredible. He was sure that the little skeleton had received that enhancement method from his memory. Otherwise, the little skeleton certainly wouldn't have had this ability.

That the little skeleton had unconsciously grown into this existence was a big, pleasant surprise for Han Shuo. For someone who had personally created this miracle, the little skeleton's rapid development had astounded Han Shuo in the beginning. Now it had transformed to excitement and ecstasy. The more he thought about it, the more satisfied he was of his masterpiece.

Deep down in his heart, Han Shuo had truly regarded the little skeleton as his child, so he was supremely excited when the latter had called him "father". He had some difficulties adapting at first, but after the little skeleton had left for the other dimension, Han Shuo felt a kind of longing. Han Shuo suddenly realized that he'd seen the little skeleton as his child from very long ago. His doting and worries for the latter were indeed the behavior of a father for his child!

"Ahh, child. I finally have a child!" A while after the little skeleton left, inside the Cemetery of Death, Han Shuo threw back his head and let out an insane laugh to the heavens. His laughter was full of joy and excitement.

The three evil knights had emerged, but the twelve mystical demons still needed some more time to take shape. The evil knights only needed to absorb some energy, so this process naturally didn't take much time, However, the twelve yin demons were an evolution to another form. This process was much more complicated than a simple energy absorption. Accordingly, the time taken was longer.

After dark dragon Gilbert swallowed the magic core of the green dragon, he nested in the Cemetery of Death and fell into hibernation. His huge body curled up into a ball, his scales and skin sometimes overflowing with stinky liquid and some lights began to flash deep within his body.

Gilbert's evolution might take quite a while, and Han Shuo didn't continue studying archmage necromancer rank magic anymore. Seeing that everything was proceeding in a good direction in the Cemetery of Death, he once again returned to Brettel City.

Having left Brettel City for some time, Han Shuo was surprised to see life had suddenly become more bustling than when he had left it. The streets were pathetically deserted in the past, and it was practically impossible to see anyone walking back and forth.

However, when Han Shuo released the yin demon to make a quick scouting trip upon his return, he suddenly saw many changes had occurred unknowingly in Brettel City. As city lord, these changes greatly pleased him.

Because the mountain people on the surrounding mountains had migrated into Brettel City, the city's population had increased. In addition, the merchants outside had flooded the city in pursuit of profit. Not only did they bring various daily necessities, some of the bold merchants had even opened up shops in Brettel City.

After the demand for food was met, those merchants started to sell luxurious clothes along with daily necessities. The population of Brettel City wasn't high, but the young men who'd joined the city guard had earned a good monthly salary.

Every month, the honest young men in the city all received gold coins which were used to improve the originally poor life of their families. As long as each family had a young man at the right age, the entire family could live in style in Brettel City. Enthusiasm for enlisting in the military was unprecedented. Some young men in Seamist City even took the risk to come here to enlist as their life's last chance.

Unknowingly, the number of city guards had increased from the original three thousand to five thousand. With the war crazy Dorcas stationed there, Jack didn't need to spend gold coins to forge equipment for the soldiers. Dorcas was pushing his men to compete with Faulke's elite knights, seeing who did the best in punishing the bandits around Brettel City.

Dorcas and Faulke were extremely effective as a pair. Not only did they wipe out two bandit organizations, the gold coins that came as the spoils of battle were enough to equip the soldiers. Brettel City had gone from its passive turtling, suffering humiliation here and there, to actively striking out, visiting retribution on the bandits. The city had gradually risen up within the span of a few months, attracting the attention of the seven grand duchies. The seven grand duchies who were originally tangled in the chaos of small wars suddenly called a truce.

The seven grand duchies all had the same feeling – the wolf is coming!

After the yin demon finished touring around Brettel City, Han Shuo listened to a report of the city's current situation from Dick and Chester. Dorcas and Faulke were still personally leading a thousand city guards in a sweep through the some of the large bandit groups in the surrounding area.

Dorcas had outstanding military strategy and stood as the military's head, while Faulke and his knights held all the power and equipment of a standard knight brigade. Their furious pace of raids against the nearby bandit camps almost seemed like a competition to see who could wipe out more bandits. The soldiers were forged in the crucible of constant warfare, becoming increasingly adept at battle.

"Bryan, the number of merchants coming to the city isn't small. According to the current situation, Brettel will definitely become a big city and attract more immigrants." Jack laughed, his cheeks wobbling at the effort, and carried on, "I can already see the mountain people coming down soon. Now that the benefits and treatments in Brettel City are this good, it's much more profitable than their mining job."

"We don't have to wait for long. The five mountain chiefs have already made this decision. Except for Adleman who lacks ambition in his old age, the four other chiefs all want to lead their subordinates down to become the official army of Brettel City." Dick looked at Han Shuo and smiled wryly, "Those four fellows have been urging me so many times already. They wanted me to tell Your Lordship about this, but Your Lordship hasn't been in the city. So this matter was delayed."

Han Shuo's mind raced when he heard Chester's words. He asked with a seemingly very interested expression, "What is this about? Aren't they doing very well with mining ore?"

"This depends on who we compare it with. To the native civilians, their mining income is pretty good. But to compare with the city guards' benefits, their money from mining isn't enough to support the daily expenses of their subordinates."

"Up until now, the mountain people had not been faring too poorly, but since Your Lordship's come, that's taken a quick turn. The income of a soldier is now far better than the income from mining. Moreover, Dorcas and Faulke have collected a great deal of weapons, armor and even gold from wiping out the bandits. This supplemental income from raids far exceeds that from mining."

"The seven grand duchies are locked in chaotic fighting, which make it a place of easy profit. Be it selling weapons, warhorses or directly robbing the bandits, they are all the fastest means to accumulate wealth. My Lord, Brettel City developing this quickly is also due this reason – plundering the wealth of others."

"Hehe, to the mountain people, following Your Lordship is obviously much more promising than mining. Not to mention that Dorcas and Faulke also brought some bandits back to be slaves. With these slaves, the mines don't need too much manpower. The mountain folk are all good fighters with their strong bodies. It's a matter of course that they have the idea to join the army." Dick explained to Han Shuo.

As Dick finished speaking, Han Shuo smiled and said, "It seems everything is for 'profit'. However, how is the loyalty of these mountain people?"

"My Lord, with you here in Brettel City, do you think they'd dare to be disloyal?" Chester suddenly asked back with a smile.

Chester's boot licking was perfect timing. Han Shuo smiled and mused for a moment, saying, "The number of mountain people capable of fighting from the five mountains is about ten thousand. That number alone will double the amount of Brettel city guards. If they decide to join, all the war chariots and stone-throwing catapults at the city gates' can be put in operation."

"Brettel City currently is overflowing with capital, so the prospects of future development goes without saying. This matter of expanding the army is imperative! Ten thousand mountain people will make truly fine soldiers. They've been clashing with the bandits for many years, so there's no doubt about their fighting ability. I think this is very interesting, but I just don't know if the mountain people are actually sincere."

"My Lord, regarding their illustration of sincerity, I think they are sincere." Dick immediately guaranteed.

"Oh, how do you know that?" Han Shuo smiled superciliously, looking at him and asking again, "You can make the decisions in their stead?"

Dick was about to say that he was a mountain man but upon hearing Han Shuo add the question at the end, he couldn't help but smile wryly, "My Lord, although I cannot make decisions for them, I know how they think. As long as Your Lordship acts with moderation, with their current level of trust and gratitude towards Your Lordship, they will definitely be willing to listen to your orders."

"Is that so?" Han Shuo fell silent for a bit before speaking to Dick with a smile, "Well then, help me pass my words to the mountain people, I'm also glad to let them join the army, but their squads must be split up, and their original leaders no longer their commanders."

"In addition, all of the mountain army leaders will start from the rank of captain, and can only return to their original rank through meritorious battle service. For now, all of the mountain people must be under our lead. I will allow them to join the army if they can agree to these conditions, sharing the same treatment as our soldiers.”

Han Shuo was thinking for himself as well. Taking all five mountains into account, there were about ten thousand mountain fighters. If they were still left under the control of their original leaders, it could bring about unbearable damage if they nursed the idea of rebellion after entering Brettel City while outnumbering the city guards.

One absolutely needed to defend against the hearts of people. Even if he wasn't thinking of himself, Han Shuo's position was one that demanded that he act responsible for the city's people. Though he believed that the mountain chiefs wouldn't dare to rebel, there was no guarantee for anything in everything. Everyone could have this kind of wild ambition. Han Shuo didn't want to risk the lives of the civilians.

Moreover, the mountain chiefs were still young. Whether or not they were suitable to command so many soldiers needed to be judged through their true abilities. In the low likelihood that these young chiefs were useless good-for-nothings, not only would Han Shuo lose his gold, it might create a latent danger in Brettel City.

Since becoming the city lord of Brettel City, Han Shuo's attitude and bearing had also developed alongside him assuming his position. He was becoming increasingly careful and mature. There was no longer any of that single minded ruthlessness he had in the past.

“Good, I will definitely pass on Your Lordship's words.” Dick didn't dare guarantee anything else after hearing Han Shuo's words, because his conditions were indeed somewhat harsh.

Chapter 352: Stone Men

After three days, the five chiefs of the mountain people once again met in Brettel City. Apart from the aged Adleman, the other four comparatively young leaders actually all agreed to Han Shuo's demands.

Eventually, even Adleman who lacked the others' lofty ambitions, agreed with the four young mountain leaders to bring down the majority of the mountain people in the mines to join the army. Adleman would be responsible for extracting ore from the five nearby mines and a portion of the ore would be allocated to the four young leaders.

Brettel City was now brimming with life. Eight thousand people came from the five mines to join the city's burgeoning populace. Dorcas, called back by the news, decided to reorganize his troops. He broke up their traditional formations to form four large units, placing Han Shuo's people as their commanders.

Even though the mountain people had previously acquired a smattering of weapons and armor, Brettel City didn't have the equipment to fully arm eight thousand new recruits.

An armaments workshop funded by the Boozt Merchant Guild was quickly set up by Jack and Dorcas. It began operating at the site of the former workshops on Mount Silk. In addition, Brettel City also allocated funds to purchase smelting facilities, while the Boozt Merchant Guild was put in charge of hiring skilled metalworkers.

Since Han Shuo still had the assistance of the dwarves from the Dark Forest, he instructed the weaponsmiths at Mount Silk to focus on forging armour. The dwarves' ability to forge weapons was far superior to anything a human could make, but in return, their armor weren't as refined compared to those forged by humans.

Dorcas sent every one of the four mountain people units into harsh training, a regimen of his own devising. A former student of the Lancelot Imperial Academy, Dorcas was definitely a talented field commander. Under his training, the eight thousand mountain people saw a noticeable improvement in their strength.

After Faulke returned, he began instructing the mountain people in the proper usage of combat wagons, ballista wagons, and catapults. This type of powerful defensive weaponry required strong people to operate them, and the mountain people were perfectly suited to this task. Under the auspices of Faulke, the mountain people learned how to properly operate Brettel City's gates and the combat wagons.

As the days passed, Dorcas found Han Shuo one day, and proposed a suggestion. "My Lord, the moat outside of Brettel City's gates is full of shallow sewage. Now that we have the eight thousand mountain people at our disposal, we can spend some time making the moat even deeper. This way, even if the seven grand duchies decide to invade, the moat will cause them to lose a lot of men."

Brettel City's moat had originally only been half completed, but since Brettel City had been sacked again and again by the seven grand duchies, the construction of the moat had been left as an unfinished project. In the end, Brettel City became a lost cause, and the moat was eventually forgotten.

Dorcas was indeed a skilled strategist, immediately seeing the value in the moat outside Brettel City's gates. Since the moat had already been given an initial shape, it wouldn't take too much time and material to finish building it. When Brettel City's moat was complete, it would act as a severe blow to the invaders.

This suggestion was immediately taken to heart by Han Shuo. The mountain people, relaxing after learning how to operate the defensive siege weaponry, were immediately put to work again on expanding the city's moats and making them deeper.

Han Shuo's arrival had also drastically increased the number of Dark Mantle agents operating in Brettel City. With Dick managing them, they then proceeded to infiltrate the seven grand duchies, resulting in a steady stream of information. If information concerning Brettel City was brought up, that would also be dutifully recorded and passed on to Dick, then Han Shuo.

As an emissary of Second Dark Star, Han Shuo far outranked Dick. In fact, Han Shuo even possessed the authority to award medals and citations to members who had contributions to their name. Amongst those select few stood Chester. Under Han Shuo's deliberate recommendation, he became the second most powerful person in Brettel City's Dark Mantle branch, second only to Dick. In addition, Chester had also risen in rank within Dark Mantle.

One day, Adleman suddenly sought out Han Shuo, who was studying necromancy magic. Delia of Mount Silk, who'd entered the military by now, also entered by his side.

"My lord, numerous stone men have appeared at the mines halfway up the mountain. These stone men have been attacking miners at the deepest places in the mines, causing scores of deaths. These stone men don't fear magic, and their bodies are too tough. We don't know how to deal with them, so we were wondering if you would be able to help us." Upon finding Han Shuo, Adleman immediately told him what had happened.

Han Shuo was shocked. Frowning, he asked "Stone men? How can there be stone men in the mines? Was there anything like this in the past?"

Wearing soft armour, the heroic and imposing Delia had a tall nose and long legs. Standing ramrod straight, she presented an imposing figure. She shook her head at Han Shuo's question, replying, "No, this has never happened before. Even since my father took over Mount Silk, there were never been any traces of stone men in there."

Delia was originally the leader of Mount Silk. Even now, Delia still had many subordinates on the mountain. The people of Delia's father's generation had lived there before. Now that stone men had appeared, the former leader of the mountain people was now the focus of attention.

"Those stone men found halfway up Mount Silk... did you suddenly find them after re-opening an area?" Han Shuo continued to ask, brows furrowed.

Nowadays, not only did Mount Silk have mountain people mining there, but it also had a collaborative armaments workshop jointly owned by the Boozt Merchant Guild and Brettel City. It produced ten or so sets of high-quality armor every day. When more metalworkers arrived, the weapons workshop would then be able to operate more to Han Shuo's satisfaction.

The mines on Mount Silk had abundant supplies of iron and copper ore. Taking advantage of this, the ore could be directly smelted into iron and copper. They would then be mixed with various other metals and forged into suits of armour by experienced metalworkers. In the eyes of Han Shuo, not only was Mount Silk an important source of ore, but also the crux of his armament campaign. As such, Han Shuo was greatly concerned about what Adleman had said.

"It is, My Lord. When we were excavating further below, we found that the iron deposits seemed to become even richer. When we were planning to send people down, a bunch of stone men appeared from an unknown place. These stone men seemed to have a very pitiful intelligence, making it impossible to communicate with them. They immediately began attacking us, and killed quite a few of our miners." Adleman replied.

"So it's like this!" Han Shuo thought for a moment and nodded. He said "I'll go with you to Mount Silk to see what's going on with the stone men in the mines."

"Thank you, My Lord!" Adleman gratefully replied.

"My Lord, Mount Silk was my region to govern; even now, I still have many friends there. I want to go with you to take a look. I hope that My Lord will allow me to." Delia stared at Han Shuo with glittering eyes, beseeching him. Since entering the military, the mountain folk had to follow orders and couldn't do as they wished. It looked like Dorcas' training lately had already taken effect. Delia seemed much more rule abiding now than the first time Han Shuo had met her.

Han Shuo simply nodded "Alright then."

One could see quite a bit of green at the base of Mount Silk. However, the amount of green decreased as one went up the mountain. There were craggy rocks as far as the eye could see, without a trace of flora or fauna.

Spring had arrived. The warm weather also felt very comfortable. Han Shuo, Adleman, and Delia, along with a group of mountain people, walked towards Mount Silk. Due to his advanced age, Adleman walked more slowly than the rest, so Han Shuo had no choice but to walk slowly up the mountain with him.

Delia radiated her beauty along the way, dressed in light armour. Her arms and legs were bare, and she wore sparkling silver armor covering the “important places” on her chest. She glistened beneath the sun. It complimented her wheat-colored skin, mesmerizing and attracting the gazes of Adleman’s young escorts.

In Brettel City, Delia was known as the number one beauty amongst the mountain people. But by the same token, her strength was also something extraordinary. Due to her previous position, nobody dared to be impudent. Delia was now a mere captain, but since her strength was enough to suppress both Jack and Kent, ordinary mountain people had no way of catching her attention.

On the way to Mount Silk, Han Shuo thought about the stone men in the mines with a heart full of suspicion. Not knowing where the mountain people had come from, he didn’t pay attention to Delia’s infatuated fans.

Halfway up Mount Silk, Delia asked Han Shuo “My Lord, how do you plan on dealing with those stone men?”

Han Shuo was in deep thought. He turned his head and gave a dazzling smile, saying “We’ll see after we arrive there. We won’t know how to deal with the stone men before we see them.”

“If it’s like this...if the stone men attack us in the same way that our enemies attack us, then what do we do?” Delia continued to inquire, looking at Han Shuo with shining eyes.

“Then we’ll turn them into stone forever.” Han Shuo casually replied.

Hearing Han Shuo’s words, Delia nodded, saying “They dared to kill people from my tribe. I won’t let them off the hook. Damnable stone men, I’ll make you pay!”

It seemed as if Delia really cared about the ten or so miners who were killed. From this, Han Shuo deduced that Delia was a person who really cared for her subordinates. Even though she was no longer responsible for Mount Silk, upon hearing that there was a crisis, she had immediately requested to go investigate with Han Shuo. This proved that Delia was indeed kind to her subordinates.

After Han Shuo had made his stance towards the stone men clear, Delia appeared more relaxed around Han Shuo, later excitedly inquiring about Han Shuo's experiences, especially his challenge of various experts in the Lancelot Empire and the corpses that lay behind him because of them. She also inquired about his conflict with the Brut Merchant Alliance, Cain, and the like-minded. Delia expressed a strong interest in these things.

There were many merchants in Brettel City who had come from Ossen City. These merchants were very familiar with some of Han Shuo's exploits. Due to their reverence of Han Shuo, they exaggerated stories of Han Shuo's heroic deeds, and relayed those to the citizens of Brettel City.

This unconsciously resulted in the citizens of Brettel City all coming to know Han Shuo's past experiences. Combined with his previous battles with the four bandit groups, Han Shuo's prestige in the city was beyond imagination. In the eyes of the citizens of Brettel City, a city lord who could provide safety and prosperity was far more trustworthy than that king in Ossen City who had abandoned them.

Responding to Delia's excited questioning, Han Shuo didn't say much, only elaborating a few sentences. However, the more Han Shuo appeared remote, the more interested Delia became. Delia spent the whole journey asking about Han Shuo's duels with other strong figures.

After a headache inducing talk, the group finally reached the entrance of the mines. There was already a group of miners, with dust-coated faces and muddy clothes, waiting for them. These young miners were pleasantly surprised upon seeing Delia, joyfully shouting "Boss!"

From the miners' genuine delight in seeing Delia, Han Shuo could tell that Delia was a good leader in their eyes. He looked a bit askance at her.

When Delia saw Han Shuo look at her with surprise, she stuck out her well-rounded bosom with a bit of pride, seeming to say that, “See that? I’m actually quite good!”

Han Shuo laughed involuntarily at Delia’s behavior and didn’t excessively voice his opinion. When Delia asked about the miners using the tone of a leader, Han Shuo released the yin demon while listening to the content of their conversation, slowly flying toward the area said to have problems.

“Let’s go inside and see what’s going on.” Delia instructed to a group of miners as Han Shuo used the yin demon to look inside.

“Hold on. Mister Adleman, you shouldn’t go inside.” Han Shuo suddenly said. “It’s cold and wet inside. With your advanced age, you should wait outside for a bit.”

Adleman didn’t persist, knowing that with his body’s condition, he would only be a nuisance if he went inside. He smiled and agreed, saying “Thank you for My Lord’s understanding.” Smiling and nodding his head, Han Shuo looked at Delia and her group, and led the group into the dark caverns of the mine.

Chapter 353: Place of extreme metal

The caverns of the mines were dark and humid. Yet Han Shuo, someone who should've been unfamiliar with the mine, was rushing forward as if very familiar with the area.

At first, Delia had even expected him to take the rearmost position. Who would've thought that Han Shuo would just advance without even taking one step backward from beginning to end? What was even more surprising that Han Shuo led the way like he was the guide. There was no mistakes made as he went straight into the depths of the mine.

After a while, Delia couldn't hold in her curiosity, as the miners began to doubt their guide. She quickly walked up to Han Shuo, bright eyes staring at him as she inquired, "My Lord, you've been to Mount Silk before, haven't you?"

Shaking his head, Han Shuo replied, "No, I haven't. This is the my first time at Mount Silk. Why?"

"Really? Then how come you are so familiar with the terrain inside the mine? You haven't stopped to consider any path but one and yet you haven't taken a single incorrect turn. If you haven't been to Mount Silk before, how are you so familiar with the twists and turns here?" Delia was becoming more and more doubtful and chased after the leisurely striding Han Shuo with a bunch of questions.

In Han Shuo's eyes, this group of people, including Delia, wasn't very strong at all. Since the stone men deep inside the cave had no fear of magic and possessed rock solid bodies, Han Shuo had released the yin demon to scout ahead so that they wouldn't be suddenly slaughtered. This, coupled with some of the miners' description, let him proceed with naturally no hesitation at all. But who knew that it would rouse Delia's doubts?

Han Shuo laughed softly and said, "Didn't I already hear you guys describe the situation before we entered? My intuition towards cave terrain is highly sensitive. From your description, I can instantly and accurately determine the terrain of this area. Do you believe me or not?"

Hearing Han Shuo's explanation, Delia was stunned before asking with a half doubtful expression, "Really?"

"Of course!" Han Shuo laughed out loud, "I've never been to Mount Silk before, let alone have the chance to explore this mine. How would I be this familiar with the way if I don't have a keen sense for cave terrain?"

Delia thought carefully about it. With Han Shuo's identity as the Brettel city lord and also a count, he really wouldn't have the free time to come explore the mine. Faced with this logic, she was mostly convinced upon hearing Han Shuo's explanation. Subconsciously, her gaze towards him held a bit more admiration as she told herself that the city lord was really as incredible as the legends said. He was a true man indeed!

Seeing that Delia didn't ask any other questions, Han Shuo continued to hurry onward. He had turned from guest to the guide thanks to the yin demon. The miners and Delia had become his attendants.

The only remaining yin demon slowly went deep into the belly of Mount Silk. It soon reached a narrow and dry area based on the miners and Delia's description. This area connected the entrances of three deep tunnels to the passage they were coming in through. Rocks pressed down on the tunnel's ceiling. If they wanted to continue ahead, they would need to be crawling on their bellies.

According to the miners, this was the place they'd encountered some stone men last time they'd been here mining. There were even some traces left behind from last time's mining. However, the yin demon was invisible. They wouldn't be able to discover its existence even if the stone men were hiding in the surroundings.

Han Shuo instantly sped up when he found the right place. Delia and the miners behind was greatly surprised as they watched his body shuffle quickly through the caves with extreme sensitivity. At this point, Delia truly believed that Han Shuo had a natural intuition for caves like he'd just said. He could still determine the accurate direction from the complex crossroads.

“Be careful, My Lord! Up ahead is the area where the stone men appeared last time!” The miners were panting heavily as they tried to keep up with Han Shuo, who was almost flying as he hurtled forward. He slowly decreased his speed so as to allow them to catch up when he heard their raised voices. At this moment, Delia finally caught up. She walked up, taking a few deep breaths to calm her heaving breasts. Her voice was filled with worry as she said, “My Lord, please be careful. These stone men aren’t easy to deal with. We should just advance calmly and cautiously.”

It turned out Delia wasn’t as casual and careless as she appeared to be. She was very careful and meticulous when it came to critical moments. Han Shuo couldn’t help but glance at her in surprise. Right now, Delia was trying her best to regain her breath and calm her racing heart. Her twin peaks rose and fell in rhythm, attracting his attention. Han Shuo’s heart skipped a beat, and he couldn’t help but sneak a few more glances at her chest.

People said any woman could tell from the men’s eyes which part of her body was the focal point of attention. No matter what kind of concealing method a man did use, the woman being observed could still sense if that man had snuck a peek at her breasts or not.

These words indeed had some truth to them. Although they were currently in the middle of a dark cave, Delia might just have discovered Han Shuo’s eyes on her chest. She was somewhat shy under his lingering gaze on her towering peaks. Instinctively, Delia slightly bent down, as if wanting to cover some parts of her full chest through the bending of her waist.

“Alright, I think we’ve reached the place. You guys stay close so I can take care of you in case there’s any danger.” Han Shuo slowed to a stop and turned to tell the people behind him.

The miners quickly caught up, but still lagged behind Han Shuo and Delia. Fortunately, the light in the tunnel was dim, and they didn’t have Han Shuo’s eyesight. Being a distance behind, they didn’t see the flush on Delia’s face.

The three tunnels converged midway. As the group walked a few hundred meters more, the ceiling above their heads gradually became lower. The path also narrowed, allowing only two people walk side by side. Everyone had to bend down at this point to prevent their heads from hitting the rocks.

After passing through the narrow path, the group reached the area where the yin demon had stopped at. This place was actually very wide, however, the rocks above their head extended quite a ways down. There were three flattened tunnels around, ones where one had to crawl on their belly if they wanted to pass.

This place was precisely where the stone men had suddenly appeared and attacked last time, resulting in many casualties for the miners.

Han Shuo was 190 centimeters tall. He couldn't walk upright even if he bent down, so he had to squat down to inspect the situation. The miners who'd been here before all revealed nervous expressions as they looked around carefully. They raised the crude mining tools in their hand, as if getting ready to deal with any stone men that emerged.

Even Delia looked a little nervous. She pulled out the dagger tied to her left leg, looking around with vigilance. Han Shuo and Delia were now leaning close to each other. In this area where they could face attacks at any moment, her bashfulness had long since been thrown far out of mind.

It was due to Han Shuo's notoriety outside that Delia and the miners now felt a reassuring feeling of being able to rely on someone. If it'd just been them, they would've been on the verge of panic, not just nervous.

Han Shuo squatted down to take a look around once before asking the miners, "How tall are these stone men and what do they look like?"

"They're only 150 centimeters tall, but are wide horizontally so they can move very flexibly without being restrained by the low ceiling." One of the miners replied.

Hearing his words, Han Shuo looked at the three tunnels and took an estimation. The tunnels were only around a meter tall, so a human had to crawl on their belly to enter. According to the miners, the stone men were 150 centimeters tall and very wide horizontally. They couldn't have come out from those three tunnels.

Except for the three tunnels in this area, there was only the passage that they had just come through. If the stone men didn't come from the three tunnels, could it be that they came from the passage as well?

Han Shuo's heart was full of doubts. He didn't continue observing the surrounding anymore, and sat still to think instead. He suddenly whistled in a low tone. The whistle started out faint and low, gradually became louder and high pitched, then ending in an echo like a dragon roar.

"Alright, if the stone men are close by, they will definitely hear it and come over. We only have to wait and see." Han Shuo turned to tell the nervous looking miners.

End of part one of the chapter.

To Han Shuo's left, Delia was bending down to survey the surroundings, revealing her breathtaking curves of her waist. She only wore a soft leather miniskirt on her lower body, accentuating the curve of her hips and her tantalizing bare legs. When Han Shuo caught sight of her when he turned to give orders to the miners, he couldn't help but spend a little time savoring her round buttocks.

Most of the nervous miners didn't notice, except for the three who accidentally saw this beautiful scene as well. The three young men all swallowed hard, and suddenly developed a slight hunch to their posture, trying to conceal a newly rising bulge..

Looking around, Delia abruptly turned around quickly, her bright eyes looking straight at Han Shuo, whose stare was fixed on her hips. Caught red handed, Han Shuo awkwardly coughed dryly and conscientiously turned his head away.

Delia was flushing red. She glared ferociously at the awkward Han Shuo and snorted lightly. She then angrily turned to the three miners and shouted, "What are you rascals looking at? Could it be you guys already want to seek death after I leave Mount Silk for a few days?"

Finishing speaking, Delia lowered her voice to mutter, “Men really are no good!” It was unknown whether or not this sentence was deliberately said only for Han Shuo’s ears, but he’d heard it indeed. He secretly thought, ‘Aren’t women meant to be looked at by men? How did you know we were peeping at you? You bent over to expose that wonderfully beautiful curved butt. Wasn’t that intentional?’

As Han Shuo mused, several almost intangible wisps floated in from the three narrow tunnels. Han Shuo looked around but didn’t find anything that would’ve provoked them. However, as a necromancer and a demonic cultivator, he could immediately sense that these breaths was similar to the existence of the wraiths.

He quietly cast a soul exploration magic, observing the eight murky mists, which were hidden from human eyes, slowly moving to a few dark corners. They slowly spread out, each coiling on top of a large block of rock. They then imbued each rock with a strange power.

The originally solid rocks slowly became malleable after being suffused with these pulses of power. Afterwards, it was like someone was molding these rocks, as they split into eight stone men that the miners had faced before. Han Shuo, who was adept at both demonic magic and necromancy magic, saw this stone shaping process clearly.

After the eight stone men slowly emerged from the corners, Han Shuo finally understood how they’d suddenly appeared in this place last time. So it’s actually like this, hmm! Evidently, only the souls came out of those three narrow passages, which then used the rocks here to reform their bodies.

“Eight of them, with fully formed bodies. Are they getting ready to attack?” Han Shuo took out the skeletal staff to summon dozens of skeletal warriors as well as zombie warriors. Some of them surrounded Delia and the miners as Han Shuo looked at the eight stone men slowly coming out of the dark corners.

The rock ceiling of this area was too low, higher rank undead creatures like the hate warriors and evil knights would be hard pressed to display their full power. Only the short and small skeletal and zombie warriors could easily move about in this place.

Delia was scared out of her wits at suddenly being surrounded by a crowd of skeletal and zombie warriors. These undead creatures naturally didn't look very pleasing to the eye, and the morass of deathly aura that enveloped them sent a shiver of fear through her.

However, upon hearing Han Shuo's words and seeing that they only surrounded her without any intention to attack, Delia knew that these were the guards that Han Shuo had summoned for her. She then immediately felt reassured in her heart.

"My Lord, have the stone men appeared?" Delia calmed down and finally reacted to Han Shuo's words, raising her dagger.

The light here was too dim. The eight stone men were also forming in the shadows, so Delia's group simply couldn't see their movement. Nodding his head, Han Shuo smiled and said, "That's right, eight stone men."

The eight scattered stone men suddenly began to attack Han Shuo as they spoke, charging in from the eight dark corners. Their bodies were formed from the iron ore of this mine, and thus ordinary magic attacks wouldn't be very effective. Even standard weapons weren't much of a threat to these stone men. No wonder so many miners had died here last time.

However, Han Shuo's current body was much more solid than iron and rocks. He didn't even need to take out the Demonslayer Edge to deal with these stone men; he just crouched and smashed directly into them.

"Interesting, just what kind of creature are you guys?" Han Shuo still had the leisure to ask questions even when wrestling with eight stone men.

Surrounded by the undead creatures, Delia watched Han Shuo face the attacks from the stone men without fear. Even though some fists and kicks connected, he didn't respond at all. It was as if Han Shuo's body was even more solid than the stone men made of iron ore.

Han Shuo slammed his bare fists on the eight stone men's bodies. This time, it was them who was forced to retreat. Sounds of metal rang out as Han Shuo's fists connected with their iron bodies, rendering Delia's group speechless as they watched with eyes and mouths wide open.

In the Profound Continent, the only ones who counted as experts at close combat were swordsmen and knights. But they too had to use fighting aura to enhance the defensive abilities of their physical bodies. No one had ever heard of a physical body strong enough to not require the supplementation of fighting aura.

And indeed, Han Shuo wasn't using the defensive power of magical yuan. He was simply using the durability of his body to forcefully block the stone men's attacks. When his magical cultivation reached the separate demon realm, Han Shuo's body was far sturdier than iron. Ordinary swords wouldn't even leave a mark on him anymore

After fighting for a while and discovering that these eight stone men didn't show any signs of communicating amongst themselves, Han Shuo became impatient. He began to gather a bit of magical yuan on his hands as he attacked. The stone men were already reeling from the physical blows, they couldn't withstand these newly reinforced blows. Han Shuo grabbed their necks in his hand, ignoring the blows they were raining on his chests and beheading them with one crush.

The speed of Han Shuo's movements suddenly increased. His fists, now packed with magical yuan, smashed the stone men's bodies into fragments. In the blink of an eye, the eight stone men were completely pulverized into stone chips. Not a single whole block of stone remained.

"His Lordship is truly so strong!" A miner couldn't stop mumbling, a look of worship on his face.

Delia's pretty eyes glinted with a strange light as she stared at Han Shuo. She'd just watched him smash the stone men to shards using nothing but his bare hands. In the eyes of a woman who worshipped wild and strong men, this was far too irresistible. Delia couldn't stop her heart from pounding.

“Want to run? Heh heh, won’t be that easy!” After Han Shuo destroyed the bodies of the eight stone men, the eight murky wisps from the three tunnels seemed to know that Han Shuo wasn’t someone they could deal with. They began to slowly gather, planning to return the way they’d come.

Be it his identity as a demonic cultivator or a necromancer, Han Shuo had methods aplenty to deal with this kind of weird soul. His left hand stretching out, a surge of murderous intent flooded out from his palm like a miniature vortex. This murderous intent was harmless to physical bodies, but those eight wisps were unable to resist its suction.

Not only were the eight souls unable to take a single step away from Han Shuo, they were slowly absorbed by the force of the small vortex on his palm. When the eight of them fell into his palm, they were tightly held down by the murderous intent, unable to break free.

“Speak! What kind of thing are you?” This time, Han Shuo didn’t speak audibly, but used his consciousness to transmit the message.

The murkiness of the eight souls whirling in the high speed of the vortex on his palm slowly dispersed, and they became eight sparkling green light dots. Just like eight beautiful shining stars, the tiny tornado in Han Shuo’s hand had become a facsimile of the deep and profound Milky Way.

What should have been a dark and scary scene had turned into an intoxicatingly beautiful picture in Delia’s eyes. It was as if Han Shuo’s hand was an endless starry sky, sparkling with the twinkling of the night stars. If, at this moment, someone asked her which man could pluck the stars from the night sky for her, she’d instantly answer without hesitation: it was definitely the man right in front of her. There was a sky full of stars in his grasp.

After using his consciousness to transmit the message, Han Shuo felt a weak response. The consciousness of these eight souls was too small compared to his powerful consciousness. Therefore, the message they transmitted was also very faint, “Mercy please. We are the miners who died to the mine collapse before. Our souls didn’t disperse, but drifted to a strange place and absorbed a strange energy, becoming what you see here.”

Han Shuo stilled his mind to listen carefully. When he gradually understood the message, he was stunned, “What was that strange place?”

“We don’t know either. Strange energy filled that area. We don’t know why our souls slowly became powerful when we absorbed some of that energy. We can even have the power to manipulate stone and form bodies of stone for ourselves. We couldn’t let the miners harvest that area and destroy that place of miraculous energy, so we attacked the miners. We beg you, please let us go. We won’t dare to do that from now on.” The eight souls on Han Shuo’s palm had joined together, clearing up the message they transmitted.

Han Shuo first frowned in doubt when he started listening, before inspiration struck. He suddenly yelled out in delight, “Haha, I know now. So that’s how it is!”

This joyous loud scream wasn’t a silent communication, but a loud cheer that broke through the air. This made Delia’s group jump in shock. They stared inexplicably at him, not knowing why he’d suddenly become so high spirited.

“My Lord, what is it?” When she looked at Han Shuo this time, Delia didn’t know why she suddenly felt that he was the most tempting of men. Her voice had unknowingly turned soft and tender.

“Nothing much.” Han Shuo took out the skeletal staff to send all of the undead creatures around Delia’s group back to the strange dimension. He then thought for a bit before responding, “You guys should stop mining from this area from now, or you’ll meet with danger. You can just come pick up harvested ore once a month. Mm, rest assured the stone men won’t attack you anymore. Alright, you guys leave first, leave this matter for me to handle.”

Delia’s crew was full of doubt at Han Shuo’s words. They only saw him easily annihilate the stone men, but didn’t know why he would say what he had.

“My Lord, can you tell us what’s going on here?” Delia thought for a moment before asking Han Shuo.

“Oh, the stone men have submitted to me. From now on, they will have to mine a portion of ore every month, at rates surely more productive than you. You only need to come here once a month to collect it. I have agreed to let them have the area around these three tunnels as their living place in return for helping you with the mining.” Han Shuo smiled and explained to Delia.

“But, didn’t the stone men die already?” Delia asked, puzzled.

“They didn’t. Their souls are still in my hand. You guys can be at ease and leave. From now on, you only have to come here once a month to collect the ore. This is the best of both worlds.” Han Shuo explained to Delia.

Delia had originally come looking for the stone men to settle their debt. Now that Han Shuo had destroyed their bodies, captured their souls, and offered such favorable conditions, she readily agreed to Han Shuo’s words without asking too much about it.

“Alright. I’ll leave with them first. I’ll wait for you at the entrance.” Delia didn’t ask why Han Shuo wanted to remain here. She spoke a few words to the miners before leading them back the way they’d come.

After Delia’s group left, Han Shuo followed the guidance of the stone men’s souls to crawl into a narrow tunnel on his belly. Proceeding forward for seven, eight hundred meters, he suddenly emerged into a vast area.

Every part of this area was covered by stones of various colors. The rock wall over his head was a light silver color, sparkling with a silvery sheen. A variety red, purple and white ores were present, some of which Han Shuo knew and some he’d never heard of before. They were scattered everywhere in this wondrous area.

A dense sense of metal element filled the area. There was an enormous rock pillar in the center exuding a concentrated force of metal.

The place of extreme metal – the last of the five places of extreme elements, had finally revealed itself in front of Han Shuo!

Chapter 354: Metal attribute treasure – The Golden Cudgel?

The central stone pillar in the place of extreme metal was shining with a faint golden luster. It was also where the metal element was the most dense.

The place of extreme metal was the most difficult one to form out of the five extreme places, because no matter where, humans had a tireless and endless enthusiasm for harvesting ore. Be it flat land or high mountain, as long as that area was rich with ore, people would flock to it like flies to cow dung and exploit all of its minerals.

It'd take hundreds of thousands of years for a place of extreme metal to gradually form. If this formation process was disturbed because of the exploitation of the ore, it'd be difficult for it to restore itself back its natural state. All of the five places of extreme elements were formed thanks to their unique terrain as well as the forces of nature. Even Chu Cang Lan, who'd cultivated his demonic magic to the nine changes realm, had been incapable of using human ability to create the five places of extreme elements or repair them when they were damaged.

All five places of extreme elements had been formed from millions of years of accumulation. IT was simply impossible to use human effort to change this. Just like the place of extreme fire, this place of extreme metal had also existed for eons. The enormous, glittering stone pillar in the center must be the metal attribute treasure nurtured by the place of extreme metal.

There was a legend in Han Shuo's previous world about the Immortal Monkey King. He had originally been a stone monkey who obtained his weapon, the magic needle of the Calm Sea – the Golden Cudgel, from the Dragon Palace beneath the seas. According to the legend, the cudgel was the metal attribute treasure born from an extreme metal place millions of years old.

Because the Monkey King himself was born with the metal attribute, he was able to skillfully utilize the power of the metal attribute treasure. That was how he'd become an everlasting, legendary, immortal existence back on Han Shuo's Earth.

It seemed the shimmering golden stone pillar standing quietly in the center of the cavern was the treasure of this place of extreme metal. As for whether or not its power was as miraculous as the Golden Cudgel, Han Shuo wasn't too aware.

However, Han Shuo understood that only the elite zombie refined from the place of extreme metal would have the ability to master this metal attribute treasure. It was like how it had to be the fire elite zombie who took charge of the fire attribute treasure – the fire lotus. Therefore, Han Shuo didn't easily touch that metal attribute treasure, afraid that he would destroy the natural operations of the place of extreme metal.

Arriving next to the stone pillar, Han Shuo reached out to gently tap it. A crisp metallic ring echoed out, it was indeed the sound of metal. Dense ripples of metal element slowly rolled from the stone pillar onto his fingertips, turning Han Shuo's body a little stiff.

"Sure enough, a metal attribute treasure alright. It seems the metal elite zombie is quite lucky!" Han Shuo softly exclaimed. He took a tour around the place of extreme metal to view a variety of precious, rare ores that shimmered slightly. Han Shuo's heart was filled with delight. However, he didn't move a single ore in the place of extreme metal. Han Shuo didn't want to act rashly before he gathered all of the materials to refine the metal elite zombie. He wanted to avoid changing the natural formation of this place and prevent causing irreversible damage.

"Metal elite zombie ah metal elite zombie, you are the only one left. Now even your weapon is already made." Han Shuo murmured. He opened his right hand, scattering the eight light dots in the place of extreme metal. He ordered, "Protect this place well. Kill anyone, even the miners, who tries to come here."

"Understood. We won't let anyone vandalize this place." The eight souls transmitted their resolution in response.

Han Shuo didn't remain in the place of extreme metal. As his heart burned with the anxiety to immediately gather all of the necessary materials to refine the metal elite zombie, he instantly left the way he'd come in. At the area with the three tunnels, Han Shuo used the Demonslayer Edge to slice off a few huge stone boulders to block the tunnels, leaving only a hole as thick as an arm for the souls enter and exit.

Stepping out of the belly of Mount Silk, Han Shuo saw Delia and the miners still waiting at the entrance. The administrator of the five mines, elder Adleman, was also there.

"Did you handle everything?" Delia's eyes instantly brightened as soon as she saw Han Shuo, asking enthusiastically.

Han Shuo nodded with a radiant smile and said, "That's right. From now on, not only will those stone men stop attacking the miners, they will even hand over some ore to you."

Pausing for a bit, Han Shuo looked solemnly at Delia and Adleman before saying, "However, you have to remember, no one is allowed through the three tunnels that the stone men reside in. It won't be my responsibility if anyone dies after trespassing."

Adleman hastily guaranteed the outcome when he heard Han Shuo's warning, "Rest assured, My Lord, I will definitely discipline the miners well and won't let them enter that area."

"My Lord, rest assured, I think they won't dare to come in anyway. After all, only my Lord can deal with those stone men. How can some miners possibly be their opponents?" Delia's brightly shining eyes were still glued to Han Shuo's body as she replied with a chuckle.

Han Shuo also thought that to be the case when he heard Delia's words. He recalled that the rock solid stone men didn't seem to fear magic. In that narrow space, even senior swordsmen would be courting death if they were to face the stone men. Although the bodies of the mountain people were strong and sturdy, their strength was still a far cry from that of the stone men. They naturally wouldn't be so foolish to go seek their own death.

“Alright. You guys only need to go to that place once a month to collect the ore. The stone men have already agreed to my demands. They are much better at harvesting ores than you guys anyway. They will always help you mine the ore as long as you don’t interfere with their lives.” Han Shuo replied.

“Many thanks to my Lord, many thanks to my Lord!” Adleman was truly grateful to Han Shuo, bowing ceremoniously as he spoke..

“Elder, no need to stand on ceremony. This is only something I should do as the city lord of Brettel City.” Han Shuo helped him up and spoke with all sincerity.

With the stone men crisis resolved, Han Shuo didn’t remain on Mount Silk. Adleman and his subordinates resided on Mount Silk, so they didn’t return to Brettel City. There were now only Han Shuo and Delia on the way back.

Han Shuo was feeling a mounting sense of urgency, and he desperately wanted to ditch Delia and return straight to Brettel City. However, as he thought about it carefully, he came to the conclusion that doing so would be a bit rude to her. Therefore, Han Shuo slowly walked through the rugged mountain road down to the main road with her.

Han Shuo now felt a tad guilty about his actions. He’d been caught peeping at her in the mine and still hadn’t take the initiative to start a conversation. However, Delia’s gaze at him had been somewhat strange ever since they’d left the mine. Her sexily dressed, hot body didn’t seem to be ill at ease either. Instead, she even tried to deliberately puff out her chest.

Even though Han Shuo was no gentleman, they were currently observing propriety as they made their way down the mountain. He’d already been caught stealing glances, and his mind was occupied by the the matter of finding the materials to refine the metal elite zombie, so his perverted nature wasn’t as strong as usual. He didn’t sneak a single glance at Delia’s chest along the way.

However, such behavior from Han Shuo was mistakenly branded as hypocrisy by Delia. With her identity as the most beautiful mountain woman in addition to her outstanding strength, her eye for men was very finicky. She hadn't chosen anyone among the young mountain men for so many years, and only toyed around with those who admired her.

Delia's 170 centimeters body was very tall. To the general mountain people, that height was enough capital for her to strut around with. However, in the face of Han Shuo's 190 centimeters height, Delia no longer felt proud. Moreover, back in the mine, she had been even more overwhelmed upon witnessing Han Shuo's thunderous assault that shattered the stone men to pieces. With her heart that only sought to admire the strong, Han Shuo was her perfect target in every aspect.

Suddenly, Delia leapt to block the road in front of Han Shuo, her shining eyes staring hotly at him, her soft, silky breasts heaving.

Han Shuo was caught off guard and almost bumped into Delia's soft chest. He immediately came to a stop, subconsciously taking a step back. He looked at her, somewhat confused as he asked, "What is it?"

"My Lord, you are a true man. I like you!" Contrary to Han Shuo's expectations, Delia's burning eyes was fixed on him as she boldly confessed her true feelings. The mountain women were very straightforward in their character, and Delia was one of the more outstanding specimens. She was wild, daring in love and daring in hate. The normal women of Lancelot Empire weren't so bold and frank.

Such a confession from Delia astonished Han Shuo. He squinted, and swept his eyes up and down Delia's body, as if wanting to see her clearly.

As Han Shuo eyes roamed her body, Delia instinctively felt somewhat shy, especially when his eyes fell upon her tall and full twin peaks. Some of the sensitive parts near her waist also weren't spared. Under the caress of his bold gaze, her body started to burn, making her a little embarrassed. However, Delia wasn't as timid as those ordinary women. She had confirmed Han Shuo her target, so she didn't retreat despite her shyness. Instead, she even pushed out her breasts, seeming very confident in her own body.

“You’re not bad.” Han Shuo suddenly smiled faintly a long while later and spoke softly.

Delia was delighted. A passionate smile blooming on her lips, she spoke boldly to Han Shuo, “My Lord, then, you want me, don’t you?”

End of part one of the chapter.

Shaking his head, Han Shuo answered, “I’m sorry. I already have a woman, and I love my woman.”

Delia’s face dimmed when she heard those words. She silently hung her head for a moment before lifting her face again and said stubbornly, “I, Delia, have never had any man before. Only you have been powerful enough to make me lose my resolve. Whether or not you have a woman, I want to become your woman.”

Han Shuo was flabbergasted. He looked at Delia’s stubborn face, the face of a woman who didn’t seem to know the meaning of defeat. His first thought was that either this woman had been feted by the gazes of adoration of the mountain men for too long, or maybe her standards were too high. It seemed like she was setting her mind on her own objective, regardless of his willingness.

Han Shuo himself wasn’t a gentleman who could control his desires with a beautiful woman sitting on his lap. Otherwise, there wouldn’t be Emily and Phoebe, and of course, Fanny whom he was obsessed with. Of course, Han Shuo was a horny male that had to mount every woman he saw. A demonic practitioner like Han Shuo wouldn’t have any scruples about the secular constraints. As long as he was genuinely interested in a woman, he’d throw all morality to the wind.

Delia’s body was extremely tempting, and her face was also very beautiful. Han Shuo didn’t deny that he lusted for her beauty. However, that was all it was, lust. If there was no responsibility attached to having sex with her, he would’ve have taken her without hesitation.

However, everything had its limits. If Delia persistently wanted to be with him, but he only stayed at Brettel City long enough to toy with her, only to abandon her afterwards, then the thirty thousand mountain men here would be unwilling to let go of this matter. Han Shuo also didn't want to poke at this kind of hot potato.

"Hehe, I really do have, and not just one." Han Shuo first explained a little before continuing, "Honestly speaking, I only have a bit of interest towards you. However, it's just the interest a man would have towards the body of a beautiful woman, not the kind that you feel. You should understand what I mean, yes?"

"What? You have more than one woman?" Contrary to Han Shuo's expectations, Delia didn't care too much about the implications of his words. Her surprise had only led her to clarify the first sentence.

Han Shuo nodded, inwardly pondering if Delia would sprout some nonsense. However, as he thought about it, this matter would be exposed sooner or later, so he didn't deny it. Han Shuo answered with a nod, "Mhm, there is indeed more than one. So what of it?"

"Then that means you won't mind having me as another one! I'm willing to be one of your women. It's still better than being the sole woman in the heart of a mediocre man." Her eyes gleaming with excitement, Delia continued, "I knew it. A man like you can't just have one woman. Adding me in should be no problem, right?"

Han Shuo's eyes and mouth were wide open in shock at Delia's words. These mountain women were unexpectedly bold and straightforward. Even someone as free as Han Shuo, who'd always done whatever he wanted, found this attitude hard to digest.

Delia still wanted to discuss this matter in detail, while Han Shuo was set on heading out to find the materials to refine the metal elite zombie. Not knowing how to respond to Delia, he responded directly, "Let's discuss this later. For now, I still have no interest in you. I'll consider your proposal when I'm interested in you. Alright, I have some matters to take care of, so I'm going first."

Han Shuo shot towards the sky as soon as the last words left his mouth. His magical yuan circulated to radiate an aura that placed him high over the entire world, and he turned into a black streak of light that disappeared into the clouds without a trace.

Delia watched with infatuation as Han Shuo's flying posture gradually disappeared into the horizon. She revealed a resolute smile, firmly nodding her head and whispering to herself, "I'll definitely make you fall for me. My Lord, keke, only a man like you can make me submit from the bottom of my heart!"

Of course, Han Shuo didn't hear these words. He flew all the way to Brettel City and looked for little fatty Jack, giving him the list of materials needed to refine the metal elite zombie, saying, "Acquire these materials for me. Use the Boozt Merchant Guild or whatever merchant guild, just get me these materials as soon as possible."

"No problem!" Possessing a mountain of gold coins, Jack replied with a hundred percent of his lung power. He was projecting an extraordinary spirit that screamed 'Consider it done!'. When he finished those words, he added, "Oh, right, Dick was looking for you."

Hearing that Dick was looking for him, Han Shuo parted ways with Jack. He went straight to the Dark Mantle stronghold in Brettel City, since Dick was normally there. He really did find Dick there after arriving at the Brettel City's Dark Mantle stronghold. The latter was processing and organizing some intelligence on the seven grand duchies sent back from his subordinates.

Seeing Han Shuo abruptly come in, Dick quickly stood up to salute with surprise. He then sat down and asked with a smile, "My Lord, what have you come here for?"

"I heard from Jack that you were looking for me. Did something happen?" Han Shuo asked Dick as soon as he sat down.

There were only six members, including Dick, in this secret stronghold. However, Han Shuo was absolutely sure that there were more than six Dark Mantle members stationed at Brettel City. It was just that they were usually scattered across the city or the seven grand duchies. They were all undercover or carrying out a secret mission.

They wouldn't come here unless circumstances warranted it. Only when they acquired an accurate piece of intelligence or successfully completed a mission would they come in to report to Dick. Originally, Dick had been stretched thin for manpower. However, when Han Shuo had arrived here, Candide had reassigned some members to Brettel City to be under Han Shuo's direct command.

All of the Lancelot Empire's secret activities were singlehandedly managed by Candide. Even Brettel City, located at the extreme east of the Empire, was under his control. As Candide's most outstanding underling, Han Shuo also had the right to manage the personnel network of the Dark Mantle in Brettel City in addition to being the Brettel city lord. Dick was naturally under Han Shuo's jurisdiction.

"My Lord, I looked for you because I've acquired some information. It was just that you weren't in the mansion at that time. I didn't expect you to personally come find me. The honor truly frightens this little one." Dick himself also sat down with a smile before explaining to Han Shuo.

"Alright alright, less nonsense. What actually happened?" In private, Han Shuo and Dick never continued their master-servant act for long.

Dick chuckled and let out a cough. Face turning solemn, he said, "We may just have a big problem this time. All of the seven grand duchies have come to a truce. According to the information our people sent back, the grand dukes of all seven duchies will soon have a secret meeting at a mountain valley. We have no way to knowing the agenda for the meeting, but I'm almost certain they're convening to figure out how to deal with us."

The seven grand duchies had tirelessly waged war within themselves when Brettel City was no threat. However, now that the Brettel City had revealed its ferocious, domineering momentum, it naturally became the single biggest threat to the seven grand duchies.

The seven grand duchies were all split from the Vanerdun Dynasty. A hundred years ago, the royal family had fought amongst each other for the throne and split the Vanerdun Dynasty into seven duchies. Afterwards, they had gradually become today's seven grand duchies. When there was no external threat, they delighted in invading each other for benefits. However, their history made them family, and a common enemy would quickly find themselves facing a tight knit alliance of the seven duchies. .

The Lancelot Empire hadn't clearly understood this peculiar situation last time and was tempted into invading the seven grand duchies. Ultimately, the seven grand duchies had allied to beat the Lancelot Empire into retreat. Also from that event, Brettel City had fallen into a slump, reduced into a worthless existence.

"It seems the seven grand duchies now consider Brettel City a new threat. Hehe, we should be proud. Brettel City's population doesn't even touch a hundred thousand, far less than any of the seven grand duchies. I didn't think they'd think so highly of us." Han Shuo smiled coldly at Dick.

"My Lord, the seven grand duchies absolutely can't be taken lightly. They can't be compared to ordinary bandit groups. They are a true army. Not only do they possess complete sets of siege equipment, their years of constant warfare has resulted in their common soldiers being of high quality. They are even one notch stronger than the standard army of the Lancelot Empire." Dick smiled wryly as he explained to Han Shuo, "In addition, each duchy has at least thirty to forty thousand soldiers on standby, not to mention the many private armies of the local aristocrats. If every man is roused to fight, and the seven grand duchies combine forces, their total force would probably be double that of our population. We absolutely cannot underestimate them!"

"Rest assured. I already have a plan. I just won't let them ally together." Han Shuo laughed sinisterly as his thoughts began to spin.

Chapter 355: Ambush

The seven grand duchies had gathered at a secret meeting place in Sakamimir Valley. Although the seven grand dukes had created an alliance to fight against Brettel City, they did not trust each other enough to try holding this meeting in one of their duchies.

Thus, in the end the seven grand dukes decided to gather their armies at a neutral location, Sakamimir Valley. The majority of the soldiers were temporarily camping in the plains outside the valley, while the seven grand dukes and their most elite experts convened at the center of the valley.

Warm, comfortable sunlight bathed the flowers and plants that grew on the valley's slopes. At the center of the Sakamimir Valley, a simple tent had been erected on some flat ground next to a stream. Inside stood seven grand dukes, secretly negotiating something as their subordinates stood by their sides.

If a mishap actually occurred here, the seven grand duchies would suffer a fatal blow. Thus, not only were there numerous knights guarding the tent, but the tent was layered with magical barriers protecting the seven grand dukes within.

The points of contention within the tent was who the leader of the allied army would be, what checks and balances should be put in place, and how they would split the spoils of war. The years of warfare between them before this had created several grudges on the battlefield. This sudden new threat forced them to leave their differences unresolved, so there were bound to be some conflicts arising.

Helen Tina of the Helon Duchy had been feeling extremely agitated lately, and it showed; she was not as beautiful as before. She was clearly very haggard. The news of her being violated had spread like wildfire among the seven grand dukes. Thus, Helen Tina had become a target of ridicule overnight. Furthermore, anyone who saw her would have a strange look in their eyes. Those gazes made Helen Tina itch.

Furthermore, Benedict Sackville of Narsen Duchy, who had originally been a reliable ally, had become distant ever since the news had gone on to become public knowledge. Even now, after meeting Benedict Sackville here in person, he was clearly not as attentive as before, only giving her a polite greeting.

Helen Tina understood the root of the problem. However, because Han Shuo had truly captured her and imprisoned her within Brettel City for a couple of days, even if she had a hundred mouths, she wouldn't be able to explain her innocence. During this time, the arrogant Helen Tina had also suffered a lot from those strange looks from others. Even some of Helen Empire's citizens believed that the tainted Helen Tina was not suited to become a grand duke.

If it wasn't for her merciless and bloody methods in suppressing the rebellion, killing nine rebelling nobles in succession, perhaps she would have lost her status within Helen Duchy. Now, in the middle of the meeting between the seven duchies, Helen Tina was once again treated with neglect.

At this time, Benedict Sackville was embroiled in an argument with Bavenden Duchy's Alec Ambridge. The crux of the problem lay in the distribution of the spoils of war. Specifically, Alec Ambridge fancied the six magic crystal cannons within Brettel City that was worth six hundred thousand gold coins. Thus, he relentlessly fought for the right to take all six of them.

Benedict Sackville had originally purchased these six magic crystal cannons for Helen Tina from the distant Brut Merchant Alliance through his secret channel. Thus, Benedict Sackville believed that these six magic crystal cannons were naturally his and put his foot down, not compromising in the slightest.

Suddenly, Helen Tina, the one who'd handed over six hundred thousand gold coins for the cannons in the first place, was completely forgotten. In the past, Benedict Sackville would have relentlessly pursued Helen at any expense. But now, he'd reversed his position and was actively trying to recoup his losses.

After taking a cold glance at the argument heating up between the six other grand dukes, Helen Tina's heart became increasingly agitated. Unconsciously, her thoughts began to wander back to that which she had become intimately familiar with over the past year or so, Han Shuo's utter ruthlessness. Comparing the six guys in front of her to the memory of that ruthless tormentor, she faintly felt like these six guys droning on in front of her were far from true men.

Instead, the image of Brettel City Lord's ruthless and demon-like eyes kept popping up in her mind again and again. She had this gut feeling that the six grand dukes in front of her had no way of defeating the ruthless lord of Brettel City.

Brettel City's population didn't even reach a hundred thousand people. Without even mentioning the other six grand dukes, even the Helen Duchy alone had a military strength capable of defeating their target. Now that the alliance of six grand dukedoms intended to advance towards Brettel City, she was truly having a ridiculous thought. Even Helen Tina herself felt as though she was being absurd believing that the allied troops would be defeated.

"Duchess Helen, what do you want from Brettel City?" Grand Duke Randy Allard of Bonton Duchy politely walked over to the almost statue-like Helen Tina.

Waking up from her contemplation, Helen Tina silently thought for a moment before her red lips moved, saying softly, "I only want the life of Brettel City's lord. Although, victory may not come as easy as we think here. I have nothing to support this claim but instinct, but I feel it to be true."

"Haha. Grand Duchess Helen, you must be really tired. We will surely win with the army of seven grand dukedoms allied together. Even the Lancelot Empire that soars with fame and prestige was easily defeated by us that day. But now you're saying just one shabby little Brettel City will be able to obstruct our advance? That's just way too ridiculous! Hah, after you were captured by that city lord, it seems your courage was also broken. Am I wrong, Grand Duchess Helen?" Alec Ambridge overheard the conversation and abruptly broke in. His sneer had no intention of concealing his contempt, outright breaking out in laughter at Helen Tina.

Originally, at such moments Benedict Sackville, who had just been arguing hot headedly with Alec Ambridge, would've spoken out for Helen Tina. However, he was unexpectedly silent, even slowly nodding his head. It was apparently the first time he'd agreed with someone who was just his enemy a moment ago.

Helen Tina only felt a cold feeling in her heart, looking at the man who had repeated over and over again that he would take care of her until he died. She had the sudden urge to laugh.

"I am a little tired. You guys can keep discussing." Helen Tina stood up wearily and spoke to the six other grand dukes before walking out alone.

None of the six grand dukes urged Helen Tina to stay. Instead, Alec Ambridge waited until after she left before snorting, "It looks like she's been conquered by the new city lord's skills in bed. She can't even grasp the current situation. Hehe. I really don't understand how someone could've been so foolish in the past to relentlessly chase her."

"Who are you talking about, huh?!" Benedict Sackville roared as his temper boiled over. Madly chasing after Helen Tina was now his greatest disgrace. He wouldn't let anyone who offended him in this respect off the hook.

"Hehe, nothing, nothing!" Alec Ambridge had unexpectedly found that prodding at Benedict Sackville was something rather pleasant. Seeing him burst into anger was especially gratifying especially since he had not been able to win during the fight for the magic crystal cannons.

In the plains outside the valley, within one of the Helon Duchy's stationed tents, Helen Tina's calm face disappeared. Her heart slowly sank to a new low.

"Helen? What's wrong, why are you unhappy again?" Within the tent, a high ranked super beast named Firewind transformed from a phoenix into a beautiful female dressed in red before pouring a cup of tea and handing it to Helen Tina with both hands.

“Sister Firewind. Could it be that being a virgin is that important? Why is that after I came back from Brettel City, it seems like everyone dislikes me?” Helen Tina sighed to Firewind.

“Helen, why would you say such a thing? That Bryan did not actually do anything to you, he only blackmailed you to get a million gold coins. That’s all.” Firewind looked at Helen Tina with astonishment and asked, confused.

After putting down the tea cup Firewind gave her, Helen Tina sighed again and spoke with annoyance, “But, everyone believes that the affair actually happened, and I basically have no way of explaining it whatsoever.

“Just ignore them. They’re just a bunch of nobodies. As long as you know you did not do anything in your heart, everything will be fine. What’s the point of bickering so much?” Firewind continued persuading Helen Tina and said, “If it wasn’t for that guy being so powerful, I’d have already killed him for you

“Don’t say such an outrageous thing. He is not someone we can win against. If not, I wouldn’t have allied with the other seven dukedoms.” Helen Tina was suddenly alarmed and hastily persuaded Firewind against acting rashly. Soon after, she shook her head and bitterly laughed before saying, “Sometimes I can’t help but think if I’d actually raped by that guy, maybe he would have taken care of me. But, I know that’s it’s just a fool’s dream.”

“How could you say such a thing?! He is your biggest sworn enemy. Not only has he blackmailed you into giving him one million gold coins, he even made such vile information public. We must find a way to kill him and claim your innocence.” Firewind hatefully said.

Sighing once more, Helen Tina helplessly responded, “I still cannot prove my innocence even if we kill him. This Brettel City’s City Lord is not only sinister, but his strength is also exceptional. I don’t know why, but I keep feeling as though he is always nearby. It seems I really am becoming muddle headed.”

Looking at the fretting face of Helen Tina, Firewind also sighed in her heart. She was truly clueless as to how to comfort her.

Ever since Helen Tina left Brettel City and returned home, she had to deal with everyone's skeptical looks, mocking, and ridicule. In the past when Helen Tina was within Helon Duchy, she was considered as a true living goddess. But now, she has become the nation's target of ridicule and had truly fallen from grace. For the moment, Helen Tina truly had no way of adapting to the sudden change. Even her customary smiles had practically disappeared due to an overwhelming amount of depressing torment.

It's all because of that Bryan, I must help Helen kill him! Firewind secretly thought in her heart.

Han Shuo was atop of a dirt mound, five kilometers away from Helen Tina's tent. Through a yin demon, he was able to hear Helen Tina's conversation with extraordinary clarity.

"This bitch still owes me six hundred thousand gold coins. Now that I count the days, it's about time that I get the rest of the money." Han Shuo muttered to himself. Moving his head and looking in the direction of Helen Tina, Han Shuo started stealthily advancing towards Sakamimir Valley.

A yin demon left Helen Tina's tent and gradually approached Han Shuo. Together, they advanced towards Sakamimir Valley. When they were almost at the central tent, Han Shuo concealed himself with the earth elite zombie and hid in the depths of the earth. Only a yin demon could secretly snoop around the central tents area.

The six grand dukes were still inside the tent. They had spared no effort in setting up the tent's security. All kinds of magical enchantments were crammed into the area. Even after probing the area with the yin demon for half a day, Han Shuo came to the conclusion that he had no means of approaching the area silently.

'It seems like I can only wait until they leave. These guys have truly reached new heights in defensive and security measures. The enchancements not only cover the sky, but they've even warded the ground beneath it. They even have the main army of seven grand dukedoms stationed around the tent. Even a legion of undead wouldn't be able to exterminate them. They are truly a group of guys afraid of death.' Han Shuo secretly thought in his heart. He hid motionlessly in the depths of the earth while the yin demon continued to snoop around the area.

After about one and a half hours, the six grand dukes came out of the tent, wearing dissatisfied expressions. It seemed like the negotiations had yet to reach a conclusion and that the operations for defeating Brettel City will have to wait for another day or two. Only after properly arranging everything could they advance forward.

All six grand dukes had their experts beside them on full guard. This was a prime opportunity for an assassination. Thus, each and every one of them brought experts from their dukedoms. Furthermore, each of the Dukes also had the aura of a formidable powerhouse protecting them.

In fact, there were definitely be those who would take part in shady businesses and secretly backstab another if the chance arises. This kind of occurrence had occurred in the previous meetings between the seven grand duchies. This was why they'd all become so cautious and solemn.

Han Shuo hid in the deepest parts of the earth without any intentions of secretly killing anyone. Instead, he waited until after they'd all left the valley before finally slowly following one of them under the cover of night. The targeted area was the staging area of Alec Ambridge's army from the Bavenden Duchy.

The dead of the night. It was truly the most perfect time to do something surreptitious.

Even though Grand Duke Alec Ambridge had come here to attend a conference, he had obviously not forgotten to pack for leisure. Inside a gorgeous tent set up in the middle of his massive army, Alec Ambridge pressed a female knight known for her amazing figure down on top of a table. His hands moved to take off her armor from behind, leaving only her bare buttocks sticking high up in the air.

The female knight was splayed on top of the table, her fine black hair trailing down her back and accentuating her cheeks. Such a perfectly moisturized, plump and round butt. It was truly compatible for Grand Duke Alec Ambridge's conquest!

There were actually two other men in the tent as well. They each wore a sinister expression and were both great swordmasters. The two men actually looked at Alec Ambridge's lewd celebrations with indifference and familiarity as they grasped their longswords and coldly surveyed the area.

Alec Ambridge happily let out a groan in high spirits. After discharging his seed and feeling a pleasure that came from his lower abdomen spreading throughout his entire body, he suddenly felt as though the ground under his feet was swaying a little too hard.

However, due to the momentarily pleasurable dizziness, Alec Ambridge did not care too much about the change occurring under his feet. But when a burst of piercing pain came shooting up his leg, Alec Ambridge suddenly shouted in alarm, grabbed the female knight that he was still mounting, and tossed her under the soles of his feet.

"Puuu....."

Below the floor, sharp weapons easily penetrated the famous knight, causing her to twitch in reaction. Her mithril armor, noted for its durability, was easily broken through as the weapon didn't slow, stabbing deeper with the same level of force.

The terrified Alec Ambridge started feeling the pit of his stomach turning cold. In spite of his left leg's painful wound, he turned and limped towards the tent's exit while shouting loudly, "Assassin. There's an assassin!"

The two great swordmasters within the tent had already rushed over before he had even used the female knight as a meat shield. The two experts let out two dazzling silver rays of light which ruthlessly fell onto the female knight who was barely alive.

After the silver swords pierced into the female knight, the two men drew back. They rudely threw the corpse that was now riddled with gaping wounds to the side, and cautiously looked down into the hole. The hole was about the size of a human arm. It seems like the attack probably came from this arm-sized hole.

“Damn it, wasn’t the ground covered with a protective rock barrier? How come there are still people that can attack me?!” Alec Ambridge frowned at his mutilated left foot and said, “Fortunately, I managed to react in time, otherwise I definitely would’ve died today. That shitty earth mage actually dared to laze around. I want him dead!”

One of the great swordmasters responded with a darkened face. “Your Grace, the protective rock barrier below us is still there, only the enemy is exceedingly powerful. His weapon’s piercing strength exceeds the rock barrier’s protective capabilities. This guy is definitely not any regular expert. Thankfully, Your Grace is alright. However, we still don’t know who would actually want Your Grace’s life”

“Who else could it be, but that damned Benedict Sackville! All I did was mock him with a few words, but he actually dispatched people to attack me at night. This guy really deserves death!!” Alec Ambridge shouted before advancing outside the tent and shouting once more, “Priest. Damn it priest, hurry the f*ck here! One of my legs is about to be crippled! I spend so much gold on your pay, but when I am in need, you guys can’t even speed it up a little?!”

During Alec Ambridge’s ranting, Han Shuo, who just failed the assassination, left in sorrow. Even the tunnel formed by the earth elite zombie had swiftly been filled up again.

Han Shuo had originally wanted to directly kill Alec Ambridge, but who would’ve guessed that he would actually be so heartless? He’d unexpectedly grabbed the female knight he’d just screwed and sacrificed her to block a deadly attack at the critical moment. Luckily, Han Shuo had connected to the yin demon when he was leaving and heard Alec Ambridge’s statement suspecting Benedict Sackville. In fact, in the end, Han Shuo’s objective had been achieved, and he didn’t consider any more reckless actions. This night could be considered a success.

Chapter 356: A pack of mad dogs

The seven grand dukes all took special care to ensure their own safety. They paid attention to every detail so as to protect themselves, particularly in this Sakamimir Valley.

After leaving Alec Ambridge's tent, Han Shuo took a trip to visit Duke Nehem Beige of Bisli Duchy. He had originally intended to make a move on this Nehem guy. However, Han Shuo had yet to draw near when he sensed a holy presence from within the latter's tent.

Han Shuo was very familiar with this holy presence and immediately understood that a member of the Church of Light was in that tent. It was no ordinary member either, the intensity of the presence was a good testament to that person's strength. It was most likely to be Kosse of the Church of Light.

As a result, Han Shuo didn't touch Nehem Beige. He hid himself deep in the underground, only using the yin demon to spy on that area from afar. Only when dawn broke did he see Kosse and his group quietly leaving that tent through the yin demon.

Nehem Beige himself was a sky rider. Out of the seven grand duchies, Bisli Duchy hosted many Light Temples of the Church of Light. This duchy guided its civilians' beliefs so that they would offer their faith and devotion to the God of Light.

At that moment, Han Shuo was witnessing the close relationship between Nehem Beige and Kosse, which made him recall the friendly attitude between Bisli Duchy and the Church of Light. Han Shuo had this faint feeling that this Nehem Beige himself was a believer of the Church of Light. Otherwise, he wouldn't have spared so much effort to support the Church of Light.

After Kosse left, there were still light magic pulses inside Nehem Beige's tent, in addition to two hidden powerful presences. Dawn had broken, but Nehem Beige and his subordinates were still deep in discussion even after Kosse had left. Han Shuo pondered for a bit and decided to give up on dealing with Nehem Beige.

Today in the Sakamimir Valley, the seven grand duchies discussed the matters regarding Brettel City. After the assault the previous night, Alec Ambridge dragged himself on his bandaged stiff left leg, and loudly cursed Benedict Sackville out as soon as he arrived, accusing the latter of despicably ambushing him the previous night.

Benedict Sackville had already felt like he'd been greatly wronged the previous day. Now that Alec Ambridge was bringing an unfounded accusation against him and ridiculing him to boot, Benedict could no longer suppress the fires of anger in his belly. Neither of the two men were willing to let go of the issue and they almost fought it out right inside the tent. Had it not been for the other grand dukes coming forward to stop them, the two might have escalated things to a brawl. Even though they were forcibly separated afterwards, their fury didn't disperse. A ferocious light flashing in their eyes, no one knew what kind of insidious scheme they were plotting against each other.

Grand Duke Burt Zili of Boulet Duchy came to the fore at this meeting, vociferously dissatisfied with the current distribution of benefits. He insisted on taking the five mines as his own after Brettel City was captured. Burt Zili was persistent, but the other grand dukes also desired the mines, so they were naturally unwilling to agree. Today's discussion once again ultimately ended in each of them going their own way.

"At this rate, the seven grand duchies would be already at war even before the attack on Brettel City can be launched. These people can never join hands unless they are well and truly backed into a corner. Only because the Lancelot Empire came knocking on the doors last time did they learn to quickly work together."

"It seems they have yet to take the threat of Brettel City seriously. These people only know to quarrel all day; what grand deed can they actually accomplish?" Going back to her own tent, Helen Tina complained to Firewind with a frown.

"Just let them fuss. The day will come when Brettel City really attacks, and they will learn the meaning of fear.” Having joined the discussion in the tent with Helen Tina, Firewind had seen the expressions of the seven grand dukes clearly. Even though Firewind didn’t have to right to speak, she still inwardly despised the other six grand dukes who only cared about grabbing fame and benefits.

“Your Grace, Grand Duke Burt Zili of Boulet Duchy requests an audience.” as Helen Tina and Firewind whispered their complaints to each other, the guard’s voice rang out.

“What is this fellow coming to our place for? The smell on his body really makes me uncomfortable.” Firewind frowned and spoke to Helen Tina when she heard the guard’s words.

“Invite him in.” Helen Tina told the guard outside before turning to Firewind, “This person has always been the sworn enemy of Bisli Duchy. This time, Nehem Beige of the Bisli Duchy was the one who proposed to join forces and attack Brettel City. As I see it, this Burt Zili seems to be deliberately destroying the stability of the alliance. I don’t know what this man has come to see me for.”

As Helen Tina and Firewind continued their conversation, Grand Duke Burt Zili of Boulet Duchy came in with a slight smile on his face. Burt Zili was an old summoner. However, rumors had it that he had signed a contract with the Evil God. His summoning could often call upon monsters from hell.

Burt Zilli’s body seemed to emanate a frighteningly sinister aura. Even when he was smiling kindly, other people would still feel his smiling face to be vicious. The fire phoenix was a holy super rank creature, so she was extremely annoyed at the smell coming off Burt Zili’s body. Therefore, the fire phoenix instinctively kept a distance between them upon seeing him come in.

“Grand Duke Burt, what business do you have with me?” Helen Tina’s territory was quite a distance from Burt Zili’s Boulet Duchy, so there was no real conflict between them. However, Helen Tina disliked this sinister grand duke. Moreover, her mood hadn’t been every good lately, so she naturally didn't give him face.

"Heh heh, I come here to discuss the matter regarding Brettel City with Grand Duke Helen Tina. Since you've stayed at Brettel City for a period of time, what do you feel about Brettel City and its city lord?" Burt Zili exposed an amiable smile and asked Helen Tina in a friendly manner.

Her face growing colder by the second, Helen Tina said, "Grand Duke Burt, did you come here to especially make fun of me?"

"No, no!" Burt Zili hastily waved his hands, gesturing that Helen Tina shouldn't misunderstand him. He then explained, "As the saying goes, know your enemy and know yourself, and a hundred victories out of a hundred battles. Amongst us seven grand duchies, Grand Duke Helen Tina must be the most familiar with Brettel City. I want to hear your point of view on Brettel City and that city lord."

Letting out a snort, Helen Tina said with a stern face, "I'm not very familiar with Brettel City, but I know that city lord Bryan is no ordinary person. You haven't truly seen what you're dealing with. He alone repelled the group of Red Archbishop Kosse and several Templars of the Church of Light. This person is ruthless without measure. Once he sets his eyes on something, he won't hesitate to go for it, using any means, fair or foul. Whether you believe it or not, this person is far from easy to deal with. If the alliance keeps wasting time like this, we'll simply be giving Brettel City time to prepare.

"Heh heh, it seems his person is very much to my taste, interesting, interesting!" Burt Zili said with a wicked laugh, before fixing his eyes on Helen Tina, asking, "Grand Duke Helen Tina, what have you prepared to deal with Brettel City this time? Are you interested in forming a secret alliance?"

"I'm not interested at the moment, sorry." Helen Tina politely refused, her reply neither warm nor cold.

Nodding his head, Burt Zili cackled creepily without any further offer and said, "You can try thinking about it. I'm very interested in cooperating with you. Alright, I have disturbed you enough today. My apologies."

“Mm, I won’t see you off!” Helen Tina said.

Waiting until Burt Zili had left, Helen Tina said with a sense of wariness pricking her, “Really inexplicable. Did this person take a trip here just to ask about that city lord Bryan? It feels like he was a bit off.”

“Ignore him. I realized that when he was inside the tent, my whole body felt uncomfortable. I really wanted to burn him to death.” Firewind said to Helen Tina with a frown.

After leaving Helen Tina’s place, Burt Zili went straight back into his own tent, inside of which was a person whom Han Shuo was very familiar with. This person was lazing in the middle of a big bed covered in sea mink fur. Seeing Burt come in, he asked, “How did it go?”

“That little girl really didn’t seem to know anything. But it’s no problem, this doesn’t affect our plan. Wolf, you really think that person can bring us benefits?” Burt Zili glanced at Wolf on his own bed and asked.

Grand magus necromancer Wolf of the Calamity Church had turned into a handsome, elegant youth after being rejuvenated by Han Shuo’s skeletal staff. His skin was now fairer than that of any women. With the sharp claws resulting from his merge with the old fey zombie having vanished without a trace, his hands had become slender and pretty.

Wolf slowly sat up on the big sea mink furred bed, saying with a condescending smile, “Old friend, the power of that Bryan is beyond what you can imagine. He also has the skeletal staff. The higher-ups have passed down the order, we can’t let anything happen to him no matter what. What we have to do is try our best to support him.”

“The Pope only thinks highly of him as the owner of the skeletal staff. We should just grab his skeletal magic staff, it’ll be more convenient and less troublesome that way.” Burt Zili frowned in thought before telling Wolf.

Grand magus necromancer Wolf, who’d lived for who knows how many years, shook his head and explained with a smile, “It’s not that easy. Kosse personally led three hundred Templars but still failed to catch him, and both his attempts resulted in him retreating with heavy injuries. Do you think we can catch him so easily?”

“Not to mention that he is now an archmage necromancer. Oh, no, his mental strength must have exceeded the level of an archmage. The skeletal staff is related to the secret of the holy land. What we want is to do recruit him into our church by any means. On the other hand, I can guarantee that having a relationship with him will be extremely beneficial for us.”

“Alright then. Your decisions have always been correct all these years. I will act in accordance with the plan. I only hope that he won’t disappoint us!” Burt Zili replied.

Han Shuo had followed the yin demon there while Burt Zili and grand magus necromancer Wolf were conversing in the tent. His consciousness could clearly discover the evil presence from Wolf’s body inside the tent.

Burt Zili’s Boulet Duchy had been fighting all out with Nehem Beige’s Bisli Duchy that worshipped the Church of Light, for many years. This had never once been resolved. Han Shuo initially hadn’t known what was going on. Now that he felt Wolf’s presence inside the tent, he instantly understood.

It seemed that grand duke Nehem Beige of Bisli Duchy was a member of the Church of Light, while grand duke Burt Zili of Boulet Duchy was of the Calamity Church. These were the two most religious groups in the Continent. Evidently, it seemed that their many years of both open strife and veiled struggle weren’t just limited to some small-scaled battles. They had actually been secretly manipulating the grand battle among the duchies!

Wolf’s appearance had previously been rejuvenated thanks to the power of the skeletal staff. From the conversation just now, Han Shuo understood that Wolf seemed to be greatly concerned about him and want to protect him as much as possible. From this, Han Shuo understood that the reason must be due to the skeletal staff.

Having no way to close in and eavesdrop on their conversation, Han Shuo didn’t know what conspiracy that the two senior members of the Calamity Church were cooking up inside the tent. However, upon finding out that Burt Zili belonged to the Calamity Church, Han Shuo threw away the possibility that the former wanted to hurt him. However, he had no intention of revealing himself to talk to them either. Han Shuo once again left quietly.

After leaving the area, Han Shuo chose Grand Duke Argi Gilles of Etman Duchy to be his next target. Like the other areas, Argi Gilles' tent was also under strict protection. Han Shuo took a moment to discover that both the sky and ground were cut off by magic barriers. He understood that there wasn't much chance to kill this guy in one blow.

"F*ck, the seven grand dukes all really do fear death. It seems they don't have the tiniest bit of trust in each other, bringing this many experts to a meeting." Han Shuo cursed in a low voice.

However, since he'd already come anyway, he couldn't leave empty-handed. Han Shuo mused for a bit and released the yin demon to inspect the area. Suddenly, he discovered that except for Argi Gilles' own tent which was strictly protected, the tents of some senior generals were left unguarded.

Ruthlessness surging in his heart, Han Shuo decided to leave Argi Gilles alone and shifted his eyes to his subordinates. There were usually only a few guards walking around the inside and outside of these people's tents. Naturally, their protection couldn't be as strict as Argi Gilles'. The earth elite zombie utilized his ability to travel underground to sneak into the tents of these people. Han Shuo was easily able to conceal his presence at the separate demon realm, soundlessly murdering all six high rank subordinates of Argi Gilles.

After leaving Argi Gilles' tent, Han Shuo continued on to Grand Duke Randy Allard's tent. Using the same method as with Argi, he once again assassinated his four senior generals before leaving in silence. Making a bit of a detour, he again went to Alec Ambridge's tent and took care of three senior generals in the same way.

Benedict Sackville of Narsen Duchy was also ambushed that night. The tent was engulfed in a massive explosion. Benedict Sackville himself escaped just in time to keep his life, but his hair and brows were burnt cleanly off.

Overnight, apart from Helen Tina of Helon Duchy, Burt Zili of Boulet Duchy and Nehem Beige of Bisli Duchy, the troops of the other four all encountered some kind of big incident. Sakamimir Valley, the originally gathering place to discuss an act of alliance against Brettel City, had suddenly changed completely in nature.

The four attacked duchies suspected some of the others duchies that previously had grudges with them. In the tent, tempers ran high as the men raged at each other. Amongst them, Benedict Sackville was the one with the clearest mind, but had long come to the conclusion that Alec Ambridge was the one who'd attacked him last night. Alec Ambridge also believed that the massacre of his generals had something to do with Benedict.

This time, the two threw all face to the wind and broke out into a fight right at Sakamimir Valley. The rest of the grand dukes all had darkened faces, resentfully staring at each other in utter silence while constantly thinking of a way to retaliate. The other two attacked duchies also nursed bellies full of resentment, blaming everything on the two duchies who were previously their enemies.

The Helon, Boulet and Bisly duchies, who'd passed the night in safety, became the first objects of suspicion. The shaky alliance had already secretly changed in nature. During the day, the seven grand duchies investigated the roots of the problem to affix responsibility. At night, each parties sent their killers to kill each other. It wasn't very peaceful at all.

Han Shuo didn't make a move for three days in a row. The seven grand duchies faced each other each day with new hatred piling up on the old ones as black hooded men lurked everywhere, blurry figures flashing through the sky and on the ground. In the areas where the seven grand duchies had set up camp, one would hear a few tragic screams echo from time to time, as another person was assassinated.

Han Shuo had initially prepared to make a few more choice assassinations, but he found out that he basically no longer had any chance to do so. There were too many black hooded men at night that one yin demon wasn't enough to keep his cover from being blown. He simply didn't know who came from which duchy, and the situation was gradually thrown into chaos anyway.

“The seven grand dukes are indeed a pack of mad dogs!” Han Shuo couldn't help but exclaim when he found that he had nothing to do.

Chapter 357: Collecting on debts

Chaos, the situation had fallen into utter chaos!

The seven grand dukes had originally gathered here in Sakamimir Valley to deal with Brettel City. But for some reason, all these old grudges and new hatred had erupted, with all of the parties attacking each other and turning the entire thing into utter shambles.

At first, they'd only snuck around to assassinate members of the enemy duchy at night. But as the dead kept piling up, fury deprived the seven grand dukes of logic as they started to use their armies. It'd changed from a meeting to discuss an alliance to an outright battlefield.

"What actually happened here?" Red Archbishop Kosse was nursing a bad headache as he questioned Nehem Beige inside the duke's tent.

Nhem Beige's headache wasn't much better. A wry smile was on his face as he spoke to Kosse, "The seven grand duchies have accumulated too many years of deep bone hatred, and a small fuse is enough to ignite the bonfire. Even I am at a loss to stem this."

"Aii, it seems we really can't rely on these people. Oh right, say, could it be that Burt Zili of Boulet Duchy has secretly executed some dirty tricks? He's from the Calamity Church. I think he definitely won't agree to something happening to that city lord Bryan." Kosse asked Nehem Beige.

"I don't know, it's possible. But it's a complete madhouse now, and it's utterly out of my control. It seems that we have to change our plan." Nehem Beige heaved a long sigh and responded.

"Forget it, I will think of another way." Kosse replied helplessly.

On the flat plain of Sakamimir Valley, the seven grand duchies, who'd always been enemies, had suddenly gone from secret assassination to open fighting. Han Shuo had only thrown a small stone behind the scenes, he also hadn't expected the deep bone hatred among the seven grand duchies to be so deep.

Seeing the area around Sakamimir Valley turn into a battlefield, he no longer paid any heed to the situation here. Instead, he chased after Helen Tina, who was returning to Helon Duchy.

Out of the seven grand dukes, Helen Tina had been the first to become disheartened. Right at the beginning of the battle, she'd instantly understood that this alliance matter had gone down the drain. At this moment, Helon Duchy had just been through a civil war, and its strength the weakest. Therefore, Helen Tina made a wise choice to immediately leave the valley and return to her duchy.

After two days on the road, Helen Tina passed down an order for the army to camp in a small mountain valley. After arranging the guards to keep watch on the surroundings, Helen Tina and Firewind went to take a bath at a small hot spring.

"It looks like only upon staring death in the face will they set aside their prejudices!" Helen Tina lay languidly in the hot spring, speaking angrily to Firewind.

The fire phoenix had transformed into her original body. She stood at the edge of the hot spring, cleaning her gorgeous feathers as she spoke in human tongue, "We don't need to worry about them, just let them bear the consequences of their own actions. With the way the situation is developing, they definitely won't be able to fight against that ruthless city lord."

"Right, I still owe that Brettel city lord six hundred thousand gold coins. Aii, this demon. What should I do?" Helen Tina asked the fire phoenix, her expression worried.

"Keep delaying it. Our duchy has just been through a civil war, and all of the wealth is concentrated in the hands of the aristocrats. If we draw six hundred thousand gold coins from our national treasury to pay him, I'm afraid Helon Duchy will officially be in trouble." The fire phoenix was also very helpless as she advised Helen Tina.

"But that demon is no generous, forgiving person. The longer we drag it out, the more I'm afraid that he'll create trouble for us." Helen Tina knew Han Shuo wasn't the kind sort. She understood how terrifying his power was, so she was truly afraid that he would make a move on them.

As Helen Tina and Firewind were talking, a faint undulation spread from the outside to the opposite end of the hot spring. A shadow soundlessly appeared like a ghost in the darkness on the other side of the hot spring. Then, it suddenly stopped and stood quietly on a protruding rock.

“Hehe, it seems you understand me well, I’m truly honored. That’s right, this demon has come here today to collect the money, so pay up!” The gloomy shadow in the darkness suddenly opened its mouth to speak.

Helen Tina, who’d been bathing in the hot spring, let out a deafening scream. This familiar voice had been the object of her resentment for so long. Helen Tina didn’t need to see the person to know that Han Shuo had arrived.

Still letting out a scream, Helen Tina hastily ducked her smooth shoulders into the water, afraid that Han Shuo would see her white bare skin. The fire phoenix, who’d been cleaning her blazing red feathers, also let out a shrill scream. She flapped her wings and shot towards Han Shuo.

The fire phoenix flapped her wings once, sending a violent flame rolling straight towards Han Shuo. However, Han Shuo didn’t wait for the fire phoenix’s flame to approach. The spring water right before Han Shuo suddenly gathered into a water screen under the influence of magical yuan, churning back at the fire phoenix in a huge wave. It enveloped the flame that she’d shot out.

The hot spring water transformed into a water curtain, instantly extinguishing the surging flame. Not only that, even the fire phoenix was dragged onto the hot spring and became a drenched sorry-looking chicken.

Without waiting for the furious fire phoenix to rise in fury, Han Shuo instantly cackled, “If you guys value the lives of your underlings, don’t be in such a hurry to make a move.”

As these words fell, Helen Tina screamed at the fire phoenix, who was fluttering her wings and about to keep on attacking Han Shuo, “Big sister Firewind, don’t!”

Upon hearing this scream, Firewind immediately stopped. She flapped her wings to fly out of the hot spring and landed next to Helen Tina, before furiously shouting at Han Shuo, “What did you do to them?!”

Helen Tina was a woman, so when she came to bathe in the hot spring, all of the guards around her had to be female. The strength of these female guards weren’t bad, but Helen Tina knew that Han Shuo’s power was even more terrifying. She was worried for their lives, and she was well aware that Firewind wasn’t Han Shuo’s opponent, so she stopped Firewind upon hearing his words.

“Nothing, let’s just get to our business!” Seeing Helen Tina’s body shrink under the hot spring, Han Shuo first asked with a smile, “Grand Duke Helen Tina, your skin truly isn’t bad. Hehe, but you still owe me gold coins, shouldn’t you be paying them back already?”

“You, you demon, shut your shifty eyes!” Helen Tina yelled out, before saying, “I don’t have that many gold coins at the moment. Wait for a while, I’ll pay you back. Don’t worry, I won’t renege on my debt.”

Both Firewind and Helen Tina were experts with fire. This was why Han Shuo had chosen this hot spring to show himself. With this hot spring, ordinary fire magic was basically useless. Upon hearing Helen Tina’s words, Han Shuo said smugly, “Your Grace, lying is a bad habit. I’ve been here for a while already and personally heard your conversation. I think, you should just take out six hundred thousand gold coins and pay me back.”

“You, you’ve come for a while already?” Helen Tina was dumbstruck, before yelling loudly, “Then, you have seen me bathe. You despicable demon, sooner or later karma will visit you!!”

“Eh... Let’s not talk about this. Less nonsense, hurry up and pay it, or I’ll come into the water!” Han Shuo was a bit embarrassed at first. Honestly, he’d seen Helen Tina’s body from head to toe through the yin demon and even had a physiological reaction while doing so. Now that he listened to Helen Tina shout about this, Han Shuo was embarrassed to the point of anger, so he could only shout over her.

Helen Tina was so furious that her entire body was trembling. Upon hearing Han Shuo speak so unreasonably, Firewind would have already laid down her life to attack him had it not been for the still rational Helen Tina holding her back.

“Come down if you want to then. You’re a demon who already spread that vicious news. No one would want me now anyway, so just kill me already. I’m not paying you any gold coins.” Helen Tina was going insane because of Han Shuo’s torture. Her mind now blinded by fury, she disregarded all decorum and shouted at him.

Spitting out these words, she felt as if the grievances she’d suppressed for so long was gushing forth out like a torrent. She stood up in the hot spring, displaying her perfect body right in front of Han Shuo as she continued to vent, “Look! If you want to look then look! Just kill me, haven’t you been torturing me enough? How many evil vicious tricks you actually have, show me all of them!!”

Once a woman went crazy, it was basically impossible to reason with her. And that was precisely the portrait of Helen Tina at the moment. Ever since she’d returned from Brettel City, she’d suddenly discovered that her whole world had changed. It was all because of Han Shuo’s appearance that her life had been so completely screwed.

All of the previous looks of respect and admiration had become those of contempt and disdain. Even the originally loyal citizens treated her like she was an unclean woman, as if a violated woman didn’t deserve to be the grand duke of their Helon Duchy. Helen Tina, who’d always been quite proud, had to put up with many grievances and feelings of utter helplessness during this time.

Now, the culprit who’d caused all of this was standing right in front of her, aggressively threatening her without easing up, wanting to push her to the point of death. Helen Tina was unable to fight, nor could she escape. She simply had no way to deal with Han Shuo, always worried that he’d take the lives of her and the fire phoenix. Her rational mind had finally snapped.

Facing this onslaught, Han Shuo was more than a little dumbfounded. His eyes wandered up and down her perfect, stunning body. He took a few more glances at her full peaks and the grassy land under the abdomen which still lingered with some sparkling water drops. Han Shuo secretly swallowed. Looking at Helen Tina's fierce posture, fearless in the face of death, he didn't know what to do for the moment.

"I only want you to pay back the money. You shouldn't want to die at every little thing. There's hope as long as you are alive, I don't want to kill you." Han Shuo discourteously swept his gaze over Helen Tina's body again, before looking at her in the eyes and saying with a dry smile.

"It's because of your appearance that my life has lost all hope!!" Helen Tina screamed resentfully, furiously glaring at Han Shuo.

"I can't stand it, Helen, don't stop me, I'll risk my life with him!" The fire phoenix looked up to face the sky and let out a cry. She struggled out of Helen Tina's grasp, her entire body blazing with violent flames as she desperately shot towards Han Shuo.

Seeing the fire phoenix angrily hurl herself over, Han Shuo's palm lightly tapped down on the surface of the hot spring. He circulated the magical yuan before flicking up his hand. Water curtains rose up one after another from the hot spring, rolling towards the fire phoenix.

The furious rushing fire phoenix was hit by five, six water screens and once again swept into the hot spring. Han Shuo laughed sinisterly and shot towards the fire phoenix, saying smugly, "Lucky I chose this place, otherwise, it'd be somewhat troublesome."

"No. I beg you, don't kill big sister Firewind. Demon, I'll give you the gold coins!" Helen Tina burst out into tears and yelled loudly upon seeing Han Shuo shoot through the air towards the fire phoenix.

Han Shuo only intended to catch the fire phoenix. He hadn't expected Helen Tina to care about her so much. He smiled delightfully and said, "Very good, I won't kill her. Give me the gold coins."

"Helen, don't give him the gold coins. If you do, Helon Duchy will truly go out of control!" From inside the hot spring, the fire phoenix who was flapping her wings and about to fly up suddenly shouted out.

Han Shuo was about to shut the fire phoenix up when he suddenly sensed several powerful presences approach. He furrowed his brows and had the yin demon scout them. Han Shuo's face changed into a stern expression, "Perhaps, your Helon Duchy is out of your control already!"

Helen Tina's heart took another shock at those words. She stared at Han Shuo and said, "What do you mean?!"

"There are people coming. One of them is a general in your army. I can see that the incoming people must belong to your Helon Duchy. It looks like you're in trouble." Han Shuo looked at Helen Tina.

Helen Tina and the fire phoenix traded glances. Helen Tina seemed to recover her rational mind upon facing something she could actually deal with. She turned her back on Han Shuo and stepped ashore, putting her clothes on.

The fire phoenix also rose out of the hot spring to return to Helen Tina's side. After Helen Tina put on her blazing red magic robe, she walked over to face Han Shuo. Her entire body radiated a refreshing light after a bath, giving him a feeling of stunning beauty.

"Demon, what exactly did you do to my guards?" Helen Tina inquired as she stood face to face with Han Shuo.

"Nothing. They are all outside. I only glided past them to come in here and set up a soundproof enchantment around you. However, they can't fight back against those people, that I'm sure of!" The majority of these female guards had the strength of journeyman and senior swordsmen. There were twenty-seven of them in total, staying about three hundred meters away from the hot spring where Helen Tina was.

These female guards were useless against Han Shuo, who could traverse the sky and tunnel through the ground. He basically didn't need to attack them as he could just soundlessly go underground to enter the hot spring area without disturbing any of the female guards.

"Protect the duke!" From around the hot spring suddenly echoed the sounds of fighting and the surprised screams of the female guards.

When the sounds from outside reached this place, Han Shuo knew that the enchantment had been broken. Afterwards, the sounds of fierce fighting quickly approached, and three female guards broke through the trees with panic on their faces. The leader, a middle-aged woman, anxiously shouted, "Your Grace, Ferrodias has rebelled. He led people here to attack you! We can't stop him anymore. Your Grace, hurry and escape!"

At this moment, Helen Tina and the fire phoenix stood together with the three female guards. Helen Tina took out her magic staff and asked, panic in her voice, "How much longer until they reach this place?"

"Hehe, we've already come, haven't we!" The smug voice of a middle-aged man suddenly rang through the air. Then, an earth rider riding a warhorse in full body armor, suddenly appeared alongside thirty knights and six mages.

A long brown haired middle-aged man rode in front. His body was quite sturdy, so this must have been the Ferrodias the woman had just mentioned. Upon his appearance, he immediately led his people straight to Helen Tina. He first respectfully bowed ceremoniously, before saying with a smile, "Your Grace, you are completely surrounded. The knights of Helon Duchy no longer need you, so just tie your hands and resign yourself to capture!"

Helen Tina's pretty face flared up in rage. Her finger rose to point at him, accusing and enraged, "I never thought you would dare to betray me. When you were still a civilian, it was I who let you join my knights. From a civilian to a count, it's me who bestowed everything on you, and yet you betray me!!"

Shaking his head, Ferrodias said, "It's not me who has betrayed you, but rather your people that have betrayed you. I can only conform with the public opinion. Your Grace, there is no need to resist, otherwise you will see more unpleasant things."

Raising the magic staff in her hand, Helen Tina furiously said, "I won't satisfy your wishes!"

Finishing those words, Helen Tina was about to chant a magic incantation to burn the traitor in front of her to death. However, she had yet to complete the incantation, when the middle-aged female guard next to her threw out a huge, glittering ash gray net. The net caught Helen Tina and the fire phoenix by surprise as it shrouded them.

Helen Tina completed the magic incantation only to discover that her fire magic had produced no effect at all. The gray net above her head had sealed all of her magic.

“Aunt Wellie, even you have betrayed me?” Helen Tina’s heart sank into grief. She looked to the aunt who’d taken care of her ever since she was a little girl with a desperate expression.

The middle-aged women indifferently took a few steps back, her voice cold as ice, “Helen, accept your fate.”

“Hehe, Your Grace, I advised you to not resist or you’d encounter some embarrassing situations, yet you didn’t believe me.” Pausing for a bit, Ferrodias once again smiled, making Helen Tina despair even more as he said, “I will hand you over to Grand Duke Benedict Sackville. Even though you are no longer a virgin, that person is still willing to take fifty thousand gold coins for you. But of course, in his hands, I’m afraid that you will no longer be a goddess of his heart, but just a slave under his feet. Haha!”

Precisely at this moment, a polite voice rang out. “Everyone, you seem to have forgotten my existence!” Han Shuo stepped out, grinning at the traitors surrounding Helen Tina.

Chapter 358: You're all done for!

Ferrodias and his companions had originally ignored Han Shuo's existence. In their eyes, such a youngling was not worth fearing whatsoever and therefore unworthy of any attention. However, only when Han Shuo spoke up, did Ferrodias finally deign to take notice of him.

"Who are you?" Ferrodias knitted his brows and looked at Han Shuo with displeasure before saying, "Well, regardless of who you are, since you're here, let's just say, you're out of luck!"

With a wave of his hand, Ferrodias signaled a knight beside him, "Kill him!"

From behind Ferrodias' back, a knight suddenly rushed out, charging straight at Han Shuo, who was still standing beside the hot spring.

Helen and the phoenix were imprisoned within a magical skill, and were subject to a barrage by a dozen or more archers. In addition, the three former members of Helen Tina's personal guard also aimed their weapons at the two individuals within the barrier. As a super rank magical creature, the phoenix would be able to make trouble even without using magic attacks.

But Helen's fragile body was only barely able to stand up against so many attacks. The phoenix didn't dare truly exert herself under these circumstances. That momentary hesitation was a fatal mistake, as a magic arrow punched through the phoenix's body. The phoenix fell with a gasp, weak and without a trace of power. As the phoenix felt her powers gradually fade, she looked at the calm face of Han Shuo before pulling on the edge of Helen Tina's dress, saying, "This is bad, the arrow tips are poisoned!"

Helen Tina was originally filled with despair. But when she heard the sound of Han Shuo's voice, hope reignited within her breast. As her thoughts took a rapid turn, she cutely yelled at Han Shuo, "Bryan, help me kill them!"

Han Shuo was only momentarily stunned by the unfamiliar sound of Helen Tina's cute, coquettish voice that was usually reserved for loved ones. He took a quick glance at Helen Tina before a smile tugged at his lips. He teased back, "Dearest one, rest assured, you still owe me so many gold coins, how would I willingly let others capture you?"

Being spoken to like this, Helen Tina couldn't help but blush while secretly sighing in her heart. She would never have thought that, to survive, she would actually have to yield to this demon. But in actuality, when Han Shuo teased her with the words "Dearest one", it left a faint ripple within her heart. Although Helen Tina knew that Han Shuo was only teasing her, without knowing why, her heart still had a somewhat unusual feeling. Furthermore, her blushing cheeks apparently weren't just a pretense, causing her to feel extremely awkward and clueless on how to reply.

As for that senior knight charging over on a warhorse, Han Shuo never took a glance at him from beginning to end. Only when he arrived right in front of him did Han Shuo casually release a long snake-like purple flame, which violently spread through the high-ranking knight and his warhorse.

All everyone saw was the senior knight rushing at Han Shuo with his warhorse before suddenly igniting in purple flames. As the knight and warhorse braved a freezing cold chill, they gradually slowed to a stop before freezing at a speed clearly visible to the naked eye.

Han Shuo controlled the flame so that the senior knight and warhorse were within a hand's reach before freezing them both into a sparkling ice sculpture. Afterwards, Han Shuo casually used one hand to tip the man-and-horse ice sculpture over, causing their frozen flesh to fall and shatter with a loud bang.

Seeing his high-ranking subordinate senior knight tragically die in such a strange way, Ferrodias took another glance at Han Shuo. His gaze had now changed into a dignified and solemn look, continuing in an imposing manner, "Who on earth are you? The things that are happening in the Helon Dukedom is unrelated to you, so as long as you leave, I will not investigate this further."

Ferrodias had become apprehensive after Han Shuo had displayed his prowess. From start to end, Han Shuo seemed as if he barely used any of his strength. Although it seemed as if he was taking a leisurely walk around his own courtyard, he had still killed one of Ferrodias' senior knights in such a tragic manner. Thus, Ferrodias immediately felt that Han Shuo was somewhat enigmatic.

"Did you not have your eyes and ears open? You didn't hear the words I just said? Your Grand Duchess Helen is my woman, so take a guess, am I going to leave just like that?" Han Shuo lectured Ferrodias with displeasure, staring at Helen Tina as he spoke. He obviously didn't think much of Ferrodias.

"Humph, since you're looking for death, then you can't blame us!" Ferrodias understood that Han Shuo was determined to intervene. So, after a cold snort, he gave a command to the people behind him. The mages slowly scattered in preparation for a joint attack.

Being stared at by Han Shuo, Helen Tina felt humiliated in her heart. She knew that he was only joking with her when he said that she was his woman. However, Helen Tina couldn't help but to feel an indescribably strange feeling rise in her heart.

Suddenly a thought rose in her mind. Perhaps, it wouldn't be so bad to become his woman. But she immediately suppressed the thought right afterwards. Impossible! He's the reason why she had become a laughing stock, so she should be trying to kill him at all costs. How could she have such an absurd thought instead!

Han Shuo gently walked over to Helen Tina, gazing into her eyes as he said in an increasingly tender voice, "How could I possibly let you stay trapped? Furthermore, you owe me far more than just fifty thousand gold coins. Isn't that so, Helen?"

"You! Don't come closer. If you dare come closer, we will kill her!" The middle aged female imperial guard suddenly held a dagger to Helen Tina and shrieked in panic upon seeing Han Shuo approaching.

Shooting a glance at the middle aged woman, Han Shuo sighed in sorrow before saying, “She is worth fifty thousand gold coins, do you dare kill her? Besides, you never had a chance to kill her!”

The moment the words fell, the earth suddenly trembled as several sharp spikes suddenly protruded from the ground, stabbing into the middle aged woman, the rest of the guards, and the nearby traitors. They were all left suspended on the protruding spikes just like that.

Ferrodias’ face changed greatly, as did the look in his eyes when he looked at Han Shuo. He scanned the ground beneath his feet with lingering fear. He feared a spike would suddenly burst out of the ground, impaling him to death. There had been a clear lack of Han Shuo chanting any magical incantations before the spike suddenly killed several of his subordinates. Ferrodias grew more and more stunned at this young man’s prowess.

Helen Tina and the phoenix were naturally safe and sound within the enormous magical net. They watched Han Shuo approach leisurely, and then listened to him say with a smile, “How about that? Even though I helped you deal with these people, I won’t add any additional payments. Instead, you just have to return the gold coins you already owe me. This is quite generous of me, right?”

Helen Tina looked at Han Shuo’s tender face in a daze while listening to his gentle and soft voice. She suddenly had a weird delusion. This version of Han Shuo was just like Benedict Sackville when he unrelentingly chased after her in a modest and urbane manner. That sort of tender, modest behavior made her feel like a goddess and made her fall into a trance.

“Helen, what’s wrong?” The phoenix beside her pulled on Helen Tina, who was looking at Han Shuo in a daze, and asked her anxiously.

Helen Tina suddenly stirred and noticed several of Ferrodias’ mages approaching them with incantations. As they drew close, Helen couldn’t help but snort, “If you don’t kill them, they would still kill you. I’m not interested in such deals.”

Han Shuo was stunned the moment those words came out. Soon after, he opened his hands to the approaching Ferrodias and said, “Alright, this is not my business, you guys can continue. I'll just take my leave first. Truthfully, I am not too familiar with Grand Duke Helen, I was just making a joke with you guys, that's all!"

Ferrodias had been about to start killing when he was suddenly stopped in his tracks by Han Shuo's words. He hastily stopped his mages from finishing their incantations and said to Han Shuo, "Fine, I also don't want to be enemies with you. As long as you don't get involved in this matter, I will act as if this never happened."

"Sure. You guys continue. Bye now!" Han Shuo laughed lightly. It seemed like he truly intended to leave.

"You demon, I promise you. I already promised you, you thrice-damned demon, don't leave!" Helen Tina let out a panicked shriek as she hastily shouted at him.

"Why didn't you say so earlier? Don't waste my time!" Han Shuo stopped, then raised his hand again and said to Ferrodias, "My bad. You're screwed now!"

"Motherf*cker. You tricked me. Get rid of him!" Ferrodias had originally decided against provoking Han Shuo after seeing a demonstration of his powers. But who knew Han Shuo would retract his words and use him as the butt of a joke? Suddenly, Ferrodias felt an uncontrollable anger rise in him as he shouted his orders.

Some of the mages had long since harbored a dislike of Han Shuo, they immediately restarted their incantations the moment they heard Ferrodias' urgent command.

"So what if I tricked you? All you are is trash. You are only fit to be played with!" Han Shuo said this with all smiles as he calmly took out the skeletal staff and chanted out a magical spell of some length.

Rows of undead creatures suddenly appeared around Ferrodias as Han Shuo chanted. More than a hundred of them appeared in the blink of an eye, while a squadron of gargoyles whizzed towards the still chanting mages. Frightened, they could only stop their incantations and frantically take cover.

“You! You! Just who on earth are you?!” When several hundred undeads surrounded Ferrodias, three of which were powerful evil knights, Ferrodias could finally no longer contain the fear within his heart and cry out in alarm.

Shrugging his shoulders, Han Shou said, “You’re about to die, why bother with so many questions?”

“Bryan. Bryan. You’re Bryan, the newly appointed city lord of Brettel City” One of the mages suddenly cried out in alarm. He had obviously heard the way Helen Tina addressed Han Shuo and had connected the dots, shouting out in alarm.

“Yep, perhaps you guys can die content now!” Han Shuo replied with a smirk. He waved his hand with the bone staff and caused an enormous undead creature to wink into existence, drowning the people beneath it.

Among these people, the most powerful was still earth knight Ferrodias. Han Shuo completely ignored the little mages. Their ending was easy to imagine after the enormous undead creature slammed into them.

Indeed. Even when the mages only had the gargoyles to worry about, they were still caught in a bad situation. Now, with hundreds of undeads, their little spells’ destructive power was fundamentally useless. On the other hand, although Ferrodias’ power was sufficient, just one evil knight alone was capable of preventing him from obtaining victory. Now, with three evil knights surrounding him, he was guaranteed to die tragically.

A miserable and mournful howl echoed from Ferrodias and his people. After the legion of undead attacked, the group of people who had been prancing around arrogantly just a moment ago, were torn into pieces. The terrifying screams could make one’s hair stand on end.

But when Helen Tina’s traitors screamed in a manner that could cause shudders up and down one’s back, she actually had a kind of delightful, carefree feeling. This was because she felt like she had always treated them fairly and could never have imagined that these people would actually one day betray her. Thankfully, Han Shuo was in the vicinity, otherwise, Helen Tina would probably have been captured and fated to be

Benedict Sackville's slave

Helen Tina might have reluctantly accepted things if it'd been a rebellion from ordinary folk, but when those who she treated with sincerity betrayed her, it truly became hard to extinguish such intense hatred for them. After hearing the petrified screams, Helen Tina gnashed her teeth and shouted, "Serves you right. As traitors, this is what you deserve!"

"Pfft. I say, Miss Helen, they're already screwed, shouldn't you return the gold coins you owe me already?" Han Shuo laughingly walked in front of Helen Tina and gallantly helped Helen Tina remove the magical imprisoning net before prompting her to pay back the debt. He also smoothly stored the net into his space ring.

"You, are you finished yet?" Helen Tina looked at Han Shuo's smiling face and suddenly felt a belly full of anger. In the end, she couldn't help but to shout at Han Shuo.

Han Shuo said astoundedly, "What! Are you actually looking to renege on the debt. Hehe. You should know that although they're all dead, I can still very easily get rid of you. Even worse, I can directly bring you to Benedict Sackville and exchange you for fifty thousand gold coins."

"You dare!" Helen Tina hatefully stared at Han Shuo with wide eyes. After staying silent for a moment, she took a deep breath, as if fortifying herself and said, "Bryan, I have a proposal."

"What kind of proposal; let me hear it" Han Shuo asked.

"A marriage between us. The dowry is Helon Dukedom, what do you think?" Although Helen Tina was blushing and ashamed, her eyes were resolute as she looked deeply at Han Shuo.

Chapter 359: You are not the only one

“Helen, are you crazy!? How could you even have such an insane idea?!” Even trapped in the magic net, the fire phoenix nearly deafened everyone with her shout, looking at Helen Tina with in disbelief upon hearing the latter’s words.

“I’m not crazy. Big sister Firewind, this is the only way to restore Helon Duchy’s stability and also stop others from looking at me with those eyes. Only when this demon marries me will I be able to wash the impurities off my body! The others will only believe his words.” Helen Tina heaved a long sigh as she said helplessly to Firewind.

With regards to Helen Tina being violated by Han Shuo, as long as Han Shuo stood up to speak the truth, it didn’t matter if there were still people who didn’t believe those words. Everything would be fine as long as he married Helen. At least, the people of Helon Duchy wouldn’t keep objecting to everything.

“But you know who he is! He’s the city lord of Brettel! The people of Helon Duchy still consider Brettel their personal hunting ground. I’m afraid that they can’t accept this matter at all.” The fire phoenix persistently tried to persuade Helen Tina out of what she considered the most foolish of ideas.

“It’s fine, they will gradually learn to accept it. I understand them, the civilians are the most easily deceived but also the most easy to calm down. As long as the rebellious aristocrats are removed, the civilians will behave as long as their livelihoods aren’t threatened.” Helen Tina said stubbornly. Her pretty eyes flashed with a cold glint as she seemed to think about visiting some murder and bloodshed on those rebels.

Han Shuo looked at Helen Tina from a distance, listening to the two women’s conversation. Her offer had greatly tempted him, since she was backed by the entirety of Helon Duchy. Han Shuo also had absolute belief that as long as he married Helen Tina, he could definitely use her hands to tame Helon Duchy into submission..Looking at it from the aspect of absolute interest, this seemed to give nothing but profits without the slightest loss. The only thing Han Shuo was worried about was, once this matter was leaked out, the other three women just might not spare him. This was truly a difficult problem!

“What do you think? No matter how we look at it, a proud person like you won’t decline this kind of offer, right?” Helen Tina’s bright eyes stared at Han Shuo, her face slowly returning to her natural complexion as her embarrassment faded. She was simply discussing business.

“Eh... this... Actually, I already have a woman!” Han Shuo scratched his head, explaining his problem to Helen Tina.

“What woman? Is she even more valuable than the Helon Duchy?” Helen Tina wasn’t surprised. It’d be strange if someone like Han Shuo didn’t have any women. However, Helen Tina believed in her own value and that of Helon Duchy behind her. It should be enough to make Han Shuo accept her offer.

“Feelings are not things, and they can’t be measured by pure economical value either!” Han Shuo answered Helen Tina. His mind quickly spun as he tried to think things through. He smiled a while later and responded, “Your current Helon Duchy has powerful enemies outside and civil war inside. Even your grand duke position is in danger, so this dowry of yours isn’t exactly reliable!”

“Humph! If I’m to marry you with Helon Duchy as my dowry, of course there’s a condition. You must help me stabilize Helon Duchy. On the other hand, even if I marry you, Helon Duchy will still be mine to manage.” Helen Tina answered like it was a matter of course. She was determined to make such a decision out of consideration for herself, as well as her admiration for Han Shuo’s ability. Otherwise, even if he had really violated her, had he been an incompetent man, she absolutely still wouldn’t consider him.

“This means that you still need my help to stabilize the Helon Duchy. Then it can’t be considered as you giving me Helon Duchy as your dowry.” Han Shuo looked at Helen Tina with a supercilious smile, as he spoke in a measured tone.

Helen Tina flew into a rage when she heard Han Shuo's words. She rolled her eyes at Han Shuo and said, "You demon, you'll even bargain with me about this kind of thing! After you marry me, I myself will become your person, so Helon Duchy will naturally become yours also. If you don't want to, then forget it! It's not like I'll die without you!"

Helen Tina had already tossed her self esteem into an abyss when she decided to discuss her marriage with Han Shuo. For someone as proud as her, it was already embarrassing enough to discuss this topic with Han Shuo face to face while pretending to be calm about it. She didn't expect him to be such a politician and be still weighing the gains and losses. This made Helen Tina feel humiliated, so she couldn't help but say so in her rage.

"Don't be agitated, don't be agitated!" Han Shuo hastily smoothed things over a little. He then adopted a stern face and a low tone, "Firstly, the position of my women won't change because of you. Moreover, this transaction temporarily cannot be made public; your position in the seven grand duchies is still useful for me. However, I will help you hold Helon Duchy in the palm of your hand."

Helen Tina's raging waves of anger slightly calmed when she heard Han Shuo's words. Somewhat puzzled, she asked, "What do you mean?"

"That is to say, you are just one of my women. Not only are you not the only one, but our relationship also can't be made public. It's still greatly useful for me if Helon Duchy remains as part of the seven grand duchies. However, I will consolidate the practical power of Helon Duchy in your hands, so you can keep governing Helon Duchy. What do you think?" Han Shuo explained.

Helen Tina quickly considered the pros and cons. She knew full well that the kind of man like Han Shuo simply couldn't be tied down by any woman. Of course, she also didn't think that she could tame him into docility. Therefore, although the first condition made her vaguely uncomfortable, she could still accept it for the bigger picture.

As for the second condition, after Helen Tina's train of thought reached its natural conclusion, she was immediately terrified. She herself was the grand duke of Helon Duchy. Being able to climb up to this position as a woman, she was naturally no fool. What did it mean for Helon Duchy alone to remain among the seven grand duchies? It was as clear as day to Helen Tina that Han Shuo had a desire, an ambition that spanned all seven grand duchies!

If there was one duchy in the seven grand duchies that rebelled secretly, it would definitely play a crucial role. This could change a war's status almost immediately, and help Han Shuo achieve his ambition. As her thoughts reached this point, Helen Tina's gaze at Han Shuo was somewhat different.

A man with ambition was always attractive to women. It was even more deadly for the women if this man possessed the strength to match that ambition. Especially to a woman who was unwilling to live a mediocre life like Helen Tina, this kind of temptation was even greater. Therefore, the more Helen Tina looked at Han Shuo, the more she found him pleasing to the eyes. The more she looked, the more outstanding he seemed.

"Helen, Helen!" The fire phoenix next to Helen Tina saw her stare dumbly at Han Shuo, her eyes sparkling with a brilliant light that made the former feel somewhat embarrassed. Helen Tina's gaze was clearly revealing lust, the unique feature of a boy crazy girl.

"What, big sister Firewind?" Helen Tina was startled. She looked to the fire phoenix, somewhat surprised.

"Eh, nothing!" The fire phoenix saw that Han Shuo didn't say anything else, so she coughed lightly to cover up her slip.

However, Helen Tina had been with the fire phoenix for many years already. Upon seeing the fire phoenix's expression, Helen Tina immediately recalled her behavior just now. She suddenly reacted fiercely, her face flushed red as she glared hatefully at Han Shuo, saying, "I can agree to your conditions, but how can you stabilize Helon Duchy?"

"Very easy. I'll just announce to everyone that the only that happened last time when I captured was exhorting gold coins, and that I definitely didn't violate you or develop a relationship with you. Those rumors were just because my subordinates love to shoot off their mouths with their own speculations. Eh, this is actually the truth as well. It wasn't me who spread these vicious news."

"Other people may not believe if you say these things. But if they come from me, a fair portion of people will believe them. Anyhow, this isn't a bad thing to Brettel City either as it can even help raise the morale of the Brettel soldiers. So if it was the truth, I would have actually admitted to it with my personality."

"Of course, there will be people who won't believe. Your Helon Duchy will certainly have those people. However, I can just help you take care of those aristocrats who dare to resist. Bloodshed forges a solid regime, and you obviously understand this principle. You don't have to worry too much." Han Shuo leisurely explained.

"It really wasn't you who spread that news?" Helen Tina furrowed her brows in thought for a while after Han Shuo finished speaking before she looked at him.

Han Shuo shrugged as he gave her a wry smile, "It really wasn't me. I'm not that bored!"

"I don't believe you. I know how despicable and insidious you are!" Helen Tina said with resentment. Then, she suddenly thought better of it, saying, "Aren't you afraid that I'd run away? That after I use you, I will join the alliance to destroy Brettel City?"

"I certainly am, so I too have a condition!" Han Shuo laughed wickedly.

Helen Tina had a bad premonition when she saw Han Shuo laugh. She gingerly asked, "What condition?"

"Heh heh, I want your body first!" Han Shuo swept his lecherous eyes up and down Helen Tina's enchantingly curving body. He named the condition without the slightest bit of shame.

"No! You, you demon! Absolutely not! No!" Helen Tina had had a feeling that Han Shuo's words would be unpleasant, but she still panicked and found it unacceptable when she officially heard his shameless condition.

"Helen, don't agree to it. He's just a liar!" The fire phoenix furiously said.

"If you don't agree, then this matter is over. You pay me the gold coins, and I'll leave this place. From now on, we'll be meeting each other across the battlefield." Han Shuo shrugged indifferently, seemingly not caring too much about Helen Tina's body, as if he wasn't the same person who'd just lecherously eyed her up and down.

For some unknown reason, Helen Tina felt her heart clench when she heard Han Shuo say they'd be meeting on the battlefield. Just thinking about that possibility gave her a feeling of discomfort. This kind of feeling made her extremely uncomfortable, but she didn't know why it was actually happening.

End of part one of the chapter.

Helen Tina gritted her teeth in silence for a while, before raising her head to glare resentfully at Han Shuo. She said with determination, "I agree, but only after you help me get rid of all of the hidden troubles in Helon Duchy. Otherwise, this matter is over here and now!"

"No problem. Haha, the beauty has personally sent herself to my door with a duchy as the dowry. Only a fool would refuse this toast!" Han Shuo was smug as his laughter echoed into the sky. He hadn't expected to stumble upon such an unexpected harvest on this trip to the seven grand duchies. It seemed that the evil bunch of Chester, Dick, and the others who'd spread those vicious rumors had done him a great favor. Women are truly a strange creature; their hearts were fickle indeed!

As Han Shuo and Helen Tina were talking, the miserable, tragic screams around them also gradually stopped. As he turned his head to look, Han Shuo found that none of the rebels, including Ferrodias, had escaped from the savage claws of the great undead army. All of them had fallen, corpses doomed to eternal silence.

But the surrounding area was a little bloody. With a beauty right next to him, Han Shuo felt that the scenery didn't look too good. He took out the skeletal staff and chanted out a quick incantation, causing the group of undead creatures to slowly fade away.

“Alright. Let’s first leave this place and see if the army still heeds your command.” Han Shuo smiled at Helen Tina and said.

“Rest assured. Not everyone in my army is like that bastard Ferrodias. My family guards definitely won’t betray me, that I can guarantee!” Helen Tina said proudly.

Han Shuo actually believed this. From the moment he’d set foot into the seven grand duchies. Han Shuo already knew a little about Helen Tina’s situation. Her family clan was the largest aristocratic clan in the Helon Duchy, holding the majority of control over Helon Duchy’s soldiers. Otherwise, she would long have been overthrown by the rebels.

To Helen Tina’s clan, only with Helen Tina herself in the position of grand duke could the benefits of the clan be maintained. Once Helen Tina fell, her family clan would naturally suffer the consequences. Helen Tina understood this fact clearly, which was why she’d given various positions of power in the Helon Duchy to her family members. As such, she’d been able to sustain her position until now despite being opposed by the people and a minority of the aristocrats.

The seven great dukes of the seven grand duchies all followed the same practice. Once they successfully climbed in their positions of power, they would spare no effort to let their family members take over the important positions of the duchy. The benefit was that the power and benefits would remain concentrated in their family clan even when some domestic aristocrats opposed them. In addition, they could rely on the virtue of clan power to pressure those aristocrats. However, the incredible disadvantage was that not all of the trusted clan members was talented. If they held power in the duchy with mediocre ability, then not only was it impossible to fully exploit the potential of the duchy’s territory, the national strength would also gradually be exhausted.

“Alright, no need to be arrogant in front of me. If you don’t even have this little bit of ability, you aren’t fit to be my woman!” Han Shuo sent a verbal jab at Helen Tina. Turning his attention to the fire phoenix, he frowned. The fire phoenix's entire body was powerless after being struck by the magic arrow. "The poisoned magic arrow broke off inside her body. This'll be a little troublesome."

"My body is only a little weak right now. With my race's natural healing ability, it'll only take a few days to recover!" The fire phoenix angrily said. Evidently, she hadn't adapted to Han Shuo's new identity, and her attitude was still unfriendly. After all, she had been putting her heart and mind into killing Han Shuo to take revenge for Helen Tina until today. Who would have expected that there'd be such a dramatic turn of events? This super rank magic creature had yet to fully accept the situation.

"No need to make such a fuss. You can't be my burden right now!" Han Shuo walked straight to the fire phoenix and firmly pulled out the broken magic arrow without caring about her pain. Afterwards, his left hand firmly held her body down despite her struggling and he placed his right hand on the wound.

The effect from the poisoned magic arrow had weakened her enough that her feeble struggling couldn't shake of Han Shuo's hands. A powerful suction force radiated through her body through Han Shuo's big hand. The poison overflowing her body quickly flowed out through the wound under the power of the force.

The poison in her body flowed into Han Shuo's palm that was touching her wound. As her previously suppressed power was gradually restored, the fire phoenix understood that Han Shuo was helping her, and she no longer trembled her feathers. Her struggling body gradually quieted down, her blazing feathers once again recovering their luster.

When Han Shuo let go, the fire phoenix once again felt her power overflowing. She happily let out a high pitched chirp and flapped her wings to shoot up into the sky, starting to swoop around joyously.

"Big sister Firewind, is, is she okay?" Helen Tina was very pleasantly surprised. Her eyes that looked at Han Shuo carried a somewhat different meaning, her body also involuntarily moving closer to Han Shuo.

Nodding, Han Shuo flipped his palm and flicked a pile of stinking blood on the ground. He then casually replied, "I've sucked out the poison in her body. You see her skipping and jumping around like that, does she look anywhere near injured?"

"Alright, consider it as us owing you a favor, thank you!" Helen Tina very reluctantly thanked Han Shuo. She was also a little apprehensive about the miracle he'd just worked. She was very clear about his astounding strength, but he shouldn't be a priest nor an alchemist. But even priests and alchemists didn't seem to have such a miraculous ability!

In the Profound Continent, once poison entered the blood, no priests nor alchemists could easily suck it out like Han Shuo had done. To Helen Tina, this was something incredibly miraculous. She suddenly felt glad about her decision, thinking how fortunate she was to avoid becoming the mortal enemy of this person. Otherwise, it would have brought about irreversible disaster to the Helon Duchy.

Taking advantage of Helen Tina's surprise, Han Shuo quickly reached out to caress her pretty, silky smooth, warm cheek. Helen Tina's pretty face looked shocked as she turned to face him. Enjoying the delightful smoothness of her skin, Han Shuo smiled gallantly and said, "We're already family, so why act polite?"

Helen Tina jolted out of her silent pondering and suddenly reacted. She flung her head back in alarm and retreated a few steps back. She glared hatefully at Han Shuo, saying, "We are not a family yet. You, behave, or I won't be polite!"

"Oh? Okay, I'd like to see how you'll be impolite!" Han Shuo paid no heed to Helen Tina's threat and stalked towards her. He found it somewhat interesting to tease this proud and arrogant grand duke.

"Bryan, can you stop acting like that? We need to have a proper discussion about the internal affairs of my duchy." Helen Tina changed tacks like the breeze, using a fatigued, weak voice to persuade Han Shuo upon seeing him approach.

Helen Tina knew full well that it was simply impossible to stop Han Shuo head on with her power. Han Shuo's shocking strength was powerful as that of a demon god. She had almost lost the will to resist. Helen Tina was already considering this man as her greatest support. He might just be able to give her everything she needed. Subconsciously, Helen Tina had long since admitted defeat, which finally dawned on her when she saw Han Shuo draw near.

Han Shuo was startled. He looked closely at Helen Tina. At this moment, the weak Helen also had a kind of charm that roused an inexplicable pity in him. He didn't continue to aggressively approach her, but instead abruptly stopped his steps and said with a smile, "Then forget it. Let's talk about your duchy's affairs!"

"Ferrodias is just one of my senior knights. I'm absolutely sure he wouldn't have the guts to betray me without someone to encourage him. Humph! Currently in the duchy, only Marquis Kekaru hold the advantage in taking my place. He's always been impatiently waiting in the shadows, so I reckon he's prepared to strike a fatal blow to push me off the political stage. I dare say for sure that he is the person pulling the strings behind the scenes." Killing intent flashed in Helen Tina's bright eyes as she bit off her words.

"Very good. Now that we know who it is, I'll come to Helon Duchy with you, and kill all of those traitors, so they will never have the chance to even foster the idea of rebelling against you." Said Han Shuo coldly.

Chapter 360: Receiving some benefits

When Han Shuo and Helen returned to the army station, it was just as she had said—her family's trusted aides were completely oblivious to Ferrodias' actions. He'd obviously been acting in his interest, and Helen's actions were written off as arresting and suitably punishing him.

Ferrodias' original plan was to capture and bring Helen to Marquis Kekaru of Helon Duchy. After Helen, the pillar of her family's army, disappeared, Kekaru would be able to defeat the Helon Duchy's army and become the duke with Benedict Sackville's backing.

After Han Shuo and Helen returned to the stationed army, they didn't openly appear before the army. That was mostly because Han Shuo had plenty of methods to privately meet Helen.

After dealing with Ferrodias, Helen began traveling back to the nearby Helon Duchy. She had prepared her cover story of being attacked by assassins on her way back. Because no one except her people had survived, the news of the revolt hadn't been divulged.

The next day, Han Shuo stealthily followed the army troops back to Helon Duchy. The Helon Duchy was as powerful as a province in Lancelot Empire. It too had five cities and more than ten different sized towns. Helon City acted as the capital city of Helon Duchy, located in the center of the duchy. The other four cities were each owned by the four marquises, although one was still reeling from their marquis' death at Helen Tina's hands during the previous civil unrest.

Marquis Kekaru was the lord of Seagate City, one of the four cities of Helon Duchy. Although he hadn't revealed any intentions of revolting during the previous unrest, he'd suddenly decided to rebel this time. This person had apparently waited patiently for the perfect moment for a long while now.

Han Shou and Helen returned to the Helon Duchy together. Along the way, Helen gathered her private army, totaling thirty thousand troops, Helon Duchy's most elite cavalry regiment, and all led by Helen's most trusted family aides.

Seagate City was an unavoidable stop on the road back to Helon Duchy. After marching for two days, Helen's army finally approached its gates.

Since Helen was a woman and a famous fire archmage, she had always stayed within a spacious and luxurious chariot pulled by four war-horses.

At this moment, apart from Helen, an additional person, Han Shuo, had appeared in the chariot as well. Within the spacious chariot was a soft rug that felt amazingly comfortable to step on. There was also some blush, powder, alongside some fresh fruits that sparkled on top of a small shelf.

Helen lazily leaned into her seat and looked at the relaxed Han Shuo before saying, "Seagate City is Kekaru's territory. This cunning fox has always hidden his intentions in the past. Although I know he has done damnable things, I never could find an excuse to deal with him. Furthermore, he always has several experts protecting him. As long as he stays within Seagate City, it will not be easy for me to kill him."

"How many city guards are in Seagate City right now? If you returned now, would he dare open the city gates and let you enter?" Han Shuo casually asked Helen while rudely plucking a bunch of grapes from the side. While looking at Han Shuo's unperturbed attitude, Helen actually felt a comforting sense of security. It was as if she did not need to fear anything with this demon next to her.

"Although Seagate City has fifty thousand soldiers in total, only ten thousand of them are elite soldiers. The only way he can avoid outright battle is if he opens the city gates and welcomes me. Even though I can easily suppress him after entering Seagate City, I don't have any evidence that Ferrodias' revolt was secretly incited by him. If I act against him without any justifiable cause, I'm afraid the citizens and the nobles will raise a fuss." Helen lightly wrinkled her eyebrows, annoyance seeping into her tone.

Only after Han Shuo plucked the last grape off the bunch and wiped his hands on the expensive rug did he reply, "Simple. As long as I kill Marquis Kekaru and all of his successors, you can use the excuse of finding the killer to take control of Seagate City.” Han Shuo continued, “Hehe, you are the duchess of Helon Duchy and you even have thirty thousand elite soldiers at your beck and call. As such, this is the logical move for you. Oh, by the way, you can also randomly arrange some people at the scene to falsely accuse your enemies of killing Kekaru. This will definitely hurt your enemies. Hm, in fact, I think Benedict Sackville of Narsen Duchy is a particularly viable candidate. What do you think?”

After being embroiled in Helon Duchy’s power struggle for all these years, Helen was well versed in scheming. Thus, after listening to Han Shuo’s suggestion, she smiled sweetly and nodded before replying, “Precisely my thoughts. As long as Kekaru and his heirs all die, I can justifiably allow my trusted aides to take control of Seagate City. Hehe, I already have the perfect candidate in mind. I already had this kind of a plan in motion during the previous civil unrest, it’s just that the assassins I sent were unable to complete their missions. But since you’re here this time, it will definitely be a success.

As expected from such a vicious woman. As soon as the discussion moved to this sort of topic, Han Shuo noticed a dazzling light shining from her eyes. Her mouth curved into a sweet smile that could seduce and arouse any man’s heart. Even Han Shuo felt a slight tug on his heart.

When this sort of woman hated a guy, they would try to bring about their death regardless of what cost they had to pay. However, when this sort of woman truly fell in love with a man, they would be willing to abandon everything just to be there for her man.

Han Shuo stared at Helen. Perhaps Helen didn’t hate him so much anymore, but he also knew that Helen was still not helping him wholeheartedly. Only when he thoroughly conquered her would she become a truly sharp weapon in his hands. Otherwise, he would only be harming himself.

To make such a person submit, both your body and mind was necessary to make her surrender. It was a long and hard battle for Han Shuo to have realized the importance of this. Only in this way could he influence her heart and slowly make her his vassal. One of the best examples of this was Emily.

Thinking about this, Han Shuo lightly laughed and moved his face close to Helen who was lazily leaned backwards. As Helen's face paled in panic, Han Shuo suddenly pulled Helen on top of his thighs and rudely kissed her bright red lips, completely ignoring her will.

A very seductive fragrance entered Han Shuo's nose from Helen's body. This fragrance caused Han Shuo to become uncontrollably engrossed, just like how an alcoholic would be lost in the most excellent of wine. To his credit, Han Shuo did not actually kiss her without restraint. After a light kiss on Helen's intoxicatingly red lips, he chuckled and released Helen. Then, laughing at Helen's charmingly flushed face, he said, "I lost control of myself because you're just too mesmerizing. Haha. Since I will have to take care of your enemies soon, I should at least get such a benefit right?"

"You..... You perverted bastard! You just stole a kiss!!" Blushing hotly, Helen scrambled off his thighs and glared fiercely at Han Shuo. Originally, she wanted to rush towards Han Shuo and get revenge, but remembering that he was a tiger in lamb's clothing, she could only fiercely throw a crystal cup towards Han Shuo in a fit of rage.

He leisurely snatched the crystal cup out of the air. Cup in hand, Han Shuo leisurely poured out some wine and walked towards Helen hiding at the corner of the carriage, grinning, "Here, accept this cup of wine as an apology from me. Heh, as you know, I'm but a normal man while you are such a mesmerizing beautiful woman. It's a miracle that I didn't do anything else to you while riding in such a carriage. You better not anger me now!"

Being told off by Han Shuo like this, Helen felt her heart tremble as she angrily glared at Han Shuo. Even her slender white neck was starting to flush red. But in reality, being praised as a mesmerizing beautiful woman by Han Shuo made her a little happy. Since she would become his sooner or later, giving him some benefits in advance wouldn't hurt.

"Fine, take it as I've forgiven you for now, but you can't be so unruly in the future, especially when there are other people around!" Helen hatefully glared at Han Shuo for a moment. In the end, she obediently picked up the wine cup and took a sip in defeat.

“Of course, when others are around, you are the goddess of Helon Duchy!” Han Shuo promised Helen first, and then said laughingly, “But when it’s only the two of us, you will be freely assaulted by me!”

“Humph!” Helen glared at Han Shuo for a moment and then seriously said, “Alright, you’ve kissed me and got what you wanted. Soon we will be entering the city and perhaps, Kekaru will even be entering the carriage to welcome me. So, shouldn’t you be leaving now?”

“No problem, I’ll leave right now!” Han Shuo answered with a laugh. Suddenly, Han Shuo appeared next to Helen like lightning and licked her neck before lightly praising her as he walked away, “So fragrant!”

A burst of mist slowly floated out of the carriage without alerting a single imperial guard nearby. As the mist slowly scattered due to a breeze, Han Shuo had already disappeared without a trace.

Left behind the carriage was a Helen whose white neck had just been violated by Han Shuo before he left. A constant burning sensation kept coming from her violated neck, causing her heart to tremble and her face to blush. In annoyance, she could only spit on the floor and lightly say to herself, “This damned brat! He really is a damned pervert. I really don’t know if I can deal with him until after he has taken care of my enemies. Ai, meeting him has really put me at my wit’s end. How annoying!”

A few minutes later, Helen’s army troops slowly stopped in front of Seagate City. A sentinel had already alerted Seagate City of her arrival beforehand. Thus, Marquis Kekaru, who was within the city, should’ve received the news of her arrival.

At this time, Kekaru was in a small building in front of the city gate. He had a dark expression on his face as he listened attentively to his trusted aides who talked unceasingly, remaining silent himself.

He was attired in noble robes, and was of noble stature. His gray sideburns give him away as past his prime. Clearly, he did not have an outstanding appearance. But his outward appearance hid a pair of calculative eyes that seemed like he never ceased pondering.

“Sir Marquis, Ferrodias has died and the plan has most likely failed. Right now, you can be considered the biggest threat to the duke of Helon Duchy. Furthermore, that vicious bitch has never concerned herself with sentimentalism and likely knows that you are the instigator. You must not let her into the city, otherwise, we will definitely die as part of a bloody revenge.” The Seagate City administrator did his best to persuade the marquis.

“Yes father, this bitch is famous for her viciousness. If her elite army enters the city, our army will have no way of suppressing her. We can only borrow Seagate City’s defensive strength to stall and prevent her from entering the city. During that time, we can ally with other nobles before finally entering an official war.” Kekaru’s son, Kesega, was clad in luminous knight armor and did his best to persuade Kekaru as well. Nevertheless, Kekaru remained wordless as he walked back and forth while his eyeballs darted to and fro. It seemed that even he had become extremely anxious, losing his typical decisive nature.

“Father, hurry and make a decision. They will be arriving soon.” As the time ticked away, Kesega anxiously reminded him again after seeing Kekaru remain silent.

After a long silence, Kekaru deeply exhaled and said, “Open the gates and come welcome the duke with me. You guys cannot make any mistakes whatsoever!”

“Sir Marquis. This could cost us our lives!” The administrator hurriedly protested in fear.

“Don’t worry, even if she knows it was me, she doesn’t have any proof. Hmph! I’ve been in charge of Seagate city for so many years; both nobles and citizens support me. If she dares act against me without evidence, the citizens will not approve of her. You don’t need to worry, she shouldn’t dare openly take any action against me. But, if she still decides to use assassins like last time, we only need to be more vigilant and it will still be fine.”

“Furthermore, the time is not yet ripe for us to rebel. We could suffer a huge loss to the family forces she holds in her hand, and there’s no certainty we will come out victorious. But even if we do come out victorious, the conflict will just weaken Helon Duchy even further, and we’ll become the weakest among the seven Grand Duchies. Instead of such a result, we should continue controlling Seagate City and wait for a better opportunity.” Kekaru said to the two people.

After thinking about what Kekaru said, the two, although still unwilling, knew that his analysis was reasonable. Furthermore, knowing how futile it would be for anyone to try and change Kekaru’s decisions due to his decisive nature, they did not continue trying to persuade him.

Chapter 361: Massacre

Helen's entourage smoothly entered Seagate City with a warm welcome from Kekaru, and was brought to a manor at the southern end of the city.

Along the way, Helen's charming face was darkened and unhappy. Previously when Helen had come to Seagate, the citizens who had heard the news would crowd and crane their heads for a tiny peek at her face. However this time round, apart from Kekaru's men, the road was only sparsely filled with citizens. These people only viewed her carriage from far away, not showing any signs of respect. This made Helen feel uncomfortable inside.

After properly arranging her personal guard at the manor, Helen declined Kekaru's offer of a banquet in her honor, citing tiredness. She feared that Kekaru would assassinate her in his own castle. She was afraid of Kekaru's schemes. Just like her, Kekaru was not a benevolent person. It was entirely possible that he would take action at the banquet.

On the other hand, Helen also didn't want to endure the inevitable unfriendly gazes at the banquet. She'd had enough of these looks of disdain. However, she couldn't kill them just because of their hidden looks of disdain.

This manor was where Kekaru received distinguished guests. It had a large area that was surrounded by Helen's thirty thousand strong personal guard. Helen was in the center of the area and was safe enough to sleep peacefully. The full moon slowly appeared in the night sky. At the door of a central luxurious and spacious room, ten guards stood tensely on duty. In the room, Helen was endlessly worrying alone.

Without any wind, the window voluntarily opened, and a cloud of grey fog suddenly flew in front of Helen. The fog stopped whirling when the window shut, revealing Han Shuo's figure.

"You're here!" Helen gathered her scattered thoughts, raising her head to glance at Han Shuo. She softly muttered, "Kekaru has always wanted to remove me from my position as Duke. He previously wanted me to marry his son Kasega but I declined. His Seagate City has always not fully obeyed my orders. If it wasn't for me trying to prevent Helon Duchy from falling into turmoil, I would have long since acted against him, and not resorted to employing assassins."

"I'll make a trip there tonight. I'll help you handle him!" Han Shuo calmly looked at Helen, as though he had just uttered a simple and common thing.

"If it's possible, I want to work with you. I want to personally end his life. This person was the one who murdered my mother. I hate him!" Helen was a little unusual today, speaking to Han Shuo with some viciousness.

Wrinkling his eyebrows, Han Shuo considered for a while before replying, "How about this. You stay here, I'll bring him over and let you kill him yourself." Han Shuo didn't probe the statement regarding Helen's mother. Everyone was sure to have a few memories that haunted them. Han Shuo believed this incident was definitely not a pleasant memory. At times, to respect someone's privacy was more moving than expressing respect on the surface.

Helen raised her head and deeply looked at Han Shuo, unclear if she had thought of something sad, her gaze a little frail. She laughed at herself, saying, "Thank you. In the end, I'm still a woman. Seems like I also need a man's shoulder to lean on. After all these years, I'm truly tired."

Smiling and nodding, Han Shuo tried walking toward Helen. When he realized Helen's gaze wasn't alert, he continued to walk towards her. When he reached her side, Han Shuo lightly embraced her. Feeling Helen's shivering body, Han Shuo patted her shoulder and gently said, "It's alright. I won't ask about your past, but I will bring Kekaru in front of you. You can exact the price for his sins then."

"Bryan, I don't know if I should hate you. When I came over today, none of the citizens came over to welcome me. It looks like they've already started to reject me in their hearts. The main cause of this was you, but for some reason I can't hate you. Why, Bryan, why can't I hate you?" Helen leaned softly against Han Shuo's shoulder, her voice a tired, weak whisper.

“Perhaps you should hate me, but if you always listen to me, not only will I not let you hate me, I’ll help you gradually be happy again. I promise!” Han Shuo whispered in Helen’s ear, adding, “Alright, you should first rest for a while. To decrease your hatred of me, I’ll first start with Kekaru.”

Lightly pushing away Helen, who’d exposed her weakness in the quiet night, Han Shuo silently left the room like a ghost in the night, weightlessly floating toward Kekaru’s castle. To Han Shuo, his only prey was Helen. As long as Helen held the reins of Helon Duchy, he could covertly control Helon Duchy without wasting any men or resources. At an appropriate moment, this secretly traitorous Helon Duchy could become a hidden blade in the coalition army, bringing Han Shuo immense benefits.

Although Helen was the Duke of Helon Duchy, she was still a woman. The most reliable way to treat a woman was to conquer her heart. A man should be publicly overbearing in the day, but gentle and refined at night. They was equally lethal to a woman. Helen was of great use to Han Shuo. Hence, Han Shuo didn’t mind spending some time to thoroughly and securely have both her and her Duchy in his palm.

Deep in Kekaru’s castle was a secret room guarded zealously by soldiers. In that room were the three people from the morning, gathered again at night. “Father, that woman is staying in Seagate City. We must definitely kill her before she leaves. Otherwise, once she leaves, I’m afraid we won’t have another opportunity.” Kasega looked at his father Kekaru, once again proposing his idea.

“Lord Marquis, I’m afraid this is our only opportunity. If we really wait till she returns to Helon City, it would be hard for us to act even if we wanted to!” Administrator Mori similarly advised.

Kekaru’s eyes were still calculating as he replied to the both of them, “I also know that. However, she has thirty thousand elite troops by her side. Assassinating her is no easy feat.”

“Lord Father, she can’t always be hiding within her thirty thousand troops. We only need to find ways to make her leave their protection. It’s not difficult for us to kill her in Seagate City. We only need a reasonable excuse.” Kasega replied.

“Lord, isn’t Young Master Kasega engaged to the Galileo Family’s Miss Lejeame? We can seize this opportunity to arrange their marriage in the next two days. With the Lord’s standing in the Duchy and with her being in Seagate City, she has no reason to not appear to express her congratulations. She can’t possibly bring her thirty thousand guards to the wedding banquet. As long as she comes, we’ll be able to kill her. What do you think of that?” Magistrate Mori’s eyes shone with maliciousness.

“Uncle Mori, this method isn’t bad!” Kasega smiled gladly, turning to Kekaru, “Father, what do you think?”

Kekaru’s eyes continued to spin in thought, only nodding after a while, saying “That could work. However, we have to be extra cautious, so I’m going to need to consider it more carefully. We can only act when we’re assured of success. This woman is not simple. We massacred her mother’s clan years ago, but she actually managed to escape. All these years, she’s clearly known that we were the culprits, but she’s never showed it. This calculating shrewdness is something no normal youngster would possess.”

“Hmph. I want to kill her the way the Lord Father killed her mother. This woman doesn’t give us face, going as far as rejecting my offer of marriage. And then she ended up being raped by an unknown brat. She brought that upon herself! What’s the use of a woman in such a high position? A guy still rode her in the end!” Kasega was still brooding over Helen’s rejection, and ridiculed her viciously.

“Capturing her is enough. We can’t touch her. I’ve promised Benedict Sackville to immediately hand Helen over once we captured her. After all, the thirty thousand family troops aren’t easy to handle. We still need to rely on Benedict Sackville’s help.” Kekaru reminded Kasega.

“Lord Father, I can still fool around right? It’s not even her first time anymore. Even when she reaches Benedict Sackville’s hands, he also won’t be able to tell! This woman has always been like a goddess high above, and I’ve long since wanted to sample the feeling of riding her. Lord Father, please allow me to taste this feeling!” Kasega seemed to be imagining the scene of Helen being conquered by him as he pleaded with Kekaru.

Kekaru was still extremely doting on his only son. He also knew that after Helen had rejected Kasega, his son had toyed three maids to death before calming down. He hesitated a moment, before nodding, "Fooling around is possible. However, after that you must erase that memory. If not, once Benedict Sackville finds out, it would be bad. We still need to deal with that person in the future."

"Thank you father, thank you father! Haha. I've been wanting to ride that bitch for a long time!" Kasega smiled deviously and chuckled. Hints of obscene violence slowly grew in his face. Administrator Mori licked his lips, similarly forcing a few laughs as he itched on the inside. However, he knew there were things he couldn't touch. Hence, he naturally didn't dare to state any presumptuous requests.

As the three vicious vile characters were imagining a better future for them, a crisp abnormal sound suddenly came from under their feet. This secret room was underground, its perimeter reinforced with thick iron plates, impervious to the attack of blades, swords or magic. It was the safe haven where Kekaru discussed his evil plans.

Logically speaking, there shouldn't be such abnormal sounds echoing with the thick iron plates beneath their feet. Therefore, when that abnormal sound appeared, the three despicable people were stunned for a while, all of them looking dumbfoundedly at the ground. However, before they reacted, the previously soft abnormal sound suddenly amplified. The three of them were shocked. Kekaru was the first to react, shouting, "Assassins!"

With this shout, Kekaru was the first to rush toward the opening mechanism, trying to alert the surrounding guards. Kasega took out a knight's saber, focusing all his attention under his feet, ready to deal a fatal blow to anyone coming from below.

Clang!

An arc shaped disc violently burst through the ground with an ear piercing sound. The disc was extremely thick, and was obviously the iron plate that protected their feet. At the same time, a figure dashed out of the circular hole in the ground.

Kasega gave a loud shout, his sword piercing towards Han Shuo, who'd used the Demonslayer Edge to cut open a large hole with much difficulty. Han Shuo had wasted more than ten minutes using the all-conquering Demonslayer Edge to cut a hole in the iron plate, inwardly cursing the designer of the building. He wielded the Demonslayer Edge to parry the attack.

With a spate of clear clangs and bangs, Kasega's knight saber was turned into scrap iron. One of Kasega's arms had gone the course of his saber and turned into bloody minced meat. As Kasega screamed in horror, Han Shuo's Demonslayer Edge was suddenly flung out, pinning Kekaru's outstretched left hand to the wall. He'd run to the mechanism with much difficulty and had wanted to shout for help. The Demonslayer Edge was firmly embedded into the wall, continuing to pin his left hand to the wall, a distance from the mechanism.

"Damn it, who are you? Who let you in?!" Kekaru looked at Han Shuo, shouting miserably. His left hand was pinned on the wall by the Demonslayer Edge, fresh blood trickling downward in streams. The heart wrenching pain made Kekaru want to cry.

"My hand, my hand, ahhh...." Kasega's right arm was completely torn to pieces. Currently it looked like a skinned and sharpened slice of pineapple, streams of blood dripping from the meridians, gruesome beyond belief.

"Bloody hell, a birdface like you wants to encroach on my woman?!" Han Shuo snorted, ignoring the howls of the father and son duo. Walking to the front of the frightened administrator, he grinned as he asked, "Apart from old Kekaru's three sons, five daughters and forty seven assorted relatives in this castle, are there any others that have the qualifications to succeed his position as marquis?"

"N, no!" Magistrate Mori looked at the grinning Han Shuo, his fear causing him to shiver uncontrollably. After answering while trembling, he cowardly kneeled before Han Shuo, crying, "This is nothing to do with me, don't kill me. I am innocent."

"Ok. Looks like we shouldn't have missed out on anyone." Han Shuo muttered to himself. Grabbing the administrator's neck with one hand, he said, "The deadly trap you just displayed is extremely interesting. I'm afraid that people like you are the most scary, I can't spare your life!" Han Shuo twisted his hand after he finished this sentence, making a clear crack ring out. The administrator, his back to Kekaru, hadn't shifted his position, but he was now facing Kekaru with an agonized wail on his face. It was apparent his neck had been broken.

Chapter 362: Sinking into depravity

“You...who are you?! Don’t hurt us, we’ll give you anything you want!” Kekaru implored Han Shuo, trying to ignore the excruciating pain from his left hand.

“Heh heh, nope. You don’t have the means of giving me what I want!” Han Shuo casually responded, his hand forcing Kesega down on the floor. Kesega was in so much pain, he had long forgotten his delusional fantasies with Helen. Looking at Han Shuo’s hand pressing down, he felt a great force pushing down on him, leaving him incapable of moving a single step.

“Don’t.... Don’t kill me!” Kesega was paralyzed, and could only beg for forgiveness.

Pfft! Han Shuo’s hand grazed Kesega’s head. Magical yuan emitted from his hand burrowed into Kesega’s head, turning it into paste. His body slumped to the ground, now just a boneless mass of flesh.

Han Shuo walked to Kekaru’s side. Ignoring his screaming, he smiled, “Apart from you, your entire clan is dead. Although, you’re pretty lucky. I won’t kill you.”

“Fiend! You fiend, what grudge do you have against me!? Why are you doing this to me?” Kekaru blanched when he heard of his clan member’s deaths. He ignored the pain in his left hand and tore it free of the wall, charging at Han Shuo. He was consumed by the urge to at least land a couple of blows on Han Shuo.

Han Shuo focused his mental strength and cast a Soul Tremor spell. A stabbing pain exploded in Kekaru’s head before he could do more than take a few steps in Han Shuo’s direction. Dizzy from the pain, he stumbled forward a few steps before succumbing to the agony and passing out.

The Demonslayer Edge, still stuck in Kekaru’s left hand, flew into Han Shuo’s hand of its own volition. Scooping up the unconscious Kekaru, he dived back into the gaping hole in the ground, once again entering the depths of the earth.

If someone excavated the ground right now, they'd discover numerous tunnels meeting and separating across the city. Each of the tunnels opened up next to the various relatives of Marquis Kekaru living in the castle. Not a single relative was spared.

This intricate tunnel network extended several meters down into the ground. Even with several hundred people working on it, it would still require around 10 days to complete. The castle contained many of Kekaru's personal guard, as well as a number of mages. Under normal circumstances, the tunnels would immediately be discovered as soon as anyone heard suspicious sounds from beneath the earth. Obviously, some of these things could not be explained using common sense. As Han Shuo made his way through the tunnels, the tunnels collapse under the pressure of the earth. Once Han Shuo left, there were no traces in the ground beneath the castle that a tunnel had ever existed, let alone that intricate network.

The dark night was lit by moonlight, streaming down like mercury. Under the light caress of the evening breeze, Han Shuo easily slipped into Helen's mansion. He released a black fog magic as he did so, shrouding himself in a black mantle. Even the moonlight had been completely obscured.

Helen was alone in the residence, not knowing why she was starting to worry about Han Shuo. This kind of feeling bothered Helen. She had never been worried about the safety of a man before, especially a man that should have been the target of her hate. However, she had no way of controlling her internal emotions. Knowing what Han Shuo was attempting, she became more agitated every minute and every second that Han Shuo was gone, fearing that Han Shuo wouldn't be able to return safely.

"Please don't run into any trouble!" Helen muttered, with her eyebrows furrowed and a worried expression on her face. The room lights had long been extinguished. Helen stood near the window, staring off in the direction Han Shuo left. The moonlight played across Helen's white skin, seeming cold and desolate. It was a moving sight, and birthed pity in the heart of anyone who was watching.

When the black fog magic neared the mansion, Helen first felt the moonlight disappear. Looking around, the corners of Helen's lips lifted. Giving a soft laugh of joy, she opened the window wider, and took a few steps back. When Helen opened the window, the breeze blew in a cloud of gray dust. The window silently closed, and a gray figure gradually materialized.

"Are you alright?" Helen didn't ask Han Shuo whether Kekaru had been killed, but first inquired about Han Shuo's condition. It seemed that, in the depths of Helen's heart, Han Shuo's safety was more important than whether Kekaru lived or died.

When he heard these words, Han Shuo noticed the change in attitude she had towards him. His heart unconsciously growing warm, he smiled and gently said, "Thank you for your concern. I'm alright."

The upper portion of his left hand that was carrying Kekaru was already frozen by the cold air currents. Not a single drop of blood had been spilled, nor would the smell of blood permeate the room. Not even a hair of evidence would be left behind.

Having finished speaking, Han Shuo fully reformed, carrying Kekaru. Helen immediately saw the unconscious Kekaru. Helen's eyes, so warm when looking at Han Shuo, gradually filled with an unfathomable hate when looking at Kekaru. She said, "I've finally gotten my hands on you, old dog!"

Giving Helen a meaningful look, Han Shuo carried Kekaru to a room further inside the mansion. Casually throwing him into the room, Han Shuo cast a silencing spell around the area. Having cast the spell, he said to the murderously cold Helen "Alright, you can wake him now. Kill him slowly, I'll stand guard outside."

Perhaps it was because Helen had been suppressing her hate for so long, having waited for several years, that she didn't say a word to Han Shuo with her nemesis at her fingertips. Wearing an icy expression on her face, Helen entered the room that once served as a storage room. When the door slammed shut, Han Shuo didn't spare energy on eavesdropping. He casually walked over to where Helen was sitting before, and took out another cup of wine. Pouring himself a full glass, he sipped the fine wine as he pulled out a thick necromancy book, immersing himself in study.

Apart from the spell "Plague", Han Shuo had already mastered all of the spells that an arch needed to know. His mental strength was already at the level of a grand magus, and he spent all his time studying the art of summoning creatures from the underworld.

Old fey zombies, mummy lords, and bone demons. These three creatures could all be controlled by archmages, though their more advanced summoning techniques differed slightly. When Han Shuo was summoning, a contract was often made with immediately after summoning. As a result, Han Shuo could easily summon them into this world.

When summoned, these kinds of low-level creatures didn't have the ability to resist, arriving at Han Shuo's whim, not knowing to think whether to go or not. Starting from evil knights, the summoning techniques became vastly different. Even if Han Shuo could feel the presence of the evil knights, he would have to expend a large amount of energy to crush their resistance. Only then would he be able to control their actions, using the power of a contract to summon them to this world.

Summoned creatures at the grand magus level all had their own consciousness. Their power was far greater than creatures of other levels. Even in the underworld, creatures of this level acted as ambitious overlords. At the very least, they would be loners that most inferior creatures did not dare disturb.

Not only did these creatures have their own will, but they were also haughty and arrogant. A simple contract wouldn't be able to bind them. It was exactly because of this that the summoning techniques for them were much more complicated and mysterious, including deep probes for spiritual power, in order to understand the temperament of the underworld's creatures.

Apart from this, when a contract was formed between a necromancer and an undead creature, the necromancer required sufficient strength in order to make the creature pledge its allegiance, otherwise they would have to deal with that creature's resistance.

During the process of resistance, the summoner had to use their energy to suppress the creature being summoned, as well as maintain the accuracy of the summoning ritual. Any mispronounced syllable or hand gesture was unacceptable. The interconnected energy patterns would fail and the backlash from the failed summoning would hit the summoner. It was highly likely that the summoned creature would then be trapped between two planes, forever unable to return.

Han Shuo was currently studying the details of each of the high-ranked undead creatures. The old fey zombie's claws and teeth were razor sharp, with nimble movements. Their body structure was similar to those of silver apes, though they were obviously smaller. However, the old fey zombie had the silver apes' sharp claws and teeth, and were just as fast.

The mummy lords were as strong as the stoutest rock. Laying in a coffin all day, their speed was poor, but they were strong. In addition, they were corrosive, capable of mixing a death aura with streamers in their bodies. As such, they were equally hard to fight against.

Bone demons were comprised entirely of large bones that were held together. Out of the three undead creatures, bone demons were the most unique of them all. Since their entire body were formed from bone, if the bones that formed them were strong and filled with death energy, then the power of the bone demon would be even more terrifying. In addition, they had excellent defensive properties against both physical and magical attacks.

If needed, the bone demon could also fire out the bones on its body. The force of these bone projectiles was terrifyingly high; a single projectile was enough to deal a fatal blow. After firing the projectiles, the bone demon could reattach the projectiles to its body. However, if the bones that made up the bone demon's body didn't contain a large amount of death energy, then the bone demon would be both slow and weak, and would be severely injured by both physical and magical attacks. Bone demons could be big and strong, or they could be small and weak. As such, bone demons were the most variable amongst the three magical creatures.

However, Han Shuo knew that the bone demon modified with wings by the little skeleton would certainly be strong. It'd been rebuilt by the little skeleton with bones from the high ranking creature in the forbidden land, and contained a portion of the high-ranking magical creature's energy. Forged from these bones, the bone demon would absorb death energy at a faster pace in the other dimension. The creature could fly, which meant that it possessed sufficient intelligence to control gravity. Otherwise, that bit of rotting flesh on its bones wouldn't have allowed it to fly with such agility.

Han Shuo had grasped the characteristics of the three creatures, but the power of their souls were different. He was currently focused on the old fey zombies. He knew that he needed to find the right method of deploying his mental strength to ensure a response from an old fey zombie, in order to successfully use the contract to summon the creature.

Just as Han Shuo was studying the thick tome with furrowed brows, he suddenly heard a devastating scream that tore its way out of the room. The magical boundary suppressed it so that the guards couldn't hear, but Han Shuo caught every hint of it. He knew that this was the final agonizing wail that Kekaru had uttered before he died.

This was indeed the case, as Helen walked out a short while after with her hands covered in blood. She ran towards Han Shuo, sobs wracking her body as she held him tightly before he could prepare himself.

The sharp stench of blood and Helen's own fragrance wafted into his nostrils. He wasn't opposed to the smell, but didn't want the guards outside to detect it. He lifted up his left hand slightly and shut the open door. A vortex churned in his hand as it carefully sucked away the scent of blood. After a round of weeping, Helen finally calmed down, and the vortex had coalesced the stench of blood into a slowly rolling bloody pearl. It was still vibrating slightly as it sucked in all the scent of blood from Helen, not letting the slightest bit drift outside.

"I'm all better now. I'm sorry for getting you dirty!" Helen slowly pushed Han Shuo away and saw that she'd dirtied him all over with fresh blood. She apologized, as translucent tears still hung from her eyelashes.

"Don't worry about it. Why isn't Firewind by your side? She should be with you at this time!" Han Shuo had only just discovered that the usual omnipresent Firewind wasn't there, and asked in bafflement.

"Sister Firewind doesn't like it when there are too many humans around her. Unless there's something special, she won't appear when too many people are around. She's made her camp in the forests of the valley. I usually just call telepathically if I need her. Since you're with me, there's no danger to my being, so I didn't summon her." Helen explained.

"I see!" Han Shuo responded, then said, "I also have a super rank magical pet, but he's a dark dragon. That guy seems to love hanging out in crowds all day. In any case, the more the merrier! It seems that not all super rank magical creatures are the same."

"You even have a dark dragon!" Helen was astonished.

"Mm hmm, he's evolving into his second stage at the moment, so I put him somewhere safe." Han Shuo replied.

Helen looked at him, stunned and was about to express how amazing he was. She immediately thought of all the magical parts to him and felt that she didn't need to make a big deal of this bit. She suddenly saw that his chest was covered with blood, but was quickly distracted by the rotating, bloody pearl in his left hand. "What's this?"

"I don't want the scent of blood to spread beyond this room. I've coalesced them into a drop of blood." Han Shuo explained.

"You're an amazing person!" Helen still couldn't help but sigh with amazement, then pulled him by the hand to the bathroom. Her face reddened for some reason as she said lowly, "Why don't you wash the blood off yourself first? You're surely uncomfortable."

Han Shuo's heart lurched when Helen spoke thus, and when her smooth, boneless small hand tugged on his wrist, Han Shuo could feel the sensuous beauty of her hand. Light started gleaming in his eyes as he looked at Helen with some more anticipation.

Kekaru's mansion for guests was exceedingly opulent. Helen's rooms alone were filled with more than ten room of various sizes. The powder room, bathroom, living room, bedroom, storage room, and laundry room were all present and decked out lavishly. Han Shuo's Brettel City castle was like a country farm when compared to this.

There was a wide, oval shaped bathing pool in the center of the bathroom. There was a small magic formation beneath it, with one Firespark Stone providing the heat. The water within the pool was maintained at a comfortable temperature, and Helen's face became redder and redder within the haziness of the water mist. She actually tenderly helped Han Shuo out of his clothes.

When Han Shuo's clothes had been taken off, his 190 centimeter tall body was the epitome of a perfect male body as it was fully revealed in front of Helen. Every inch of his skin and muscles were filled with explosive power, and he seemed to be a poised, vicious hunting beast even when standing at ease. His naked body gave others an overwhelmingly dominating ferocity.

Han Shuo's buff body encompassed a wild power and was reflected from Helen's eyes. When she took off the clothes on his lower body, she raised her head to look worshipfully at the towering man. She seemed to sink into a bottomless inescapable abyss.

"Is this demon-god like person to be my man in the future?" Helen murmured deeply in her heart, looking at Han Shuo with mesmerized eyes as she speechlessly stared at the spectacle before her.

Chapter 363: Twelve Ubiquitous Shadows

As the completely naked Han Shuo looked down at Helen, who was looking back in a daze, Han Shuo revealed a grin that was as brilliant and bright as the sunshine. As he walked towards the middle of the pool, water began rippling outwards. The water wrapped itself around him as he started to clean his bloodstained body.

Only after hearing the splashing water sounds did Helen Tina wake up from her enraptured state and start scolding her weak will. After looking at Han Shuo's broad and healthy back, she shook her head, seemingly trying to scatter the detailed figure lingering in her mind. She smiled sweetly and said tenderly, "Alright, you should wash up first, I'll wait outside."

"Hehe, and here I was thinking that you would bathe with me. Well, if you actually come down, I promise I won't do a thing, alright?" Han Shuo turned his head and laughed brightly before suddenly teasing her with an invitation.

Helen grew flaming red, like she was intoxicated. She seriously considered what was just said before smiling tenderly, "No, I'm afraid I won't be able to control myself and directly jump into your arms. Hehe. Okay. Properly clean yourself first. I'll come back after you have properly cleaned yourself."

Han Shuo was momentarily startled. But because the sentence confirmed Han Shuo's charisma, he laughed out loud and happily said, "Alright, I'll wait for the day you truly set aside your modesty then!"

Helen threw her head back in a lovable laugh. For several months now, her heart had been covered in a depressing haze, but now it seems like she has finally pushed away the black clouds and allowed the rainbow within to spring forth. With an exceptionally happier mindset, she left behind a tinkling laugh, ringing through the air like a silver bell. After Helen left, Han Shuo stayed in the public bath, leisurely cleaning all the bloodstains off him. Afterwards, Helen switched with Han Shuo and began cleaning herself as well.

Han Shuo sat crossed legged within the guest room, drinking a cup of good wine and reading his thick book of necromancy while waiting for Helen to change into a loose, comfortable bathrobe. Seeing Helen's amazingly beautiful appearance, as lovely as a lotus flower rising from the water, Han Shuo first smilingly gasped in praise. Then he waited for the corner of Helen's mouth to curve into a smile before finally sighing lightly, "Your Helon Duchy is currently rife with internal troubles, and is mostly likely the weakest power among the seven grand duchies. While you were originally allied with Benedict Sackville, it is most likely that he's the mastermind behind Kekaru's betrayal and has probably been interfering with your national affairs. But our first priority is the internal strife. The sooner we settle that, the less likely that we'll see any more negative developments."

Seeing Han Shuo bringing up this topic, Helen creased her eyebrows and lightly sighed before saying, "Even if this bout of internal strife never occurred, my Helon Duchy would still be the weakest among the seven duchies. We have limited resources within our national borders; our ores and rations are naturally lacking in comparison to the other dukedoms."

Over the past years, I have continuously traded our warhorses for rations from Narsen Duchy. I've also engaged in trade with the other duchies and the distant Brut Merchant Alliance for war materials. My nation was never destined to become prosperous from the start. Now, with the unceasing internal strifes as well, my Helon Duchy is really facing disaster after disaster. So when you blackmailed me out of six hundred gold coins, my grand and magnificent Helon Duchy was no more."

As if suddenly remembering Han Shuo's blackmailing, she hatefully eyed Han Shuo and heavily snorted with irritation after finishing her words.

Only after Han Shuo awkwardly forced a couple of laughs, did he open his mouth to say, "Honestly, if you hadn't become hostile with the Lancelot Empire and decided to use Brettel City as a hunting ground, the merchants of the Lancelot Empire would've completely solved your problems. Lancelot Empire has no means of getting warhorses, thus, if your dukedom sold your valiant warhorses to them, you will definitely receive significant benefits in return.”

Han Shuo continued “Unfortunately, even those greedy merchants do not dare to rashly come here after the stories of massacres and raids on Brettel City. To those merchants, all of the seven grand dukes are as dangerous as savage beasts and fierce floods. Thus, they naturally won’t open trade with you. Consequently, you will also be unable to use the natural resources within your borders and gain the goods you need.”

“Humph. In reality, your Lancelot Empire was asking for it. At the time, if it wasn’t because your Lancelot Empire wanted to conquer us seven grand duchies and enter our borders, killing and looting everything, would we have suddenly stopped our bickering? Would we have recklessly formed an alliance to defeat your Lancelot Empire?” As if suddenly remembering the time when the Lancelot Empire’s army troops arrived like savage beasts, Helen’s voice had an undercurrent of anger even as she continued to have a charming expression on her face.

“The relationships between nations will always be either that of the conquered or the conquerors. Every nation’s king will always use whatever methods they have at their disposal to expand their territories. Lancelot Empire is like this. Kasi Empire is like this. Even the seven grand dukes are like this. Otherwise, what would be the point to the unceasing strife between them?” Han Shuo conveyed this eternally inarguable fact to Helen before laughing wryly, “The past is unrelated to us. But with our current relationship, we can privately smuggle and participate in some shady business. Do you have any completely trustworthy subordinates at hand?”

“Naturally. My family’s trusted aides can be completely trusted. No matter what kind of decisions I make, they will always support me.” Helen proudly said.

Han Shuo nodded his head and said, “Great. Let’s do it like that. It so happens that I can also use Lancelot Empire’s war materials and exchange them for your Helon Duchy’s warhorses. Hmm, rations can also be included. This exchange will be beneficial for both of our sides.”

After listening to Han Shuo's words, Helen smiled sweetly and agreed, "Our Helon Duchy's warhorses are widely renowned. How many horses and how much gold are you planning to pay?"

"This sort of business should be discussed by our subordinates. We only need to focus and make decisions on the big picture." Han Shuo shot a glance and lightly smiled at Hele before saying, "Don't think about trying to tempt me with things like seduction. I will personally organize suitable talents within Brettel City that will discuss this with your subordinates. Thus, we won't need to discuss it precisely and accidentally hurt our feelings!"

Hearing Han Shuo's words, Helen spat on the floor saying with a red face, "Who has feelings for you! You treacherous and stingy man, I can't even get a small advantage off you!"

"Alright. Alright. I am going on a trip tonight. You should be extra careful. Right now, Kekaru's family are all dead, and it's best if you take precautions as soon as possible. Starting tomorrow, you'll become extremely busy, so now's not a good time at all to talk about our love and passion for each other." Han Shuo said to Helen.

"You. You actually killed Kekaru's entire clan!" Helen was suddenly frightened and was unable to react for a moment, staring appalled at Han Shuo.

"Mm. Don't worry, any kinsman with the qualifications to succeed his dukedom is dead. Even several of his loyal subordinate will not be seeing dawn. Tomorrow, you'll see true chaos erupt in Seagate City. You should probably seize an opportunity to get rid of Kekaru's corpse. Additionally, create a mess to show that you suffered an assassination attempt. Even better, you should also capture a few people and make them seem like they're from Narsen Duchy." Han Shuo said to Helen with a smile.

"Well done, well done!" Helen trembled in joy before smiling sweetly. Her eyes glittered with a sinister light as she said, "Rest assured, I am an expert at such things. At this time tomorrow, Seagate City should be within my grasp. I have waited for such a day for far too long."

“Hehe. I like it when you emit such confidence. Alright, I will leave for now. You should summon Firewind and guarantee your safety first.” Han Shuo finally left after repeatedly warning her.

Back at the Lancelot Empire’s Dark Mantle organization, agents could be seen everywhere. After Han Shuo had arrived in Brettel City, the Dark Mantle’s stronghold had gradually strengthened as Candide personally prepared members to infiltrate Brettel City who Dick later arranged to go to the seven grand duchies.

After becoming a two star Dark Sun in the Dark Mantle, Han Shuo used his privileges and expanded the number of secret agents. He commanded Jack to set aside a hundred thousand gold coins as operational funds for the agents who would infiltrate into the seven grand dukedoms. With enough funds, they could set up their own stronghold within the dukedoms and gradually scale in power and influence.

As Brettel City’s city lord and Dark Mantle’s two star Dark Sun Envoy, Han Shuo only needed to arrive at any one of the major cities amongst the seven grand duchies to find the Dark Mantle agents. After meeting these agents, Han Shuo would receive all the latest information concerning those cities and use them to build a direct communication link to Brettel City.

The night before Han Shuo assassinated Kekaru, he’d left a message within Seagate City. After Helen left, Han Shuo headed straight towards that area. Right as Han Shuo entered the streets, he suddenly noticed that the entire Seagate City had erupted like an overturned nest of ants. Squads of imperial bodyguards wearing incomplete armor and fearful faces started going house to house in a manhunt.

Suddenly, Seagate City was enveloped with the sounds of iron hoofbeats of warhorses and the panicked screams of civilians. As Han Shuo looked at this kind of situation develop, he immediately realized that the massacre at Kekaru’s castle had already discovered by the people. Otherwise, there would not be such a chaotic situation at Seagate City. The city gates were locked down and civilians could not leave the city without permission. A couple of Seagate City’s knight captains had terrified expressions as they walked out of Kekaru's castle shouting out to lock the city gates. Afterwards, they directly headed towards Helen's manor.

These individuals were just some small and insignificant outer members of Kekaru's group. Perhaps, they didn't even know that Kekaru had thoughts of betrayal. Now, suddenly seeing Kekaru's castle becoming an enormous murder case, they first believed that the enemy duchies were invading with their armies. Thus, they arranged soldiers to defend the city gate while rushing towards the true grand duke of Helon Duchy.

Before he'd even entered Seagate City, Han Shuo had already realized that there were already a couple of Helen's chess pieces amongst these people. Currently, Kekaru's power structure had been swept clean by Han Shuo. Thus, the individuals without the qualifications to become the high-ranking official of Seagate City's army suddenly became the ones with the most power. They were naturally able to hold temporary office as the commander-in-chief.

As Seagate City descended into chaos, Han Shuo quietly arrived at the messiest street furthest from the chaos. Next to a courtyard was an elderly man wearing a panicked expression looking in all directions, waiting. The major news of the huge changes at Seagate City had not arrived here, but the city guards were still advancing in all directions. Perhaps the elderly man wore a panicked expression because he had already received the news.

After Han Shuo suddenly stopped, the elderly man was obviously frightened for a moment as he hurriedly retreated backwards. After noticing the tablet that Han Shuo revealed in his hands, he loosened his breath and saluted respectfully, "Honorable Sir!"

"Let's go. Bring me somewhere we can chat!" Han Shuo said. The elder did not hesitate to bring Han Shuo along the very messy street. Only after walking past six blocks did they stop inside a small farm. The farm was raising a few thin and weak warhorses while the horse-shack was filled with stinking weed.

After arriving here, the elderly man entered a small room made of thatch. After entering the room, the elderly man threw a couple of glances outside the shack through a small hole before finally opening the secret pathway under the bed. He then stepped aside, letting Han Shuo enter first.

After passing through a dark tunnel, they finally arrived at a underground private hideout with three rooms. There were four individuals inside wearing four different expressions. They were dressed in either business type clothing or farmer type clothing. They were all extremely shocked at the sight of Han Shuo. Only after Han Shuo showed the tablet in his hands did they slowly calm down. They hastily bowed before saying, "Honorable Sir Envoy!"

The individuals within the Dark Mantle only obeyed the high ranked individuals within the Dark Mantle. Thus, Han Shuo did not use his identity as the Brettel City's lord, but instead only used his identity as the Second Dark Sun envoy to make them docile and obedient.

"Mm, we're all on the same side, so don't bother with formality!" Han Shuo said indifferently before bluntly sitting down on the central seat. At this moment, the elderly man that let Han Shuo enter first entered as well.

"Informing Sir, Seagate City has broke out with an extremely frightening murder case. Seagate City's Honorable Marquis Kekaru's entire family as well as all of his clan members have been massacred. We have just received this information. This event will completely alter the power struggle within Seagate City." The elderly man paid his respects and hastily reported the groundbreaking news to Han Shuo.

The search had only just begun in the core regions of Seagate City. Being able to receive accurate information in this remote and dirty region was a feat in and of itself, and left Han Shuo extremely satisfied. Nodding his head, Han Shuo said, "I already know about such things. You are doing well."

"Honorable Sir, the Helon Duchy's grand duke is currently residing within Seagate City. This vicious woman will definitely seize this chance to take control of the city. Now with Kekaru's entire family wiped clean, we still don't know whether this was done by this woman or not. However, according to our intelligence, this woman should not have such power at her disposal. Thus, we believe it was not done by her....." The elderly man strenuously creased his eyebrows and analyzed, seemingly wanting to come to another clue.

Han Shuo waved his hands, stopping the elderly man from continuing. He smiled. "That's enough. Let's not talk about this for now. I will write a letter and you just need to dispatch someone to give it to Dick. We don't need to discuss anything else."

Hearing Han Shuo's words, the elderly man immediately stopped his speculations and respectfully nodded, "As you command, honorable sir!"

Taking out a piece of paper and a pen, Han Shuo wrote a flowery letter in a very meandering way before sealing it up and handing it over to the elderly man. He smilingly asked, "What is your name?"

"In response to the honored envoy. I am Delante, a Third Dark Star and the person currently in charge of Seagate City. In the past, I was doing missions in the southern part of the empire. However, I migrated to the seven grand duchies under Candide's command." Delante replied very respectfully.

Nodding his head, Han Shuo smiled, "Place this letter in Dick's hand as quickly as possible."

"I understand, Sir!" Delante answered.

Inside the Dark Mantle, there was always be a secret magic array that connected directly to others located in other cities. However, only the Dark Mantle could grasp such technology and generally only with a grand space magus could they set up such a technological marvel. However, there would naturally be no need to use a huge amount of financial resources just to create a magical array to communicate with Brettel City from the seven grand duchies. Thus, they could only use this kind of old-fashioned way of communicating.

After Delante carefully put away the letter, Han Shuo once again looked to him for more news about Seagate City. Only after Delante had gone on at length did Han Shuo finally say, "Alright. All of you must properly conduct your business here at Seagate City. The Empire will not forget your former contributions. All the information you gather, all the missions you do, they will all be recorded by the Dark Mantle." After all the other Dark Mantle members heard Han Shuo's statement, they bowed, showing their compliance.

"Right now, Seagate City is dangerous beyond any semblance of doubt. Take extra care and do not be exposed by any means." After repeatedly warning them, Han Shuo left the secret stronghold and disappeared into the darkness of the night.

Han Shuo stopped in the deepest parts of the jungle outside of Seagate City. Using the earth elite zombie, he created a secret cave within the earth and set up the transportation matrix that connected to the Cemetery of Death to directly return there.

Calculating the time, Han Shuo knew that the twelve mystical demons should be emerging from the refining process. He'd gone to Helon Duchy alone this time. As long as he had the twelve mystical demons, Han Shuo would basically have twelve shadows that would be of immense help.

Compared to original demons and yin demons, not only did the mystical demons have more wonderful uses, but they could also range ten times as far from Han Shuo. As long as the twelve mystical demons came out, they could scatter and hide within any nook and corner of Seagate City. Even if Han Shuo did not take one step out of his room he could still monitor the entire situation of Seagate City through the twelve mystical demons.

Chapter 364: Secret art of possession

Within the Cemetery of Death, dark dragon Gilbert was still in the midst of evolving. Further in, the mystical demon cave had long since stopped operating. Inside the grimace shaped mystical demon cave were twelve blood red agate-like blood pearls. The blood pearls rolled around the mystical demon cave like droplets, following a special path.

Han Shuo arrived in front of the mystical demon cave and waved. A lump of blood light shot out, piercing toward the twelve drops of blood red agate-like blood pearls.

Crick crack...

The crisp sounds of twelve eggs cracking floated through the air. The twelve blood pearls fragmented, each blood pearl emitting a clump of blood mist. The blood mist gradually agglomerated into something bigger, forming ferocious ghostly figures. The twelve mystical demons differed in shape, but were exactly the same. When the twelve mystical demons were all floated in front of Han Shuo, they each swallowed their respective fragmented blood pearl into their abdomens before flinging their heads back and hissing toward the sky.

Han Shuo released the remaining yin demon from his body. One of the mystical demons pounced forward, devouring the released yin demon, chewing it thoroughly before swallowing it.

With a thought, the twelve mystical demons fluttered like ghosts towards Han Shuo, transforming into twelve droplets of blood, entrenching themselves around Han Shuo's demon infant, absorbing the energy the demon infant exuded.

The mystical demons were of a higher level than the yin demons. With the existence of the mystical demons, the yin demon was no longer of use. It would be caught and eaten by the mystical demons even if it hid within the body. Han Shuo also knew that a low level demon leader like the yin demon had no way of surviving within his body. Hence, it was better to just let it be eaten by the mystical demons, lest it continue absorbing the energy within his body.

At the separate demon realm, the energy that Han Shuo's demon infant was able to release was incredibly rich. The mystical demons, interlinked with Han Shuo's blood, only needed to absorb a small portion of energy within his body to be infinitely useful to Han Shuo. In comparison to the lower levelled origin demons and yin demons, the mystical demons were able to separate from Han Shuo for longer distances. If a mystical demon could possess another person's brain, it could separate itself from Han Shuo with no obstacles.

Once a mystical demon possessed a person's brain, it would feed on the person's brain everyday, not requiring replenishment by Han Shuo's internal energy. At the beginning, by feeding on the person's brain, mystical demons could gradually alter a person's thoughts, affecting his or her judgement.

As time passed, and the person's brain had been fully consumed by the mystical demon, the mystical demon would become their substitute, becoming a mystical demon in that person's body, free for Han Shuo to use. This was equal to the most brilliant arts of puppetry. The final result was a puppet body for the mystical demon to use, only lacking the original person's soul.

Once a mystical demon started its possession, as the mystical demon's owner, Han Shuo could already control the person's thoughts and easily obtain the target's secrets. Even if the person hadn't died yet, Han Shuo could still use the mystical demon to change their decisions, making them inadvertently follow Han Shuo's directions.

With these twelve mystical demons, as long as Han Shuo could let them latch onto the minds of the seven grand dukes, Han Shuo could completely rely on six mystical demons to control six dukes. He would be able to influence their judgement and decision making from the start. At the end, when the mystical demons had consumed their brains, Han Shuo would be able to thoroughly control them.

On the other hand, even outside of possession, the mystical demons had a variety of uses. The omnidirectional, traceless scouting was the demon skulls' innate ability. The mystical demons, similar to the yin demons, could also easily take Han Shuo's appearance and even speak, essentially becoming another Han Shuo.

The strength of the mystical demon was of course incomparable to Han Shuo himself. However in critical situations, it could become Han Shuo's substitute. This was equivalent to giving Han Shuo twelve extra lives. Although the mystical demon was weaker than Han Shuo, it still had an advantage over ordinary experts, being able to toggle between corporeal and formless figures. In a battle, they could attack in a swarm, fast enough to only leave behind a trail of bloody light. They were very hard for ordinary people to deal with.

With the twelve mystical demons nestled in his body, Han Shuo now felt more confident. Seeing that the dark dragon Gilbert had not woken up, Han Shuo took out the skeleton staff to open the enchantment surrounding the Cemetery of Death and headed toward the Valley of Sunshine.

Within the Valley of Sunshine, the water zombie Han Shuo left in the place of extreme water had sent a message. The water elite zombie was ready to emerge.

Flying the distance from the Dark Forest to the Valley of Sunshine, Han Shuo did not openly enter through the front gate as he did not know the current situation in the Valley of Sunshine. He instead descended from the sky into a secluded corner, and then directly snuck into the place where he was refining the elite water zombie.

This storefront was Han Shuo's personal property. The Soul Destroyer mercenary band did not station anyone here, but sent people to occasionally clean the place. When Han Shuo entered the shop, he realized the place was clean, with no spiderwebs anywhere inside the building.

This haunted and cursed store was quite famous within the Valley of Sunshine. After many had mysteriously died within its premises, ordinary people would take a roundabout way whenever they reached this area. Nobody dared to pass by this place. At first, blood water demons had made their home within the store, but had been quickly been destroyed by Han Shuo. However, he had then laid the Asura Illusion Formation, which was equally dangerous.

Han Shuo easily entered the underground place of extreme water. Han Shuo already had the experience of dealing with the earth, wood and fire elite zombies. Hence, he didn't waste much time extracting it from the place of extreme water. Compared to the other three elite zombies, the water zombie appeared extremely normal. Apart from its body having an additional amber colored armor, it did not have any other noticeable features.

Han Shuo had some ideas with regard to the water elite zombies' abilities and wasn't in a hurry to make it display its skills to him. After he had set a 'Dark Seal' on the water zombie, Han Shuo summoned the little skeleton and handed the water zombie off to him. Shortly after, he sent both of them back to the other dimension.

With the water zombie dealt with, Han Shuo didn't continue staying in the Valley of Sunshine, lest he been seen and give the Cairo mercenary band a bad impression. The Valley of Sunshine was currently still under their control. Han Shuo's actions of stealthily entering was already scoffing at those in power.

Han Shuo wasn't clear about the current relationship between the Soul Destroyer mercenary band and the Cairo mercenary band. However, there was no need to unnecessarily be in conflict with the Cairo mercenary band. Hence, once the matter of the water zombie was settled, Han Shuo silently left the Valley of Sunshine and headed toward the hidden location of the Soul Destroyer mercenary band.

Every time he came over, Han Shuo always discovered that the Soul Destroyer mercenary band had a distinct change. This time, it was even more so. Unknowingly, the Soul Destroyer mercenary band had already become a large thousand-strong mercenary band. In recent times, recruitment must have expanded like wildfire. With Han Shuo's financial support and Trunks' own abilities, it's no wonder the Soul Destroyer mercenary band had the strength to contest for the Valley of Sunshine.

This time around, Trunks wasn't in the secret grounds. Han Shuo found out from Grant that Trunks had gone to secretly meet with the female bandit Janet and should be back soon. Ever since Trunks found his long lost younger sister Annie with the female bandit Janet, he frequently found excuses to look for Janet. On one hand, he could see Annie, and on the other, he could negotiate with Janet on when they would help Annie take revenge.

The female bandit Janet was also a bold, straightforward yet odd woman and was quite agreeable with Trunks. As time passed, the two gradually became more familiar. One was from a mercenary band in the Valley of Sunshine, the other from a large bandit group outside the Valley of Sunshine. The two leaders actually unwittingly established a good friendship.

Han Shuo was also surprised when Grant said this. No one expected that Trunks was actually able to get along well with that tomboy. This Janet was like a man. Her words were bare of womanly gentleness, and she even used foul language from time to time. Add that to her preference for women, she could be described as an exception amongst women. Who would have known that Trunks could still be able to establish a friendship with her. It looked like Annie played an important part in the friendship between Trunks and Janet.

Han Shuo waited for half a day. Midway, Odysseus's group returned and had a few drinks with Han Shuo whom they hadn't seen for a few months. Everyone was in high spirits.

Trunks definitely did not treat Odysseus' group shabbily after they joined. As the members in Odysseus' group were quite strong, they gradually gained prestige in the Soul Destroyer mercenary band. They had formed a tacit understanding and had mutual trust. Hence, they generally could complete the harder missions, and were very popular in the Soul Destroyer mercenary band.

While Han Shuo, Odysseus and the rest were drinking and chatting, Trunks returned and laughingly joined in the army of people having food and drinks. These battle-hardened mercenaries were all very forthright and were generally men who had large bowls of alcohol and meat. They believed in true masters and had the attitude of enjoying life.

The newer additions to the Soul Destroyer mercenary band initially didn't know Han Shuo's identity. But when a few veteran mercenaries divulged Han Shuo's identity, these new additions all revealed worshipping gazes. Some of the young mercenaries couldn't remain calm, and even excitedly proposed a toast to Han Shuo.

Although Han Shuo didn't visit the Valley of Sunshine often, he had left behind deeds worth of stories every time he came. He'd defeated both the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band's current leader, Florida and Adam Menlo, the head of the House of Menlo. Particularly during the battle in the valley, Han Shuo had appeared all of a sudden and allied with Cairo mercenary band's leader Laureton, assisting him in leading the Cairo mercenary band's experts out of the valley. His hand in illing the Church of Light's grand magus, Ferguson, was even more widespread within the Valley of Sunshine.

Even when Han Shuo wasn't physically in the Valley of Sunshine, stories about Han Shuo continued to spread in the Valley of Sunshine. Han Shuo's reputation played a large part in attracting young mercenaries to the Soul Destroyer mercenary band. Trunks had really benefited from Han Shuo in attracting so many young mercenary experts that had potential and yet were willing to do their utmost to enter the mercenary band.

"What's the current situation?" After the loud drinking in the square, Trunks and Han Shuo went alone to a secret room within the mountain.

Trunks laughed wryly before saying, "The Soul Destroyers have a good momentum going for now, but that's also why the other four large mercenary bands have started to raise their guard. Even the previously amicable Cairo mercenary band has become less friendly towards us. It's been a delicate balancing act, and there's always a fear of having the four mercenary groups banding together to deal with our Soul Destroyer mercenary band. In any case, there's a strong undercurrent at play in the Valley of Sunshine. Like a powder keg, all this situation is missing is a single spark.

Han Shuo nodded, replying, "This was inevitable from the start; everyone wants a piece of the rich pickings known as the Valley of Sunshine. With its ideally placed location in the middle of three countries, controlling the Valley of Sunshine would reap large quantities of gold coins and some hidden benefits. For mercenary bands that seek to expand rapidly, controlling the Valley of Sunshine is the fastest channel for growth."

"I agree. In any case, the current situation is slightly chaotic. Our Soul Destroyer mercenary band has temporarily refrained from any activities that end up with us seizing power. It was precisely because I have shown no interest in maintaining order in the Valley of Sunshine that the other mercenary bands have not acted against us for this long. Instead, I've secretly allied with Janet to brainstorm ways to obtain revenge for Annie."

"However, our enemies include Florida, Butcher Gustav and the much harder to deal with Kasi Empire's Bradley. Bradley Pillon? Pillon is the biological brother of Kasi Empire's emperor. I'm afraid that I don't have any means to deal with him for the time being. Currently, Janet and I are in discussion about a plan to first kill Butcher Gustav."

"Butcher Gustav and Florida have engaged in shady business dealings for a long time. Striking down Gustav will also deal a blow to Florida's strength. In this way, I will slowly bleed Florida to death. After I've obtained sufficient strength, I would deal with Kasi Empire's Bradley Pillon. I want to leave him for last." Trunks spoke, his words dripping with hatred.

"How about I help you to first get rid of Gustav and Florida first, since I'm already here in the Valley of Sunshine. Although the two of them have decent strength, they aren't a threat to me. If I want to kill the two of them, they definitely wouldn't be able to escape." Han Shuo pondered for a moment before suggesting a course of action to Trunks.

Trunks resolutely shook his head as he replied, "I appreciate your good intentions. However, I want to personally visit my vengeance on these three, in as agonizing a fashion as I can. Annie is like a biological sister to me. For her to have suffered such a large grievance, I must let those bastards repay their debt in blood!”

Han Shuo sighed lightly when he saw Trunks’ persistence, nodding as he replied, “Since that’s the case, I’ll stay uninvolved then. Oh, Gilbert is currently at my place. He is at a crucial stage of his second evolution, so it’s unlikely he’ll be able to help you. Be more careful while you are alone.”

“Understood, be at ease and go settle your own matters. Leave the Valley of Sunshine to me. I will contact you when there is truly no other solution. Ha, I heard you even got rid of the Brut Merchant Alliance’s Redbud Knights. It seems you’re getting stronger and stronger!” Trunks sighed in admiration.

The distance between the Dark Forest and the Valley of Sunshine wasn’t very far. As mercenaries were all people who travelled extensively, news was always fast and abundant. Han Shuo wasn’t at all surprised that Trunks was aware of his exploits.

“Hehe, that was all Celt’s own bad luck. Mm, you know where Dark Mantle has people in this place. If there’s any especially important matters, you can contact me through them. Of course, you can also leave a message at the address I gave you. I believe that with you in the Valley of Sunshine, the entire Valley will belong to our Soul Destroyer mercenary band sooner or later. I’ll be off, then” Han Shuo laughed as he spoke.

Trunks replied expansively to Han Shuo’s statement, saying, “Be at ease, I’ve eaten one of your pills and am now a great swordmaster. In the whole Valley of Sunshine, who else is my match apart from that violent berserker Laureton? Furthermore, we are different from the berserkers. We have an unlimited set of possibilities to break through. I believe that with the passing of time, my strength would eventually surpass Laureton. He can only become thrice berserk. I’ve never heard of a berserker who could be four times berserk!”

Han Shuo didn’t say much when he saw Trunk’s confidence. With Trunk's reminder, Han Shuo had also remembered his promise with Ancient Lizard King Dagassi. He'd have to make a trip to visit the dwarf valley to collect the forged weapons and deliver them to the lizardmen in the underground world.

Using the Art of Demonic Ninth Heavens, Han Shuo headed for the dwarf valley. From the dwarf valley, he collected more than a thousand freshly forged sharp weapons. These weapons all contained a tiny portion of black iron ore, causing their sharpness to far exceed ordinary weapons.

The travel-worn Han Shuo didn't stay long in the dwarf valley, flying quickly to the entrance of the underground world. He then shuttled through the intricate and complicated tunnels of the underground world, directly heading for the area where the lizardmen lived.

Han Shuo was not aware of the specific instructions the Ancient Lizard King Dagassi had given the lizardmen leader when he'd previously introduced Han Shuo. However, thanks to Dagassi's instructions, the lizardmen leader was incomparable respectful toward Han Shuo. This made Han Shuo feel a sense of responsibility toward them, similar to how he treated the forest trolls.

Han Shuo's brain worked continuously as he headed to the lizardmen's territory, silently thinking. Apart from the forest trolls and the dwarf valley aboveground, he now had the completely docile lizardmen underground. If he added the nearby Soul Destroyer mercenary band in the Valley of Sunshine, this was also quite a large power.

If he could harmonize these powers together, it would form an exceptionally large force in the Dark Forest. Perhaps it might even be able to alter the situation in the Dark Forest?

Chapter 365: Mysterious matriarch

When Han Shuo reached the lizardmen's living area, the first thing he heard was actually the cacophony of fighting. Looking around, Han Shuo saw the whole place filled with dark elves, charging toward the lizardmen's caves within the large reddish-brown mountain.

The lizardmen hid within the caves of the reddish brown mountain, using their crude weapons to defend against the dark elves' attacks. These dark elves were all dressed in different colors, including violet, black, light green and several other colors. They were clearly an alliance of different clans.

There were almost ten thousand dark elves, but only a small portion were actually attacking the large mountain. Nearly seven thousand of them were still spectating outside, yet to participate in the attack.

There were a few handsome looking youths among the dark elves. Each of them had a particularly ancient scent coming off them, giving Han Shuo a headache. By virtue of that scent, Han Shuo could tell that their true age did not match with their youthful appearance.

There was also a tent of purple veils in the middle of the handsome youths. Han Shuo could sense a monstrous presence within the tent, evil yet somehow charming. When he tried to probe the tent with his consciousness, the person within instantly reacted, sending a wave of aura back along the route of Han Shuo's mental energy.

Han Shuo was shocked, concealing his own aura in a hurry. He gave up on the idea of directly barging through, deciding to use the earth elite zombie to open a secret passageway into the center. Han Shuo decided to meet up with the lizardmen's leader before planning his next move.

Based on the aura, Han Shuo sensed the vast strength of the person inside the purple veil tent. Although this person's strength was not as monstrous as Ancient Lizard King Dagassi, it was much stronger than the typical great swordmaster or grand magus. Han Shuo carefully pondered for a moment. This person's aura felt roughly as strong as Lawrence's master, sacred swordsman Karel Ascot. When he reached this conclusion, he was aghast.

Han Shuo had never thought that he would meet such a strong expert in the underground world. With Han Shuo's current strength in the separate demon realm, the Demonslayer Edge and the little skeleton, he could still manage a fight with such an expert. However, this expert was also accompanied by a few talented youths with particularly strong auras. Although they couldn't hold a candle to the expert in the purple tent, they would pose a major problem to Han Shuo.

Furthermore, there were still more than seven thousand dark elves surrounding them. Han Shuo wasn't presumptuous to think he could fight against this group of formidable dark elves by himself.

Using the earth elite zombie to create a passageway, Han Shuo travelled toward the center of the reddish-brown large mountain. Along the way, he constantly heard waves of clinks and clangs from battles. It seemed like just above him should be where the dark elves and lizardmen were fighting.

When he'd left the underground world the previous time, Han Shuo had discovered the location of the core zone of the lizardmen area, as well as the method to directly contact the lizardmen. After Han Shuo hurriedly made his way to the central area, he used the Demonslayer Edge to cut open the hard rocks, directly breaking through to a crucial gathering point in the mountain.

The crucial junction was a large ring-shaped cave. It was about as big as a basketball court, and its ceiling was covered with bright red sharp stones that looked like they might drop at any moment. There were stone plinths spread over the whole cave. These stone plinths had been ground down by the lizardmen until they were flat and suitable for sitting.

At present, a large group of lizardmen had gathered. It looked like they were discussing ways to deal with the dark elves. When Han Shuo appeared, the lizardmen head was pleasantly surprised. In the lizardmen's tongue, he lept to his feet and jabbered a few sentences, leading the bunch of lizardmen in a bow towards Han Shuo.

“True God’s envoy, you must be here to save us. We have been waiting so long for you.” The lizardmen’s head used the common tongue in as respectful a manner as he could.

Wrinkling his eyebrows, Han Shuo replied, “The True God must have already left this place. What’s the matter with all those dark elves outside, why would they dare to come here?”

“Lord envoy, not long after the True God left, all the dark elves in the underground world unexpectedly stopped their internal conflicts, having all been subdued by a dark elf named Adele. It is said that this dark elf could communicate with their beloved evil goddess, Rose. She possessed an evil strength, unifying all the underground worlds’ dark elves in one short month.”

The leader hastily explained more, “She has led the dark elves in constantly attacking us lizardmen the past few days. However, these bastards currently still do not dare confirm if our true god has left. Hence, they have unceasingly probed us, but don’t dare to truly force their way in.”

The dark elf named Adele had suddenly appeared after Dagassi left. She had managed to unify the scattered dark elves in a short month, forming the single most terrifying power in this layer of the underground world. When Han Shuo heard the lizardman leader’s explanation, he was a little confused. He did not know how Adele had suddenly appeared and even seemed to know a little bit about Ancient Lizard King Dagassi.

Without a doubt, the expert that had felt Han Shuo’s mental probing was the dark elf Adele. If not for fear of Ancient Lizard King Dagassi’s presence, based on the strong aura Han Shuo felt from her body and the strength of the ancient dark elves beside her, they would have long since broken through this place and enslaved all the lizardmen.

As for how this dark elf Adele appeared, this wasn’t something Han Shuo had the time to think about at this moment. Coming to the underground world this time around was precisely to fulfill Han Shuo’s promise to Dagassi to protect the lizardmen. Hence, once the lizardmen's leader had explained the situation to him, Han Shuo immediately took out all the weapons he had brought in the spatial ring this time round, saying, "I have brought these weapons for all of you. Don't worry, I'll help you in repelling the dark elves together."

"Many thanks, Lord Envoy!" The leader of the lizardmen gratefully kowtowed in thanks.

Nodding his head, Han Shuo didn't have much to say. Looking on as the lizardmen leader arranging manpower to rapidly distribute the weapons, he then released all twelve of the newly refined mystical zombies. Ten of the mystical zombies flooded the whole complex cave, while the other two flew out of the reddish brown colored mountain, hanging over the sky and spying on the dark elves' movements from a distance. At the dark elves' campsite, a handsome youth asked, "Matriarch, it's been five days. The lizardmen are completely unable to resist; should we start our main attack?"

"Let's wait a while more, I felt a weird aura just now. It actually tried to spy on me. When I wanted to search for the source, the aura vanished. This is quite strange." A lazy yet bone-chilling female voice wafted from the tent. When the few hundreds of "young" dark elves beside the tent heard this voice, they all went a little dry in the mouth. A wave of trepidation arose from their hearts.

"Matriarch, what kind of existence is that large lizard? Hasn't he already left? If not, he would have already come out and attacked us." A handsome dark elf gulped before respectfully speaking up.

"You ask me, but who should I ask? Same as you, I just escaped from that dreaded place. Do you think I'm omniscient? However, I already heard legends about him when I was alive. All of you are still a little young. I guess your ancestors hadn't mentioned it to any of you. In any case, you all just need to remember, he is a extremely strong lizard!" The female voice within the purple veil tent seemed to hold a hint of blame, but it still sounded comfortable and tantalizing to the ears.

“Matriarch, I really can’t figure it out; why did he not assist the lizardmen to clear the underground world when he broke out from under the gourd mountain? With such a strong figure around, the lizardmen could have eradicated us dark elves without much effort!”

“The few of us were even imprisoned by those undying black dragons in the layer below at that time. He shouldn’t have any difficulty in conquering this entire layer, so why would he delay till now?” Another handsome youth was puzzled as he spoke up too.

“Idiot, have you been imprisoned for too long?! Didn’t you listen to the children’s descriptions? I’m afraid even the dark dragon race from the layer below wouldn’t be able to deal with this giant lizard. Do you think we can obstruct him with just the few of us?” The voice from inside the tent came out laced with anger. Then, as if the anger was never present, a seductive laugh accompanied her next words, “As for why that large lizard hasn’t retaliated against us, it definitely isn’t because it’s afraid of us. With just the few of us, we are definitely not a match for a strong existence like him.”

“Then, who is he afraid of?” The dark elf that had previously asked the question followed up.

“All of you are idiots! It is because your faith in the goddess is not sincere enough, that even after living for so long, you still can’t feel her presence deep within your soul!” The goddess within the tent scolded. The antiquated elves standing around were all extremely submissive, every one of them agreeing profusely. However, after being reprimanded by Adele, these old farts faintly understood the meaning of her answer. It seemed like the powerful lizard’s hesitation should be due to their goddess, and not because of them.

“Alright, let’s wait a while more. Previously, the captured lizardmen said that their true god had already left and would not return to this place. That is why we are here. Otherwise, I definitely wouldn’t dare bring the few of you idiots here to throw away your lives. I suspect that large lizard has truly left. If not, it would have long since charged out to kill us.” Adele patiently explained to the few old fellows.

At this moment, a dark elf holding a bow suddenly rushed out from within a cave. He reached the front of the purple tent, looking surprised as he reported, "Matriarch, those lizardmen have suddenly gotten hold of some sharp weapons. These weapons looked like they were tailor made for the lizardmen. They hold the weapons with ease and can easily slash through our bodies. Furthermore, for an unknown reason, there is suddenly an influx of undead creatures within the caves. These undead creatures have blocked the passageways, helping the lizardmen resist our attack.

Adele's cry in surprise traveled from the tent, making the elves around her shudder in silent pleasure. After, there was a period of silence before Adele replied, "It should be that necromancer named Bryan, it can't be wrong then. Looks like he was the one who had just tried to spy on my existence. Sikong, make a trip. See if you can find that necromancer and bring him to me."

The dark elf who had continuously asked questions listened respectfully and nodded. Without any further ado, he leapt forward like a feather and entered the cave. Sikong took out a blue crystal ball the size of a human head and held it with both hands. As he travelled within the caves, the crystal ball gradually absorbed the black silk like thread that escaped from his palm. These threads slowly floated within the blue crystal ball, forming a line after another that depicted the passageways of the cave.

A plume of faint blue gentle light twirled out of the crystal ball like a fish, looking like it was sensing the complex passageways within the cave. A map for a large portion of the cave was gradually depicted within the blue crystal ball.

Han Shuo was still at the central lizardmen cave. Through the twelve illusory mystical demons, Han Shuo overheard the dark elf matriarch Adele rebuking the other dark elves and roughly understood that they had escaped from the prison of the dark dragon clan on the layer beneath him. As for how they escaped, Han Shuo wasn't too sure, but from listening to Adele's conversation, these few dark elves that had suddenly appeared should've lived for a very long time.

Once the dark elf Sikong entered the cave, a mystical demon had already detected him and clearly saw the activity within the crystal ball that he held. Han Shuo, who was in the midst of arranging the lizardmen's formation for resisting the dark elves, suddenly shouted to the lizardmen leader, "Help me look after these guys for a while, I'm making a trip!"

Finishing his sentence, Han Shuo flew out of the area. The mystical demons had been floating around in the complex passageways for quite a long time. Thus, Han Shuo had long since familiarized himself with the terrain, finding the dark elf that had entered the cave system in a very short period of time.

"Are you looking for me?" Han Shuo suddenly appeared from within a far-off cave, facing the dark elf Sikong who still held the crystal ball in his hand.

"Eh. I never would have thought you would appear on your own accord. Necromancer, when previously you had foiled our plans, I did not expect that you still dared to appear this time around!" Seeing Han Shuo voluntarily appear, Sikong gladly laughed, shining the blue crystal ball in his hand towards the sky.

Out of a sudden, all the absorbed lines within the crystal ball bursted out from the crystal ball. The blue lines started crisscrossing, quickly forming a giant net which rapidly enclosed the entire cave, with ten of lines entangled around Han Shuo.

"Haha, a mere necromancer actually dares to foil our noble dark elves' plans. You must be looking to die!" Sikong confidently proclaimed toward Han Shuo who was caught in the blue spiderweb. Completing the chant for a spell, the crystal ball that had released countless blue lines slowly floated and followed him in flying out of the cave.

Being trapped in the blue spiderweb, apart from feeling the binding force, Han Shuo also felt a weak force leaking out which continuously weakened his mental strength. Although this dark elf Sikong appeared handsome and young, he must have already lived for countless years.

The dark elves' lifespan was much longer than humans. As long as they weren't killed by others, it wasn't difficult for them to live for hundreds of years. Although a dark elf's strength wasn't completely measured based on their age, a majority of the older dark elves were much harder to deal with compared to younger dark elves.

The dark elves also had the advantage of practicing a few sinister spells. Dark elves that had lived for hundreds of years were often all dark mages that were exceedingly hard to deal with. Furthermore, as the dark elves worshipped the Evil Goddess Rose, they could also possess a special kind of strength, and hence were usually hard to fight against.

Looking at this confident old dark elf, Han Shuo wasn't worried in the slightest, even entangled in the blue spiderweb. After Sikong had said his piece and planned to drag Han Shuo out of the cave, Han Shuo grinned toward Sikong, revealing a weird smile. He then whistled, and a blood mist shot out of him. The Demonslayer Edge was like a soaring dragon with a blood red light trail, completely slashing apart the blue spiderweb that was entangling Han Shuo.

When the old dark elf Sikong saw Han Shuo's sudden outburst of violent aura that sliced through his blue spiderweb in an instant, he started panicking. When Han Shuo stared at him while chuckling weirdly, Sikong rapidly calculated, suddenly realising that he had no certainty of beating Han Shuo. The aura from Han Shuo's body made him tremble, and he ran away without saying another word.

Chapter 366: How do you want to play?

“Since you’ve already come all this way... Don’t even think about leaving!” Han Shuo’s face split into an evil grin as he executed the “Bloody Radiance of Ten Thousand Cuts” with his Demonslayer Edge, letting the sky be segmented by a bloody red light.

The Demonslayer Edge produced sharp, bloody lights one after the other. Together, they became a mass of bloody red light that swept towards the seemingly young dark elf, Sikong. As Sikong saw this whirling mass of bloody light releasing a deadly, terrifyingly baleful aura that seemed sharper than a honed blade, he began retreating even faster.

The “Bloody Radiance of Ten Thousand Cuts” closely and relentlessly pursued Sikong like a parasitic apparition. Along the way, it came to the not so spaciouly drilled underground passageway from which Sikong had entered. An enormous hail-like downfall of broken rocks fell as the “Bloody Radiance of Ten Thousand Cuts” tore through the tunnel, forcefully broadening the underground passageway by a fold.

As the couple of dark elves entered, they saw a mass of red blade-like lights closely pursuing Sikong. One of them yelled, “Protect the elder!”

A few truly young dark elves bravely stood in front of Sikong without thinking about their own safety. Torn and crushed by the bloody light, their remaining pieces of their minced bodies were scattered among the rocks below.

After experiencing the bloody light’s powers, Sikong was truly frightened out of his wits as he began to run at a breakneck pace. The crystal ball that had been grasped in his hands all along began glowing a misty blue, using a bit of the evil goddess’s power bestowed within. The light from the crystal ball began rapidly weaving a protective screen as thin as a cicada’s wing as it wove through the air like a snake.

The bloody light bombarded the top of the protective screen. The intricate linking of thousands of strands of light gave the faintly radiating blue a powerful defense and began rapidly shredding the multiple bloody red lights. As the protective screen that was as thin as a cicada's wing shattered with a loud bang, Sikong had long since seized the chance to tumble out of the cave, albeit frightened and his back damp from cold sweat long ago.

Sikong had obviously realized that although he had already lived for a couple hundreds of years, he really wasn't a match for the Han Shuo inside. As one's age increased, one's fear of death also increased, and Sikong was no exception to that. The moment he experienced Han Shuo's power, he immediately threw away the thought of fighting Han Shuo to the death. Instead, he began retreating even faster than before, directly fleeing until he was in front of a purple veil tent.

"Matriarch, forgive my incompetence, but there is a young necromancer inside with an incredibly powerful ability. Not only could I not capture him, but I was even forced to retreat back here!" Sikong's nerves were frayed as he trembled when reporting to Adele within the purple veil tent.

"Idiot, if you can't even take down a young necromancer, then all your years of life has been truly useless!" Adele, who had been smiling merrily, suddenly became angry after hearing what was just said.

Ten silk-like black grass strands that were as flexible as tentacles extended from within the purple veil tent, firmly binding up the fearful Sikong. The black strands seemed to be even more tenacious than metal, causing the trussed up Sikong to feel his limbs gradually lose blood. Sikong's breathing gradually became laborious as his body trembled and his veins began to pop from the pressure exerted by the silky strands.

The surrounding dark elf elders all began feeling apprehensive as they helplessly looked at Sikong, bound by the silk as his skin began to tear and blood began to cover him from head to toe. Even though Sikong was her favored boy toy, no one dared to plead for mercy. Women were the most vicious indeed. If she even felt the tiniest dissatisfaction, she would immediately began treating them cruelly, causing blood to lavishly decorate the ground.

Sikong felt a bone-piercing like pain. Yet, because he was bound too tightly, he couldn't even scream. Instead, he could only softly whimper. Nevertheless, he still did not dare to beg for forgiveness, seemingly extremely afraid of Adele.

Breaking the unbearable silence, Adele coldly snorted within the purple veil tent, only after seeing Sikong faltering for breath. Afterwards, the black light binding Sikong slithered back into the purple veil tent like a demon snake.

Due to his weak and paralyzed body, Sikong collapsed on top of his own pool of blood. Only, he continued to persevere as before, kowtowing and happily saying, "Thank you Matriarch, many thanks for your mercy, Matriarch!"

The purple veil tent was suddenly lifted by a light-purple colored arm. An arm that could send the hearts of men into a fluster, it brimmed with a bewitching luster, an alluring, full and boneless arm. After the tent-flap was lifted open, a beautiful woman appeared. She was like a bringer of catastrophes, capable of making all living things go crazy for her as she knitted her brows, walking out from inside.

The beautiful woman's entire body was covered with an exotic, light-purple skin. Yet, she had a head full of long emerald-like green hair and two sharp ears, indicating her race as an elf. She nearly possessed all of the characteristics of an absolutely beautiful fairy. With a soul-stirring and attractive charm, she only needed to stand in front of men, without moving or speaking at all, to fill men with desire. An unrestrained desire would fill their hearts and loins as men drank in her sight like the finest alcohol. All they would want would be to jump her, fiercely pressing her below them and conquering her.

This matriarch of the dark elves, Adele, was undoubtedly an extremely pretty, coquettish, and dangerous beauty. Just a glimpse of her smile was seduction of the highest quality, capable of causing people to become unconsciously obsessed, willingly falling into oblivion for eternity.

Lightly sighing with deep feeling, Adele walked next to Sikong, attired in a purple dress that hugged her curves. Deep emotions seemed to burst out of her chest as she said helplessly, “How could I bear to kill you? Over the endless years, there were only a couple of you that accompanied me, allowing me to feel a hint of joy while imprisoned within this dark underworld. But, although none of you were talented, handsome youths, you should still amount to more by now by now. After all, you’ve lived for such a long time, such an endless number of years, so how could you still not have attained even a wee bit of additional courage, becoming increasingly timid instead?”

Sikong only trembled slightly while his body lay immersed within a pool of blood. He seemed to be seriously listening to Adele’s lecture without a word.

Adele shot a glance at Sikong, lying next to her leg and curled within a pool of blood. She sighed once more, expressing her exasperation with their failures. She suddenly raised her head towards the huge brownish red mountain in front of her and yelled towards the lizardmen’s dwelling place, “Hey necromancer, let’s both come out and have a chat.”

This shout seemed to have formed through the convergence of a thousand sound waves. Unexpectedly, it directly passed through the intricate and sophisticated mountain holes, descending right into the mountain’s core. Even if Adele hadn’t deliberately used her mental strength to amplify her voice, Han Shuo would still have heard Adele’s yell through his two mystical demons constantly watching her.

After Adele finished speaking in the common language of the humans, she once again yelled in the language of the elves. The dark elves, originally doing their best to infiltrate the lizardmen’s cave, suddenly withdrew like a current of water. In an amazingly short period, the dark elves managed to reorganize themselves outside. When Han Shuo saw all the dark elves withdrawing through the mystical demons, he realized that it was definitely due to Adele’s command. Knitting his brows, he hesitated for a moment before calmly walking out of the cave. Only, he didn’t go too far from the cave.

After Han Shuo left the cave, several lizardmen that were currently tracking Han Shuo quickly reported his movements to the leader of the lizardmen. After the leader learned of this news, he told the lizardmen to follow him outside. When Han Shuo was standing not too far from Adele, the lizardmen leader arrived behind Han Shuo with his people.

When Han Shuo walked out from within the cave, he only caught a glimpse at the dark elf matriarch, Adele, before being immediately taken aback. However, Adele's beautiful face that could make all living things go crazy, only made Han Shuo astonished for a moment. Han Shuo's willpower had been tempered too often for this sort of trick to work. His expression remained natural as he spoke, "Well, I've come, so what do you want to chat with me about?"

"Hehe, that big lizard. It left already, right?" Adele smiled sweetly as the surrounding young dark elves obviously swallowed their saliva.

Unexpectedly Han Shuo nodded with a smile, not hiding the truth, "Correct, he has indeed already left this place. I can't say when he'll be back, but even if he doesn't come back anytime soon, hehe, I will still help these lizardmen people. If you have any intentions of enslaving the lizardmen people, then we can continue to play."

Adele had likely decided to cause a commotion today after constant probes up until now. They'd even discovered that Degassi had left. Thus, Adele was most likely feeling confident attacking today. However, since Han Shuo has entered the underground world, he would naturally try his utmost to help the lizardmen people deal with the dark elves' encroachment. He would also not need to rely on a vague lie to preserve the lizardmen's safety at all.

Adele started unceasingly laughing, causing Han Shuo's heart to undulate. She amusingly sized up Han Shuo, saying, "Continue to play? Now that the big lizard has left, are you capable of stopping me, all alone?"

"Who knows?" Han Shuo calmly said while the corner of his mouth evoked a pondering smile as he looked at Adele and said, "Do you want to test me?"

"It's only natural that I would want to test you. After all, you were able to force Sikong to withdraw. This clearly indicates that you're definitely out of the ordinary. Only, young man, how young are you? I believe, considering your human age, no matter how strong you, you still must have a limit. I also don't believe you can obstruct our march to conquer the underground world." Adele tactfully smiled, brimming with confidence.

Shrugging his shoulders, Han Shuo said, "Then we have nothing to chat about. How do you want to play? No matter what kind of method you want to use, I'm willing to accompany you. Hehe, if it's body-on-body combat, I would welcome it even more, haha!"

Even if the lizardmen leader's people as well as countless undead creatures were behind him, Han Shuo was not completely assured of victory facing this Adele. After all, just Adele's personal strength was enough to keep him busy, and the couple of pretty, handsome, and obedient dark elves who had lived for so long also had strength that couldn't be belittled. Additionally, they had even brought approximately ten thousand dark elf experts.

However, Han Shuo did not believe that Adele would fight him to the death to defeat the lizardmen people. Thus, he had no fear as he threatened Adele, even going as far as leering at her.

Chapter 367: Burying the hatchet in each other's flesh

“Body-on-body combat in bed.....” Adele suddenly smiled enchantingly, her delicate beautiful body trembling as she gazed at Han Shuo with limpid eyes. Her eyes were like a pool of spring water, as if wanting to draw Han Shuo deep into its depths with its beautiful scenery.

The dark elves were a race that were naturally lascivious in nature, just like the dark dragons. This was especially the case for female dark elves, where seven out of ten of them were harlots.

Adele, flirtatious and charming to no end, was evidently a well-known figure. The few dark elf elders by her side ought to have also taken their turn as her bed-warmer. She was unabashed whilst speaking of such matters in front of so many subordinates. Instead, she was actively engaged, seemingly willing to put aside the dignity of her position to immediately engage Han Shuo in carefree, uninhibited grinding.

“Heh heh, the madame’s outstanding beauty enchants everyone. If you are truly interested in this aspect, I will definitely do my utmost to accompany you.” Han Shuo also felt his heart itch when he saw Adele’s enchanting smile. Adele was obviously a ravenous, wanton woman, seemingly born seductive. On the other hand, Han Shuo had never been a sanctimonious knight, barely concealing the desire that existed in his heart.

Adele couldn’t help but give Han Shuo another once over after his response. The tall and imposing Han Shuo was like a javelin as he stood there, giving off an overbearing might. His handsome yet dispassionate looks, his imposing height and a body covered in violent and explosive muscles weren’t things the beautiful but thin dark elves by her side could compare to.

The more Adele looked at Han Shuo, the faster her heart beat. Her rosy small tongue subconsciously licked her brilliant red lips, her delicate peach colored face flushing red as if she were intoxicated, flirtingly enticing.

There were gulping sounds from the dark elves who watched Adele from the side, including a few female dark elves who had special urges. They really would have directly rushed to embrace Adele, if not for the misgivings that rose from her strength and prestige.

“Little fellow, you are truly an interesting human. Although the humans I’ve seen all contained naked lust in their hearts, all of them acted as decently as they could on the surface, but transformed into savage beasts once they got into bed. Hehe, you are different from them. Even in front of so many people, you actually don’t bother concealing your desire at all. This is truly unexpected.” Adele softly and slowly mused out loud as she smiled and gazed at Han Shuo.

Han Shuo bowed courteously in response to Adele’s praise before looking at her with a smile. Although he didn’t reply, an imposing manner that didn’t fear any threats naturally radiated outward.

“Hehe. If you have it in you to make me acknowledge your strength, I’ll certainly accompany you in a battle in bed.” Adele slowly walked toward Han Shuo as she finished her sentence, smiling seductively as she said, “It is now time for you to prove your strength.”

Han Shuo remained silent, before retrieving the skeleton staff from his space ring. He then said to Adele, “I hope I can satisfy you. Heh heh. Honestly speaking, I’m certainly very interested in you!”

Adele was just about to answer when she noticed the skeleton staff in Han Shuo’s hands. Her expression changed as she carefully looked at Han Shuo’s staff a few more times. Only then did she ask, a hint of horror in her voice, “The skeleton staff! You’re from the Calamity Church?”

Han Shuo was shocked as he looked at the skeleton staff that was tightly grasped in his hand. He thought quickly, why do all the older fellows in this world seem to recognize the skeleton staff? Since Adele immediately thought of Calamity Church when she saw the skeleton staff, it seemed that she had not lived for that long, at least not as long as Ancient Lizard King Dagassi.

“When did the Calamity Church’s influence reach the underground world? What is your relationship with the lizardmen? Could it be that you want to protect these stupid lizardmen?” Adele chattered on without waiting for Han Shuo to reply. Seeing Han Shuo remain silent, Adele furiously continued, “Forget it. If you insist on protecting these lizardmen, I will show you some face. However, the underground world is our territory. If you’re thinking of conquering the underground world, the dark elves will definitely resist to our deaths.”

Hearing Adele’s impassioned speech, Han Shuo, who’d originally ready to fight a round with Adele, suddenly froze. Han Shuo understood from Adele’s tone that she did not fear him, but clearly feared the Calamity Church. She did not dare to make a move against the lizardmen due to Han Shuo being someone from the Calamity Church.

The Calamity Church was a sinister existence throughout the whole Profound Continent that incited terror just by their name. The dark elves, who were similarly considered evil, naturally knew of Calamity Church’s formidable prowess.

Among the sinister powers and evil races in the Profound Continent, the Calamity Church was without question the number one most evil power. Even for someone like Adele, once she saw Han Shuo holding the skeleton staff, she immediately admitted defeat and renounced enslaving the lizardmen without Han Shuo even saying a word.

There was a period of time in which the skeleton staff was synonymous with the Calamity Church. The one who wielded the skeleton staff was absolutely one of the top figures in the Calamity Church. When Adele saw the skeleton staff appear in Han Shuo’s hand, she did not have any doubts, treating Han Shuo as a high ranking figure of the Calamity Church. She immediately extinguished any intention of becoming enemies with Han Shuo.

An evil power like the dark elves did not fear any country in the continent. These countries normally would not set foot in the underground world. In addition, a country’s strength was limited. Hence, Adele did not fear them even if they really set foot in the underground world. However, the infamous Calamity Church's viciousness and persistence toward their enemies would cause any party to be terrified. Even if someone was in the underground world when they provoked the Calamity Church, they would also be faced with a never-ending, fearsome retaliation.

Adele had just returned from the layer below. She definitely did not want to immediately offend the number one most evil power in the world. Hence, she voluntarily conceded in front Han Shuo.

A flurry of ideas passed through Han Shuo's mind. The Calamity Church's identity was indeed worth of being the Profound Continent's most feared evil power, if just mentioning its name unexpectedly led to experts like Adele admitting defeat. He reacted quickly to Adele's words.

"Since you recognize the skeleton staff, you obviously know my identity. Heh heh. The lizardmen's true god Dagassi has close ties with the Calamity Church. Perhaps you do not know that Dagassi has already left this place and would not threaten the dark elves. However, Dagassi had requested that the Calamity Church would take care of the lizardmen when he left. Therefore, we will not let the lizardmen be enslaved by the dark elves.

"The Calamity Church does not have unfriendly intentions toward the underground world's dark elves. In fact, we have all been invaded by the light side, and should not be fighting internally. If you could give the Calamity Church face and not cause trouble for the lizardmen, I believe this will end as a very pleasant encounter." Han Shuo portrayed the image of a high-ranking figure in the Calamity Church, speaking proudly yet respectfully to the dark elves' ancestor Adele.

"Of course, since the lizardmen are under your protection, the dark elves will not attack them from now on." Adele didn't hesitate, giggling as she replied, "Distinguished friend, since you have come to the underground world, you definitely must come be our guest in our dark elf territory."

As expected, Adele immediately agreed to Han Shuo's request. She then giggled as she sincerely proposed an invitation. Adele even cast a soul-wrenching coquettish glance Han Shuo's way as she made the proposal. Han Shuo felt an unbearable itch from the blatant seduction.

End of Part 1 of the chapter.

Even war was avoided at this point. Simply due to the skeleton staff in his hand, Han Shuo had extinguished Adele's ideas for enslaving the lizardmen, and even had her sincerely invite Han Shuo in an attempt to build a favorable relationship.

Han Shuo did not expect this, and the outcome was obviously more ideal than he could have imagined. Han Shuo turned around to look at the lizardmen's leader, grinning as he said, "I'll be making a trip. I believe the dark elves will leave you alone in the future."

Within the underground world, the slow-witted lizardmen were not as well-informed as the dark elves. The lizardmen leader had never heard of the existence of the Calamity Church. However, he understood from Adele's words that Han Shuo hailed from an outstanding power and this power was dreaded by even the dark elves touted as the strongest in this layer.

The dark elves were already this layer's strongest race to begin with. Now that they had renounced their internal conflicts and gathered together, this strength had reached extraordinary levels. In addition, they now even had a mysterious group of experts. The lizardmen's leader understood that if they were to fight to the end against the dark elves, it would only lead to their deaths.

Now that he saw Adele had taken the initiative to let them go, the lizardmen leader naturally did not foolishly say anything and only bowed respectfully toward Han Shuo, saying, "Thank you, Sir Envoy!"

Han Shuo nodded as he left with Adele, who had been smiling enchantingly by the side. They began to make their way to dark elf territory. The territory occupied by the dark elves was the most vast and fertile in this layer of the underground world. Han Shuo continued to make light conversation with Adele as they travelled Evidently, Adele was extremely curious about Han Shuo's identity. Along the way, she continuously probed for clues about Han Shuo's true status in the Calamity Church. However, Han Shuo constantly evaded her probing, not revealing the slightest bit of information. Truthfully, Han Shuo was unable to divulge any secrets even if he wanted to, as he wasn't familiar with the Calamity Church or their internal structure.

However, Adele had closely examined the skeleton staff once Han Shuo had brought it out, and had felt the bizarre strength it contained. Hence, she didn't suspect Han Shuo's identity at all. The more ambiguously Han Shuo spoke, the more Adele felt that Han Shuo possessed an extremely high-ranking position in the Calamity Church. For Han Shuo to already be wielding the skeleton staff at such a young age, it already sufficiently illustrated that he wasn't a simple character.

The merrily beaming Adele didn't forget to try and seduce Han Shuo on the way back. She didn't sit in the purple light veil tent, but instead walked alongside Han Shuo, swaying her hips and sashaying her butt enticingly with every step. From time to time, Adele would inadvertently brush up against Han Shuo, the sides of her beautiful legs coming into contact with him again and again. This caused Han Shuo to be unceasingly aroused throughout the whole journey, his "lust" rising rapidly.

Adele was clearly very apprehensive of the Calamity Church and was full of reverence toward Han Shuo. When she discovered that Han Shuo wasn't willing to reveal his identity, Adele didn't continue to probe further, and instead introduced the scenery along the way to him.

The underground world wasn't as dank and wet as rumored. Although it was truly in eternal night, the ceiling thousands of meters above the underground world sparkled with strange light. Furthermore, plants that glistened grew everywhere, causing many places in the underground world to be as fully light as a brightly lit day outside.

Similar to the world above, the underground world had its own mountains and streams, so much so that the beautiful scenery in those places was even more magnificent than those above ground. The coquettish Adele was someone who also indulged in beautiful landscapes. She wasn't at all in a hurry to return and had simply ordered a portion of the group to return first. She then personally led a few hundreds experts on a detour with Han Shuo, showing him various exotic landscapes.

The dark elves were the overlords of this layer of the underground world. Adele had absolute confidence in her own strength, and believed that there weren't many living creatures that could threaten her in this layer. The batmen and earth goblins they ran into along the way all went into hiding when they saw Adele's group, as though hiding from a demon. They seemed extremely afraid of Adele.

Adele finally brought Han Shuo to her dark elf territory after visiting twelve spectacular scenic locations in the underground world.

The dark elf territory was a vast patch of forest where all kinds of bizarre plants grew. Dozens of towering trees grew tall, vibrant with life. The abundant, enchanting emerald presence of life nourished a forest that seemed to be brimming with vitality.

The way forward was filled with all kinds of verdant and thick plants, with just a hint of evil in their presence. There were many beautiful demonic spider webs that stretched across the trees that seemed to reach for the sky. Within these spiderwebs were crystals of various colors that seemed to be using the network of webs to absorb the forest's energy. There were also many small red, purple and black spiders that actively moved about the forest. They had friendly dealings with the dark elves, and served as their defensive scouts. When the spiders saw Adele appear, they danced elegantly on top of the ancient trees, appearing to be narrating something to Adele.

The evil goddess Rose worshipped by the dark elves was rumored to have the head of a human but the body of a spider. Han Shuo did not know the truth of this matter, but based on the situation he saw, there may be some truth to the rumors. Adele could obviously communicate with the small spiders, ordering them to work for her.

The further in they went, the more lush and tall the various ancient trees were. There were many wooden houses located in the center of the forest brimming with natural energy. Some of the houses were formed from woven branches while many tall houses were previously ancient trees that reached the skies, but had since died and withered. These ancient trees formed a simple yet gorgeous palace when they were hollowed out, appearing extremely exotic.

The dark elves had an innate fondness toward fine objects. Their palace buildings boasted delicate patterns carefully carved into the outside trunk. These patterns served no other purpose and were purely for aesthetics. Many dark elves were very accomplished in the arts, and every magic weapon they made were incomparably refined. Although the dark elves' magic weapons might not be the best in the continent, they were definitely the most beautiful and refined.

Along the way, Han Shuo recognized the dark elves' pursuit of artistic excellence above everything else. From the buildings, armor, clothes to even food and religious offerings, every object or activity had to be artistically beautiful.

"This is the dark elves' most important territory in the underground world. As the matriarch of the dark elves, I am honored to have brought you here." Adele smiled sweetly as she directly brought Han Shuo toward the interior.

All the dark elves in the area respectfully bowed in greeting when they saw Adele approach. Adele possessed an extremely prestigious position among the dark elves. As she was able to communicate with the evil goddess Rose, her status was similar to Han Shuo's position among the lizardmen, both appearing as their respective god's messenger.

However, as Adele was also a dark elf, her position among the dark elves was even higher. That the constantly warring dark elves could unite together after her appearance was testament to her vaunted position.

"Madame is too kind. I instead should be honored to be able to be here." Han Shuo grinned as he answered.

Adele led Han Shuo to a wooden palace that had previously been an enormous ancient tree. After entering, Han Shuo discovered that the floor was covered with carpets embroidered with complicated patterns, and the surrounding wooden walls had the strange image of the evil goddess Rose portrayed as a half-human, half spider. Many suspended crystal chandeliers glittered with bright, gorgeous radiance, imparting the place with a natural splendor.

At this moment, Adele clapped her hands and five alluring female dark elves, all with different skin colors but equally beautiful, suddenly walked out. These five dark elves wore thin yarn skirts, their expressions were either shy, provocative or pure, with all their gazes focused on Han Shuo by Adele's side.

"Properly attend to our distinguished guest!" Adele smiled faintly, giving her orders to the five beautiful and seductive dark elves.

The five young female dark elves walked together towards Han Shuo, all of them carrying fruit plates and wine glasses, lightly smiling with unique expressions as they headed over.

Chapter 368: Going on a Punitive Expedition

This banquet was no different than the ones at home. Served by the five young, pretty dark elves, Han Shuo drank fine wine and ate tender meat in extreme comfort. As per Adele's command, the five young dark elves wore revealing clothing and smiled sweetly as they plied Han Shuo with more wine. Intentionally or not, the elves lightly brushed their bodies with Han Shuo, setting his lust aflame.

As Han Shuo seemed to be fall into an intoxicated haze, Adele meaningfully glanced at the couple of dark elf elders who had been smiling obsequiously since the start. Adele's lovers withdrew themselves from the room with smiles on their face.

After the elders left, Adele gave another meaningful look towards the five dark elves that served Han Shuo. All five of the dark elves were equally beautiful, and began to undress in front of Han Shuo. They then slid into his arms as they smiled charmingly at him.

"Haha, honorable guest, enjoy these beauties. If you feel like these five girls are still unable to satisfy you, then I will willingly serve you." Adele smiled enchantingly towards Han Shuo as she took the initiative to depart.

"How about all of you simply come at me together then!" Han Shuo let his hands rove unabashedly over the dark elves who had just jumped into his arms, while inviting Adele with a smile.

Adele rebuked him with a light laugh, "How will that do? I am the matriarch of the dark elves, and I definitely can't serve you alongside them. Hehe, I am actually better than all five of them alone, so only if you can satisfy all five of them can you possibly let me feel satisfied. However, you need to show me some proof first, hmm?" After saying these words, Adele did not remain any longer. As she looked at Han Shuo start making moves on the five young dark elves without restraint, she endured the restlessness in her heart and left, gently chuckling.

The instant Adele left, Han Shuo unrestrainedly pinned down a mostly naked and delicate dark elf who'd been in his arms. A long and hearty laugh sounded as he began a punitive expedition to conquer their bodies.

The twelve mystical demons silently left Han Shuo's body, spreading out to cover the dark elves' territory. Two of the twelve mystical demons were ordered to follow Adele and determine the purpose of her departure.

As the full bodied girl under his body tactfully begged for forgiveness in a sweet and soft voice, Han Shuo reached out a hand to pull over another girl. This dark elf possessed a purple skin-toned body and long, dark purple hair. He couldn't help but grope her own well-rounded breasts as she gazed at him blushing. She was just like a blooming purple rose.

Failing to repress her innermost desires, the dark elf under Han Shuo's body instantly started shouting in a joyous and high spirited manner. The trembling and unrepressed shout was akin to a melodious and enchanting song that could dissolve a person's heart. As the other three dark elves flushed with excitement, they began to tangle together with a wordless croon.

The dark elves were known for their lasciviousness, the female dark elves especially so. As the three dark elves started to walk towards Han Shuo, two of them had a bashful expression. The other appeared somewhat aloof, emitting a different kind of charm. However, when they truly started battling with their bodies, the originally shy and blushing dark elves actually started gradually becoming wild and uninhibited. Before Han Shuo had even truly overwhelmed them with ecstasy, they had actually already become wild themselves.

As Han Shuo continued his punitive expedition on the dark elf under his body, he saw Adele, through the mystical demon's gaze, arriving within a luxurious room two floors below. Sikong and those few male dark elves were waiting there. Besides them was also a young male elf.

The joyous and extremely spirited clamor from Han Shuo's room constantly entered this meeting room. Adele's face was a stunning crimson as she looked like a worm was writhing in her heart. Her visage expressed her great desire to immediately replace the woman under Han Shuo's body.

Subconsciously licking her red lips lightly once more, Adele forcefully repressed the restlessness in her heart before asking Sikong, "Tell me what occurred in the battle between the two of you again."

Sikong was still deeply wounded, blood marring his arms and face. With a deep breath, he quickly summarized the confrontation between him and Han Shuo in a soft voice. After he was done, he also added, "Besides the intense smell of a necromancer on his body, he also cultivates an incredible fighting aura. Oh, that's not right, it doesn't seem very much like a fighting aura, since it's so suffused with evil. It's highly likely that he's a high-ranking member of the Calamity Church."

"Of course you imbecile, as if I needed your warning! Being able to hold a magical staff with human skulls already clearly shows his identity. The only thing I don't understand is that big lizard's actions. Why would it make such a shady transaction with the Calamity Church. This is truly odd." The devastatingly beautiful Adele's eyebrows creased as she voiced her doubts.

"Matriarch, do we still need to deal with the lizardmen? This person's age is still young, so he's definitely not a match for you. Now that he's entered our domain, should we take advantage of the situation and be rid of him?" A different dark elf elder piped up.

"You fool! Since he'd dared to enter our domain, he's definitely confident in his ability to leave. Let alone leave, he surely has a way to send out information. You fools, can't you use your brains?!" Adele snapped.

Adele shot a glance at the only young dark elf here after scolding them. Her voice tinkled with a laugh as she tenderly said, "Young child, I heard you met this human before when following Dana?"

"In response to the Matriarch, this person has come to the underground world once previously. He started off helping us deal with a young dark dragon. However, because Chief Dana targeted him, wanting to capture everything in one fell swoop, he somehow betrayed us and left more than half of us dead. In the end, he even stole the Eternal Sigh of Darkness 1 and made that dark dragon his magical pet.” This young dark elf respectfully reported.

Adele started and hastily inquired, “What? The Eternal Sigh of Darkness is in his hands?”

Nodding, the dark elf replied, “Yes Matriarch, he stole it from the hands of Chief Dana. Last time when we went to deal with the lizardmen, that big lizard crushed Chief Dana to death. A lot of us saw him then too. I’m sure it’s him.”

“Dark dragon, he made a young dark dragon his magical pet.....” Elder Sikong muttered to himself before suddenly saying in astonishment, “Matriarch, that dark dragon wouldn’t be Gilbert, the son of Gilges, the head of the dark dragons, would it? When we left the underground world, we promised Gilges, that old bastard, that we would be responsible for finding his son.”

When she heard Sikong’s words, Adele’s expression changed, “That’s very likely. That young lewd dragon and this Bryan have similar temperaments. They’re probably running together. If that’s indeed the case, we definitely must not move against him now. This person is not someone we can provoke.”

“Matriarch, then what do we do? Are we going to just let the lizardmen go?” The young dark elf hastily spoke, seeming to have a deeply-rooted hatred for the lizardmen

Adele shot a glance at the young dark elf and responded, “And just how important are the lizardmen? This underground world houses so many races, and they are by no means crucial. Besides occupying a few mines, they have no other accomplishments. The present situation will not change whether or not we provoke them. However, if we can strike a good relationship with this Calamity Church fellow, perhaps we will be able to return to the world above and forcefully reclaim the fertile lands of the damned forest elves.”

The young dark elf was pleasantly surprised to hear those words, “We can actually return to the world above and even take back everything that belonged to us from the hands of the forest elves?”

“In this world, there is no such thing as impossible!” Adele confidently said.

As Adele and several dark elf elders spoke, their ears had been constantly taking in the unrestrained moans from above. But when their conversation reached this point, the sounds from above suddenly started gradually calming down. It quickly dwindled into silence, and not a single dark female elf’s voice sound.

As Adele knitted her brows to listen for a moment, she suddenly couldn’t help but feel alarmed. She noticed that not even one of her subordinates had come down. All five of those dark elves were actually from a group within the dark elf race that were the most skilled at sex and the most in need of vigor. Their lasciviousness wouldn’t topple even after going through ten guys in a night. According to Adele’s instructions, after they’d dealt with Han Shuo, they would send a signal to inform her.

However, from the present situation, it seemed that the elves had already submitted. Not a single one of the five harlots had sent a signal or continued to make any noise.

“Why is there no more noise?” An elder asked suspiciously.

“He’s probably finally incapable of continuing. To be able to last so long, it seems like this human actually has some tricks indeed!” Another elder replied.

Adele shot a glance at the two elves and lightly humphed before saying, “You think everyone is useless like all of you?”

“Heh, can one human be capable of subduing those five sluts in such a short time?” One elder sneered.

“You’re right!” Adele disdainfully shot a glance at him before muttering, “Do I actually have to personally take the field?”

Adele’s body started growing hot from head to toe after speaking, her cheeks turning an alluring blood-red. Without taking another look at the couple of male dark elves here, she twisted her waist, excitedly swaying her buttocks to and fro as she walked upwards.

When Adele finally arrived, she saw Han Shuo's completely naked body casually sitting on top of a chair, a smile on his face as he gazed at the restless Adele burning in flames of passion. At Han Shuo's feet, five wanton dark elves lay on top of a rug like five balls of cotton. They seemed to lack the strength to even raise their fingers in greeting.

Adele merely shot a glance at Han Shuo's spirited and fierce thing on his lower body before suddenly feeling a tremble in her heart. Then, looking at the scene that had become a mess, the throbbing in her heart became increasingly intense, and she was sure that the sound of her thumping heart was echoing across the room.

"I've been waiting for you all along!" Han Shuo smilingly looked at Adele as he opened both of his hands in an inviting manner, "How about coming here, my lady!"

Adele suddenly emitted a moving moan as the clothing on her body drifted towards the ground like pieces of a feather. She unreservedly displayed a perfect, naked body that was ravishingly beautiful out in the open. Then, like a moth flying into flames, her plump butt directly fell on top of Han Shuo who sat upright on a chair,

Han Shuo and Adele simultaneously emitted a loud moaning sound that brimmed with endless joy and satisfaction.

In the room that Adele had left, the male dark elves left were discussing things, seemingly disbelieving the words Adele said before she left.

However, after Adele's prolonged moan traveled into the room, the faces of each and every one of the male dark elves became extremely unsightly. From the moment her voice rang out, it signified that her judgement was correct. That Han Shuo had indeed conquered the five dark elves in a very short time frame and had now started his expedition on Matriarch Adele.

Some human males were indeed stronger than dark elves in this field. However, the ability of female dark elves in this field was also very well-known throughout the Profound Continent. Even if an unusually endowed and gifted human male confronted a female dark elf, they wouldn't have any advantages whatsoever. Those first five wanton dark elves were actually well-known figures among the dark elves, but who would've expected that Han Shuo would deal with them with ease?

Now that Adele had personally taken the field, the previously disdainful words that she said to them became fact. This seemed to resemble a slap to a face and caused their self-respect in this matter to suffer an enormous humiliation.

"What a frightening fellow. Seems like only the matriarch can make him succumb!" Sikong said towards the few people beside him as the blood on his face gradually faded away. The other people had a noticeably envious look. However after Sikong's words, they also all nodded and said, "Naturally!"

Sikong and the others were originally Adele's lovers. This was a normal situation within the dark elf race; but even with all of them together, they still weren't a match for Adele. Perhaps, because they knew how frightening Adele was in this respect, they were constantly afraid of Adele deep in their hearts and were unable to raise their heads.

As Sikong and the others resumed their discussion, another prolonged moan came from Adele above. The complexion of the five elders changed greatly after hearing this. Sikong couldn't help but to cry out in alarm first, saying, "How is that possible!"

The others also had faces filled with incredulity. Each and every one of them looked at each other with dismay, not knowing what to do. From that prolonged moan, they could obviously recognize that Adele had climaxed.

But, without waiting for the five dark elves to react, Adele suddenly emitted another extremely carefree moan and let out a shrieking "No". The five black elves were once again stupefied. Amongst them, Sikong was aghast, "He's still going, can it be that even the matriarch is also unable to continue?"

"Impossible. Even if the matriarch climaxes, she still shouldn't say the word 'No'. Perhaps she's purposefully putting on an act. You all should know that the more weakly a woman resists, the more likely a male will orgasm torrentially and delightfully!" Among them, a dark elf elder thought for a moment before analyzing with great pomp.

The other dark elves immediately reacted. Amongst them, Sikong drew many inferences and suddenly said in realization, "The matriarch is truly powerful. It seems like her recent moaning sound is just to confuse this terrifying human."

"That must be so. What kind of person is the matriarch? As if such a young and vigorous fellow is capable of conquering our matriarch!"

"Mm, We seemed to have overthought the situation. It seems like the matriarch has once again earned herself another servant between her legs."

As the couple of dark elf elders discussed and believed themselves to be infallible, Adele's panic-stricken voice became louder and louder above them. An unceasing shrieking sound started, "No. Don't, don't do this, I beg you!"

"The matriarch's act is so genuine. It seems like he will soon be done for!" Sikong continued to voice his opinion.

"Ah.... Damned Sikong, hurry and save me, save me!" Suddenly, after Adele's wretched and mournful howling, she unexpectedly started shouting for assistance.

Sikong leapt up with fright and spoke, stunned, "Did you hear that clearly?! The matriarch is shouting for me to save her, could something have truly happened?"

"Ah.... Just kill me, you demon, just kill me!" From above, Adele screamed frantically without a hint of joy at all.

The dark elf elders finally started reacting at this time, suddenly realizing that a very major incident must've happened above. They rushed out of the meeting room with a shout as they hastily made their way upstairs.

They barged into the room and gaped at the sight that greeted them. Adele was firmly pressed down on top of the chair and was being vigorously pounded from behind. But that wasn't what transfixed them. Adele's body seemed to visibly age, as if the wheel of time had quickened by a thousand times.

Her long hair on her head gradually started becoming grey. Following this change, Adele's powerful aura also began to slowly flow into Han Shuo's body, causing his originally mellow aura to start to soaring unceasingly.

"Hey, you guys came!" Han Shuo's big arm firmly pinned down Adele as he continued his punitive expedition. Turning his head towards the couple of dark elf elders, his smirk seemed to turn into a somewhat ruthless smile.

"Let go of our matriarch, otherwise, we will kill you!" Sikong hissed severely as he pulled out the crystal ball he'd used previously.

"I'm almost ready, just wait a moment!" Han Shuo laughed as he started pounding in an increasingly fierce manner. Soon after he began exerting himself with a burst of speed right in front of the dark elf elders, he flung his head back, howling loudly with elation as his body began to uncontrollably tremble for a short burst.

As he finished, he took another look at the dark elf matriarch Adele. At that moment, the ravishingly beautiful Madam Adele, whose looks could fell cities and topple empires, had become a grey haired, loose skinned dark elf granny. Her skin didn't have the slightest luster of life to it. It was clear, she would never again regain her youthful radiance.

From his space ring, Han Shuo cheerfully and happily took out another shirt and put it on. Han Shuo, having just absorbed all of the power of Adele's body, only felt an unprecedented contentment as he faced the several dark elf elders with a smile. "Adele's dead. You guys should all go die too!"

Chapter 369: Traitors

Adele's death, coupled with Han Shuo's ruthless words sent chills over the dark elf elders. Especially Sikong, who had personally fought Han Shuo, was deeply affected.

Sikong, who'd been the first to suggest coming here, didn't feel the slightest desire for revenge upon seeing Adele's corpse. He actually shrank back as a fearful look crossed his face, "Wh-what do you want?"

Han Shuo laughed, and grinned as he said, "I want your deaths of course!"

"You also gain no benefit if we die, and you might not even be able to defeat the five of us." Sikong opened his mouth again, his expression becoming slightly calmer. "Let's negotiate."

It was at this time that the naked elf girls lying on the carpet slowly woke up groggily. Upon seeing the situation, they panicked and ran to the elders, screaming, "Elders, Save us!"

The dark elf elders were unsure of what to do when they saw the five naked bodies running towards them. They didn't have much time to think however, as the five elf girls all ran into the embrace of various elders. Still wearing an expression of fear, they gabbled, "We're scared! Let's leave this place!"

Pfft.

Sikong stared in disbelief at the delicate dagger protruding from his stomach, then stared with disbelief at the squirming girls in his embrace. However, their faces no longer held any trace of fear now, but instead wore expressions of indifference.

The other elders met the same fate as Sikong. Each of the elf girls that had barreled into their embrace had struck a fatal blow with daggers into each of their chests, all with cold vicious expressions on their faces.

"Trying to kill you folks in your own territory wasn't easy. Heh heh, but it seems the people who want you dead are your own people!" Han Shuo explained with a smile, coldly watching Sikong fall into a puddle of his own blood.

“W-why?” Sikong asked the dark elf girl, unable to accept the situation.

“Why did you old bastards come up from down below? All of the races were doing just fine until you came and stole our spots, becoming our slavers! Keke, every race has them, not to mention us dark elves. As long as you die, then we’ll become the true holders of power amongst the dark elves!” The dark elf girl coldly smiled. She squatted and grasped the dagger tightly, shoving it even farther in. Sikong’s eyes widened, and went glassy, never to see again.

All of the dark elf elders were extraordinary magic users. However, they would have never thought that their own subordinates would act against them, and immediately fell victim to the dark elf girls’ covert ambush.

Emitting a small sound of inquiry, Han Shuo flew towards one of the dark elf elders like lightning. One of the elders had just struggled to his feet from a puddle of his own blood when Han Shuo placed his palm on the elder’s back. An explosive sound rang out from within the elder’s body. This elder, who had not fallen in the sneak attack, was finally dead for good.

Having made preparations for hand-to-hand combat with Han Shuo, Adele had not posted any dark elf sentries nearby. Knowing that she would likely be loud, she would likely not want her subordinates to hear her, as she was the main wielder of political power amongst the dark elves. As a result, she had dismissed her bodyguards.

This made it so that even after the battle had finished, there were still no sentries who were aware of the earthshaking situation that had occurred. They were still busily going about their own business in the distance.

“Didn’t you say you’ll work with us? Why did you still kill Adele in the end?” A dark elf girl named Shialan asked Han Shuo with puzzlement as she wiped her bloodstained arm on the carpet, putting on her gauze thin clothes.

After Han Shuo’s display of strength from pushing all five of them down in such a short time, Siyalin and the rest had made a proposal to Han Shuo, hoping that Han Shuo would help kill Adele and the elders. However, they were tactfully declined by Han Shuo.

Shrugging, Han Shuo said with resignation, “Adele acted against me, so I suddenly changed my mind.”

When Han Shuo said these words, he sighed lightly. There seemed to be several red strands moving around in his body. Two black dots were being seemingly harried by the red strands into the palm of his hand. The skin of Han Shuo’s palms suddenly burst open, and two blue spiders the size of beans emerged.

Two balls of flame materialized in Han Shuo’s palms, turning the two blue spiders into ashes. Han Shuo blew, and the ashes vanished in the air.

Han Shuo originally hadn’t intended to act against Adele. However, it’d become apparent that Adele was conspiring against him. With Han Shuo’s level of power, it was utter simplicity to discover any oddities within his body. Judging by Adele’s use of two spiders to infiltrate Han Shuo’s body, it was obvious that she didn’t have any good intentions.

These two spiders were implanted into Han Shuo’s body when he and Adele had been kissing passionately. He hadn’t even felt them in the heat of the moment. Had Han Shuo not been as powerful as he was, he never would have known that Adele was acting against him.

With Han Shuo’s temperament, he wouldn’t hold any kind feelings towards Adele since she made the first move. During their fierce body-on-body combat, Han Shuo suddenly used the demonic secret technique to absorb Adele’s energy, taking yin to replenish yang.

Adele was a strange dark mage and also had a strange energy in her body. This energy was completely different from the other forms of energy Han Shuo was familiar with, containing some sort of evil, wanton power. Han Shuo had detected a trace of evil divine power within the energy, and assumed that it must have come from the evil goddess Rose. It was precisely because Adele’s body contained this kind of depraved evil power that she was so powerful as a mere dark archmage. She’d resisted madly when he was draining her yin, but she only had the power of a mage. When faced with Han Shuo, whose physical body was as tyrannical as a magical beast, her struggling was futile.

When using the demonic technique to drain Adele's energy, most of the absorbed energy had been from the dark goddess Rose. After filtering out the impurities, only a fifth of the original amount was left. However, even this small amount of energy nourish Han Shuo's magical yuan. The demon infant in his body was gaining more and more sentience, loosening Han Shuo's inhibitions.

As for Adele's mental strength, it wasn't something that the secret technique could harvest. Unfortunately for her, under Han Shuo's relentless "Soul Tremor" spells, it was impossible for her to focus enough to concentrate her mental strength to attack him.

"It seems that the strength in my heart has been getting stronger recently. Could it be that I'm on the verge of a breakthrough to the carnal realm?" Han Shuo suddenly began to doubt his progress. Recently, he had been feeling the strong urge to "subdue" every pretty girl he came across. Even towards enemies, Han Shuo had the urge to behead them, with wild thoughts of massacres and other brutality oozing their way into his thoughts.

Shaking his head, Han Shuo temporarily dispelled those thoughts from his head. Glancing at the five elf girls who had finished dressing themselves and were standing in front of him, he said "Alright, these old bastards who were preventing you from taking power are all dead. Now can we talk about matters relating to us?"

Shilan nodded her head, and said "Leave the rest to us. We'll give you five hundred thousand gold coins as long as you give us the Eternal Sigh of Darkness. We'll also promise not to disturb the lizardmen. What do you say?"

"No problem." Han Shuo readily agreed, taking the bow he'd acquired from Dana. "It's useless in my hands anyway; it's a very good deal for me to exchange this for five hundred thousand gold coins."

Adele and the dark elf elders weren't carrying anything that was of interest to Han Shuo. Perhaps it was due to the fact that they had just arrived from the layer below, but they lacked the opportunity to collect any wealth, meaning that Han Shuo couldn't loot any satisfactory war spoils off them.

"In addition, we agree to establish long-term agreements. Here in the underground world, we have many things that you people aboveground lack. I believe that these things could be exchanged for some fine wine, as well as some fine art, including gems that increase power. With those items, we dark elves can craft beautiful magical weapons. If you were to sell them outside, they should be items that nobles fight over to acquire." Shialan said to Han Shuo.

"Haha, don't worry, I won't let you down. Of course, you also have to satisfy me as well. Let's get rich together!" Han Shuo happily said to the five dark elf girls, who were about to become the next group of dark elf elders.

Chapter 370: Summoning the Old Fey Corpse

After Han Shuo departed dark elves' territory, the five female dark elves worked together to drag the corpse of Adele and the dark elf elders into one of the deepest cellar rooms. They falsely claimed to others that Adele and the other dark elf elders had already begun touring the world above.

After a couple of days, the cellar was suddenly filled with tens of thousands of small spiders. It seemed as though every spider in dark elf territory had somehow made their way into the cellar. Somehow, none of the dark elves within the territory detected these spiders.

Tens of thousands of small spiders were densely packed together, completely filling up the cellar. As the spiders crazily squirmed on top of Adele's body, the small spiders began spitting a strange, magical silk one after the other. As the silk fell onto Adele's body, the small spiders began drying up one after the other, losing their lives. They had spat out their very own life force along with the silk.

This process continued for some time. Finally, after the tens of thousands of small spiders that had entered the cellar room had all spat out their life force, they all died within the cellar room.

Adele's dried up and shriveled body slowly began weathering. After a few days, only white skeletal bones remained. However, within Adele's skull, there was actually an additional thumb-sized blue pearl that emitted a blue haze. The pearl was filled with the evil goddess Rose's evil power, similar to what Han Shuo had previously absorbed.

One day, this blue pearl suddenly burst, expelling hundreds of thousands of blue colored threads of silk. They inserted themselves within the bodies of the several dark elf elders that had already died. The silk actually began extracting strands of blue light from within the elders' body. Within just a moment's time, the body of all the several dark elf elders had completely transformed into ashes, blown away on the air. Then, during the middle of the night, the blue colored pearl slowly flew out of the cellar, flying towards the temple of evil goddess Rose.

In the middle of the temple, an innocent and pure young female dark elf was facing the statue of Rose, piously praying. This dark elf young lady appeared to have the age of a sixteen or seventeen year old human girl, seemingly uncorrupted by the profoundly lewd and evil cultures of the dark elf race. She worshipped Rose's statue, looking like a most devoted believer.

While facing the statue of Rose, she kowtowed continuously while murmuring in the language of the dark elves. Suddenly, the blue pearl flew over her head and hovered there. Then, the blue pearl abruptly burst, emitting blue colored rays of light that tightly wrapped around the young lady below.

After the blue colored pearl emitted its tremendous power, it began transferring that power into the young lady's body. The young lady began to shriek in pain, but the strands had tightly wound around every inch of her body, even sealing her mouth. So even her wretched screams were stifled as she struggled in vain.

The young lady's originally jade-green pupils gradually turned white. The muffled shrieks also began to gradually quiet down. After a while, the blue pearl, along with the hundreds of thousands of blue strands of light, slowly began merging into the young lady's body. The blue colored light continued to linger within the young lady's body as she collapsed in front of the statue. Only when it was nearly dawn did the blue light completely disappear, and her pupils gradually regain their previous jade-green look.

When the young lady stood up and faced the statue, she performed a rite in deep gratitude. Then, she gnashed her teeth and said, "Bryan, I will make you taste every iota of my suffering. I swear, I will use the same method to kill you!"

At that moment, a carefree and wild laugh echoed from the Cemetery of Death, brimming with the sound of joy and comfort.

An approximately two meter tall old fey zombie stood in front of Han Shuo. Its body was covered with long, green hair, and its teeth and claws looked razor sharp. At long last, Han Shuo had successfully summoned it, and it wasted no time in roaring its displeasure. This advanced ranked zombie was actually not being restrained by the laws of the heavens and earth of the Profound Continent. Instead, it was clamoring in an immensely loud voice that spread powerfully throughout the Cemetery of Death, mixing with Han Shuo's wild laughter.

After the old fey zombie roared, it raised its head and saw the creator of the contract in front of him. Unexpectedly, it shot straight towards him. Its speed made it seem like a bolt of green lightning as it flew, its one-meter long talons humming through the wind. It had an astonishingly and incomparably imposing aura.

"Damn it, it seems like it wasn't entirely successful. There's another part that needs fixing. Otherwise, this formidable zombie would not have immediately attacked me right after arriving within this dimension. If this was during an actual battle, the necromancer would have been screwed." Han Shuo cursed softly. Seeing the old fey zombie charging at him, he hurriedly took out the Demonslayer Edge.

Han Shuo's left hand grasped a skeleton staff. A quick wave and incantation later, an enormous bone shield crashed in front of Han Shuo right before a sharp bone spur could skewer him. The old fey zombie's attack crashed audibly into the shield, with the latter exploding fiercely. The old fey zombie tumbled to the ground from the force of the impact.

The bone shield summoned by a grand magus was considerably more powerful and covered a wider area. Thus, when the old fey zombie charged towards the bone shield, it couldn't pierce through the bone shield's defenses. It was only capable of cracking the shield.

Without waiting for the old fey zombie to scramble back up, the Demonslayer Edge suddenly flew out of Han Shuo's hands. The screech of metal striking metal rang out as two of the old fey zombie's sharp claws were severed. However, Han Shuo was still shocked as he wondered exactly what on earth the old fey zombie's sharp claws were made of. Only two claws had been shorn off after the Demonslayer Edge's strike descended, and that too with difficulty.

Han Shuo knew in his heart just how sharp the Demonslayer Edge was. Furthermore, after tempering it meticulously once more with enormous amounts of killing intent, it could effortlessly split rocks and chop metal. Han Shuo truly had never anticipated that this old fey zombie would actually be so frightening. When the Demonslayer Edge chopped downwards, it had only snapped apart two of its sharp claws.

The old fey zombie fell to a sitting position, baring its fangs and howling loudly once more. Then, it once again launched itself towards Han Shuo as he also began waving the skeleton staff in his hands again. This time, a hundred or so bone spears appeared, breaking through the skies. Although they were incapable of piercing the old fey zombie, they were enough to force it to backtrack in retreat.

Taking advantage of the respite, Han Shuo relied on the contract's powerful connection to the other world and used the skeleton staff to forcefully return the old fey zombie back to its world.

It was not that Han Shuo feared the old fey zombie. It wasn't a difficult task for him to kill this old fey zombie with his strength. However, because the old fey zombie had begun launching attacks towards its master right after being summoned, Han Shuo knew that there was a problem in his incantation. Thus, the most important problem currently was how to chant the summoning technique properly and not to continue dilly-dallying with the old fey zombie.

After Han Shuo left the underground world, he had stayed within the Cemetery of Death for a few days and practiced grand magus ranked summoning techniques. After studying intensively for such a while, Han Shuo had slowly starting grasping the technique. Because of this, he was finally capable of summoning the old fey zombie from another dimension today.

"The old fey zombie immediately started to attack me after arriving at this dimension. It must be because it was not completely under the restricting power of the contract. Otherwise, it would absolutely not dare to attack me." Han Shuo muttered to himself while knitting his brows and reconsidering the details of the summoning technique he had just used.

He took out that thick tome of necromancy and once again began reading it earnestly. After a little while, he suddenly had a thought flash into his mind as he cried out, “Ah! Was I supposed to make the contract mid-way through?”

When Han Shuo had used the summoning technique to call forth the old fey zombie into the Profound Continent, he’d first used the incantation to create a connection with the other dimension. Then, after chanting some syllables to locate the old fey zombie’s position, Han Shuo’s mental strength had instantly traversed through an endless distance of the boundless space, before arriving at the other dimension. Finally, Han Shuo would then randomly target an old fey zombie with his mental strength.

Following these events, the mental strength must then be used to firmly suppress the old fey zombie that was targeted. Then, while the old fey zombie was being suppressed and was incapable of resisting, the zombie must be dragged into the space tunnel. The old fey zombie would then pass through the space tunnel before finally descending on the Profound Continent.

However, Han Shuo noticed an annotation in a remote corner of the cryptic book. It stated that when a creature was in it’s original dimension, that would be when it was in its most formidable state. However, when it left its dimension and entered the space tunnel, it would enter its weakest state. But when it descended onto a material world, it would restore its power once more.

It was only natural that zombies would always be at their most formidable when freely traversing through their own undead world. But after arriving within the material world of the Profound Continent, they would begin suffering to a certain extent due to a lack of intense death energy.

Even so, zombies were still capable of exhibiting a powerful force within material worlds. As long as there were living creatures in the material world, death energy would certainly exist from the departed spirits. Although the death energy wouldn’t be as pure and condensed as their own world, it would still be able to provide the zombies with necessary strength. Additionally, with the death energy that was innate to the zombies, their strength would also be on par with their strength on home world even if they descended onto the Profound Continent.

However, the process of entering the material world inevitably required entering through the profound space tunnel. This distance should have originally been distant beyond measure, but was shrunk to the span of an instant under either the powerful influence of the contract, the caster's mental energy, or rules of space encompassed in the contract.

According to the differences in one's mental prowess as a necromancer and one's skill at chanting spells, the speed with which a zombie entered through the space tunnel from its dimension and entered the material world would also differ. The stronger a necromancer was and the better they understood the essence of necromancy magic, the less time a necromancer would waste on incantations.

Under normal circumstances, when a magic apprentice became an archmage, it would take three to five seconds for a zombie to leave its dimension and enter this material world. As for Han Shuo, he could already be considered as at the grand magus rank. Thus, he only needed a brief second.

If the spell was cast by a sacred magus necromancer, then the time to traverse the space tunnel would be calculated in the milliseconds. As a result, the zombie would descend onto the material world in a flash right after the incantation was complete. (The process of chanting the incantation was in reality just a way to communicate with the creature in the other dimension. It was a string of events related to finding, suppressing, and binding the creature to the contract.)

However, regardless of whether one was a magic apprentice having just entered the world of necromancy, or a sacred magus who had already deeply understood the essence of necromancy as a sacred magus, a summoning always required traversing space tunnels. This was true whether the summoned creature was the weakest skeleton warrior or the most frightening undead bone dragon.

Although the time to travel through the space tunnel depended on a magician's strength, this step was unavoidable. According to this note, it seemed that regardless of how strong the undead creature was, they all became extremely weak when brought into the space tunnel devoid of death energy.

According to the contents within the book, taking advantage of that moment of weakness to enforce the contract was the most logically secure method. Han Shuo seemed to have suddenly comprehended something as his heart somewhat stirred. He began to chant the spell once again. After carefully concentrating his mental power to an optimal state, he connected with an old fey zombie in the other dimension as the syllables of the incantation rose and fell.

During the spirited struggling from the old fey zombie, Han Shuo's mental energy burst out like a mountain flood, suppressing the zombie's struggle. Following the continued chanting of the necromancy spell, Han Shuo's mental energy gradually eliminated the old fey zombie's resistance. He then drove the old fey zombie to enter and cross through the space tunnel with the appropriate syllables.

The moment the old fey zombie faded into the space tunnel, Han Shuo immediately exerted all his strength to rapidly conclude the contract in less than a second. One second later, the old fey zombie suddenly descended in front of Han Shuo in the Cemetery of Death,

After lightly exhaling, Han Shuo brightly gazed and stared attentively at the old fey zombie that had just been summoned; he would be prepared for any sudden contingencies. This time, the hideous looking old fey zombie didn't make any movement whatsoever. It wasn't like last time, charging wildly towards Han Shuo.

After deeply and attentively watching the old fey zombie for a while, Han Shuo gradually grew happier in his heart. He tried to transmit a command. The old fey zombie immediately began flying in a circle. Although, Han Shuo felt a feeling of impatience verging on loathing from the old fey zombie for forcing it to do such a pointless action, it continued to fly according to Han Shuo's command. Resistance was impossible under the contract's power.

“Success. I’ve finally succeeded!” Han Shuo wildly laughed out loud as he felt a strong sense of satisfaction taking over his heart. Obviously, this time’s incantation was a success.

The necromancy grand magus level old fey zombie summoning technique had finally truly been realized under Han Shuo’s assiduous hard work. Being able to successfully use this meant that grasping the next summoning techniques for the bone devil and mummy lords would now become much quicker and easier.

Chapter 371: A woman's heart

Using the Cemetery of Death's transportation array, Han Shuo arrived at an desolate area within an underground abyss near Seagate City. After summoning the elite earth zombie to tunnel to the surface, he left the underground abyss and hurriedly headed towards Seagate City.

With the kind of power Han Shuo had at his fingertips, any city's defense was as useful as a paper shield in front of him. He swooped in unseen, landing in a deserted corner of Seagate City. After which, he made his way casually to the manor Helen had taken as her residence during her first trip. However, only after Han Shuo arrived at that place did he notice that Helen and his personal guards had already left Seagate City long ago.

He changed headings, soon arriving at the Dark Mantle's stronghold at Seagate City. He called for Delante, and soon found out that Helen had already swept through the city in a bloody purge. She'd gained complete control of Seagate City.

The letter that Han Shuo sent last time had already entered Dick's hands. According to Han Shuo's commands, Brettel City had begun spreading another rumor of how Helen had absolutely never been in an intimate relationship with Han Shuo and how the previous rumor about Helen's rape was just an assumption made by his subordinates.

Furthermore, Brettel City also made a formal statement attesting to the veracity of their new rumor. This was quickly and deliberately spread widely throughout the seven grand duchies. Indeed, that alone convinced a majority of people. However, some narrow-minded people were still as before, disbelieving in the authenticity of this message.

As this official statement and its accompanying rumors started to spread through the duchies, some of the citizens of the Helon Duchy who deeply respected their grand duke Helen began to believe in her again. Helen originally felt that it was beneath her dignity to come out and testify as to its authenticity in public. But after facing so many impassive faces and thinly veiled contempt, she took advantage of the situation to finally stand up to say her piece to the public after Brettel City sent out its statement.

Helen agreed to an evaluation of her body held by the various nobles of the Helon Duchy, overseen by several ladies of prestigious, virtuous reputation. Three old specialists dispatched by a couple of powerful nobles to examine Helen's body finally confirmed that Helen was indeed a truly intact virgin.

After the powerful nobles and ladies published a formal statement together, all the citizens completely believed the authenticity of the situation, clearing Helen in their eyes. Perhaps because the citizens felt that they had insulted their own grand duke's reputation, they all began grieving, lamenting, and even reflecting on their previous actions of despising Helen. After going through this event, the citizens of the dukedom began viewing Helen with an unprecedented level of respect and admiration.

Taking advantage of her citizen's newfound faith, Helen swiftly and decisively rooted out several political enemies in rapid succession, completely cleaning her court of conspiring nobles and disloyal aristocrats. After she had finished her blood spattered massacre, there wasn't a single noble left in the entire Helon Duchy that ever dared rebel again.

At this moment, Benedict Sackville, who had originally treated Helen with incomparable disdain and indifference, immediately sent an ardent letter to Helen. On one side, he bitterly and hatefully expressed his remorse. On the other, he was like his former self, stubbornly starting to pursue Helen again.

At the Helon Duchy residence within Seagate City, Helen held up the letter that was filled with his touching words of love. She tore the letter into fragments with a cold sneer as she spoke to Firewind by her side, "I have thoroughly and clearly seen through the true face of Benedict Sackville after this event. What he was pursuing all along was Helon Duchy, and never me. Back then, when all the citizens and nobles of the Helon Duchy rebelled against me, not only did he not extend a hand in help, but he even schemed against me in the shadows. Yet now that I've restored my power within Helon Duchy, he has once again begun to chase me like an annoying fly. It seems that only the Duchy has ever been the true target of his affections.”

Firewind had transformed into her human form, and so nodded at Helen’s words. “I told you long ago that Benedict Sackville wasn’t a trustworthy person. Politicians, they always act for their own benefit. This person’s hypocritical behavior makes me feel nauseous. I really don’t know how you could have willingly cooperated with him before.”

Helen’s tender and beautiful cheeks slightly reddened from Firewind’s words. “Sister Firewind, I was just using him, that’s all. It was just a thing between nations. Narsen Duchy has the same enemies as me, so I was just using him to defeat the enemy. That’s all.”

After pausing for a moment, Helen’s face became even redder. She hesitated for a moment, and asked Firewind somewhat cowardly, “Sister Firewind, what do you think of Bryan?”

Firewind blanked momentarily before gritting her teeth with hate. “That despicable and baseless person?”

Without knowing why, Helen’s heart itched ever so slightly when she heard Firewind call Han Shuo a despicable and baseless person. It was as if the depths of her heart was unwilling to heard anyone vilify Han Shuo. Even someone as intimate as her sister Firewind was not an exception.

“Mm, exactly that Bryan. Sister Firewind, what do you think of him?” Because Helen and Firewind had such a close relationship for so many years, she naturally didn’t rebuke her and even looked expectantly at Firewind.

After Firewind had flung out her earlier sentence, she shot a glance at Helen and noticed an expectant expression within her eyes. Firewind had already noticed that Helen didn’t have a single bit of her previous resentment. Firewind sighed in her heart and forced a laugh as she said, “Helen, this Bryan is even harder to deal with than Benedict Sackville. I could even sense a little bit of his filthy thoughts being directed towards you when he was facing Benedict Sackville. Furthermore, he wears a hypocritical expression that is completely at odds with his innermost thoughts.”

“However, when I’m together with Bryan, I’m completely incapable of sensing his heart’s mood. He seemed like a bottomless cold pond, an unfathomably grim feeling. As for going even deeper, that is something I have absolutely no way of prying into. Ai, that man is too powerful. If he wanted to kill us, we couldn’t even put up a decent fight, let alone survive. I know we can’t defeat him, but I also don’t know if your methods are truly the right way of doing things.”

Firewind knew that Helen had already unconsciously developed feelings for Han Shuo. Han Shuo indeed had the ability to attract any woman. However, this type of guy was simply a type of poison for a woman. If one became addicted then it would be hard to free oneself. However, to the ambitious and exuberant Helen, only an equally ambitious kind of tyrannical person was the most suitable for her.

Han Shuo was exactly this kind of person. Looking at it from Helen’s point of view, the frighteningly powerful, decisive, and fierce Han Shuo was filled with a deadly attractiveness. If Helen had such a guy constantly supporting her, then it wouldn’t be a bad thing even if the seven grand duchies warred all year round. Alas, this guy schemed way too much. It was clear that he would never be satisfied with just one Helon Duchy. When he begins trying to seize all the seven grand duchies, Firewind didn’t know if it would be Helen’s good fortune or misfortune to follow him.

“Sister Firewind, I already know what I want. Benedict Sackville can’t give me the things I want, but I think Bryan can. Additionally, I don’t know why but I’ve noticed that I can’t feel any hatred for him. Perhaps, I am just too sentimental. I can hate someone to the bone, but I can also transform this hatred into love after something’s happened. Ai.....” Helen heaved a sigh as her voice became laden with emotion.

As Firewind and Helen pondered within the duke’s home, a ball of light mist slowly drifted over. After passing the courtyard, it rose in spirals, before finally descending down towards Helen’s window.

Right as Helen was about to talk to Firewind, she noticed a light mist gently appearing and slowly rising in spirals. She couldn't restrain the pleasant surprise in her heart as she rushed to cheerfully say, "He's here."

The Firewind Phoenix started, staring blankly. Then she started sensing an evil aura slowly filling the room. This aura of necromancy and demonic magic on Han Shuo's body was somewhat taboo to Firewind. Thus, seeing the light mist coming, Firewind knitted her brows and retreated a couple of steps back, increasing the distance between her and the gradually materializing Han Shuo.

"You came?" When Helen saw Han Shuo calmly appearing, she suddenly had an impulse to throw herself onto Han Shuo, entering his bosom. But the joy on her face was indeed genuine and sincere.

"Mm, I was delayed for a few days due to some things. But, all is fine. Now that you've seized Seagate City, the entire Helen Duchy should be more secure than before, correct?" Han Shuo nodded and smiled. Looking at Helen's sincere and joyous face, Han Shuo was feeling truly happy in his heart indeed. He was happy that this girl was gradually falling deeper into his snare of love.

Helen had rooted out her political enemies in a short time through a bloody purge, reconsolidating her hold on the Helen Duchy. This sort of decisive move made Han Shuo somewhat admire Helen's ability. Thinking about how this woman had ascended to the highest point within Helen Duchy, it seemed that she really did have some methods to her name.

Seeing that Firewind was also here, Helen didn't feel it appropriate to act excessively intimate. So after her initial delight, she immediately got down to business, "Oh right, the thing you mentioned last time; how is it going?"

"My people have arrived within Seagate City. Only, because I had yet to arrive, they never dared to get in touch with you. Mm, they are currently right outside. I believe Helen Duchy is completely within your grasp at the moment, so I ought to be able to secretly conduct some business deals now, right?" Han Shuo laughingly replied.

Seeing that Han Shuo was talking, Helen took advantage of the situation to give Firewind a meaningful glance. As Helen's face reddened with some shyness, she blushed with shame and said to Firewind, "Sister Firewind, please invite them in."

Seeing Helen's face that seemed like it was surging with a longing for love, Firewind sighed in her heart. How would she not know that Helen wanted to send her away so Helen could say some intimate words to Han Shuo!

"Yup, I'll be right back!" Firewind replied before directly walking, headed outside. In her heart, she couldn't help but to silently curse Helen for paying more attention to a lover than to a friend.

Right after Firewind left, Helen immediately reddened, retreating a few steps back as she looked at Han Shuo getting closer with every step. She softly said, "Wh-What do you want to do this time?"

Helen retreated until she was flat against a wall. Leaning against the wooden wall, she blushingly said in a low voice, "This is the the Duke's official residence, you had better not act recklessly."

Both of Han Shuo's hands suddenly pressed down on the wooden wall on either side of Helen's shoulders. Looking at Helen overcome with panic, Han Shuo felt an additional feeling of conquest filling him as he beamed straight down at her. "The Helon Duchy is completely in your control. According to the agreement, shouldn't you be taking the initiative to serve me in bed?"

Helen suddenly grew frantic as she secretly thought how this scoundrel was actually so shameless to brazenly ask for such a reward. However, it made Helen's heart began pound at an increasingly faster pace as she blushingly pleaded. "Give me some more time, I am still not prepared. Also, I just proved to the people that I'm still pure and innocent. If you immediately take me, someone might see through this."

Han Shuo began having second thoughts after she said this. That would indeed true. If Helen experienced sex for the first time, an experienced person could immediately see through her. However, Han Shuo was extremely confident in his abilities. He believed he would definitely be able to alter the impression Helen gave to others to the point where it could mask the clues.

“Fine then. I will once again give you some more time.” Han Shuo’s sudden response came after a moment of thinking. Just enough time for Helen’s nervousness to reach its peak. Right as she relaxed, Han Shuo suddenly laughed mischievously, “However, shouldn’t I receive some interest first?”

As soon as those words hit her, Helen’s heart that had just been pacified suddenly began to race. Bashfully and secretly raising her head to shoot a glance at Han Shuo, she noticed that a burning passion had started to smolder in Han Shuo’s eyes. She then hastily lowered her head, softly saying, “Wh-What do you actually want to do?”

“A kiss!” Han Shuo laughed.

This guy is indeed still the same, a pervert. Helen sighed surreptitiously. However, she wasn’t actually mad, only somewhat bashful. That’s all. Helen hesitated for a moment, thinking since he’d agreed to not do that thing, it only seemed fair to give him a little benefit. Then, her thoughts suddenly became disorderly. She secretly thought in her heart, I will be his sooner or later anyways, so why does it matter...

When her thoughts reached this point, Helen closed her eyes, raised her head and blushingly waited for the incoming kiss. However, after waiting for a while, Helen didn’t hear the slightest noise. She opened her eyes, her gaze doubtful as she looked at Han Shuo, who was gazing back at her with a face full of smiles.

Pointing at his own lips, Han Shuo said, “I want you to take action and kiss me!”

Th-this bastard. He is so shameless. He actually wants me to personally kiss him! Helen’s maiden heart started to thump wildly. Even her neck flushed red. The blush started spreading down the rest of her body. She had no idea what to do and bashfully blushed with shame.

“Hurry up, otherwise Firewind and the rest of them will soon be here. If you don’t kiss me before they enter, then I’ll just have to kiss you right in front of them.” Han Shuo looked down at Helen as he teased her.

Helen felt frantic after hearing those words. Picturing what Han Shuo said, Helen became even more afraid within. She sighed inwardly as she closed her eyes, stood on her tiptoes and lightly reached towards Han Shuo’s big lips with her charming face. Their lips touched, and they kissed.

Chapter 372: Teacher of the State

Stratholme

This kiss was destined to be brief due to Firewind's approaching footsteps. Han Shuo only managed to have a little taste before it ended. He didn't have the chance to probe into Helen's sweet fragrance.

Just as Helen was feeling baffled about how Han Shuo was not as avaricious as he had been before, she also caught wind of Firewind's nearing footsteps. After raising her head to look at Han Shuo with her limpid eyes, she immediately realized that it was not because Han Shuo was not avaricious, but rather, it was because Firewind was already here.

Before Firewind had even arrived, Han Shuo had entered the bedroom to get a sip of tea. On this expedition, a couple of merchants from Lancelot Empire had come to Helon City alongside Fabian. Although these merchants were on very good terms with Brettel City's Chamber of Commerce, Han Shuo would not allow them to discover the relationship between him and Helen.

Even Fabian had no clue of the exact circumstances. He had only come because he heard from Dick that this would be a safe trip. Fabian was loyal and devoted to Phoebe. Although his relationship with Han Shuo was also extremely strong, Phoebe was Fabian's true master. Fabian would always be there to support Han Shuo, for any other matter. However, if he discovered that Han Shuo had an additional woman, which happened to be Helen, Han Shuo was unable to predict how he would respond.

If Fabian had honestly reported to Phoebe about Han Shuo's playboy-like actions, Phoebe would probably create some kind of noisy disturbance due to her jealous nature.

When Firewind brought Fabian and the Lancelot Empire's merchants along, she had only shot a glance at Helen's face and discovered her lingering sweet blush. After subconsciously pursing her lips, Firewind couldn't help but start thinking askew and blaming Helen, giving her an angry eyeroll.

Attempting to gloss it over, Helen coughed due to the awkward atmosphere. She secretly cursed at Han Shuo. Only then did she look at Fabian and the merchants with a smile, before saying, "Welcome to my Helon Duchy. I believe everyone knew what we would be discussing today before entering this room."

Fabian had only heard from Dick that Helen wanted to conduct some secret business deals merchants from the Lancelot Empire. With Fabian's sensitive sense of a profiteer, he immediately smelled a great opportunity for profit and gold upon receiving the invitation. Currently, as the person in charge of the Helon Duchy, grand duke Helen had a hundred percent control over the Helon Duchy. With such a character taking the initiative to invite people, no matter which merchant group came, they would definitely receive ample benefits.

Fabian smiled faintly and bowed respectfully. "Of course. Our Boozt Merchant Guild is capable of providing the Helon Duchy with everything it needs. Additionally, we will also purchase some goods from your Helon Duchy at a reasonable and fair price. Both of our parties will definitely benefit from such a business transaction."

As Helen and Fabian conversed, a bodyguard reported from outside the room, "Honored Duke, they have arrived."

"Have them come in." Helen gracefully and elegantly commanded.

Shortly after, a party of seven walked in. The vibe they emitted made them seem quite similar to Fabian and his people. Each and every one of them was overweight. The cunning sparkle in their eyes expressed their greedy desire for profit.

"Honored Grand Duke!" After this party of seven entered, they all suddenly became even more respectful than the last. After going through this bloody purge, they would be hard pressed to find another noble that would dare to revolt against Helen within Helon Duchy. Helen's viciousness was also extensively circulated amongst the nobles and merchants, making the merchants even more fearful and apprehensive in their hearts.

“Mm. Rise!” Helen commanded before introducing Fabian. “These are my Helon Duchy’s merchants. From now on, the business deals between you and my Helon Duchy will be completed through you guys alone. However, you can rest assured. In the future, when you are within Helon Duchy’s national borders, your safety will be completely assured by me.”

“Thank you, Sir Duke. This is a kind of business deal that is advantageous to the both of us and will definitely be to everyone’s satisfaction.” Fabian lightly smiled and said.

Helen nodded, “I just wanted to give both of your parties a proper introduction to each other today, make sure you are reassured about working together, and to let you know that the business transaction between you will be under my protection. Mm. Alright then, you guys should find somewhere to discuss amongst yourselves the specifics of the deal. I must also beseech you guys to not let anybody know about the business deals going on today. The more secretive you are, the better it will be.”

“Rest assured Grand Duke, we know what we ought to do!” Together, Fabian and the Helon Duchy’s merchants replied with great sincerity, before departing. As the merchants journeyed to their destination, they had already begun to discuss the details of their business.

Only until after Fabian and the rest left did Han Shuo walk out from within, saying to Helen, “I reckon that, with Lancelot Empire’s merchants, your goods won’t have to pass through Narsen Duchy anymore. The Brut Merchant Alliance is too distant from your Helon Duchy while you also have to deal with Benedict Sackville sticking his nose into your business in the midst of transportation. Your previous business deal with them is inferior to the partnership you will have with Fabian.”

“You brought these merchants over so ardently, but is it not because you have an eye on my Helon Duchy’s war horses!?” Helen shot a glance towards Han Shuo as he walked out of the bedroom, harrumphing with a pout.

Being told off like this, Han Shuo forced a laugh, “This has always been a mutually beneficial deal. We will both be able to obtain benefits from each other.”

After pausing for a moment, Han Shuo said, “Alright, the seeds of internal strife in your Helen Duchy have been weeded out, so I believe that I should also leave the Helon Duchy for the time being.”

“Ah, you’re leaving already?” Helen involuntarily started to feel a sense of disappointment rising within her as she said to Han Shuo, “Helen Duchy actually has a lot of wonders that deserve touring. How about I personally bring you out to have some fun? In any case, I shouldn’t have too much official business to do in the near future.” When Helen heard that Han Shuo wanted to leave, she felt somewhat reluctant and unwilling. As she had wanted Han Shuo to stay in Helon Duchy for a little while longer, she couldn’t help but make this proposal.

Han Shuo laughed involuntarily, “Look at me, am I such a refined person?”

Helen’s expression darkened as she stayed silent for a moment before suddenly saying softly, “You’ve just arrived here and haven’t even been here for a whole day, but you want to leave just like that? You can’t even stay for a few days? Not even to accompany me?”

Helen’s slender, shapely eyebrows lightly creased as her eyes brimmed with disappointment and sadness. She knew in her heart that Han Shuo was not the type of person to tie himself down for a woman. However, for the couple of days after Han Shuo had left, she didn’t know why, but she couldn’t resist her longing for Han Shuo at all. Now that she had luckily encountered Han Shuo again, she naturally didn’t want him to leave so soon.

Han Shuo silently looked at Helen, the corner of his mouth starting to break into a smile. After hesitating for a moment, he said, “If I stay here for a few days, then I won’t be able to guarantee that you can continue to maintain your pure and holy image within the Helon Duchy.”

“Ahem ahem...” Firewind dryly coughed twice from afar. She waited until Han Shuo and the blushing Helen diverted their attention towards her before opening her mouth to say, "I still have some things to attend to, so I'll be leaving first!"

Without waiting for either of the two to speak, Firewind suddenly stamped her feet before walking straight out the door. Within a blink of an eye, she had disappeared without a trace in a truly neat and tidy manner.

Helen hatefully glared at Han Shuo before rebuking, "This is all your fault! How could you say such things in front of Firewind?"

Shrugging his shoulders, Han Shuo suddenly said, "It's her that wasn't being tactful. While we were having some alone time together, she should've found an excuse to take her leave. Heh heh you will eventually become my woman, while as the Duke, this is also your mansion, so the things that I spoke to you about really can't be considered inappropriate."

"How will that do?! Sister Firewind is just like a blood sister to me, and she will definitely tease me for this." Helen resentfully faced Han Shuo as she shouted in disagreement. She seemed like a young girl who had just tasted love for the first time.

"Alright, alright. I won't mess with you anymore. I actually need to leave now." Han Shuo prepared to leave the Helen Duchy. He wanted to go on a trip to the other seven duchies and see if he could find an opportunity to attach his mystical demons to the minds of a couple of the grand dukes. Afterwards, he would take advantage of the situation to gain control of a few of the grand dukes and gradually nibble away at the seven grand duchy's power.

"Ar-Are you really going to just leave right now?" Helen nipped her lips, anxiously looking at Han Shuo. After hesitating for a moment, she lowered her head blushing and suggested, "If you're willing to stay and accompany me for a few days, I will agree to anything else as long as you don't truly take me."

After saying this, Helen's head was nearly buried within her own towering peak. She couldn't help but to secretly curse at herself for being such a despicable person, wondering how could she have taken the initiative to yield to Han Shuo so quickly, but in the end, she had said these words aloud, and since she'd done so, it was yielding to Han Shuo in one way or another.

Han Shuo blanked as his eyes fervently looked at the bashful face of Helen, a goddess to the citizens of Helen Duchy. His heart had suddenly become incessantly hot with impatience. Standing before him, gorgeous beyond measure, was the cause of this heat, a bashful Helen. She possessed a charm that could seize control of any men's soul, causing Han Shuo to feel somewhat unable to control himself, nearly running amok.

"Alright then, I will stay and accompany you for a few days." Han Shuo agreed and suddenly held her by the waist to lift her up. Then, under Helen's bashful and soft cry, Han Shuo firmly face towards Helen's rosy and fragrant lip, plundering her mouth deeply. Before Helen secretly left her mansion, she had temporarily handed some official business to a trustworthy subordinate. Then, Han Shuo accompanied Helen and roamed throughout the Helen Duchy for the next two days.

Helen Duchy was equivalent to a province within the Lancelot Empire, and there were indeed some beautiful sceneries within the several cities. Helen had always been too busy up to now and could never find an occasion to go sightseeing within her own duchy by herself. This time, she was seriously exhilarated to travel with Han Shuo, taking advantage of his existence.

Han Shuo and Helen were both able to defy gravity and fly through the air. In addition to this, Han Shuo also had sufficient power to protect Helen, and thus, for the purpose of having some alone time together, they were naturally heartless and decided to exclude Firewind once again.

Several famous mountains, large rivers, and beautiful landscapes of ravines instigated both of them to make full use of the two days and visit everything.

Truthfully, Han Shuo had completely explored Helen's body to the greatest extent at his own convenience within these past two days. Besides the forbidden area of ecstasy, every other advantage on Helen's body had been taken by Han Shuo. At the start, Helen would be reserved and resisted, but as Han Shuo slowly behaved more intimately with her, she gradually let go of herself. Two days later, there was no estrangement between the two any longer.

A downright torrential waterfall cascaded like a flood, torrenting downwards with a myriad of silver streaks. It fell into a deep, bottomless cold pond, causing droplets of water to splatter like sparkling and translucent crystals.

Within the surroundings of the deep and cold pond, much lush vegetation grew. A few flower buds released delicate fragrances, as various kinds of birds chirped happily, dancing through the air. The feeling of spring tinged the air as the area was embellished to the brim with a thriving depiction of life.

On the branches of an old, towering tree, that had leaves and branches that were verdantly big and lush, Han Shuo embraced Helen and gazed at the beautiful scenery with a smile. He listened as Helen murmured all the different interesting events that had happened during her time within Helon Duchy.

For the past two days, Helen had relinquished the arrogant and dignified aura that kingdom lords had. She was a dainty and delicate girl who'd fallen in love, accompanying Han Shuo as much as she liked, laughing and smiling with joy. The more she looked at the man in front of her, the more satisfied she became. Some kind of feeling that was called contentment slowly but leisurely bubbled up from the bottom of her heart.

Snuggling on Han Shuo's bosom and slightly adjusting her posture, she looked at the scene in front of Han Shuo as she said, "If you want to conquer the seven grand duchies, there is one person that you should always keep in your mind."

For a moment, Han Shuo stared blankly. Then, he yielded, puzzlingly asking, "Who?"

"Stratholme of Stranglethorn Vale!" Helen replied with a grave expression.

“Who is this person? How come I’ve never heard of him before?” Han Shuo became even more puzzled, as he confusingly inquired.

“The current seven grand duchies was once the imperial court of Verdun. When the imperial court of Verdun was in its golden age, it was not at all inferior to your Lancelot Empire. During the days of the imperial court of Verdun, the teacher of the state was the sacred swordmaster Stratholme. Although the imperial court of Verdun is no more and has since been divided into the seven grand duchies, the former teacher of the state, Stratholme, is still living in Stranglethorn Vale. This person should still be living healthily even now. If the seven grand dukes are invaded by foreign enemies, and on the verge of being destroyed, he will definitely leave Stranglethorn Vale to assist the seven grand dukedoms.” Helen gazed at Han Shuo as she explained.

Hearing such words from Helen, Han Shuo truly felt extremely astonished. He couldn’t help but to investigate the details, asking, “The imperial court of Verdun has disappeared for so long. Are you sure this guy is still alive?”

Nodding her head, Helen said, “So the legends say. Last time, when your Lancelot Empire invaded our seven grand dukedoms, Stratholme proved to have a crucial effect. On the surface, the seven grand dukes don’t have someone at the level of a sacred swordmaster nor a sacred magus. However, the Lancelot Empire received a warning from Stratholme. When they previously invaded our seven grand dukedoms, your Lancelot Empire did not dispatch their sacred swordmaster, nor their sacred magus to attack. When the imperial court of Verdun was still present, the Teacher of the State, Stratholme was precisely the sacred swordmaster well renowned throughout the continent. Even though the imperial court of Verdun has been the thing of the past for so long, Stratholme is still living healthily even to date. No one knows how powerful he truly is. However, legends say that, last time, after the teacher of the state Stratholme gave a warning to your Lancelot Empire’s powerhouses, they truly did not dare to use their sacred magus’ taboo magic to reverse your Lancelot Empire’s losing prospects.”

Han Shuo was aghast as he silently nodded his head. In his heart, he firmly remembered this name: Stratholme.

Chapter 373: Backlash

Han Shuo didn't remain in Helon Duchy for long in the end. He stayed for exactly two days, just like he'd said. He rushed straight towards Narsen Duchy after separating from Helen and arrived at Duke Benedict Sackville's residence within the night.

The former teacher of the state, Stratholme of Verdun's Imperial Court, had left a deep and profound impression on Han Shuo. Thanks to Helen, Han Shuo realized that this teacher of the state was still alive. By normal standards, when an expert advanced to the level of a sacred magus or swordsman, their lifespan would extend accordingly. Stratholme had broken through to be a sacred level of existence a long time ago. Having been a sacred swordmaster for so long, the reclusive Stratholme was most likely still living healthily, according to logic.

This teacher of the state from the imperial court was also the seven grand duchy's sole sacred level existence. If Han Shuo wanted to seize the seven grand duchies for himself, then this Stratholme would indeed be a threat. Luckily, this person had already secluded himself long ago and Han Shuo only needed to make use of his mystical demons and attach them to the grand dukes before slowly turning them into his personal puppets one after another.

Han Shuo believed that this method would definitely be more dependable than the Lancelot Empire's previous large scale invasion. Stratholme wouldn't detect anything while staying secluded within Stranglethorn Vale. Han Shuo reckoned that by the time he had completely taken over the seven grand dukedoms in secret, his strength would most definitely have improved by another step. At that time, Han Shuo might even be able to do something about Stratholme even if the latter came.

During this night, a splendid sight could be seen within Benedict Sackville's mansion. Within the central courtyard, a banquet seemed to be underway as shadows flickered to and fro. Many knights completely clad in armor tightly defended the area. A crystal lantern hung from the ceiling in the main hall, while below, each and every noble from the Narsen Duchy wore formal attire and exuded a graceful bearing. They held wine glasses and conversed cheerfully with each other.

Benedict Sackville was naturally the most dazzling figure amongst them. The Narsen Duchy nobles surrounded Benedict, while constantly trying to pry some information from his mouth in a roundabout and indirect way.

The seven grand duchies' previous meeting at Sakamimir Valley had ended on a sour note. When the war had entered its most chaotic state, several of the grand duchies had suffered under an assassination attempt. As a result, those dukedoms had some weakened their military strength. Narsen Duchy was also not an exception as many of their high ranking generals were assassinated during the battle. Now that Benedict Sackville had returned to the dukedom, the first thing he wanted to do was naturally fill the gaps that'd occurred due to the loss of their outstanding generals.

After hearing this news, all the Narsen Duchy nobles began recommending their own family's younger generation with utmost of efforts. They hoped their younger generation could fill the gap and become a character wielding true power within Narsen Duchy. Benedict Sackville also clearly understood the intentions of these nobles and also understood that it was the perfect moment to recruit. Thus, he was holding this banquet within his mansion intending to understand everyone's thoughts while also gaining some personal benefits.

After sending out his mystical demons, Han Shuo grasped a clear view of the situation within Benedict Sackville's mansion. He knew how many experts were concealed within the mansion, and that a magical enchantment had been set up in a particular corner. Nothing could escape his prying eyes.

While hiding outside the Duke's mansion, Han Shuo seemed like a hunter in the night, calmly staring at his prey and patiently seeking for the best opportunity-to send his mystical demons into Benedict Sackville's brain.

Although the mystical demons had magical ability, trying to insert the demon into someone's brain was not that easy. Firstly, Han Shuo had to be standing right next to Benedict Sackville. When he began using his demons, he would have to promptly act in accordance to the secret demonic method without stopping. If he made even the slightest mistake, Benedict Sackville could immediately die a tragic death or even become an idiot, an outcome that would clash with Han Shuo's wishes.

During this intrusion, Benedict Sackville could not possess even a single ounce of resistance, while his mind had to maintain a state as innocent as a newborn child. Only like this would the mystical demon be prone to successfully invade one's brain.

Generally speaking, the most perfect timing was during a dream. Thus, Han Shuo would only descend next to Benedict Sackville's side when the latter entered deep into a nightmare. Then, taking advantage of his muddleheaded state, Han Shuo would successfully implant the mystical demon right into his brain.

Everyone dreamt. However, dreams were not a nightly occurrence and sometimes a person wouldn't dream for days on end. Han Shuo had to wait until Benedict Sackville finally dreamed. Thankfully, when a person dreamed, they would be sufficiently relaxed towards their surroundings which would allow Han Shuo to arrive soundlessly beside his target.

Han Shuo continued to linger in the vicinity of the duke's mansion over the next five days. His mystical demons would incessantly monitor Benedict Sackville, particularly at night. He remained clueless throughout of this tight surveillance.

Benedict Sackville was only been completely exhausted once over the next five days due to his official business on the third day. That day, he sank deep into his nightmare because he was excessively tired. However, Benedict Sackville had an incomparably tight protection around his mansion's room on that day. There were experts upon experts protecting the room outside, while all sorts of magical warning enchantments were present within his room.

That day, Han Shuo was only certain that he could forcefully charge in and kill Benedict Sackville. He could not guarantee that his mystical demons could intrude into his brain without warning.

Han Shuo had even carefully considered his gains and losses. In the end, he felt that even if he killed Benedict Sackville, there would be another noble that would become the new duke of Narsen Duchy. Rather than wasting time like this, he might as well just take control of Benedict Sackville.

Precisely because of this, Han Shuo abandoned his thought of killing Benedict Sackville that night and continued to wait for the next opportunity.

On the six night. Han Shuo unexpectedly noticed through his mystical demons that Benedict Sackville had left his mansion for the first time. While surprised, Han Shuo used his mystical demons to attentively watch Benedict Sackville on one hand and silently caught up to him on the other. He intended to see just what Benedict Sackville was up to.

Things went contrary to Han Shuo's expectations. Instead of going somewhere for official business, Benedict Sackville was obviously headed somewhere else. After walking along the streets within Narsen Duchy's Northwest city, Benedict finally arrived at a serene and elegantly quiet manor from the back door.

Twelve mystical demons scattered within the manor. In only a few minutes, Han Shuo had already discovered the type of place this serene and elegant manor was like. It was like the Rose Garden that Lawrence had previously brought Han Shuo to in the northern part of Ossen City. This manor was a noble's special venue for licentious activities.

This manor was undoubtedly Narsen Duchy's most well renowned place and it was even a bit bigger than Ossen City's Rose Garden. Inside, all kinds of atrociously shady business occurred in innumerable fashion. After the twelve mystical demons circled the place, Han Shuo gained a much deeper familiarity to the licentious and rotten behavior of the nobles.

Benedict Sackville was this place's owner. Han Shuo was still able to learn of this fact very quickly when he merely used two of his mystical demons to watch Benedict Sackville attentively. As Narsen Duchy's most influential men and as this place's owner, Benedict Sackville did not need to waste much of any of his energy while secretly controlling this place. Benedict Sackville first heard a report about current financial affairs in a heavily guarded room. Afterwards, he began walking towards a delicately serene and elegant small house with a chuckle.

A mother-daughter pair were waiting within this house. Han Shuo had already seen the the stunning mother-daughter pair when Benedict Sackville had held a personal banquet in his mansion last time. They were the wife and daughter of Count Delbert. Delbert's wife was past forty. However, because she had properly maintained her looks, she seemed to be barely thirty years old.

As Delbert's wife and her daughter Deyali stood there together, they seemed not like a mother and daughter. They seemed more like sisters as their faces glowed with smiles, welcoming the person in control of Narsen Duchy, Benedict Sackville.

Han Shuo was stunned through the eyes and ears of the mystical demons. Apparently, the mother-daughter pair had served Benedict Sackville before, and it was actually with Delbert's approval. It was precisely because of Delbert's encouragement that they were actually standing there. They jointly served Benedict Sackville in bed exchange for the only and youngest son of their family to become a captain knight under Benedict Sackville.

After discovering this situation from his mystical demons, Han Shuo's understanding of the secret and filthy actions of the nobles increased to an even deeper level. Who would've expected that Count Delbert would actually allow his own wife and daughter to serve Benedict Sackville just so his son could advance? While Han Shuo felt this was inconceivable, he also felt that this had truly opened his eyes as well.

This mother-daughter pair were indeed of the highest quality. The mother was seductively mature with ample, round curves while the daughter was full of youthful energy, possessing a whiff of a charmingly beautiful charm. As the two stood together, it was truly a scene for the perverted. The more ethics and taboos were violated, the more vigorous a male would become. When a mother-daughter pair simultaneously resolved to serve the same person, this was increase the male's vigor by ten times over.

Even Han Shuo was feeling a restlessness, not to mention Benedict Sackville. Han Shuo could barely restrain his rod from firing up when imagining this kind of service from a mother-daughter pair. Seeing Delbert's wife continue to smile charmingly while saying some good words for her son, Han Shuo's eyes felt somewhat glued to her distinctive charm, her graceful and mature noblewoman look.

"My God! I can't just let that old thing Benedict Sackville enjoy these benefits!" Han Shuo secretly gulped a mouthful of saliva as he ruthlessly began thinking. His brain started considering different ideas at the speed of light.

Han Shuo felt as though he was gradually losing some control over himself as he kept seeing the splendid and heart throbbing scene. He didn't know if he was about to enter the carnal realm or not, but he had this kind of impulsive desire to ruthlessly ravage the women there at any cost. As the charming daughter-female pair continued standing there, Han Shuo began thinking of the pleasing, forbidden situation, becoming somewhat even more agitated.

When Han Shuo began thinking of such taboo things, the demonic infant within him suddenly began overflowing with a bizarre power. These strands of power that came from within the demonic infant began releasing at an increasingly faster pace. Han Shuo soon found it even harder to control himself as his skin became flushed with a deeper red.

Alarmed, Han Shuo suddenly reacted, coming to his senses. The strand of power that came from the demonic infant was circulating with a bizarre power that carried an excessively nefarious aura. This kind of aura was the energy that Han Shuo had previously absorbed from the dark elf matriarch Adele.

“What’s going on? I had clearly removed the energy residue last time and this aura of nefarious energy should’ve been already been expelled from my body. How come there’s actually strands of this energy still circulating within the demonic infant?! Hm? That’s not right! Why wasn’t there such a dramatic movement last time when I faced Helen.” No matter what kind of unusual change the demonic infant underwent, Han Shuo could still make everything crystal clear with his consciousness. However, when he noticed that the demonic infant was rotating rapidly and that the excessively nefarious energy was becoming faster and faster, Han Shuo felt somewhat puzzled.

He knew that he had not entered the carnal realm yet. According to logic, when he entered the carnal realm, he would perhaps become more lustful, but this wasn’t just affect his lust, but other aspects as well. Could the reason that this strand of excessively nefarious energy became so merry due to the absorption of Adele’s power?

Although Han Shuo felt somewhat bewildered, he did began to gradually notice that the intense lust within his body was slowly becoming harder to control as the nefarious energy circulated within the the demonic infant. Han Shuo had always done as he would in being a demonic cultivator. Plus, he would also never rejected this kind of lust causing him to gradually overflow with the desire to follow his desires.

“Can’t let Benedict Sackville get this benefit! I must think of a plan!” While Han Shuo ignored his spreading lust, his brain was rotating at high speeds.

Due to the fact that this current place was not Benedict Sackville’s mansion, the defenses were much more inferior. There were only some personal guards around the elegant and refined room he was in. There weren’t any complicated magical enchantments that had been set up inside either.

After hesitating for just a moment, Han Shuo suddenly released a dark and dense fog and took advantage of the situation to slowly float into the room in which Benedict Sackville and Delbert’s wife and daughter were in. The three of them were still drinking wine at this point. As Han Shuo drifted over, he was somewhat unable to control the blue dots of light as they slowly flowed out of his body.

The spots of light were not so obvious as Han Shuo was shrouded in a dark, dense fog. Benedict Sackville and the mother-daughter pair slowly inhaled the blue light through their nose and mouth. All this while, not only was Han Shuo began gradually entering a bleary minded state and starting to breath in a coarser way, even the mother-daughter pair and Benedict Sackville were as well.

Including Han Shuo amongst them, the four individuals within the room were all shrouded by the bright blue spots of light that contained a nefarious energy, which slowly drifted through the air to cover the entire room. As Han Shuo accidentally allowed the release of such energy, he even became somewhat sober, gaining some reason. However, the other three individuals had become completely dull.

The two mother-daughter pair that had been sitting together at this moment was first to give in to their heart's desire due to their weak wills. The two began embracing each other and revealing their breasts, moaning together. Just as Benedict Sackville suddenly roared in a low voice and attempted to pounce on them with his red eyes, the relatively sober Han Shuo knocked him out with a stamp of his leg. Then, Han Shuo pounced onto the completely delirious mother-daughter pair like a beast.

A hard to supress sound suddenly sounded from the room as these two mother-daughter pair writhed together with Han Shuo. There was no sense of shame as the two served Han Shuo together. On the contrary, they served Han Shuo with utmost enthused fervor under Han Shuo's nefarious power.

....outside the elegant and refined room, the experts that Benedict Sackville had brought with him all began display an expression of envy as they listened to the beautiful, high-pitched, and suave moaning. They softly and secretly discussed with each other, a bit clueless to the fact that their grand duke had already been knocked out.

After a long time, the moaning within the room gradually calmed down as the window suddenly opened without wind. A lump of light smoke floated past as Han Shuo's entire body disappeared from here like a ghost. The black smoke swiftly floated away under the night. It disappeared without a trace in the blink of an eye.

After Han Shuo left, he flew at high altitudes towards the wilderness while enduring the monstrous changes occurring to his body. He summoned the elite earth zombie to open up some space within the underground abyss. As Han Shuo screamed with agonized howls, he took out a transportation array and arrived at the Cemetery of Death.

After coupling with Adele and absorbing her energy, Han Shuo had suddenly received some backlash from the excessively nefarious energy. It only held a small bit of power originally, but now it seemed more like boiling water as it flared up within his demonic infant. When the demonic infant, the foundation of Han Shuo's demonic cultivation, was suddenly rinsed with such a baleful and chaotic aura, he actually became uncontrollably violent and ferocious.

Deep within Han Shuo, there seemed to be an additional strand of energy that came from a boundless, distant place that was penetrating into him. That strand of energy spurred on the energy that Han Shuo absorbed from Adele, who'd received it from the spider goddess Rose, causing Han Shuo to feel an enormous amount of pain.

Within the Cemetery of Death, Han Shuo emitted heart wrenching screams as his durable body actually split open. Han Shuo felt that the foreign energy within him was becoming harder and harder to control. In the end, Han Shuo mobilized the Demonslayer Edge' enormous and boundless amount of wrathful power to fight against the power surging within him.

Within Han Shuo's whole body, an enormous amount of pure demonic yuan energy plus the Demonslayer Edge, that had absorbed tens of thousands of creatures and various kinds of negative energy, combined to form a powerful strike erupted like that of a torrential mountain flood. Following this, his inner body became a cruel battlefield as his demonic infant's power and the strength in his Demonslayer Edge's souls fought to the death against Adele's leftover power, as well as the sudden energy that had intruded into his body.

Without knowing how much time had passed, Han Shuo's magical cultivation and Demonslayer Edge's power gradually started gaining the advantage. Only after wasting such an endless amount of time did Han Shuo finally extinguish without a trace the detrimental energy within him.

"Pft!" Within the distant underground world, a dark elf was making offerings to the spider goddess Rose within a temple. A spider shaped, black temple held a young lady at its center, who had suddenly spat out a mouthful of blood. The young lady was facing the spider goddess Rose's statue in front of her as she muttered, "Wielding such inexhaustible divine dark power. Why couldn't I even imprison and reduce him to become my captive even with your divine powers?"

"Pft!" Another mouthful of blood was spat out as the young lady's face trembled in fear. She frighteningly faced the spider goddess Rose's statue and kowtowed while promptly saying, "I'm sorry, I shouldn't have questioned your might. Because you had to suffer the powerful laws of restriction, you indeed couldn't transmit even one in one thousandth of your true power. Your most pious believer wishes to accept punishment from you..."

As the young lady muttered to herself in a prayer, her beautiful skin suddenly split open as blood flew everywhere. It seemed like an invisible whip had whipped her. Yet, the young lady did not dare utter a sound as she continued to sincerely pray in the language of the dark elves.

Chapter 374: A Philosophy of Blasphemy

This chapter is unedited. etvolare is halting translations at chapter 380. Please check this post for further details.

Within the Cemetery of Death, Han Shuo collapsed in the center of the large-scale transportation array, his clothing long since ripped to pieces. His curled up, naked body constantly bled through his cuts and broken flesh. The wounds throughout his body were so deep that even his bones were visible.

Han Shuo's magical yuan circulated silently within his unconscious body. They were like many tiny streams trickling towards his withered meridians, moistening them. One after the other, they swam towards every nook and cranny within his body, bringing a cool and refreshing feeling.

While unconscious, Han Shuo's tattered and wounded body gradually healed at an astonishing rate. Shortly, his body had completely recovered to how he was before; with not even a trace of a scar. After his body recovered from this incredible torment, it actually seemed even firmer and stronger than before.

Because there was no sun nor moon at the Cemetery of Death, how much time had elapsed was also a mystery. As Han Shuo leisurely woke up, he noticed immediately that he was not suffering from painful cuts all over his body. Instead, the cells within his body seemed to be brimming with a surging power.

Then, moving from his curled posture and standing up with a stretch, all of the bones within his body cracked explosively nonstop. After probing his body with his consciousness, Han Shuo noticed that the vital organs within his body were still not completely healed. With a thought, he manipulated his magical yuan to wrap around them.

Waves of bizarre power came pouring into Han Shuo's vital organs. Under the nourishment of his yuan power, Han Shuo's vital organs began recovering faster by a hundredfold. With just a moment's effort, the weird feeling within his body disappeared.

After a light exhale, Han Shuo left the Cemetery of Death and arrived near a torrential waterfall. Under this cascading waterfall, Han Shuo sat cross-legged on top of the rock experiencing the most turbulent waters. Despite the incomparably violent current that heavily battered Han Shuo, he stayed completely motionless, sitting erect on top of the rock.

After another few days, Han Shuo finally walked off the rock and looked towards the entrance of the underworld. After hesitating a moment, he finally started heading towards the Cemetery of Death.

Then, a mark suddenly attracted Han Shuo's attention. He approached it and took a quick look before clearing the rocks away and extracting a letter from deep within the underground abyss. Han Shuo reassembled the message according to a special code before reading the contents of the letter.

This letter was most likely sent here through Emily's people after she'd personally written it, describing some crucial matters. The current power struggle between the princes had reached a climax within Ossen City due to the deteriorating health of the king. This also caused Lawrence's identity to be revealed, putting him at a severe disadvantage.

Because King Uhtred Lancelot and the chancellor of finance's wife had had an illicit affair, resulting in Lawrence, the nobles rejected Lawrence. Furthermore, even the somewhat less traditional nobles also clearly expressed their opposition against Lawrence's succession to the throne due to his identity.

The king was still alive and functioning well at the moment. He was forcefully suppressing the dissension and legitimizing Lawrence. However, the situation was still developing unfavorably. As of now, Lawrence's status within Ossen City was somewhat awkward as his faction was the weakest among the princes.

Seeing His Majesty's health continue to worsen, Lawrence felt anxious. He knew that the moment Uhtred passed away, the situation within Ossen City would be even harder to control. At that time, not only would a bastard of the king not obtain the throne, but perhaps even his life would be hard to preserve.

Yet while Lawrence was apprehensive, experiencing these incomparably troublesome and apprehensive days, Brettel City was outshining the other cities. Favorable news kept arriving one after another, describing how this waste of a city had suddenly began erupting with a new vibrant energy. Although Han Shuo was far from the empire's capital, his name continued to resound, making him more and more famous.

Precisely because of this, Lawrence suddenly thought of Han Shuo, hoping he would return to Ossen City and help him. During such a crucial moment, Lawrence hoped that while Uhtred had yet to die he could borrow Han Shuo's support to improve the situation. At the very least, Lawrence could still make the other princes somewhat more apprehensive with Han Shuo in Ossen City.

Han Shuo had already made his decision after he finished reading the contents.

The moment he entered the Cemetery of Death, a dragon's melodious howl resonated throughout the entire cemetery. Fortunately there was an enchantment enveloping the entire cemetery that never dispersed, or the sound would've travelled for hundreds of miles.

"Honorable Master, you have finally returned." Gilbert was in his dragon form hovering in the skies, but after seeing him, he swept directly towards Han Shuo.

Gilbert's body seemed to have enlarged somewhat while the scales covering his body had become pitch black. He exuded a sinister, ancient, and desolate feeling. Han Shuo knew that this sinister aura came naturally from Gilbert, while that ancient and desolate feeling was due to absorbing the green dragon beast's crystal core.

After the uproar, his enormous body gradually shrank and transformed into a person with coarse black skin. His dark black eyes had an additional hint of otherworldliness to them. However, because his body's sinister aura was too heavy, that hint of otherworldliness was completely hidden.

Han Shuo only shot a glance at Gilbert before immediately sensing a stronger power from Gilbert's body. He asked with a smile, "How was it?"

"Great! Fantastic! That green dragon beast's crystal core had an extraordinarily powerful energy which allowed me to advance to the second level of a super rank magical beast. Additionally, I feel that even though I am just at the middle of the second level, my current strength is still extraordinarily powerful. Muahaha! Thank you very much for your grace Master." Gilbert laughed loudly and heartily, his voice brimming with satisfaction.

"I have received news from the underground world and I believe it will spark your interest a little." Han Shuo waited until Gilbert's exuberant laugh subsided before saying in a measured tone.

"What news? Hehe, I have finally recognized that my decision to follow you, Master, was a correct one. If I didn't follow you Master, how would I be able to advance to the second level so quickly?" Gilbert clearly understood that all of this was due to Han Shuo's favors. Thus, he couldn't help but to start bootlicking.

"Gilbert, who would've thought that you would actually be the grandson of the underground world's dark dragon patriarch. You brat, your background is not humble." Han Shuo was all smiles as he looked at Gilbert. Gilbert felt taken aback, Han Shuo continued, "That patriarch grandpa of yours seems to be extremely worried about you. He even got the dark elves to scout for word of you. It seems like you, runaway-brat, is actually quite the favorite."

"Great Master, how could you know about these things? Could it be that you've actually entered the underground world's dark dragon city? The astonished Gilbert looked at Han Shuo as he puzzledly pushed for answers.

Gilbert had never told anyone about his identity. Thus, he believed that there shouldn't be anyone who could know this. He truly felt confused now that he had heard such a statement indicating a clear understanding of his origins from Han Shuo.

"Your dark dragon city has some prisoners. Among them is a group of powerful dark elves from the previous generation. One of them was called Adele. Do you recognize this name?

“Adele. I seem to have heard of this name, however I have never seen her before. Within our dark dragon City, there are indeed some fellows imprisoned within that have grossly offended us. However, I just don’t have any interest in such things. Master, why do you ask?”

“It’s precisely because this Adele had made a promise to your grandpa that she would help to find your whereabouts. However, I’ve already killed her. Not long ago, I absorbed the energy on her body. As a result, I nearly brought trouble to myself and received a backlash. So, I want to ask about things pertaining to Adele.”

After hearing this from Han Shuo, Gilbert was extremely surprised. Then, he stared into space before saying, “I heard that this Adele seems to be the former matriarch of the dark elf clan. She can use the faith of the dark elves to connect to the evil goddess Rose. As a result, she possesses some extraordinarily frightening powers in bed.”

“Adele has been imprisoned within dark dragon city for many years now and it is said that she is extraordinarily beautiful. Considering the fact that our race has such a lustful temperament, we would’ve already jumped on top of her long ago. However, precisely because she can use the power of Rose, not a single dark dragon dares to forcefully take her to bed. They fear that she will suddenly use some treacherous methods while under pleasure.”

“Master, it is also said that Adele herself is also extraordinarily powerful. I’m afraid that even our clan’s second and third ranked dark dragons are not a match for her. It is said that due to her devout faith in Rose, Adele can communicate with Rose and acquire her divine energy. Our dark dragon race is deeply afraid that killing her will provoke the anger of that evil goddess. Thus, we have continued to only keep her imprisoned within. Don’t tell me that you’ve truly killed her?”

“I f*cked her to death!” Han Shuo calmly replied.

“Wahaha....” The little lascivious Gilbert became excited as he looked at Han Shuo with worship, “Master, what happened? Do tell! Hurry and tell your faithful servant the specifics of the situation.”

Seeing Gilbert suddenly becoming excited right after hearing this, Han Shuo walloped him angrily. Only then did he describe the things that he had experienced. Finally, after describing the previous incident where there was a hard to suppress lust, he calmly continued, “I can guarantee that when I went crazy with lust not long ago, besides the energy that I had absorbed from Adele, there was also an even more tremendous and sinister power within my body. That strand of energy brought with it a bit of aura that shouldn’t exist within this plane. If things are as I predict, it probably came from the Spider Goddess Rose. I really don’t know how this could’ve happened. Don’t tell me that the fact that I killed Adele was actually discovered! Could there actually be the existence of deities within this world?”

Listening to Han Shuo’s description of his experiences, Gilbert’s previous excitement transformed into rare seriousness. After thinking for a moment, he said to Han Shuo, “Master, I’ve heard from Grandpa* that this world is not as simple as we think. Even with our dark dragon powers, we can only live in the underground world as if we are suffering from some kind of restriction. Even though my grandpa’s power is frightening, he still can’t avoid such restrictions. I can’t think of anything else that can actually constrain our race within the underground world besides the universal concept of gods.”

Knitting his eyebrows tightly, Han Shuo couldn’t help but to raise his head towards the gloomy and deathly still sky of the Cemetery of Death, sunless and moonless all year round. He began thinking of the Church of Light’s Deity of Light, the Temple Knights, the holy aura on Kosse’s body, and the feeling that Han Shuo felt from the Revelation artifact.

Then he thought of the existence of the Calamity Church and the skeletal staff within his own hands. When he’d first held this skeletal staff, he entered an absentminded state and saw the shadow of a ten thousand meter giant in his mind. Now that Han Shuo had gained a faint layer of understanding, gradually believing in that kind of imaginary existence of gods.

“Master, perhaps you were really attacked by that spider goddess last time. However, it is said that deities cannot truly intervene with the mortal plane. Else, they would suffer restrictions from the laws of this spatial world. Look, even that excessively evil spider goddess cannot do anything to you. This is sufficient proof that even she cannot violate this all-powerful law. There is no need for us to fear her.” The dark dragon Gilbert casually consoled Han Shuo.

Silently nodding his head, Han Shuo finally recognized how insignificant he was. Thinking of the giant’s presence that emitted an aura from millions and millions of years ago, Han Shuo couldn’t help but to feel some reverence within his heart as he said to Gilbert, “Indeed, we cannot surmise the existence of deities, however these deities must be subjected to this spatial world’s restrictive powers. Otherwise, the moment they descend onto this plane, this plane would possibly be turned into ruins.”

“Mmn, the deities must also be antagonistic towards each other, otherwise the Church of Light and the Calamity Church would not wage war for so many years.” Gilbert was also agnostic and didn’t have any feelings towards them at all. Regardless of whether they were evil or righteous gods, he remained as carefree as always, seemingly without a care for the world.

Han Shuo did not think much more about it as he nodded his head, “Alright, since you’ve already evolved to the second level, then you should proceed to the Valley of Sunshine and help Trunks. I believe that the Valley of Sunshine will have a large disturbance soon. If you are within the Valley of Sunshine then the Soul Destroyer Mercenary will be somewhat more secure. Ah, right, you need to pay attention to the matters pertaining to dark dragon city. Your grandpa has been constantly looking for you. I think that even if you don’t return, you should still let someone deliver some news to your grandpa so he won’t need to worry.

“I understand Master, I think that if my grandpa knew I’ve already entered the second level, he will definitely be extremely happy. When I was in dark dragon city, that old guy would constantly pressure me to cultivate for the entire day. I've already cultivated for all these years yet I was still at the first level. Now look at me, it's been barely any time since I've left, yet I've already succeeded in my advancement. This clearly indicates that his methods are useless!" Gilbert indifferently replied to Han Shuo, seeming wholly unconcerned with his master's words.

"Alright, I need to return to Ossen City and deal with some matters. However, I will constantly pay attention to the matters within the Valley of Sunshine." Han Shuo informed him. Then, after Gilbert left, he too took a step into the transportation array.

Chapter 375: The Sculpture

This chapter is unedited. etvolare will be halting translation of GDK this weekend. Please go here for future news of the series.

Lancelot Empire's Ossen City. Boozt Merchant Guild Headquarters.

Phoebe and Lawrence sat upright sipping tea within an elegant secondary courtyard. Lawrence wore a clouded expression. Although his identity as a prince was already recognized by the king, he was still living miserably.

In contrast, Phoebe, who sat opposite from him, had a charming appearance that was becoming increasingly natural and elegant. But because she also held that divine weapon, "Starry Sky", she even had a somewhat icily arrogant charm. As Phoebe fondled with the "Starry Sky" within her hands, unwilling to part with it, her thought began uncontrollably floating towards the distant Brettel City.

"Junior sister, your current Boozt Merchant Guild is becoming more and more influential thanks to your work. Bryan is also like a fish in water in Brettel City. However, my days just aren't so well. I will probably be immediately killed by Charles right after royal father passes away. Did you truly help me deliver my letter to Bryan or not?" Lawrence looked at the Phoebe in front of him and asked somewhat helplessly.

"Senior Brother, it's not like Brettel City doesn't have any of your people. You should be even clearer than me whether Bryan is within Brettel City or not. But what you're saying is also true. It's already been so many months. Just why isn't there even the slightest trace of him. Could it be that he's gone to do another evil deed again?" Phoebe's long eyelashes fluttered as her pupils sparkled with doubt.

Lawrence had dispatched some people to Brettel City before, Faulke being one of them. Afterwards, Lawrence had also arranged some talented politicians to enter Brettel City one after the other. Although these people were currently holding suitable positions within Brettel City, they would continue to relay information to Lawrence just like before. From the information they had sent, it seemed that Han Shuo was really not within Brettel City.

Lawrence sighed before suddenly saying to Phoebe, "I also have the Dark Mantle agents helping me inquire for any information of him. But, even until now, there has not been even the slightest hint of him at all. What do you think? Could something have happened to him?"

Phoebe laughed proudly while promptly taking out the divine weapon "Starry Sky", which emitted a bright and sparkling starlight. She shot a disdainful glance at Lawrence and said, "He could even kill Celt, the number one Redbud Knight commander out of the Continent's ten great knight troops. Furthermore, Celt was also a very powerful dragon rider. Just what kind of mishaps do you think he will face?"

That fellow is extremely crafty and sinister while his sensitivity is frighteningly sharp. Even if he encounters a dangerous situation, he would still be able to escape in advance. He definitely won't have any mishaps. Instead, he is definitely doing some evil deeds in secret once again. These words were naturally not spoken to Lawrence, but secretly mused within her own heart instead.

Lawrence carefully reconsidered and found it reasonable. It wasn't his first day knowing Han Shuo, so he naturally understood that with Han Shuo's personality and strength, he would absolutely not indulge in foolish and reckless actions of courage. The moment he noticed that he was in a helpless situation, he would always leave immediately in a sorry manner. According to reason, no accidents should've occurred to him indeed.

As his hands massaged his temples, Lawrence said somewhat exhausted, "Junior sister, I must have been too anxious lately, causing my thoughts to gradually become somewhat chaotic recently."

"Don't worry. With your relationship with Bryan, as long as he knows about the current circumstances within Ossen City, he should come back and help you. Mm, I have heard that not long ago, the seven grand duchies tried to unite and defeat Brettel City. I think Bryan has possibly gone to the seven grand duchies to do some secretive things. You needn't worry about it. He will definitely come to find you after he has finished dealing with his matters.” Phoebe said, comforting Lawrence. She knew that Lawrence had really been forced to the edge by the princes and she naturally understood Lawrence’s current feelings.

“Hopefully he will rush back before my royal father passes away. Besides, we also have no clue what’s going on with our master. The situation has already reached such a state, but he has yet to take a declarative stand. Even I have no idea if he will support me in the end or not.” Lawrence complained with a headache. Then, he turned to Phoebe, “Junior sister, you’re our master’s most loved disciple. Do you have a clue as to what our master will plan in the end?”

Phoebe thought for a moment before replying, “Master has always been solely responsible for teaching us various kinds of knowledge. I feel like he wants you to become king relying on your own strength. You should also know, our master has always made us work hard for our own goals. He has never once relied on his identity to help us before.”

“Sigh. If I really just rely on my own strength, it’s basically impossible for me to become king based on the current circumstances.” Lawrence seemingly knew about a bit of his master’s personality, as he couldn’t help but to sigh.

“Although Master won’t justly and openly help you, however, he also wouldn’t let others bully you. If not for Master letting Grandpa Bollands secretly protect you, I’m afraid you would have already been secretly killed by others. This proves that Master also cares very much for you.” Phoebe continued to console Lawrence.

Hearing this, Lawrence nodded his head and agreed, “This is also true. Fortunately Bollands was there to help me several times, otherwise I would have really have been killed long ago.”

Phoebe did not continue to speak as she continued to focus on polishing the “Starry Sky” that was already clearly shining like a reflective mirror. She treated it as though this sword was Han Shuo.

“When I came over, Master wanted me to tell you that you shouldn’t depend too heavily on the weapons in your hands. Weapons will forever be dead objects. They might be able to make you a little bit stronger but they won't increase your personal strength." Lawrence stood up and said to Phoebe.

"Don't worry, I have an even higher comprehension towards Master's martial skills than you. You had better put more effort into thinking how you can get some additional advantages from your royal father instead." Phoebe said indifferently before continuing to wipe the divine weapon within her hand. When she thought of the fact that this damned guy had still yet to see her after so long, she realized that, in the end, this long-distance relationship was definitely not going to work!

As Phoebe reminisced and mentally nagged Han Shuo, he had already arrived at Ossen City. Only after arriving at Ossen City did Han Shuo notice that three months had already passed while he was unconscious and resisting spider goddess Rose's power within the Cemetery of Death. During these three months, the seven grand duchies continued to unceasingly go on campaigns against each other while Brettel City and the Helon Duchy had already conducted numerous secret business deals in secret.

Han Shuo did not make another move towards Narsen Duchy's Benedict Sackville at all. On one hand, the opportunity was hard to seek while on the other, there were still other more important matters waiting to be done. After returning to Brettel City from Narsen Duchy, Han Shuo took the necessary materials to refine an elite metal zombie from Jack, entered Mount Silk, and planted the future elite metal zombie within. Then, after handing over some tasks to Jack and the others, Han Shuo left Brettel City, passed through Seamist City's transporting array, and arrived at Ossen City.

Because Faulke and the other former subordinates of Lawrence had already told Han Shuo that he wanted to urgently see him, Han Shuo immediately left for Ossen City. Knowing Han Shuo's destination, Faulke and the rest didn't report to Lawrence about Han Shuo's appearance because they knew that Han Shuo would arrive there first.

After entering Ossen City, Han Shuo hurried towards Fanny's laboratory place first because the teleportation array was near Babylon Academy. Han Shuo had not seen Fanny for ages and was truly longing for the bright and beautifully moving teacher at the moment.

Han Shuo headed for Babylon Academy under the cover of the dusky night. On the road, Han Shuo avoided some relatively crowded areas and headed towards the necromancy major.

The moment Han Shuo arrived at the long hallway with the sculptures that Jack and him frequently cleaned off, he suddenly noticed an extremely familiar-looking new sculpture. The finished sculpture was made of pure white, white jade and was meticulously carved. This imposingly tall sculpture faced the sky while holding a magical staff, and was posturing as if it was chanting a magical chant.

Under this new sculpture, a glamorous engraving of small characters stated: Bryan, a graduate of Babylon Academy's Institute of Necromancy. Graduated in two years and three months-the fastest graduation speed in history. He is currently an archmage necromancer and has formerly defeated Great Swordmaster Leah Cain....

As Han Shuo looked at his own sculpture, he suddenly assailed with indescribable emotions. When he and Jack had been both wiping these sculptures, they had once been filled with ambition and desire to stand amongst these sculptures. But, after reminiscing through these times, he truly felt a spontaneous pride and satisfaction of attaining his achievements when he truly saw his own sculpture.

"I... never expected – I really never expected that one day my own sculpture would be able to stand here and become a motivational model for future generations." Han Shuo muttered to himself as he looked at his own sculpture in front of him.

"It's because of you that new student enrollment in the necromancy major has increased by many folds. Hehe, Fanny has become even more and more busy now!" A kind voice sounded from behind Han Shuo. Babylon Academy's Dean Emma gradually walked in front of Han Shuo.

As a space grand magus, Emma possessed a peculiar ability of walking through space. Within this region, as long as Emma wanted to find someone, she could immediately appear in front of that person's face.

After the space fluctuated, Han Shuo immediately knew that Emma had noticed his arrival. When Emma's voice sounded, Han Shuo was not even a little surprised as he smilingly looked at the all too familiar Dean Emma, saying, "I truly never expected that my sculpture would be able to stand here."

"Hehe, you already had the qualifications to stand here when you advanced from a magical apprentice to an archmage in three years. Even more so, after you graduated from this Academy, your every action maintained this stunning incredulity. The necromancy major is this Academy's weakest major, but such a character like you could still emerge from it! It's only natural for your sculpture to be erected." Amy kindly smiled as she walked in front of Han Shuo's sculpture and lightly pressed her thumb on the annotation below the sculpture. She had just added another character, transforming the symbols of archmage into grand magus. Emma seemed to have already ascertained that Han Shuo was a grand magus necromancer.

Chapter 376: Pointers

“But I still haven’t gone to the Magic Association to verify my strength yet, Dean Emma.” Looking at Emma’s movements, Han Shuo couldn’t help but laugh lightly.

Emma winked as she responded, beaming merrily, “So, you’re admitting that you possess the strength of a grand magus?”

Han Shuo had no idea how Emma could see through to his true strength from just one look, but he also didn’t feel the need to conceal such facts. It would be fine as long as his demonic magic was kept a secret. He didn’t need to conceal his achievements as a mage. After hearing what was said, he nodded his head, “That’s right!”

Han Shuo only considered his demonic magic as his most important secret, while he considered his strength as a mage as leverage for gaining additional benefits. Thus, he was actually preparing to go to the Magic Association to verify his qualifications as a grand magus. Regardless of nation, all grand magus ranked mages could obtain extremely high statuses. If Han Shuo went to the Magic Association to verify his qualifications, his future career would be impacted positively.

“As I thought. I could sense a bit of an aura on your body, but the most significant reason is because you killed Celt. To be able to kill a sky rider with a green dragon as a pet, your strength naturally has to be at the grand magus level.” Emma replied matter of factly.

“Dean Emma, why have you come to see me?” Han Shuo knew that Emma was extremely busy and there were a lot of a lot of small and big matters within Babylon Academy that she had to deal with. She definitely came to see Han Shuo for some particular matters this time.

Emma nodded as expected before looking at Han Shuo with a smile, “Necromancers are sparse within the Empire. There are even pitifully fewer grand magus ranked necromancers. The ones I know only know to practice magic and there are very few that appear in public. Hehe, you were also part of the Babylon Academy. Even more importantly, you’ve also promised Fanny that you would give some pointers in your free time to the students of your major. However, I hope that wasn't an empty promise, but that you actually try to seriously guide them when you have the time."

"Hehe, Dean Emma, don't worry, I will definitely give them some pointers if I'm free." Han Shuo did not readily make a conclusive promise. Han Shuo currently had way too many matters on hands, and he couldn't remain at Babylon Academy to guide the students. However, if he really had some time, even if it was just for the sake of Fanny's reputation, Han Shuo would still be willing to lecture them for one or two classes.

"That would be great, hehe." Emma was wreathed with smiles as she nodded her head. After pausing for a moment, she continued, "I know you came to find Fanny. She has been somewhat busy recently. However, she is nevertheless blossoming and becoming increasingly beautiful. Oh, that's right, I almost forgot. Fanny has also advanced to archmage. You best treat her well, for she is also very amazing."

Han Shuo's longing for Fanny became even more impossible to be restrained when he listened to Emma. He laughed, "I'm actually looking for Fanny for some important matters. Then, I'll be on my way."

"Mnn, go ahead." Emma didn't obstruct Han Shuo.

The sky darkened after Emma and Han Shuo finished conversing. However, Han Shuo was incomparably familiar with the necromancy major and easily detoured around the students, traversing straight towards Fanny's laboratory.

Han Shuo yet to enter Fanny's laboratory when he suddenly heard an oppressive stamping of footsteps from within. Feeling startled, he continued listening. He couldn't help but to show another stunned expression. He could hear an incredibly bulky creature via the heavy footsteps within the room. Han Shuo did not knock and walked in directly.

An evil knight was holding an enormous spur and making stabbing movements within Fanny's laboratory, on top of an open area. A magical array was present five meters from the creature. Fanny was panting inside while controlling the evil knight, seemingly as though a large amount of her mental strength had been consumed.

After summoning an evil knight, the necromancer did not need too much mental strength to control it because it was a kind of advanced undead creature. Just a command to attack would suffice. An evil knight resembled neither a zombie nor a skeletal warrior, and it naturally didn't require a summoner to dictate how to attack. It's wisdom was completely enough for it to display its powers freely and effectively..

Naturally, if the necromancer wished, he could still use his mental strength to control the evil knight. However, this would not only consume his mental strength at a faster pace, it would also not help the evil knight display its true powers.

In short, right after summoning the evil knight, this kind of advanced undead only needed the necromancer to transmit an attack command and it would suffice. Unlike skeletal warriors and zombies, It simply didn't need the use of mental strength to control it. Instead, this would hinder the evil knight's natural attacking ability.

Fanny was naturally caught up in a misconception that she believed this kind of advanced undead creature needed to be manipulated like a skeletal warrior or a zombie. Looking at her huffing, seemingly seriously practicing and using her mental strength in an attempt to facilitate the advanced evil knight's attacking abilities, Han Shuo felt that it was somewhat laughable.

Fanny was indeed as Dean Emma had described. She had become increasingly beautiful after these several months. This was naturally due to the credit of the Rebirth Pill. Her skin was as white as jade, and the substantial improvement to her inner body was also the reason why she had advanced to the level of archmage so quickly.

Han Shuo entered soundlessly. Fanny had just started to struggle with the evil knight and did not sense Han Shuo's existence whatsoever. Only when she manipulated the evil knight to turn around and stab forward did she suddenly notice Han Shuo standing by the door, grinning. Fanny pupil's blossomed with incredible happiness and surprise. But suddenly, she started grinding her teeth and stabbing her jade-like fingers hatefully at Han Shuo.

Under Fanny's manipulation, the evil knight's enormous spur suddenly rose, piercing towards Han Shuo who stood there, smiling.

Han Shuo was taking in all of Fanny's expressions. How would he not know exactly why Fanny was attacking like a spoiled child? He knew that she was angered because he hadn't come to see her for a very long time. Han Shuo was still smiling and gazing at her with deep emotions as the imminent spur pierced towards him.

When the enormous spur pierced near the top of Han Shuo's head, Fanny's lovely face suddenly changed colors. She hastily used her mental strength to control and stop the spur from continuing in case the spur truly harmed Han Shuo.

However, the spur was truly as quick as a gale while Fanny was obviously still not familiar enough to properly control the evil knight. Thus, Fanny's mental strength was mostly useless as the spur continued to pierce towards Han Shuo's head. It only slowed somewhat while emitting an ear-piercing, shrieking sound like the braking of a car.

Fanny became incomparably frightened. At the moment, she was unable to open her mouth to urge Han Shuo to jump out of the way. She could only look at Han Shuo, terrified while exerting all of her mental strength to try and stop the spur.

Ding!

In the end, the spur still landed on Han Shuo's head. However, an unexpected metallic sound of collision rang out after a black cloud of light briefly took form on top of Han Shuo's head, before disappearing strangely afterwards.

Han Shuo continued to smile, standing there without even the slightest movement. The spur's pierce did not even touch one hair on Han Shuo's head. In the end, the evil knight also ceased to a stop under Fanny's command.

In the next moment, Fanny suddenly threw herself into Han Shuo's chest and recklessly started beating Han Shuo's sturdy chest. A faint sobbing sound could be heard as she said, "Idiot, you can even kill Celt, so why didn't you dodge? Are you trying to die?"

Han Shuo hugged Fanny tightly, saying softly, "How could you actually hurt me?" before suddenly kissing Fanny firmly in the lips. The two people were vigorously tangling together like snakes, even their souls seemed to be blending together.

This kiss persisted for ages. Only when Han Shuo's hands start unconsciously climbing over Fanny's body parts did Fanny suddenly awaken, abruptly pushing Han Shuo away. She glared at Han Shuo with a reddened face, saying cutely, "I am your teacher! This is also a school. Behave!"

The moment Han Shuo saw Fanny's lovely and charming appearance and heard her words, he felt even more excited. He couldn't help but chuckle evilly when he thought back to when he'd been an ordinary student who greatly revered her. "It's precisely because you are my teacher that when I kissed you, I became even more excited. You can't escape from the palm of my hands."

Right after these words sounded, Han Shuo captured Fanny once again and advanced towards Fanny's face, giving her another deep kiss. Then, he used his two hands to feel her soft and smooth back before gradually shifting his big hands lower. Before Fanny had time to react, Han Shuo suddenly palmed Fanny's outstandingly smooth and round butt and squeezed without restraint.

Fanny struggled and whimpered while pushing Han Shuo away again with a red face. She once again glared hatefully at Han Shuo before taking a few steps back saying, "You little pervert. You haven't even seen my father yet. Behave yourself!"

Han Shuo paused. Then, looking at the evil knight next to him, he explained to Fanny with an unchanging expression, "An evil knight is not controlled like a zombie nor a skeletal warrior. Instead, since an evil knight possess it's own intelligence, it's only able to completely bring out its true fighting strength when it's not being controlled by mental strength.

Fanny listened and looked at Han Shuo astonished, before saying in doubt, "It can bring out it's most powerful fighting strength just by relying on itself?"

Han Shuo replied while nodding his head, "Of course, an evil knight is an advanced undead creature. Not only do they possess intelligence, they also possess their own dignity. If you don't let it display its own strength as it likes, but use your own mental strength to force it to submission, it will instinctively try to resist. There are no advantages to this at all..."

Han Shuo and Fanny's position had unknowingly reversed. Originally, it was always Han Shuo who would inquire about some difficult magic problems. But the Han Shuo of today could actually discover Fanny's misconceptions from just a glimpse at her actions and even help her correct it.

Chapter 377: Rapid Progress

All chapters post 373 were not edited. etvolare is stopping translation at chapter 380, please refer to this link for more information about the future of the series.

Fanny had no choice but to admit that her former student, Han Shuo, had already exceeded her knowledge in the essence of necromancy.

Looking at Han Shuo's waxing eloquence, Fanny's train of thought floated to the past, thinking of when Han Shuo was still a magic apprentice. The willful, diligent quest for knowledge while cultivating, enduring a life of silence and solitude. At this moment, Fanny seemed to have comprehended a little of something.

This male standing in front of her had lost any traces of his former self. Previously, he'd been a cowardly youngster with a delicate body, not even a hundred seventy centimeters tall. He had been a youngster that silently disposed of trash all day long, and was completely powerless in the face of others bullying him. Was he truly this outstanding, formidable male that was currently in front of her?

Fanny's mind was somewhat temporarily distracted as she dazedly looked at Han Shuo, spellbound. She'd already forgotten the magic explanation that Han Shuo had just given to her. Only after a long time when Han Shuo suddenly emitted a loud noise did Fanny finally awaken. Her bright, clear eyes looked towards Han Shuo with an apologetic smile. She explained, "I don't know why, but I've noticed that the current you seems to have no features that overlap with the previous you. Seemingly, within just a split second, you changed into a completely different person. Even now, you are constantly changing. It makes me feel as if I'm in a dream."

Within a few short years, Han Shuo had already matured to a point where others could only hope to reach. Now, even his teacher Fanny needed to admire him. Although Lancelot Empire had no lack of geniuses, Han Shuo's talent and development speed was unique to him alone.

Han Shuo flashed a dashing smile and said, "I have changed far too much from my past self, so this kind of feeling you have is extremely normal. Hehe, everyone can change. This is how humans evolve. Only when someone experiences something that no one else can imagine does he grow and mature quickly."

Only Han Shuo knew in his heart that he was from a completely different world from Bryan. They had always been completely different individuals with completely different temperaments and experiences. Thus, for Fanny to notice these inconsistencies was a completely normal phenomenon. As a result, Han Shuo found an excuse to remove the suspicions within Fanny's heart.

"Bryan, I've always been within the Academy for the few years you've been gone, but you've rarely come to train. I've constantly wanted to know what you've been doing all these years. Why is that every time you return here, you always startle people? According to what you've said, you must've experienced something I am completely unable to imagine, else your transformation wouldn't be so quick. Can you tell me?" Fanny looked at Han Shuo in a daze as she inquired what happened in those days.

After Fanny's sudden question, Han Shuo thought for a moment before saying, "The experiences I had are too numerous, and it's too inappropriate for me to narrate them one after the other. However, it's precisely as you guessed. My experiences have indeed been extremely rich these few years. Hehe. Simply put, at every moment, I was always in the midst of passing through a life-threatening situation. It is precisely because of these situations that my potential was stimulated, and thus, my improvements unceasing.

"Bryan. Your life has truly been tough on you these past couple of years. I never asked but that didn't mean I wasn't concerned about you. It's just I had no idea how I should help you...." Fanny looked up at Han Shuo while gently and softly chatting. Her hands touched Han Shuo's face, lightly caressing his unswerving, determined expression, seemingly trying to smoothen away those few years of hardships.

Han Shuo closed his eyes, feeling at ease as he allowed Fanny to caress his face. Unexpectedly, there were no traces of sexual desire within his heart. Instead, every experience he had since he'd been born into the world slowly and vividly replayed in his mind. Han Shuo even started to think of his parents from the other world.

Han Shuo did not violate Fanny that night. This was mainly because when she encountered some problems in her magic knowledge, Han Shuo helped her by meticulously explaining it in fine detail. From being engrossed with Han Shuo's explanations, Fanny gradually drifted to sleep. A sweet smile hung on the corner of her mouth as she emitted a soft laugh. She gradually fell asleep in Han Shuo's chest.

Seeing Fanny falling asleep, Han Shuo maintained a constant, unmoving posture, allowing Fanny to sleep in comfort. He took out a necromancy tome from his space ring and began to diligently delve into it once more.

When Han Shuo advanced to his current magical cultivation realm, the need for sleep gradually disappeared from his life. Even if his body and mind were completely exhausted, he only needed a brief moment to circulate his magical yuan to completely recover. He never needed to sleep again to recover his body and mind. Precisely because of this, Han Shuo had even more time and energy to improve himself. In addition, Han Shuo's brain had developed substantially. Thus, the throbbing and wondrous characters within the cryptic magic tome were slowly unraveled under his meditation and studying.

Books were the most valuable of legacies left behind by his predecessor. This author was also a person with extraordinary ability and wisdom, particularly in the discipline of magic. It wasn't an easy matter for successors to want to use this book to find a proper cultivation path.

The existence of the Babylon Academy of Martial Arts would be meaningless if anyone could improve just through books. However, it wasn't easy to find a teacher that could give proper guidance to someone at Han Shuo's realm. Only a book filled with experiences left behind by a predecessor could provide such guidance. Only such a method could allow someone to breakthrough their constraints in the fastest way.

However, magical tomes were cryptic and difficult to understand.. The more advanced the tome, the more complex it was. Taking this necromancy book in Han Shuo's hand, for example. If an untalented individual were to take a look at the symbols and incantations within, they would immediately become bewildered, let alone grasp the true meaning within each symbol.

After Han Shuo's brain region had been excavated due to a breakthrough in his magical cultivation, his perception, memory, and comprehension became even more superior compared to ordinary people. When he delved into books in meditation, his comprehension speed was many times faster than his peers. It was precisely because Han Shuo could replace his sleep with cultivation, and the fact that his brain was too powerful, that he could grasp the old fey corpse summoning technique so quickly.

Han Shuo didn't wait for Fanny to wake up in the morning before soundlessly leaving the laboratory. He headed straight for the Magic Association.

Han Shuo met the same young lady as before after entering the Magic Association. The young lady immediately became excited after seeing Han Shuo enter. She blurted, "You're Count Bryan right? I recognize you from before. How come you've returned to Ossen City? Hehe. I've heard that you've wiped out a lot of bandits while you were at Brettel City. You're so amazing!"

Previously, when Han Shuo advanced to an archmage necromancer, it was also this young lady who'd received him. She seemed to have a very deep impression of Han Shuo. She immediately started blurting with excitement the moment she saw Han Shuo entering.

The young lady's sudden acclamation attracted a lot of attention. There were powerful swordsmen as well as mages dressed in a variety of different colored mage gowns within the lounge. Some of them were the Magic Association's people while some were probably here to verify their rank.

Now, after hearing this young ladies excited shout, they all suddenly moved their eyes onto Han Shuo's body. Their eyes brimmed with surprise.

Han Shuo swept a glance at these people. Then, he spoke demurely to the young lady, smiling faintly. He opened his mouth to say, "I've come to the Magic Association to confirm my rank. Oh, that's right. Is Mister Ares currently here?"

"Please wait a moment. Mister Ares is currently helping Carlos verify his rank, but he will be available shortly." The young lady smiled and answered. Then, realizing something, she suddenly asked, startled,, "Are you here to verify your magic rank as a grand magus necromancer?"

Han Shuo had already previously advanced to the archmage rank. Now, in less than two years time, Han Shuo came again to verify his new rank as a grand magus necromancer. The young lady was clearly shocked.

Not only this young lady, but even the surrounding mages were all shocked, looking at Han Shuo. They seemed to be looking at a true monster, their eyeballs nearly falling out in shock.

Although an archmage and grand magus was only a one character difference apart in Mandarin, they were actually worlds apart. Any mage capable of becoming an archmage will always be acknowledged for their wisdom and ability in the hearts of all mages. They would absolutely be incapable of advancing to an archmage without such traits.

However, even if such an individual wanted to advance from an archmage to an grand magus in two years, it was normally impossible.

Different people had different aptitudes towards magic and naturally comprehended at different speeds. However, the process of advancing to a grand magus from an archmage normally required ten years minimum. Yet, Han Shuo had done it in only two short years. This kind of extreme speed was simply terrifying. As a result, the look that the other mages within the room gave to Han Shuo was understandable.

If the sum of Han Shuo's magic career was totalled up, then the time he used would only amount to roughly four years. The speed at which he'd changed from an individual with no knowledge of magic, to suddenly becoming a grand magus who could shake any nation seemed impossible.

Right as the young lady blurted such words, Ares Hosein, the Magic Association's supervisor, entered the room from above. Accompanying him was a person with elegant, long hair. He was a youth, appearing under thirty years old. He was clothed in a grey, white magic robe as he soundlessly walked with a carefree smile on his face.

After a simple glance at the symbol on his magic robe, Han Shuo immediately realized that he was probably the Carlos who wanted to verify his rank with Ares. He obviously just became a wind grand magus as he came down in an incomparably joyful mood. Currently, he was walking with Ares, smiling and merrily chatting with him.

Ares mindlessly shot a glance downstairs and saw Han Shuo standing there like an immovable pole, a crane among chickens. Ares immediately exclaimed, "Hey! Young lad, you must be Bryan. I remember you. Hehe, why have you come to the Magic Association?"

Smiling, Han Shuo nodded his head and calmly said, "Mister Ares, I want to reconfirm my magic rank. Hehe. I think I should have the qualifications to wear a grand magus medallion."

Ares became incomparably astonished and carefully sized up Han Shuo with a few looks just like the others. Then, he rubbed his chin, doubtfully saying, "If I recall correctly, the last time you came here to verify your rank should be only two years ago. Don't tell me you're already ready to verify your new rank as a grand magus necromancer?"

Han Shuo reaffirmed with a nod of his head, saying, "Correct!"

"Inconceivable, truly inconceivable. Today is truly a bright day for my Association. Hehe. The Lancelot Empire is not lacking in talented individuals indeed. Carlos is not even thirty years old but he already advanced to become a wind grand magus. Who would've thought, another would come right afterwards, although I don't know if you can actually bring about this miracle. I believe you're definitely not even thirty years old, right?" Ares kept shaking his head in praise and surprise as he looked at Han Shuo, sighing emotionally.

When Han Shuo entered Bryan's body, Bryan had only been sixteen years old. Since then, only four years had passed. Han Shuo's true age should only be twenty years old in this world. However, due to the excess of life and death situations Han Shuo experienced, plus Han Shuo's former age of 29 before entering Bryan's body, he appeared somewhat more mature on the exterior.

"That's not important. Hehe. The important point is whether or not I can be verified as a grand magus necromancer or not." Han Shuo didn't care about this sort of fame and laughingly responded to Ares.

"Oh, you're that Brettel City's Lord, Bryan. Hehe. I've been truly wanting to meet you and it's my pleasure to be able to see you here today. I'm Carlos." At this time, Carlos, the wind grand magus who walked down with Ares, suddenly laughed and greeted Han Shuo.

Han Shuo replied courteously with a smile and said, "Correct, I'm Bryan. My pleasure to make your acquaintance, Carlos."

With regards to this Carlos, Han Shuo seemed to recall someone discussing him when Han Shuo last set foot in the Dark Mantle Headquarters. Han Shuo hadn't paid attention last time however. Since this person could become a wind grand magus before turning thirty years old, Han Shuo dared to postulate that this person was extremely well known in the Lancelot Empire. He made a mental note to himself to find some time to look up this person when he returned to the Dark Mantle headquarters. There would definitely be some information about this guy.

"Young master, we must go!" Within the lounge, an elderly person who seemed like a butler said to Carlos.

"No rush. Hehe. I want to wait until Bryan verifies his rank before leaving." Carlos replied to the butler with a smile. Then, he smiled towards Han Shuo saying, "If you don't mind, can I observe?"

Han Shuo noticed that besides the Magic Association's people within the lounge, everyone else appeared to be Carlos' servant. He wondered how powerful this person's identity must be. Therefore, he wrinkled his brows before saying with a carefree smile, “Hehe, No problem!”

Chapter 378: A Summit of Dignitaries

This test was no different from the previous one, with mental strength being tested first. Since Han Shuo had indeed reached the grand magus level, he effortlessly passed the mental strength test.

The next necromancer test was just as simple as well. Since an even more powerful summoning technique was the most effective representation of reaching the grand magus necromancer level, Han Shuo did just that. After Han Shuo's chant, an old fey corpse descended from another world. The appearance of this old fey corpse proved everything.

Without a doubt, the appearance of the undead creature proved Han Shuo's strength. Ares gazed deeply at the old fey corpse and sensed a thick sense of death emitting from its body. He nodded his head in astonishment before saying to Han Shuo, "It's true. You've actually become a grand magus necromancer! Inconceivable!"

Carlos' eyes radiated with an astonished sparkle as he looked probingly at Han Shuo. After a good while, he sighed with emotions saying, "Your reputation is truly justified. It seems like the accomplishments you've obtained thus far have truly not just been a fluke. Congratulations Bryan!"

Han Shuo politely nodded his head towards Carlos, before laughing, "Many thanks."

"Alright, there's no problems. Just wait a moment, I'll immediately handle the proper formalities." Ares headed straight up after saying this to Han Shuo. He was most likely going to deal with Han Shuo's matters and record his current rank within the Magic Association.

After Ares left, Carlos looked at Han Shuo. Although hesitant, he opened his mouth in the end and said, "Bryan, your relationship with Prince Lawrence is extremely close right?"

Han Shuo was surprised, unable to determine the purpose of Carlo's words. But he still nodded his head and looked at Carlos, surprised, "Yep, what's the matter?"

“I have some words but I don’t know if they are appropriate.” Carlos appeared reluctant and faltered.

“Hehe, it won’t hurt. Go ahead and just say it.” Han Shuo laughed while becoming increasingly perplexed.

Carlos’s complexion suddenly became stern as he deeply looked at Han Shuo, “Then, I’ll be frank. Among the four princes, Prince Lawrence is the most hopeless and will probably fail to inherit the title of king. Additionally because of Lawrence’s peculiar identity, I’m afraid the moment when His Majesty passes away, Lawrence will also be the first to suffer. Forgive my words but it’s best if you don’t become too close with Prince Lawrence. Only by keeping clear will you be able to provide the most help to Brettel City.”

Han Shuo had already known of Lawrence’s predicament thanks to Emily’s letter. Furthermore, when Han Shuo had first met Lawrence and found out that he was of illegitimate birth and status, he already knew that there would be such a day sooner or later. Candide had warned him once as well. Thus, Han Shuo naturally already knew that with Lawrence’s identity, it would definitely be very challenging for Lawrence to inherit the title of king against the other princes.

However, Lawrence had treated Han Shuo with sincerity and Han Shuo had once promised that he would try his hardest to help him. Even when Han Shuo took control of Brettel City, Lawrence still continued to help him as best as he could. Now that Lawrence has truly sunk into a predicament, Han Shuo couldn’t just sit there and ignore him no matter what.

“Thanks for your warning, however I am someone who returns favor with favor and repays my gratitude. Since Prince Lawrence has once helped me, now that he has encountered some dangerous times, I will still help him no matter how dangerous and how detrimental it is to me. This is my immutable, societal code of conduct. Hehe, still though, thank you.” Han Shuo smiled at Carlos, clearly expressing his stance.

After hearing this, Carlos sighed disappointedly while nodding his head,

“Bryan, I very much admire your methods, but you should still reconsider this prudently. This matter will not only implicate you alone. Once Lawrence fails to wield power, you, your Brettel City, and all of your friends will also be implicated because of this matter. Sometimes, even if it isn’t for your own good, you should still think about it for others.”

This statement was reasonable. However, Han Shuo wouldn’t change his decision just for these couple of words. At the moment, Brettel City was incomparably stable. Plus, Han Shuo could also rely on the Cemetery of Death. Even if Carlo’s words became a reality, Han Shuo could still guarantee that he could bring everyone around him to safety.

“I am extremely grateful for your good intentions. Hehe. However, when I make a decision, I normally don’t regret them. Even if my decision is wrong, I will still carry it out to the end!” Han Shuo’s expression remained the same as he calmly replied. Obviously, he wasn’t tempted due to Carlos’s words.

After Han Shuo had said such words, Carlos knew that it would be useless to try to continue to persuade him. Carlos sighed helplessly before saying, “I really didn’t wish to be your enemy. However, if things develop normally, I’m afraid some things will truly be unavoidable. Sigh!”

“What are you guys saying, you two fellows are Lancelot Empire’s rare and talented characters. Hehe. It seems like every nation has their own talented mage. Bryan, you’re only twenty years old and you could actually become a grand magus necromancer. Truly an abnormal freak.” Right at this moment, Ares came from upstairs and chuckled at the two of them.

“It’s nothing. Mister Ares and Bryan, I still have some things to do. Goodbye.” Carlos politely said his farewells to Ares and Bryan before immediately heading downstairs and leaving.

Han Shuo looked at Carlos’s departing figure. He knew that this person was definitely supporting one of the other three princes. Otherwise, he wouldn’t have said those words. Perhaps because Carlos was wary of Han Shuo’s power or perhaps because he didn’t want to face such a strong adversary, he tried so hard to persuade Han Shuo.

But to Han Shuo, after his magical cultivation had entered the carnal realm, he wouldn't necessarily lose even if he faced a sacred swordmaster. Carlos would absolutely not be Han Shuo's match since he was someone who had only just recently advanced to become a wind grand magus. Thus, Han Shuo did not place Carlos on too high a pedestal in his heart.

"Bryan, your data has already been rewritten. From this point on, you're a grand magus necromancer. As promised, this is your new medallion and certificate. You can now order your own magical robe and embroider a symbol representing your strength as a grand magus necromancer." Ares chuckled at Han Shuo before placing the certificate proving his new rank into his hand.

"Thank you Mister Ares!" Han Shuo expressed his thanks and then opened his mouth to continue, "Alright, then I'll also take my leave."

"Wait a moment!" Ares smilingly shouted loudly before opening his mouth, continuing, "I'm good friends with your Academy's Dean, Emma. She has erected a statue of you within the Academy and has once came here to verify your rank. If you don't mind, I will hand her the newest information about you. Hehe. This will greatly improve your status within Babylon Academy."

Han Shuo was startled. Then he smiled and nodded his hand, "As you wish. Hehe. I won't mind. However, Dean Emma already knows of my new strength. I think whether you inform her or not will not actually matter."

"Oh, is that so. Hehe, then I'll just forget about it." Ares laughed and then continued, "Alright, go ahead and do whatever you need to do. I hope the next time we meet I can verify your new rank as a sacred magus. It would be my greatest honor if I could still be alive to verify your rank for you."

Han Shuo laughed cheerfully and chuckled, "I hope so. But you must live a few days longer Mister Ares!"

After finishing these words, Han Shuo did not continue to remain within the Magic Association. He headed downstairs and walked out.

Carlos had already left a moment ago with his crowd of servants. Thus, when Han Shuo started coming downstairs, that young lady obviously already knew that Han Shuo had successfully confirmed his new rank. She excitedly looked at Han Shuo with worship, “You are truly very amazing. I have worked here for several years but I have yet to see such a young grand magus before!”

Han Shuo only nodded his head at her reservedly and didn't say anything. After a laugh, he walked out the door and headed for the Dark Mantle Headquarters.

Mt. Ordas. Dark Mantle Headquarters.

This time, Han Shuo was immediately received with great fanfare after flashing his identity medallion. One of the agents brought Han Shuo towards a building.

“Sir. Please wait a moment. I will go inside to send them a message first.” That Dark Mantle agent brought Han Shuo to a wide doorway made of rock before respectfully informing Han Shuo

Although separated by the thick and wide doorway, Han Shuo could still sense a couple of powerful auras from within. Han Shuo always kept an impression of any new acquaintances he made. Furthermore, even if he was separated a large distance, he could still distinguish between them through their auras. After his magical cultivation advanced to the new rank and his consciousness improved greatly, Han Shuo could even more easily differentiate between everyone's differing auras. Thus, this stone door that was shrouded by some complicated and complex magic enchantments was completely incapable of blocking Han Shuo's mental probing.

“Mm, go ahead.” Han Shuo nodded his head and said to the agent guide.

Han Shuo's current status was already different from his former days; as a Dark Sun Envoy, he was definitely at the top of the social ladder. Last time when Han Shuo ruined Celt's operation in the underground world, he had already advanced to a Second Dark Sun Envoy. Within the entire Dark Mantle Organization, there were not many that was a Second Dark Sun Envoy like Han Shuo. Thus, this agent naturally treated Han Shuo with great caution and respect.

From this agent, Han Shuo discovered that Dark Mantle's three heavyweights had all congregated here today. Furthermore, even some senior figures that had gone into seclusion were included in this meeting. They seemed to be negotiating about some big matters. Within the entire Dark Mantle's enormous organization, only those that were above Third Dark Sun Envoys could participate in this discussion. However, these agent knew that Han Shuo's identity was unique and immediately went inside to inform the dignitaries.

Han Shuo could sense Candide and Amyes' aura inside, as well as the not-so-friendly Cecilia. Besides them, there was also another completely unfamiliar aura. Since all of these people had gathered, there were definitely important matters needing to be discussed. Of this that was certain.

The Dark Mantle headquarters had a tight defense in the perimeter. There were even more complicated and strange magical enchantments assembled within. Thus, Han Shuo didn't release his mystical demons to eavesdrop and only stood outside, waiting.

After a while, that agent came out with another person. This person was extremely robust and also at the prime of his life. His coarse palms indicated that he was most likely a user of heavy weaponry. His sideburns were preserved in lushful display. After arriving he nodded his head to Han Shuo and said, "Bryan, right? Follow me."

After saying these words, he said to the agent who guided Han Shuo, "Alright, there are no more matters here for you."

While heading inside, this robust man opened his mouth to introduce himself, "I'm the same as you. I'm also a Second Dark Sun envoy. Hehe. The upper guys have given verbal orders to bring you to them."

This was an extremely spacious passageway. There were powerful crossbow mechanisms on the walls, as well as various magic cannons and hidden magical enchantments. Han Shuo dared guarantee that if one didn't have the qualifications to enter but still barged in, what welcomed him would be a road to death.

After passing through the spacious passageway, they arrived at another gate that was protected by another two agents. The robust agent that guided Han Shuo signaled to open the gate and said to Han Shuo, "Go ahead, enter."

Han Shuo was startled, took a look at this guy and said, "You're not going in with me?"

He smiled ruefully and shook his head before helplessly replying, "I don't have the qualifications to enter. Although we're both Second Dark Sun envoys, I only have the qualifications to stay here on guard. Hehe. They let you have a good guide, but here is where I stop."

Hearing this, Han Shuo unconsciously fell silent before laughing apologetically at him. Then, he walked through the door without saying anything else.

The moment after Han Shuo's steps landed inside, a formation suddenly mobilized into action. Han Shuo then noticed that he had already appeared within a secretive and sealed, wide stone room

The stone room was roughly the size of a basketball court. There were white marble tables and chairs individually placed in the surroundings. The tables were filled with various refreshments and fruits. Encompassing one of the large rhombus table were thirteen chairs. Every chair carried a person. At this moment, these thirteen individuals unanimously gazed towards Han Shuo.

At one corner of the rhombus table sat the three heavyweights of the Dark Mantle. They were obviously Candide, Amyes, and Cecilia. Emily sat upright at a different side while only shooting Han Shuo a glance with her eyes. She purposely didn't over do it, probably to avoid arousing suspicion and letting others discover something.

These thirteen individuals were the Dark Mantles' truest senior levels. Among them, even the lowest ranked Emily had advanced to the Third Dark Sun while the highest ones were like Candide and Cecilia were Fifth Dark Star.

However, after Han Shuo shot a glance around, he suddenly noticed that the three heavyweights were actually not sitting at the main seat. Instead, at the most honorable seat sat two unimpressively looking old man. Han Shuo had seen one of them once. He was precisely the elder that laughed all day while looking after a shop at the Valley of Sunshine's Dark Mantle stronghold.

Chapter 379: Elder

Usual reminder that this chapter is not edited, etvolare is stopping at chapter 380, blah blah.

The Dark Mantle stronghold in the Valley of Sunshine wasn't very large, and it lacked both personnel and resources compared to ones in other cities, but the oldest member here was actually the one sitting in the most esteemed position!

Even Han Shuo had ignored the existence of this person in the Valley of Sunshine the entire time. All Han Shuo knew about him was that he smiled all day as he guarded the shop in order to conceal the existence of the Dark Mantle base within. He never imagined that the man was a founding member of the Dark Mantle.

The old man looked at Han Shuo with shining eyes. Laughing, he nodded his head at Han Shuo, saying "What, do you not recognize me?"

"No, it's just that I didn't expect to see you here. I'm just surprised." Han Shuo earnestly said.

"Brian, this is Teacher Sabakas. He is the previous Fifth Dark Sun. The Valley of Sunshine is the place where Teacher Sabakas has retired to, so that identity was naturally false." Candice retained his sinister look. However, he stood up when he was introducing Sabakas to Han Shuo, as a sign of respect for the former.

Han Shuo was actually unable to feel any hint of the elements from Sabakas, causing him to be shocked. He immediately understood that Sabakas was either a normal person who didn't know any spells or fighting techniques, or was a powerful person that even Han Shuo couldn't tell the strength of. The fact that he could sit in such a spot naturally meant that he wasn't a normal person that didn't know anything, thus, Han Shuo could already imagine just how powerful Sabakas was.

"Greetings, old sir!" Han Shuo bowed respectfully and greeted him with a smile.

Sabakas nodded and waved his left hand. The space around Emily twisted for a moment, before an alabaster chair identical to theirs landed beside Emily. Sabakas smiled towards Han Shuo, "Go ahead and take a seat."

Han Shuo thanked the elder, he walked over to the chair to sit down, leaning against Emily. After Han Shuo sat down, Emily leaned close to Han Shuo and whispered, "Sabakas is Cecilia's grandfather, the space sacred magus of the Lancelot Empire. The dean of your Babylon Academy of Magic and Force, Emma, was taught by him as well. The large scale magic teleportation formations as well as all of the teleportation formations here were set up by him."

Han Shuo was shocked and couldn't help but look at Sabakas once again, remembering what Emily had said to him in the underground the previous time. Emily had said that Cecilia's grandfather was a really amazing person, and Han Shuo had seen him before. Han Shuo was unable to think of who it was for a long time, and now he finally understood.

An old woman with loose skin that creased into ravines on her face sat with Sabakas. Her two hands continuously turned and toyed with a crystal ball, while her grey eyes were full of loneliness, causing her to seem different from the other people there.

When Han Shuo entered, the old woman who looked like a witch didn't pay any attention to him at all. She merely sat there silently as if she was asleep. However, the crystal ball in her hands continued to rotate, as if reminding everyone else that she was still listening to their conversation.

"That is the mysterious seer, Grace. I only just found out about her existence from my older brother, but I don't know what she does exactly. However, the mysterious existence of a seer was apparently able to see the future. I don't know whether it was true or not either." Emily explained for Han Shuo once again when she saw him look towards that old witch.

Han Shuo sat properly without saying anything, and merely nodded slightly in order to show that he'd heard Emily's introduction. He swept his glance over Sabakas and the witch-like old seer, Grace. His heart was filled with shock. One of them was a space sacred magus, the other was a seer who was beyond mysterious.

These two people should be people on the level of an elder in the Dark Mantle. Adding onto the fact that the three heavyweights of the Dark Mantle were present, Han Shuo truly felt a bit of anticipation for the upcoming meeting. He sat there without moving an inch, and prepared himself to listen to what they were going to talk about.

“Bryan, I know all about what you did within the Valley of Sunshine. Hehe, you’re not bad hmm? We can all have our own opinions when we discuss here. Since you sit here, then you can speak out your opinion for things we discuss here as well.” Sabakas chuckled as he looked towards Han Shuo.

Han Shuo thanked him before continuing to sitting with a proper posture and saying too much. Han Shuo took a look at the thirteen people present, and understood that the ones that could sit here must be the true senior executives within the Dark Mantle organization. His heart was filled with curiosity, because he didn’t know what sort of thing could actually make these people gather together.

After a while, Han Shuo gradually understood why these people gathered. It was also because of the battle of power between the princes.

When a new king needed to be chosen in a country, the country would face another gory bloodbath. Regardless of what power a person belonged to, it was improbable to remove themselves entirely. Even normally neutral organizations such as the Dark Mantle needed to make this headache-inducing choice as well.

This Dark Mantle organization that directly served the king would also become the hand of shadows for the new king. After the new king is selected, he would definitely choose the person he trust most to manage this huge powerful organization. If the Dark Mantle chose the wrong side right now, the Dark Mantle management would be washed clean in the future.

After listening to it for a while, Han Shuo noticed that they seemed to want to remain neutral, but several princes had already sent a clear invitation to them. All three of the Dark Mantle heavyweights had been invited by the princes, but all three of them had declined the invitations and displayed a neutral standing. However, they understood that if they truly remained neutral, then any of the princes would exclude them out of their trusted followers.

The Dark Mantle organization has always been the most trusted existence of the king, if they were unable to gain the trust of the new king, then the management within would be refreshed. When that happens, it would be unknown whether the three heavyweights would continue to be the current three.

Out of these thirteen people, some of them did lean towards the first prince, Charles, who was the most powerful right now. They felt that Charles had the most right to the throne. Of course, one or two did choose the other two princes for their own reasons. However, nobody thought well of Lawrence, the bastard son, so nobody mentioned him.

“Bryan, I heard that you’re close with Lawrence, what do you think about this?” Cecilia suddenly glanced at Han Shuo. While the Third and Fourth Dark Suns had already expressed their opinions, the two elders and the three heavyweights hadn’t yet.

Han Shuo had remained silent and merely listened to everyone’s discussion, so he was a bit shocked as he did not expect Cecilia to suddenly ask him a question.

All of a sudden, the gazes of all thirteen people within the room fell onto Han Shuo. Han Shuo, recently become extremely influential in both the Dark Mantle and the imperial structure, was in a slightly different position towards them. As a city in the east, Brettel City was beyond vibrant. As the city lord, Han Shuo had enough chips to side with anyone.

Han Shuo drew a blank for a moment, then thought about it without smiling, “I will help Lawrence with my identity as the city lord of Brettel City. Repaying favors is my policy, no matter how bad you think his chances are, I will support him.”

“Lawrence, that bastard son Lawrence?” Cecilia said in disdain and shook her head. “Anyone has a chance except him.”

Han Shuo smiled without speaking and understood that the people there all wouldn't think that Lawrence had good chances. Some of the other envoys also carried disdain on their faces as they ignored Han Shuo's attitude. Then, they looked away from Han Shuo and towards Cecilia and the other higher-ups.

At this moment, the crystal ball in Grace the old seer's hand suddenly emitted a soft light. At the same time, Grace's eyes slowly cleared as she moved her heavy eyelids to stare at shimmering light within the pale-green fog of the crystal ball in her hands.

The smiling expression of space sacred magus, Sabakas, suddenly tensed as he looked solemnly at the old seer. Candide and the rest of the three heavyweights were also very shocked as they looked at the old seer, Grace, who'd seemed to be asleep ever since Han Shuo had entered the room.

As the light in the crystal ball she held suddenly faded, the deep wrinkles on Grace's face suddenly trembled slightly. Then she started to cough intensely, seeming like her life would end at any time, like a candle extinguished in the wind. Her coughs seemed like they would tear herself apart, and in the end, she even coughed up a mouthful of blood onto the crystal ball.

The crystal ball she held suddenly shattered, while Grace's body shook and she nearly fell down from her sitting position. After a while, her intense coughing gradually stopped as her eyes were filled with an unfocused white once again, as if her old eyes were unable to see the surrounding clearly.

The Third and Fourth Dark Suns only found it strange, but Sabakas and the three heavyweights looked at Grace with shining eyes, as if they didn't dare to breath, just like they were waiting for something.

Grace, who hadn't uttered a single word since the start of the meeting, suddenly looked towards Sabakas and the three heavyweights with her blurred and lifeless grey eyes. In the end, she finally set her gaze upon Han Shuo, who was sitting in the corner. Sabakas and the three heavyweights were suddenly shocked as well as they set their gazes upon Han Shuo.

“What path should we take for the future?” Sabakas looked at Han Shuo in shock, then looked towards the old seer and asked a bit cautiously.

“Sabakas, I’m a bit tired.” The old seer replied with a tremble. She’d already retracted her gaze from Han Shuo as if it was just a casual glance.

Sabakas nodded, then looked towards Candide and the rest of the three heavyweights, “I’ll take her back to rest first. You guys continue to chat, but don’t make your decision yet.”

All three heavyweights stood up together and saluted both Sabakas and Grace, before respectfully sending Sabakas, the Dark Mantle elder out.

Sabakas smiled as a cloud of light wrapped around him and Grace. The two of them disappeared with the fading of the light. Even Han Shuo was unable to feel even a hint of their aura, so they seemed to have already left the place.

After Sabakas and Grace left, the three heavyweights no longer said anything about the future path that the Dark Mantle should take, seeming to await the guidance of Sabakas and Grace. During the remaining time, all they discussed about were the great events happening with the Dark Mantle recently. The Third and Fourth Dark Suns all reported the issues they had, then spoke about all the strange situations and situations that threatened the safety of the Empire which occurred within their region.

“Bryan, how is the situation with Brettel City and the seven grand duchies?” Candide took a look at Han Shuo after everyone else finished reporting and directed a question to Han Shuo.

Although Han Shuo was the city lord of Brettel City, he was merely a Rank Two Dark Sun envoy, making his position the lowest there. Hearing Candide’s question, Han Shuo stood up from his seat and said with ease, “The Dark Mantle stronghold within Brettel City is developing well. Currently, its points had already spread out to every single major city within the seven grand duchies with Brettel City as the center. They would use letters to report all major events that were occurring locally to the Brettel City through letters.”

“Very good. The seven grand duchies should indeed be properly watched, they have always been discontent with their place,” Candide replied.

“My lord, do you know about Stratholme of Stranglethorn Valley within the seven duchies?” Han Shuo thought about it, then suddenly asked Candide before sitting down.

The moment he said that, the eleven people remaining after Sabakas and Grace had left all wore ugly expressions. Candide even shook his head helplessly with a sullen expression and then looked at Han Shuo in shock, “You met that old monster?”

Han Shuo shook his head, “No, but I did hear that he was the previous imperial adviser of the Vanerdun Dynasty. He originally had the strength of a sacred swordmaster the last time the Empire entered the seven grand duchies. Apparently he issued a warning to the experts on our side. I wonder if this really occurred?”

Candide shook his head helplessly, “This is the shame of the empire, if it wasn’t for the existence of this old monster, the seven grand duchies would have already been conquered. How could the seven grand duchies stand up against us without a single sacred magus?. The only reason we haven’t attacked with sacred magi is because of the existence of this old monster.”

Han Shuo was rather shocked when he heard Candide admit it. He fixed Stratholme more firmly in his heart, and thought about whether he should be more vigilant against the seven duchies.

Chapter 380: Han Shuo's headache of a matter

Note, this is unedited, the usual, blahblah. Remember to check the teaser for more info!

After the two senior figures left, the discussion that followed didn't include anything important. Everyone was mostly just concerned about Dark Mantle's future movements, so when this issue was dismissed, the meeting quickly concluded.

Everyone dispersed after the meeting. With Candide's indication, Han Shuo followed Candide to his private room. He helped confirm Han Shuo's identity as a Second Dark Sun envoy before finally asking, "Your development recently in Brettel City is going pretty well. Since I have already discussed this with His Majesty, your arrival this time is perfect. I believe His Majesty will confer upon you the rank of a Marquis."

"If that's true, It would be fantastic. Currently, Brettel City has a thousand things to be taken care of. I need to report to His Majesty and see if I can set up a large-scale transporting formation array within Brettel City. With it, Brettel City can develop even faster." Han Shuo realized that communicating with other cities was inevitably linked to becoming a major city. As of now, it was very inconvenient for Brettel City to communicate with the outside world. But, if he could have his own large-scale transporting formation array, Brettel City's development could speed up.

After hearing this from Han Shuo, Candide's head started to hurt slightly. He thought about it for a moment said, "I can't guarantee if His Majesty will agree. Even though Brettel City has defeated some bandit groups now, they are just some bandits in the end. As long as Brettel City cannot reveal a power capable of withstanding the seven grand dukedoms, I believe His Majesty will not feel at ease setting up a large-scale transportation formation array within Brettel City."

"If the seven grand dukedoms breached a Brettel City that just so happened to have a transportation formation, the seven grand dukedoms could easily expend some magic crystals to send armed forces into the cities of the Lancelot Empire. This would cause a catastrophe. Thus, His Majesty will definitely treat this cautiously.”

Han Shuo also understood Candide’s meaning. After listening, Han Shuo nodded his head and said, “It seems like His Majesty will not truly be at ease before Brettel City can defeat the seven grand dukedoms.”

“Ai, His Majesty’s health is worsening and I don’t think he will be able to last much longer. Why did you come here from Brettel City this time, is it for Lawrence?” Candide sighed before specifically inquiring from Han Shuo.

By no means did Han Shuo try to conceal the truth. He nodded his head and replied, “Yes, Lawrence and I have a pretty good relationship. My principle is to repay favor with favor. Sir Candide, you don’t need to try to convince me otherwise.”

“I’m not trying to convince you. It’s just that I feel like you should carefully consider it again. Your influence in Lancelot Empire isn’t small anymore. As long as you can make Brettel City somewhat more stable, your future prospects will be boundless and immeasurable. But, if you fight for Lawrence’s power, I worry not only for you, but also your current foundation. You ought to carefully consider this once more.”

Candide also didn’t know if he should persuade Han Shuo or not. Originally, when he brought Han Shuo into Dark Mantle, he never anticipated that Han Shuo would have such accomplishments as he did today. Furthermore, based on the current situation, as long as Han Shuo continued to develop smoothly, it was entirely possible that he could become one of the overlords in the Lancelot Empire.

On one side, he’d been the one to bring Han Shuo in and on the other, Han Shuo was his wife Emma’s student. Regardless of which point he considered it from, Candide would never wish for Han Shuo to make a wrong choice and mistakenly continue down the wrong path. Thus, Candide tried to advise Han Shuo time and time again. But because he had worked for Dark Mantle for so long and had received so much information through his many channels, he knew Han Shuo was the type to stick to his decisions and not the type to be swayed. Thus, Candide was really clueless on what the proper action was.

“Sigh. Alright, I won’t interfere in your matters anymore. Before Madams Grace clearly chooses the direction that our Dark Mantle will take, no one will know what kind of road the Dark Mantle will take in the future.” Candide sighed and said to Han Shuo.

Hearing Candide’s words, Han Shuo could help but feel dumbfounded. After a moment of hesitation, he inquired, “Sir, is Madame Grace truly capable of looking clearly into the future?”

Han Shuo had understood long ago that the most mysterious profession in this world was a seer. He also knew all the different miraculous descriptions about divining. However, he wasn’t the type of person to believe in that kind of abstruse prophecy at all. Thus, he was still half doubting even now.

Candide’s face turned solemn as he firmly said to Han Shuo, “Although the Lancelot Empire has faced many important events throughout the years, Grace has chosen the correct path every time. Furthermore, the Dark Mantle’s ability to become such a powerful weapon of darkness within the Lancelot Empire is also directly related to Madame Grace’s guidance.”

“In addition, His Majesty cares about Madame Grace the most. Her prophecies can even alter His Majesty’s decisions. Even now, His Majesty can’t decide on which prince will be the next king. One of the reasons is precisely because Madame Grace has yet to tell His Majesty which prince is the true wise king.”

“Mm. Also, Lawrence’s master, also Karel Ascot, is in fact also waiting for Madame Grace to point the way. Whether or not the Dark Mantle can avert disaster this time is also dependant on Madam’s proper instructions. Thus, none of us have made any decisions even now.”

Han Shuo was truly startled listening to Candide. Who would’ve thought that the old woman, who seemed as if she would die at any moment, was actually playing a critical role? She had the power to affect the decisions of sacred swordmaster Karel and the king! Han Shuo's heart was filled with amazement.

Afterwards, Han Shuo suddenly remembered the crystal ball that had shattered in the old seer's hand. When she'd gazed deeply at him previously, Han Shuo had originally believed that perhaps she was only shooting him a random glance. But, listening to Candide today, Han Shuo couldn't help but to start imagining some wild thoughts. Could her gaze have a special hidden meaning?

"Based on what you're saying, as long as Madame Grace acknowledges a prince, that prince will definitely gain great advantages?" Han Shuo inquired of Candide after thinking for a moment.

Candide nodded his head affirmatively before giving an example to emphasize the importance of the old seer, Grace. "Even if it's Lawrence, as long as Madame Grace says he can bring prosperity, power, and riches to the Lancelot Empire, then even he will have great hopes to succeed as the new king."

"Hopefully the old seer will actually support Lawrence, hehe. Who knows, I feel like Lawrence has quite the monarch's vibe." Han Shuo self deprecated before asking, "That Stratholme, what actually happened with him?"

As these words fell, Candide's darkened complexion become even more sinister and hazy. He hesitated a moment before saying to Han Shuo, "Last time, when the Empire invaded the seven grand dukedoms, besides sacred swordmaster Karel Ascot, there was also the earth sacred magus, Dempsey Gayer, who accompanied them."

"Everyone originally believed that the fragmented seven grand dukedoms would definitely be defeated. The rumors reflected the real situation. Because of the sudden alliance between the seven grand duchies, the Imperial Army began facing obstructions everywhere. However, because the Empire secretly believed the seven grand dukedoms didn't have the existence of a sacred magus, they wanted to violate a continental pact and use taboo magic to reverse the situation. In the end, before the earth sacred magus, Dempsey Gayer, could even make a move, the old monster Stratholme sought him out."

"The old monster Stratholme openly challenged sacred swordmaster Karel Ascot, the pride of our nation. This fight was witnessed by no one except the earth sacred magus Dempsey Gayer. However, although no one knows the specifics, both the sacred swordmaster Karel Ascot and the earth sacred magus Dempsey Gayer did not make any more moves during the war."

"During the many years of the existence of the Verdun Dynasty, Stratholme was the teacher of the state and had been as strong as a sacred swordmaster long ago. Along with the fact that he had yet to die after all these years, the moment he moved, sacred swordmaster Karel Ascot and earth sacred magus Dempsey Gayer of the Lancelot Empire became apprehensive in their hearts. This already clearly explains his strength.

"Ah, at that time, a soldier saw that old monster and said Stratholme did not look as old as what people imagined. On the contrary, he had an elegant, youthful look. Precisely because of this, from that point on, we have always called Stratholme, the former teacher of the state of Verdun's Imperial Court, an old monster." Candide continued to explain.

Han Shuo taciturnly knitted his brows and thought for a moment before opening his mouth to say, "I see. Alright, I will leave this place first. If you need me for anything, you can just find me within Ossen City. I will be staying here for a while."

"Mm, you need to be careful. Ossen City is not too peaceful right now." Candide nodded and said. Seeing Han Shuo leaving, Candide hesitated for a moment before abruptly opening his mouth and saying, "Wait a moment!"

Pausing for a moment, Han Shuo turned his head towards Candide and said, "Is there anything else?"

"Also, you should pay more attention to your relationship with Emily.

Aymes is not an easy person to get along with. Additionally, the Hahn's family is one of the most influential families in the empire. For both your own sakes, you should be a little careful." Candide sighed before continuing, "Ai, everything's good about you, but that you are simply a bit too much of a player. Also, you need to be even more careful with Fanny. I just learned this from your own dean a while ago that her father is Commander Firenze of the Howling Legion. He's a notorious butcher who's even more difficult to deal with than Aymes. And also Phoebe, she is sacred swordmaster Karel Ascot's most doted upon disciple. The at the kind of women you've set your sights on! I really don't know how to help you."

After hearing Candide's words, Han Shuo's face changed. Although, he already knew clearly about Emily and Phoebe's identity and was only clueless about Fanny's identity, he'd never would've thought that Fanny's background would actually be even bigger than theirs. Her father was actually the Howling Legion's commander!

As a Second Dark Sun, he naturally knew of such a renowned person in the Lancelot Empire. Firenze's Howling Legion was without a doubt the Empire's most powerful legion in the army. As a regiment's commander that behaved ruthlessly, sinisterly, and fiercely, he was a notorious, fierce lunatic in the Lancelot Empire.

After all these years, Firenze's Howling Legion has continued to defend and resist the barbaric orcs in the Southern Border, causing tens of thousands of orcs to die to his men. Thus, within the Orc Empire, the name Firenze was synonymous to demons and nightmares. It could even be said that everyone feared and also cursed him.

Firenze was the same even in the Empire, known and distinguished for his fierceness. He completely lacked the proper etiquette and the grace as befitting a noble. When'd once attended a private banquet hosted by His Majesty, Firenze had even dared to crudely come to blows with any noble that he'd found unpleasing to the eyes.

But His Majesty the king, Uhtred Lancelot, found these people very important. It is precisely because of Firenze's existence that the barbaric orcs could forever be isolated to the south. Firenze was regarded so highly that even though he has offended a lot of nobles and has even cursed grand duke Ashburn as hypocritical and despicable, he was still living as nicely as before after all these years.

Because he'd once beaten up Grand Duke Ashburn during a banquet, the king really couldn't put up with him any longer and thrown him into the dungeons. However, the moment this news spread out of the Lancelot Empire, the barbaric orcs immediately started cheering and celebrating. Afterwards, their army forces started invading various cities along the southern border.

His Majesty the King had sent several generals forward in defense. But, ultimately, there were no one capable of preserving the situation. Seeing one city after another on the verge of being conquered, even the king had no choice but to beg Firenze to come out and face the enemy. However, Firenze had actually refused. In the end, only after two cities of the empire's southern border was breached did Grand Duke Ashburn personally go to prison and bow his head before Firenze. That was when he emerged from prison and drove the orc army out of the southern territory.

Within the southern border region, this Firenze was as if a living god. In the entire Lancelot Empire, besides His Majesty the King, Ashburn was most apprehensive and most afraid of Firenze.

Han Shuo had already looked through this information a long time ago thanks to the Dark Mantle's intelligence. Now, hearing that Fanny's old man was actually confirmed to be Firenze, he was struck dumb. He couldn't help but ask Candide again with a somewhat dry mouth, "You're certain that Fanny's father is him?"

"It's him, this information is from your Dean, Emma. Even I only found out just recently. Ai, You should pray for your own good fortune. I had already warned you to not be too unfaithful, now let's see just how you'll end up." Candide smiled ruefully as he helplessly said to Han Shuo.

"Eh, It seems like this really is a somewhat difficult problem to deal with.

Ai, Teacher Fanny is such a gentle, soft, and virtuous woman, how could she have such a messed up old man. This world is truly miraculous!" Han Shuo lamented with a headache.

"Firenze is extremely doting towards Fanny because her mother had an untimely death. I think you should still take the next step with Fanny. If you can make Fanny docile and obedient, who knows, maybe you can escape this calamity." Candide came up with this idea.

Han Shuo sighed miserably. But after inspiration suddenly struck, he abruptly asked Candide, "If I settle things with Emily, Phoebe, and Fanny, then there would be the Hahn Family and Amyes behind Emily. On top of that, there would be the sacred swordmaster, Karel Ascot, and that madman, Firenze. If I also include the entire Dark Mantle, what do you think, could I help Lawrence? Would he have hope in succeeding as the king?"

Candide's body shook right after these words were spoken. Afterwards, he stared at Han Shuo's increasingly brightening gaze. After some time, he finally opened his mouth to say, "If you really do so, then Lawrence would have great hope to win. But, if even Madame Grace helps him, then this is practically in the bag. Oh, right, do you think Lawrence knows about your relationship with the three woman?"

Han Shuo started. After carefully thinking for a moment, he nodded his head and said, "I believe Lawrence should know about the relationship between the three women and me. However, he has never talked about it much before."

Candide was suddenly frightened. After a sudden sigh, he said, "It seems like among the few princes, Lawrence should be the most difficult to deal with. I can clearly tell you that Lawrence also knew about Fanny's identity. It's no wonder that Lawrence spared no effort to help you, he wanted to to rope you in. If Lawrence had already calculated to such a day long ago, then this Lawrence is truly too frightening of a youngster."

Listening to Candide's words, Han Shuo also felt somewhat apprehensive. He carefully recalled the events of meeting Lawrence. Han Shuo couldn't help but to feel amazed as he discovered that Candide's statement was very likely to be true.

However, in any case, Lawrence has constantly helped Han Shuo, and it was also because of his existence that Han Shuo could climb up to his position so quickly. After staying silent for a moment, Han Shuo spilled out a laugh, "It seems Lawrence is actually the most capable. I think my choice just might be correct because only a person that has planned so far can distinguish himself among the various factions."

"Maybe your choice might actually be the correct one. Forget it, I should just wait until Madame Grace decides." Candide sighed and said to Han Shuo with a slight headache.

To Candide, the most proper judgements can only be made by people who could clearly see the future like Madame Grace. Any other decisions were not guaranteed. If Han Shuo could grab ahold of all three powers, perhaps there would truly be some vague hope in helping Lawrence seize power. However, this is still only hope and nothing more.

"Oh, that's right, His Majesty's health is becoming increasingly feeble, and he probably can't last much longer. When I went to see His Majesty last time, His Majesty was constantly thinking about the miracles of your body and trying to understand your mystical martial arts skills, hoping to be able to use it within the army. What do you think about this?" Candide thought for a moment before asking Han Shuo.

"I will consider this carefully. I will give you my answer after some time." Han Shuo predicted.

And here is where the translation ends, thanks to all the pirate sites and readers who think pirates are the translators despite being told otherwise. I've actually seen people justify their decision to pirate to the end of the world, so here's my response when four hours of work are stolen in four seconds. Enjoy the end of etvolare's translations, and please support the real deal next time.

Chapter 381: Luring into demonhood

Once Han Shuo returned to his official residence, Kallas immediately reported to Han Shuo that third prince Lawrence had been waiting for him all along.

Lancelot Empire's King Uhtred originally had three princes, eldest prince Charles, second prince Cyril and youngest prince Beverly. Of the three princes, eldest prince Charles was intrepid and fond of battle, second prince Cyril was the standard for a cultured noble, while the youngest prince was only fifteen, still yet to be considered an adult.

(TL note: I know Beverly is more commonly known as a feminine name, but, 1. That's what is written in the raws. 2. Beverly was traditionally a commonly given masculine name.)

When Lawrence's identity was revealed, he became the third prince. However, the title of third prince was only what the public addressed him as on the surface. The way they silently criticized him was hidden within their hearts.

Han Shuo had just returned to his residence when he found out from Kallas that Lawrence was waiting for him, causing him to exclaim internally at Lawrence's information network. After entering Ossen City from Brettel City, Han Shuo had never showed his face to anyone, only visiting the Babylon Academy of Magic and Force, as well as the Dark Mantle Headquarters. News from Brettel City should not have arrived that quickly. It was evident from Lawrence's arrival that he had other quick information channels.

Compared to his former cheerfulness, Lawrence's expression had an added gloominess. It was unclear if it was because things recently had not gone according to his wishes, Lawrence's temperament had become colder. However when he saw Han Shuo enter, he still embraced Han Shuo while laughing heartily.

After an intimate discussion with Candide, Han Shuo had a new level of understanding toward Lawrence's plans and thoughts. Seeing Lawrence initiating a hug, Han Shuo also had a happy expression hugging Lawrence tightly out of a sudden. He then enquired on Lawrence's health, still laughing loudly.

After exchanging pleasantries, Han Shuo waved his hand to instruct the servant that had sent light refreshments to withdraw. He lightly sipped on his cup of tea that originated from the south of Oden Empire, before looking toward Lawrence and said, "It hasn't been long since we met, I didn't expect that the situation has already reached such an extent."

"Bryan, there's finally news of you. This period of time, my days in the capital have been unbearable. Charles has been undermining me and currently within the capital. Apart from my foster father and Uncle Boris, none of the nobles support me. Ai, this is because my identity is relatively awkward. I know those nobles despise me. However, this situation isn't something I can avoid. Otherwise, Charles and the rest definitely wouldn't let me off." Lawrence didn't hypocritically say anything else, getting right to the point and venting out his current predicament.

Of the other three princes, eldest prince Charles had Grand Duke Ashburn's support. On top of that, his mother was also the current queen. Hence he was the most likely to succeed the throne. Second prince Cyril was usually in the capital and had friendly relations with every powerful noble, conducting himself as someone who was good natured and understood the will of the people. Hence, there was also a group of nobles that supported him.

Although the youngest prince Beverly was not yet considered an adult, his mother was the woman the king currently loved the most dearly. With her constantly whispering sweet nothings to the king, Uhtred appeared to extremely love Beverly. Furthermore, Beverly's grandfather was Northern Bimson City's Marquis and his clan's strength was not to be belittled.

Actually, if not for his overly awkward identity, with his father and uncle's support, in addition to his master being sacred swordmaster Karel Ascot, Lawrence who had joined in belatedly still had some capital. Unfortunately, due to his identity as an illegitimate child, these were not considered as a massive capital, simply unable to provide him with any assurance.

Han Shuo knew from Candide's words that old astrologer Madame Grace had the power to sway the decision with her words. Lawrence's master Karel had not declared his support seemingly also waiting for Madame Grace's opinion. Lawrence did not seem to have an understanding in this field, sighing in despair as he narrated to Han Shuo.

After a while, Han Shuo finally replied, "I've just returned from Dark Mantle and had obtained a piece of extremely important information. Within Dark Mantle, there is a senior astrologer Madame Grace. One word from her is capable to bring about immense benefits for you. The reason why your master has delayed declaring his position is perhaps also due to his consideration of the bigger picture for Lancelot Empire..."

After Han Shuo had described all the information gathered by Dark Mantle to Lawrence once, Lawrence knitted his brows and pondered for a while. He then gazed deeply at Han Shuo, replying, "Bryan, thank you. This information is extremely important. Madame Grace is my father's personal astrologer, and I've heard a few rumors about her. However, astrology is too vague. In any case, I need to make early preparations."

Han Shuo nodded his head, understanding that to a few people that were fond of power, the mysterious astrology wasn't something that would be overly bothered about. Just take the incident this time round. Even though the venerable astrologer Grace said Lawrence would bring prosperity to Lancelot Empire, the other three princes would surely not surrender and willingly yield the throne to Lawrence.

The mysterious astrology was only one aspect. Those that strived for strength and power would definitely not willingly resign to their fates. Lawrence was such a person. When Han Shuo heard Lawrence's narration, he couldn't help thinking of Lawrence's plans and nodding inwardly. Han Shuo knew Lawrence was definitely not easy to deal with.

However, Han Shuo's choice was Lawrence. The tougher Lawrence was to deal with, the more relieved Han Shuo was. He smiled and nodded after hearing what was said, replying, "Be at ease, whatever the final conclusion of the astrology is, myself and Brettel City would stand behind you. Who cares about what divine prophecy, we would still stake it all. Hehe, of course, if the situation is beneficial to us, that would naturally be even better.”

“Bryan, thank you. If I am able to succeed the throne, Dark Mantle will only have you as the head in the future.” Lawrence solemnly promised Han Shuo.

“I’m not taking into account your promises for the future. I’m only basing on your previous assistance and our friendship, that I spare no effort in aiding you.” Han Shuo smiled as he explained to Lawrence. Things in the future were forever hard to predict, nothing was absolute. Promises of the future were just like astrology, both matters only vague and illusory.

“I understand. It looks like I should make a move through Madame Grace. Although I know such an action might be fruitless, i still need to try.” Lawrence understood that to characters such as Madame Grace and Karel Ascot, they viewed the future of Lancelot Empire with utmost importance, rather than who obtains power.

After Lawrence received Han Shuo’s guarantee, he felt as though a weight has been lifted from his shoulders. He then discussed further with Han Shuo on a few details, before departing Han Shuo’s residence.

A while after Lawrence had left, Han Shuo couldn’t help knitting his brows as he exited the hall and look toward the adjacent roof. As though he was muttering to himself, he said, “He has already left, why have you still remained here?”

After he said that sentence, a shadow descended from the opposing roof. Bollands, who Han Shuo had previously seen in the Rose Garden, suddenly appeared in front of Han Shuo. A killing intent reeking of blood slowly drifted out, flooding Han Shuo from all directions.

The old assassin Bollands face was covered with scars, appearing terrifyingly malevolent. He had been hiding there ever since Lawrence entered entered Han Shuo’s residence. When Han Shuo arrived, he could already sense the strong smell of blood on Bolland's body. He knew that Bolland's objective was to protect Lawrence, hence he didn't bother about his existence.

However, after Lawrence and Han Shuo had finished speaking, Bolland theoretically should have left. Yet, Han Shuo saw that he did not depart together with Lawrence. Hence, he puzzledly stepped out, appearing to be talking to himself as he questioned Bolland.

"How were you able to pinpoint my location?" Bolland somewhat suspiciously inquired, his gaze focused on Han Shuo while killing intent pervaded his whole body.

Han Shuo knew that owing to his hands have been dyed in blood and that he deliberately trained in this aspect, Bolland was able to cause a killing intent to pervade naturally. It wasn't that his heart was filled with killing intent. Han Shuo smiled faintly before saying, "The killing intent on your body is too strong. Also, you don't know how to completely conceal your aura. Naturally I would be able to sense it. Hehe, I suppose that ever since you trained your killing intent, you should have stopped being an assassin?"

The top assassins could completely conceal the killing intent from their bodies. Only in that way would they be able to kill the target in one strike before the target can even react. Bolland was formerly one of the finest assassins. However, he clearly focused on researching the users of the killing intent. Gradually, he was unable to contain the strong killing intent and the scent of blood on his body also becoming thicker. To a top assassin, these were unacceptable flaws.

Bolland was stunned from what he heard. After a while, he replied, "That's right, when the killing intent from my body was unable to be concealed anymore, I stopped being an assassin. However, when in actual combat, my killing intent is able to destroy the enemy's willpower. When fighting head on against someone of the same strength, I am able to hold absolute advantage, even two opponents attacking together might not be my opponent."

This person was actually a good sapling. With such a body condition, training in the demonic arts would result in twice the result for half the effort. With Han Shuo's meticulous guidance and by only specializing in a demonic god slaying martial technique, he definitely could become an outstanding character and his strength would also advance rapidly.

“Actually, I have a method to conceal the killing intent on your body and also a way to better control and utilize the killing intent. Heh Heh, your self-created path has similarities with the martial technique I train in. If you train in accordance with my method, you would definitely be able to substantially raise your strength in a short time. Furthermore, there's still unlimited potential to improve.” Han Shuo suddenly recalled that King Uhtred previously had the desire to let him inherit the Martial Skills Hall. This Bolland was a suitable candidate, however, the only apprehension Han Shuo had was the relationship between Bolland and sacred swordmaster Karel Ascot.

As long as Bolland cultivated the technique Han Shuo imparted, Han Shuo had complete confidence in controlling Bolland and making him a loyal henchman in the future. Hence, Han Shuo began testing him.

Hey all... do let me know where I can improve! Also, some people have already asked if I have a Patreon, do check it out here! It's still a work in progress!

Chapter 382: Snatching one's Subordinate

When Bolland heard Han Shuo's statement. The earthworm-like scars on his face seemed to be alive due to his excitement, causing those who see him to be frightened as though they've seen a ghost during the day.

Even Bolland's current master sacred swordmaster Karel did not have a way to control the killing intent on his body. All along, Bolland had been experimenting by himself. As the exploration into the unknown was filled with uncertainty and danger, even sacred swordmaster Karel was unable to provide him with any form of assistance.

To sacred swordmaster Karel Ascot, Bolland's meticulous studying of killing intent was completely unorthodox. He didn't believe in wasting time on such things and had previously persuaded Bolland to go back to training in the orthodox field of training dou qi. Unfortunately, Bolland had already delved deeper and deeper, gradually becoming obsessed in the experimenting and it was hard for him to extricate himself. Karel was unable to persuade Bolland and with his heart feeling disdain, he naturally would not be able to assist Bolland in this "unorthodox" path.

At present, he heard Han Shuo mention that Han Shuo possessed a technique that could conceal and control his killing intent. To Bolland who had always been alone in this unfamiliar field, Han Shuo's statement was like words from heaven, as though ripping open Bolland's many years of lonesomeness. Bolland immediately couldn't maintain self-control.

"A-Are you for real?" Due to Bolland's excited mood, his face trembled violently and his tone was filled with disbelief.

Previously, Bolland had seen Han Shuo's battle against Brut Merchant's Leah Cain, as well as the miracles Han Shuo displayed the first time Bolland saw him. These gave Bolland the surprised feeling of meeting someone similar to him. Otherwise, he wouldn't have stayed behind today after Lawrence had left and attempt to chat in detail with Han Shuo. He wanted to see if he could obtain any long-awaited gains from Han Shuo.

Affirmatively nodding his head, Han Shuo confidently replied, "Not only to wield the killing intent on your body, I also have a way to absorb the aura of death in a battlefield. Heh heh, I believe that in the entire Profound Continent, I am the only one who is proficient in such a technique.”

With that sentence, Han Shuo’s demonic aura ferociously flowed out, clouds of blood red fog suddenly emerged from Han Shuo’s body. Contained within the blood red fog clouds was a ruthless killing intent filled with despair and endless resentment, causing one’s spirit to tremble. Under Han Shuo’s mental manipulation, the clouds of killing intent transformed into blades that similar to needles, forming a seemingly corporeal petal of a blooming blood red sinister devilish flower.

Bollands’ eyes popped out, his gaze fixed on Han Shuo. The numerous, crisscrossed scars on his face appeared to be wriggling about, resembling earthworms. The heavy scent of blood on Bollands’ body couldn’t be contained as it spread out. However, he was unable to emulate Han Shuo’s proficient manipulation of this bizarre energy.

Bollands could sense the power contained within as well as superficially urge a person’s fighting spirit through that power. However, he had never imagined manipulating that power to the subtlety that Han Shuo displayed. It was also from Han Shuo’s display that Bollands finally understood that by continuing to practice in this field, he would be able to display a brilliance and destruction that is more formidable than dou qi.

“C-Count Bryan, is it possible for you to teach me this martial technique?” Normally with Bollands’ status and seniority, he wouldn’t be acting so mannerlessly. However, he had already endured the feeling of helplessness and loss from years of fumbling in desolation for too long. Now that he saw a resplendent path appearing before his eyes, this old man who had solitarily explored the unknown all along was unable to contain himself any longer.

Han Shuo laughed involuntarily, apologetically shaking his head as he replied, “Hehe, Old Mister Bollands, you must be kidding. Not mentioning this mysterious technique, even the extensive dou qi in the Profound Continent, it wasn’t that easy for someone who wants to practice another person's dou qi technique.”

Bollands' eyes contained a hard-to-contain dimness. Sighing, Bollands sounded bitter as he replied, “I'm sorry, I was too rude. However, I truly wish to be able to practice such a martial technique, no matter the price I need to pay! In this world, perhaps you are the only one who is capable of giving me guidance in this lonely path. I've already experienced too much of the danger and suffering of helplessly fumbling alone.”

Han Shuo, who was staring fixedly on the old man's eyes, clearly saw every trace of emotion that was reflected in his eyes. When Bollands' internal regret was exposed, Han Shuo knitted his eyebrows, thinking hard for a while. He then hesitated for another moment, his brows still tightly knitted as he muttered to himself, “Actually when my teacher left behind this martial technique, he indeed did not state that it couldn't be divulged to an outsider.” Bollands who had just reached his lowest point had a delighted expression when he heard what Han Shuo said, emotionally looking toward Han Shuo as he probed, “B-Bryan, y-you...”

Flustered, Bollands spoke incoherently. Nevertheless, Han Shuo knew what Bollands wanted to convey. Appearing to earnestly consider for a while, only then did Han Shuo suddenly say, “It's not out of the question that you wish to practice this martial technique. However, you must become a part of our sect. This can be considered me substituting my deceased teacher in accepting a disciple. However, you are always following Mister Karel and even consider yourself his servant. I think this might not be very appropriate. It looks as if this would be impossible.”

“No, it's possible, it's possible!” Bollands hastily cried out in alarm. Under Han Shuo's astonished gaze, Bollands immediately explained, “There is a designated time of five years for me to follow Master. In order to repay Master's kindness, I've already followed him for seven years. Although I'm still willing to stay by my master's side now, I've already regained my freedom. As long as I let my master know, it shouldn't be a problem. If you don't mind, I wish to enter your sect and receive your teachings in the mysterious technique.”

He didn't expect that Bollands had obviously already regained freedom, yet still willingly stayed by the side of sacred swordmaster Karel. It seems like this person is actually extremely suitable to be his henchman. In principle, this matter shouldn't have any problems. Nevertheless, Han Shuo was still a little worried about sacred swordsman Karel, somewhat uneasy that he would become enemies with Karel due to this matter.

However, Han Shuo believed that with his current strength, he need not be afraid of sacred swordsman Karel. Furthermore, Bolland was a candidate extremely suited for demonhood. After hesitating for a while, Han Shuo explained to Bolland, "It's best if you think it over again. You must know, once you start training with me, you would be under my restrictions.

Furthermore, our sect has many rules. As your senior, I have the right to order you to do things you may be unwilling to do. If you refuse, it would be violating the master's teachings. I have the right to revoke the martial techniques you have learned. In addition, you should first let Mister Karel know and then carefully consider for a few days. Once you have carefully deliberated and have a genuine decision, you can always look for me once more to have a chat."

When Han Shuo said this, Bolland's eyes gradually regained its brightness. Having lived for many years, Bolland naturally wasn't an ignorant person that couldn't view a situation clearly. Although his mind was slightly flustered due to Han Shuo's martial technique, when Han Shuo mentioned the rules and restrictions, Bolland immediately understood the meaning Han Shuo wanted to convey – You have to listen to me completely, regardless of right or wrong!

This was actually the same as when he attended to his current master Karel, taking of all his master's affairs with the status of a servant, be it murder, arson or robbery. So long as Master passed down the orders, he had to do his utmost in executing it. What Han Shuo wanted to express was actually the same idea.

After Bolland's eyes cleared, he then truly started considering his options. From Han Shuo's body, he could see Han Shuo's ambition. Moreover, an intense viciousness could be felt from Han Shuo and he was definitely not a kindly, amiable person like Karel no matter how you looked. Once he followed Han Shuo, it looks like he would definitely resume his old trade and be involved in some shady business.

However, Karel was unable to provide what he wanted. But Han Shuo could. Furthermore, comparing the benevolent good-natured sacred swordmaster Karel and the vicious youngster, Han Shuo seemed more to his liking instead.

Bollands whose hands have been covered in blood recalled fondly the wonderful feeling of slaughter. Stemming from his unrestrained delving into killing intent, he had become addicted to slaughter, unable to extricate himself. Even after staying by Karel's side for many years, Bollands still could not forget that feeling. Han Shuo's appearance presented him with an alternative path – a path that he had been longing for!

Hesitating between rationality and enticement, Bollands was unable to immediately make a decision. In the end, he said to Han Shuo, "I will carefully consider your proposal, I will look for you when I've made a decision."

"No matter what you decide, I will respect your decision." Han Shuo smiled as he replied.

Before Bollands left, he suddenly thought of something. He turned his head toward Han Shuo, asking, "What is the name of this branch of martial skills that you practice?"

"Sky Demon Gate!"

"Sky Demon Gate... Sky Demon Gate, I'll remember it!" Bollands muttered to himself, turning and leaping onto the roof before vanishing in the blink of an eye.

"Heh heh, once you enter the path of demons, you never be able to leave from my control. Karel, Karel, it's not that I intentionally want to snatch your subordinate. In reality, you are simply unable to properly instruct such a talent." After Bollands left, Han Shuo muttered to himself, feeling immensely pleased.

Within the Duke's mansion.

Today, Duke Ashburn secretly met with a few special guests, a group of clerics belonging to the Church of Light.

The Church of Light's Red Archbishop Kosse, who was based in the Lancelot Kingdom, as well as a few Temple Knights and White Priests were chatting happily with Duke Ashburn and eldest prince Charles within Duke Ashburn's mansion.

The Church of Light was viewed as the religious organization with the largest influence in the whole continent. In the Profound Continent, many countries had various kinds of military organizations. Any country with a Temple of Light would have the protection of Temple Knights. The number of Temple Knights varied depending on the size of the temple.

Within the Oden Kingdom where the Church of Light was headquartered at, the Temple of Light possessed a regiment of ten thousand Temple Knights. All these years, there always existed ten large knight regiments with the continent. The Church of Light's Temple Knights have always had an impressive reputation. It is even rumored in the outside world that the Temple Knight regiment was the strongest knight regiment in the whole continent.

Furthermore, numerous figures in the Church of Light similarly had astonishing strength. For example, a character like Red Archbishop Kosse, who possessed a divine artifact, was a nightmare to anyone, especially darkness magicians and necromancers. Once they met the divine artifact-wielding Red Archbishop Kosse, it would basically allow Kosse to proclaim the might of the God of Light, proving their lowliness. The Church's strength in the Profound Continent was unfathomably large. Faith was the vaguest and the hardest thing to comprehend. Often, it could cause an ordinary person to become fanatic and prejudiced and then doing unreasonable things. The Church of Light was an expert in exploiting the strength of faith, causing both the ignorant masses and nobility to become prejudiced, not necessarily in a proper orientation.

Within the Lancelot Kingdom, the strength of the Church of Light similarly not be underestimated. Every city in the Lancelot Kingdom had a temple of the Church of Light. Places with a Temple of Light would naturally have the armed forces from the Church of Light. The private forces that completely worshiped the God of Light was, in fact, a factor of instability to any kingdom.

However, perhaps it's due to the Church of Light's influence being too large, in any country, the private forces of the Church of Light was actually a lawful existence. This stemmed from the thoughts and demands in worshipping the God of Light. Even Lancelot Kingdom's King Uhtred accepted this tacitly.

Fortunately, the Church of Light wasn't the principal church in the Lancelot Kingdom. The people also worshiped the Goddess of Nature, the Goddess of Ice and Snow as well as other deities. These numerous churches were distributed across every city in the Lancelot Kingdom, but were unable to shake the foundation of the kingdom.

Now that the Lancelot Kingdom is caught up in the struggle for power by the various princes, it is inevitable that religions choose a candidate to support. The correct choice would bring immediate benefits to their church. For the possibility to be the only religion within the Lancelot Kingdom, Kosse had precisely eyed eldest prince Charles. That was why he would appear within Duke Ashburn's residence.

The support of the enormous Church of Light was naturally a joyous affair for Duke Ashburn. Eldest prince Charles was similarly overjoyed. As an orthodox knight, he already had a favorable impression of the Church of Light. When the Church of Light planned to support him, this favorable impression naturally increased many times over.

Both sides were perfectly contented regarding the discussion of the pledges of power and the provision of assistance, satisfied with the collaboration. As Duke Ashburn and eldest prince Charles showed their hospitality to the clerics, Kosse suddenly sighed before saying, "How does Lord Duke view Brettel City's Count Bryan?"

"He is just a lucky guy who curries favor as he schemes for profits. In addition, this fellow has no foresight. I believe his happy days will soon be over.” Duke Ashburn’s face darkened as he lightly smiled, giving his judgment of Han Shuo.

“Lord Duke is mistaken. That person is definitely not easy to deal with. That person has the backing of the Calamity Church. Being our old adversaries that have hiddenly fought against our Church of Light for hundreds of years, we are fully aware of the fearsomeness of the Calamity Church. To be honest with you, I’ve previously acted personally, bringing a few Temple Knights to seize said person. Yet, I returned in failure twice and was even injured.” At this point, Kosse sighed again, before continuing, “The pontiff has instructed that our members within the Lancelot Kingdom should disregard all costs in eliminating this person. I hope Lord Duke will be able to help us.”

When Kosse mentioned the Calamity Church, both Duke Ashburn and eldest prince Charles’s expression suddenly became a little unsightly. A high-ranked noble like Duke Ashburn naturally knew of the existence of the Calamity Church. They were a demonic lair that gathered true fiends. Duke Ashburn could never have thought that Han Shuo actually had such an origin. This made Duke Ashburn a little apprehensive.

However, Duke Ashburn and eldest prince Charles had made a move previously. Both of them believed that Han Shuo was already aware of that. Regardless if it’s Han Shuo himself or the Calamity Church, both parties were ruthless and would settle their grievances. Hence, both of them understood that they had already become mortal enemies with Han Shuo.

Although the Calamity Church was infamous, the Church of Light was capable of suppressing the Calamity Church in their few hundred years of battle. That was sufficient in proving that the Church of Light was similarly a powerful religious organization. When he heard Kosse mentioning his intention to eliminate Han Shuo, Ashburn immediately replied frankly, “We have tried previously, however it ended in failure. This person supports that illegitimate child, I believe sooner or later he would be at death’s door. Mister Kosse’s opinion is to eliminate him earlier?”

Nodding his head, Red Archbishop Kosse sighed as he said, “This person is the cause of the Profound Continent’s instability. His existence would bring about disaster to the Profound Continent. The Church of Light’s goal all along is precisely to eliminate all existences within the continent that defied the will of God. He is precisely the target that we need to immediately get rid off.” “In that case, Lord Bishop, what is your plan?” Duke Ashburn seized the moment when Kosse ended his emotional statement to question closely.

“I have a plan. However, I need both of you to assist me...” , Red Archbishop Kosse nodded as he started describing his intention to the two of them.

Chapter 383: The other world

Ossen City. Han Shuo's official residence.

Within a secret room, Han Shuo grasped the skeletal staff, chanting the incantation for necromancy. After a long and tedious section of incantation, a mummy lord stood before Han Shuo. The mummy lord was stupefied as it inspected Han Shuo, the entire secret room suddenly filled with the deathly scent emitted from its body.

Of the three summoning spells at grand magus level, Han Shuo has already mastered two of them. He is able to proficiently summon old fey demons and mummy lords, only left with the spell for bone demons. As he still didn't really understand the characteristics of the bone demon's body composition, Han Shuo temporarily still could succeed in summoning a bone demon into this world.

With an order, the mummy lord unwillingly wielded the ancient strips of cloth that twisted around its body, moving its body in accordance to Han Shuo's directions.

Nodding his head, Han Shuo knew that he thoroughly grasped the summoning of the mummy lord. Han Shuo then chanted another spell and with a wave of the white bone staff, the mummy lord returned back to the netherworld.

Keeping the white bone staff, Han Shuo then took out the skeletal staff obtained from the Cemetery of Death. Fiddling with the skeletal staff in his hand, Han Shuo hesitated for a while, intending to use the skeletal staff to summon the old fey demon and mummy lord.

This skeletal staff was different from the white bone staff. Chanting necromancy while holding the skeletal staff would often result in the might of the summoning spell to be doubled. When Han Shuo used the white bone staff, he could save a little mental strength but he would be unable to summon two old fey demons to the Profound Continent.

However, if it was channeling the necromancy spell through the skeletal staff, he should be able to momentarily search for two old fey demons.

Han Shuo had the experience of using the skeletal staff when summoning evil knights. He believed that old fey demons were perhaps the same as the evil knights and he could similarly summon two old fey demons.

Han Shuo hesitated for a moment, before starting to chant the necromancy spell to summon old fey demons. When Han Shuo's spell connected with the netherworld and the chanting reached the section to search for old fey demons, Han Shuo's mental space suddenly felt the two targets that were separated by a long distance.

These two targets were old fey demons. However, there was a incomparable distance between the two old fey demons. In the same moment, both old fey demons felt Han Shuo's presence. When the feeling of their freedom being threatened entered their souls, the two old fey demons instinctively struggled.

Han Shuo was startled, fixing his mental strength on suppressing one old fey demon as they were too far apart. Han Shuo's mental strength couldn't handle both old fey demons at once, their frantic resistance causing him to get a little dizzy. This was the reason why Han Shuo's suppression became quite strenuous.

At this moment, Han Shuo understood that he had neglected an important issue. The personality of old fey demons were vastly different from that of evil knights. Although evil knights were similarly high ranked undead creatures, there were numerous undead creatures in the netherworld. In addition, evil knights were considered to still prefer living in a group. When Han Shuo used the skeletal staff to summon evil knights, they would often be from the same location, locating two or three evil knights and then summoning them to the Profound Continent.

However, old fey demons were an even higher ranked existence and their numbers in the netherworld were much lesser than evil knights. Furthermore, as high ranked existences, old fey demons dwelled in separate locations, becoming the master of that location. Basically, it highly unlikely for two old fey demons to live together in the same area.

Han Shuo had precisely overlooked this point. When the spell channeled through the skeletal staff, it immediately sensed two old fey demons were five thousand kilometers apart. As the two old fey demons were too far apart, Han Shuo couldn't handle both of them at the same time. Old fey demons were also undead creatures with a formidable soul. When Han Shuo focused on one old fey demon, the other old fey demon suddenly revolted, causing Han Shuo to be somewhat unable to suppress it with his mental strength.

This situation happened too quickly. A necromancy summoning didn't take long. Because Han Shuo didn't anticipate such a situation at the beginning, he simply didn't have the means to handle it at short notice. When the two old fey demons sensed that Han Shuo's mental strength was in slight disorder, they frantically resisted further.

There was a sudden sharp pain in his mind. Distracted, Han Shuo's consciousness was a little routed and he felt himself actually becoming a strand of peculiar existence. Under the pull from the souls of the two old fey demons, he traversed the spacetime tunnel, arriving at the unknown netherworld.

Han Shuo had had the same experience once. Now that it happened a second time, Han Shuo immediately reacted, his mental strength tenaciously wrapped around that strand of consciousness to prevent harmful substances within the spacetime tunnel from intruding as he involuntarily descended to the world filled with deathly stillness and mystery.

Within the world which seemed forever monochrome, a thick stationary layer of grey clouds obstructed the horizon. This place was filled with swamps everywhere, as well as deathly still forests that were formed from large withered trees. These withered trees seemed to have gone through thousands of years of decay and had long since been void of any moisture or nutrients. There were even ash grey colored spider webs suspended from the tree trunks, with many bizarre tiny undead creatures wiggling on the spiderweb.

Within the swamps which were all over, the aura of death pervade everywhere. The swamps gave off weird bubbles and from time to time, one or two zombies will rigidly climb out of the swamps and then proceed to aimlessly roam the vast silent netherworld.

The netherworld was the final destination of departed spirits. Over the millions of years, the perpetual deathly qi continuously produced various kinds of undead creatures. When an undead creature disappears, the death qi from its body would return to this world, go through many years of bizarre evolution before once again forming another undead creature.

Han Shuo's consciousness was gradually restored. Han Shuo slowly observed the deathly still area that was covered with swamps. During his observation, Han Shuo tried to absorb the deathly qi from the Cemetery of Death and condense a body that is visible yet lacking in form for himself. However, Han Shuo's whole body was drifting in the air.

Suddenly, Han Shuo felt the existence of the little skeleton and the zombies. They were in a region far away, but Han Shuo was able to distinctly sense their existence. As for the three evil knights that were refined later, he could only sense a faint dot.

Howl... "Petty existence, you have intruded into my world without permission, I want you to suffer the burn of my fury." a shrill voice filled with incomparable anger suddenly rang in Han Shuo's ears. This voice was filled with the roar of ire, scaring Han Shuo greatly.

With a sudden reaction to his consciousness, Han Shuo felt a shadow rapidly approaching from his left. Han Shuo watched attentively as one of the old fey demons that he had just attempted to summon unexpectedly appeared. The surroundings of the old fey demon were filled with hundreds of low ranking undead creatures. Among them were ghouls, skeleton knights, zombies and three hate warriors.

It looks like this old fey demon should be the overlord of this area. He still remembered the aura on Han Shuo's body and when he suddenly realised Han Shuo's soul appearing within his territory, the old fey demon was incessantly furious, immediately following Han Shuo's aura that he just sensed and angrily rushed toward Han Shuo.

In the netherworld, the old fey demon could display its strength as much as it wanted. The rich omnipresent death qi could supply him with sufficient energy. However, for Han Shuo whose consciousness has entered this world, he could not utilise his demonic arts without a physical body and could only utilise his consciousness and necromancy magic to attack.

Seeing the old fey demon ferociously charging over while brandishing its sharp claws that could rip through iron and stone, Han Shuo's consciousness suddenly locked onto the old fey demon's body, unleashing a Soul Tremor.

Bang!

The old fey demon's soul that was midair seemed to be heavily hammered on, the sharp pain momentarily spreading to the deepest parts of his soul. Without waiting for the old fey demon to react, many bone spears attacked through the sky, causing the old fey demon to stumble as he dodged. Another Soul Tremor followed immediately, the old fey demon was momentarily dazed.

However in this other world, the old fey demon had sufficient death qi to utilise, and its soul was extremely formidable. Although Han Shuo's Soul Tremor attack was able to cause enormous harm to the old fey demon, it was unable to truly kill it. Furthermore, the bone spears were only able to leave shallow white scars on the old fey demon's body, unable to pierce this high ranking undead creature.

In such a place, Han Shuo's mental strength was exhaustible. Prolonging such as situation, Han Shuo's mental strength will definitely be used up. At that moment, he would not be able to contain the old fey demon. This high ranking old fey demon would definitely be able to destroy Han Shuo's soul that had descended to such a place.

After the row of bone spears and Soul Tremor, a bone prison formed suddenly, temporarily imprisoning the old fey demon within. Han Shuo saw that the old fey demon did not have any reaction to the Soul Tremor magic and didn't continue staying in this area, his visible yet immaterial body quickly floated into the distance, resembling an ordinary wraith in the netherworld.

Within the netherworld's overcast sky, there would often be wraiths floating about. These wraiths only had the simplest of consciousness and usually became food for higher ranked undead creatures. They were also the nutrient that Han Shuo used in refining some of his demonic creatures. Han Shuo never thought that one day he would enter the netherworld and actually be besieged by wraiths.

Five white misty wraiths suddenly surrounded Han Shuo. These five wraiths sensed that Han Shuo had a different aura from them and attempted to attack Han Shuo as though he was a mutated being.

When Han Shuo who was visible but had not material body saw the five wraiths approaching, he could sense their ill intentions revealed by their simple consciousness. Han Shuo gathered a small amount of mental strength, unleashing the Soul Tremor magic. With a poof, the five wraiths were turned into grey smoke, becoming death qi and returning to the earth.

The rows of wraiths that were further away felt the momentarily explosion of power from Han Shuo, immediately classifying Han Shuo as a high ranked undead creature and kept far away from Han Shuo. None of the wraiths dared to approach Han Shuo any more.

At a towering barren mountain peak an unknown distance away from Han Shuo, there was a majestic undead palace. Within a lofty palace where there were strict rankings, on the highest respected platform, the little skeleton sat upright on an enormous throne filled with sharp spikes (TL note: Game of thrones reference?) By his side were the earth zombie, fire zombie, wood zombie and the seemingly timid water zombie.

Beneath the little skeleton were six evil knights and two bone demons as well as the previously subdued mummy lord. They all knelt on one knee with their heads lowered towards the little skeleton.

On the palace's cold ceiling hung the bone demon that was remodelled by little skeleton with the ability to fly as well as numerous gargoyles that curled their bodies and stood in place silently.

Behind the few evil knights were a few stupid hate warriors and zombie warriors. They resembled conscientious bodyguards, devotedly standing upright, as though willing to risk their lives for the little skeleton at any moment.

“My lord, why do you need to depart?” The previously subdued mummy lord humbly inquired with his head lowered.

“All of you, help me properly look after this place. I’ll be back very soon.” The little skeleton had yet to answer, only giving orders as a superior. “The powerful existence from the eastern dead sea might come in the near future. All of you guard this place, do not attack others while I’m not around.”

“Understood, my lord!” The high ranked undead creatures all replied deferentially. Facing the fiercer little skeleton, they who were previously lords of an area couldn’t help but lower their proud heads.

“You can withdraw. Properly guard your respective territories!” The little skeleton imposingly conveyed his intention. Apart from the three evil knights that had been refined by Han Shuo’s demonic magic, the other evil knights and mummy lords all withdrew after receiving the orders.

“Father has come here. This world isn’t the same as the material world. Without a corporeal body, Father would possibly run into danger, I must go and protect him!” The little skeleton said to the earth zombie and the others after the subordinates have withdrawn.

“We’ll go too!” The earth zombie touched its head, simple-mindedly saying, “We want to see Father in this world too.”

“That’s out of the question. You need to stay here and look after our home. With their strength, those subordinates would find it hard to ensure the safety of this place. I only trust you guys. This is because we have inherited the same bloodline!” The little skeleton instructed, before saying, “Be at ease. When i find Father, I’ll bring him over.”

With that sentence, the flying bone demon that was hanging upside down at the top of the hall suddenly spread its wings and soared in front of the little skeleton. The seven bone spurs on the little skeleton’s back trembled, shooting into the body of the already remodeled bone demon. The huge wings of the bone demon made of meshed rotting flesh flapped once, bringing the little skeleton away from the summit of the towering death mountain.

Chapter 384: Comprehending the netherworld

The vast netherworld, eternally a monotonous grey, various sorts and varieties of undead creatures engaged in never-ending combat, void of any signs of life.

In this place, there was no alternating day and night, no sense of time passing, only deathly stillness and bleak coldness. On the desolate earth under the grey sky, the undead creatures complied with ancient teachings, unceasingly scrambling for a more extensive territory. However, they were unaware of the reason for all of this.

Han Shuo followed the connection he had with the little skeleton, drifting like a spirit in the little skeleton's direction. As there wasn't a concept of time, Han Shuo didn't know how long he had been in this world. As he headed toward the little skeleton, Han Shuo came across many different kinds of undead creatures.

Many of the undead creatures had extended their sharp claws toward Han Shuo, attempting to swallow Han Shuo who appeared weak. Facing Han Shuo's Soul Tremor magic, the low ranked undead creatures were usually destroyed by the magic that directly attacked the soul.

As for higher ranked undead creatures, Han Shuo's consciousness was able to sense the existence. By means of his sensing ability, Han Shuo was able to determine the strength of those undead creatures and actively avoid the ancient undead creatures, detouring around their territories as he continued in the direction of the little skeleton.

After what seemed to be quite some time, Han Shuo felt the distance between the little skeleton and him becoming closer and closer. Furthermore, with the connection between the two of them, he became aware that the little skeleton was currently rushing toward him. This made Han Shuo feel touched, moved that even without any orders, due to its worry for him, the little skeleton had travelled from far away just to find him.

In the netherworld where the death qi was incomparably rich, Han Shuo who was in the form of a ghost was constantly tempering his mental strength, attempting to manipulate this world's death qi through his demonic powers. Gradually, Han Shuo even discovered some insights.

Demonic magic was famous for being able to live forever as long as their consciousness wasn't completely destroyed. In the separate demon realm, cultivator's souls would become consciousnesses, possessing many extraordinary uses. Even if a demonic practitioner's corporeal body is destroyed, as long as the consciousness is strong enough to attach onto another physical body, the practitioner can use this new body to practice demonic magic once again. They would only require to spend a hundred years to regain their previous strength.

Being transported into this bizarre world, Han Shuo searched for a way to return to the Profound Continent, as well as using this strand of consciousness to seek a way to increase his own strength. Before he could find the method in returning to the Profound Continent, Han Shuo first needed to ensure he could survive in this foreign world.

Slowly, Han Shuo's existing consciousness had a strange reaction to the death qi. As Han Shuo continued experimenting, he was now totally able to absorb and manipulate the omnipresent death qi in this world, so much so that he could even form weapons from the death qi to attack the undead creatures that had ill intentions.

At the start, Han Shuo could only condense the death qi into the form of arrows and control the arrows with his consciousness. This was only threatening toward the low ranked skeleton warriors and zombie warriors and wasn't even comparable to the simple bone spear spell. As Han Shuo's consciousness gradually understood the uses of the death qi, he could now completely utilise his consciousness to condense formidable attacks as long as he is given time. The strength of these attacks could even surpass Han Shuo's Soul Tremor.

As a few days passed, Han Shuo's consciousness could gradually condense the death qi to give rise to more clever uses. Han Shuo even experimented with a skeleton remains of excellent quality, condensing the death qi within the bones and forging a skeletal body for himself.

Contained within the pure white skeleton was the death qi condensed by Han Shuo's consciousness. Under the reckless suppression of Han Shuo's consciousness, the death qi became crystal-like spots hidden within the bones. However, the quality of the remains of an ordinary skeleton warrior wasn't much. When Han Shuo tried to condense even more death qi within the bones, they weren't able to withstand the death qi and thus exploded.

Utilizing this sparkling jade like skeletal remains, Han Shuo was able to intimidate many undead creatures that attempted to attack him. Even a few high ranked evil knights who saw Han Shuo's huge skeleton that glittered with white light withdrew with dread.

The evil knights clearly took Han Shuo's jade-like skeleton as a skeleton king which was at the peak of undead creatures. Skeleton kings as well as bone dragons were peak existences among undead creatures. A skeleton king's body contained incomparably rich death qi and posses terrifying strength. Weak undead creatures were simply not its match.

However, Han Shuo knew that purely using death qi to condense a skeletal body would definitely pale in contrast to a skeleton king's body and would even be much weaker than the bones on a bone demon. Yet, Han Shuo wasn't discouraged, continuing to silently delve into the uses of his consciousness in this world as he searched for a way to return to the Profound Continent. He also felt that the distance between the little skeleton and himself was getting closer and closer.

As Han Shuo passed through an overgrown valley shrouded in rich death qi, his consciousness suddenly detected a few formidable auras. These auras were abnormally chaotic and unstable, as though currently engaged in a huge battle. In the surrounds were many low ranked undead creatures fighting against one another, clearly originating from different factions.

Looking at the overgrown valley from afar, Han Shuo noticed clouds of dense blue qi within the rich death qi. These blue qi rose in spirals, slowly diffusing from within the valley. Some of the low ranked undead creatures who were battling extended their necks to absorb the blue clouds of gas as though they were an exquisite feast.

In this desolate netherworld, there rarely appeared colors that weren't monochrome. In the period of time that Han Shuo has been in this world, this was the first time he saw a blue color existing. This made Han Shuo feel astonished, as he look toward the magnificent battle. As he sensed the combat between the few auras inside the valley, Han Shuo had some suspicions of the scene within.

While Han Shuo was being puzzled, the dense blue qi had slowly spread to the area where Han Shuo was in. The wisps of blue qi entered Han Shuo's consciousness, the mental energy that had been consumed seemed to be replenished, recovering little by little.

Han Shuo was incessantly surprised. Originally, he only allowed the dense blue qi that touched him to seep into his body. However, when Han Shuo felt the benefits the blue qi gave to the mental strength of his consciousness, he immediately started operating his consciousness, analyzing the blue qi within the valley and using the strength of his consciousness to slowly draw the blue qi towards himself.

This period of time, Han Shuo spent everyday researching how to utilise the strength of his consciousness to manipulate the rich death qi that was everywhere in this world. Toward this blue qi which was of a completely different nature, but yet had the same characteristics as the qi in the netherworld, Han Shuo very quickly found the trick in sucking in the blue qi.

When Han Shuo went all out in operating his consciousness, a large portion of death qi that diffused out from the heart of the valley was subjected to the pull from Han Shuo's consciousness, slowly entering him. Han Shuo's originally exhausted mental strength gradually recovered following the absorption of the blue qi.

The numerous undead creatures in the surroundings of the valley were still engaged in intense battle. The grey earth was covered in broken bones and rotting flesh. Under the orders of their respective masters, these low ranked undead creatures recklessly fought with each other, yet didn't forget to avariciously absorb the strands of drifting dense blue qi.

With a moment of effort, Han Shuo utilised his consciousness to absorb large amounts of blue qi, recovering 80% of his mental strength. There was no longer any more blue qi spreading out from the heart of the valley and the blue qi that was further away were either absorbed by the numerous undead creatures or had vanished.

In the form of a pure white skeleton, Han Shuo stood in an area extremely far from the valley. After hesitating for a moment, he suddenly headed for the heart of the valley. At the same time, Han Shuo could sense that the little skeleton was getting nearer and nearer.

Han Shuo felt from the cloud of dense blue qi that permeated out that there must be a mysterious item in the heart of the valley. An item that could grow one's mental strength was rarely heard of in the Profound Continent. Han Shuo never would have thought that in this foreign eternally desolate other world would actually have such an extraordinary item.

What made Han Shuo more apprehensive was that when Han Shuo absorbed the dense blue qi, there was actually an indistinct familiar feeling. At the start, Han Shuo didn't react, only reacting he stopped absorbing after the dense blue qi no longer spread from within the valley.

Apparently when he was previously beneath the Cemetery of Death, Han Shuo had absorbed some kind of special energy which made his mental strength grow substantially. The feeling he had when he absorbed that energy was similar to when he was absorbing the dense blue qi. However, previous that energy was boundless, directly allowing Han Shuo to possess the mental strength of a grand magus. When he had just absorbed the dense blue qi, it fell way short of that energy but it definitely had a similar aura.

"Who knows what item is within the valley that is actually able to give off such a mysterious blue qi!"

It was precisely this suspicion that led Han Shuo to still decide to go into the valley and investigate, even though he sensed a few undead creatures that could threaten his existence.

The jade-like white skeletal body was larger than ordinary skeleton warriors. At approximately 1.8m tall, it currently headed toward the source of the battle. Along the way, many low ranked skeleton and zombie warriors immediately divided a portion of their forces to attack Han Shuo's condensed body when they noticed another enemy faction approaching.

En route, Han Shuo's consciousness started manipulating death qi. When the skeleton warriors and zombie warriors have crowded around, a crescent shaped greyish-white light beam condensed purely from death qi suddenly shot out from the front of his large skeletal body.

The more than ten skeleton warriors and zombie warriors that were the first to crowd around were struck by the condensed light beam, their frail souls were unable to bear the power, collapsing in succession and dissipating. With a wave of cracking sounds, the bones of the skeleton warriors fell apart, the zombie warriors had also become heaps of rotting flesh and falling over.

A light beam condensed from death qi flashed past, more than ten skeleton warriors and zombie warriors collapsed. Another group of skeleton warriors and zombie warriors which had intended to come over paused for a moment. Under the powerful strength that Han Shuo deliberately released, they realised this skeleton warrior was much larger, its bones were more sparkly and translucent different from their own bodies.

Of these low ranked undead creatures, many of them had never seen a skeleton king. However, from the moment they were born, there was an imprint of this high ranked undead creature on their soul. When they examined the body Han Shuo condensed carefully, they mistook Han Shuo as the skeleton king at the peak of all undead creatures.

A path suddenly appeared voluntarily. These undead creatures still fought with each other, but not one undead creature dared to intercept Han Shuo anymore, as though ignoring Han Shuo's existence.

However, Han Shuo knew this was their instinctive reaction toward high ranked undead creatures. The voluntarily formed path directly lead to the depths of the valley. These low ranked undead creatures knew Han Shuo's objective was the depths of the valley. They expectedly provided a clear passage.

"Clang... Clang..."

Han Shuo's consciousness controlled this condensed skeletal body, heading toward the valley a step at a time. The surrounding undead creatures still fought furiously, but not one undead creature got in Han Shuo's way.

At the center of the valley, the few formidable undead creatures still fought against each other. Han Shuo was able to sense their vast strength. As he entered deep into the valley, Han Shuo gradually slowed his steps, starting to cautiously size up the situation all around, preparing to immediately depart in an unfavourable situation.

The surroundings were filled with even more undead creatures that incessantly fought. As there were many hate warriors and a few evil knights mixed within the undead creatures here, Han Shuo knew that he was already approaching his target. Han Shuo deliberately released an unyielding posture as he passed through these higher ranked undead creatures, finally entering the heart of the valley. A clear, pitch-black spring immediately entered Han Shuo's sight, a sinister looking plant floating on the spring. It had many branches that were spread out, appearing menacing yet devilishly beautiful like a man-eating flower. Its branches and leaves appeared like countless withered hands, propping a cloud of blue smoke. Within the blue smoke, there was an eyeball sized teardrop similar to a sapphire, shooting out resplendent, bizarre light.

Chapter 385: Evolution of undead creatures

In this monochromatic world, Han Shuo was truly stunned when he first glanced at that vibrant color.

In the middle of the pitch-black spring, that sinister-looking plant's lush network of withered branches propped up a hazy cloud of blue gas. Within the cloud, a drop of sapphire-shaped resplendent teardrop gave off an even more magnificent radiance.

Han Shuo was sure that the blue gas that had previously spread out from within the valley should have originated from the plant in the middle of the spring. From Han Shuo's perspective, he could clearly see that the blue gas had originated from the revolving teardrop in the middle of the blue cloud.

The pitch-black spring was brimming with desolation and deathly stillness. Organisms being nurtured from this sort of weird spring would definitely be fierce undead creatures or plants and there certainly would not be any amicable existences.

Han Shuo carefully examined the black spring, realising that there were many seaweed-like black plants floating within the spring. These plants had blended into the spring, the tentacle like streamers spreading in the constant sway of the spring water, appearing like they want to capture something and pull it into the depths of the spring.

Once he had finished observing the layout of the center of the valley, Han Shuo's line of sight started looking indiscriminately around the spring. Only now did he notice several undead creatures battling in the vicinity of the black spring.

A mummy lord, a floating apparition and a five to six meter tall knight that rode a large flaming horse and brandishing a broadsword. These three high ranked undead creatures surrounded the spring in the middle as they engaged one another in intense combat.

Han Shuo had only swept his eyes over, his attention concentrated on that huge knight that rode the large flaming horse. The huge knight held a gigantic broadsword which was full of rusted spots. The broadsword was over two meters in length and was brimming with a rotting aura. The huge knight's appearance resembled that of an evil knight. However, there were barbs that grew from around its arms, knees and shoulders. Its build was also much taller than an evil knight's.

Han Shuo had some impression of this huge knight. A long time ago when the little skeleton was still quite weak, Han Shuo had once received the little skeleton's distress message. At that time, Han Shuo immediately summoned the little skeleton to the Profound Continent out of worry. However, through the strength of their contract, Han Shuo still faintly saw the formidable undead creature that was chasing the little skeleton. That formidable undead creature was precisely this huge knight.

For this peculiar knight to be able to force the little skeleton to flee the netherworld, its strength was naturally extremely valiant. Han Shuo would never have imagined that he would meet this formidable undead creature in the netherworld. The mummy lord and the floating apparition had joined hands in facing this huge knight. Han Shuo was incomparably familiar with a mummy lord. However, the floating apparition was rather unfamiliar to him.

What made Han Shuo extremely astonished was that this mummy lord carried a greyish white sarcophagus which was large enough to fit his entire body. This mummy lord clearly wielded that sarcophagus as a weapon, proficiently manipulating the sarcophagus to face the enemy. The majority of the strikes from the terrifying knight's two meter long broadsword were blocked by the sarcophagus.

As for that floating apparition, Han Shuo did not know at all what undead creature it was. However, Han Shuo could sense from its body the aura of the most common undead creature in the netherworld, the wraith. Merely, the aura on the apparition was exponentially stronger than that of a wraith.

The floating apparition constantly hid behind the mummy lord, behaving like a magician in the Profound Continent, utilising profound magic to attack that huge knight. Ripples of grey magic shot out in waves from the apparition's direction, attacking the huge knight's body.

Under Han Shuo's attentive gaze, the knight's two meter long rusted broadsword suddenly thrust. The carrion belt in the mummy lord's hands moved, the sarcophagus floating above his head striking towards that broadsword. At this moment, there was a terrifying boom when the knight's broadsword struck the sarcophagus and the sarcophagus suddenly flew up into the air.

The knight took the opportunity to urge the flaming horse toward the mummy lord. The flaming horse suddenly breathed out a spout of flames that rolled toward the mummy lord. The mummy lord was obviously a little frantic as the sarcophagus flying above his head couldn't be moved so quickly.

At this moment, the floating apparition behind him suddenly transmitted a bizarre soul undulation. Countless wraiths suddenly swam out from within the apparition's body, forming a tidy formation and blocking the flame breath. It simply utilised many wraiths to drown out the flames from the flaming horse.

The apparition had obstructed the flaming horse's flame breath and the sarcophagus that flew into the sky had also been caught by the mummy lord, just in time to block the evil knight's next attack. The three undead creatures continued fighting once again, being tangled in a stalemate.

The low ranked undead creatures were still fighting ferociously in Han Shuo's surroundings. These undead creatures clearly felt the formidable aura from Han Shuo's body, but all of them ignored Han Shuo's existence. This allowed Han Shuo to peacefully watch the battle, taking in the whole scene of the battle between the three unusual undead creatures

Han Shuo stared at that floating apparition for a long time before he suddenly understood. To be able to control that many wraiths and also carry the aura of wraiths on its body, the apparition was surely a high ranked undead creature that had evolved from wraiths. That particularly queer huge knight was most likely an evolution from an evil knight.

In the netherworld where ranks were rigid, most higher ranked creatures possessed extremely large fighting strengths. However, this was not absolute. Lower ranked undead creatures had the possibility of undergoing evolution and become high ranked undead creatures as well. For example, the majority of skeleton kings that could be as strong as a bone dragon had fortuitous occurrences and were naturally produced. However, there were also skeleton kings which could have been the lowliest skeleton that underwent countless evolutions.

Although the probability was extremely small, it existed. Spirits in the netherworld could swallow each other. If low ranked undead creatures were able to swallow the spirit of a formidable bone dragon, they could substantially improve a few stages. Merely, this probability was extremely low. Typically, weaker undead creatures would only instinctively escape when facing someone higher ranked than them. They would never dare to attack unless they had a master and only under their master's orders would they disregard their lives and attack.

However, even if they attacked, when facing a higher ranked undead creature, there would never be any flukes and would definitely be massacred, let alone being able to swallow the spiritual strength of a higher ranked undead creature. Most of the low ranked undead creatures that were able to evolve had coincidentally come across high ranked undead creatures that were almost killed by even stronger undead creatures. While the even stronger undead creature had not arrived, they were then able to conveniently swallow the spirit of the higher ranked undead creature.

Taking the formidable bone dragon as an example, it could kill or seriously injure a group of hate warriors with one breath. The spirits of these lower ranked undead creatures were of no interest to the bone dragon. If there just happened to be a skeleton or zombie warrior in the vicinity after the bone dragon left, they would be able to conveniently devour a higher ranked hate warrior's spirit.

When such a low probability matter repeatedly happens on a low ranked undead creature, the low ranked undead creature that had swallowed the spirits of many high ranked undead creatures would be able to gradually evolve and become a high ranked undead creature that surpassed its birth restrictions. This apparition was perhaps an example of such an existence that had extremely astonishing luck.

Han Shuo looked at the alliance of the apparition and the mummy lord withstanding the knight's assault and then looked at the sapphire-like teardrop which contained bizarre energy that was being propped in the middle of the spring by sinister-looking plants network of branches. His thoughts were filled with indecision, not knowing if he should take advantage of the situation to obtain the teardrop.

The three formidable undead creatures appeared to also be fighting over that drop of liquid in the middle of the spring. The huge knight's strength was incredibly astonishing with Han Shuo's condensed body of the skeleton king probably unable to withstand a strike of that knight's broadsword. Furthermore, that apparition and mummy lord were also enemies. Han Shuo wasn't confident in handling them without having his true body.

However, Han Shuo knew that the sapphire-like liquid in the middle of the spring was able to improve his mental strength. Such miraculous items were unheard of in the Profound Continent. To have reached this place after much difficulty, the greed in his heart simply couldn't be contained. While Han Shuo was hesitating again and again, he sensed that little skeleton was closing in on his location.

Suddenly, the knight that was in the midst of chasing the mummy lord and the apparition appeared extremely irritated. After continuously attacking frantically to no avail, the knight suddenly gave up and urged the flaming horse toward the plant in the middle of the spring. The mummy lord and the apparition paused for a moment before hastily attacking the knight. The mummy lord's sarcophagus descended toward the knight with a loud rumble, while the apparition produced numerous wraiths that charged towards the huge knight.

The huge knight did a sweep with his rusted broadsword. An earthshattering rotting aura rippled out, abruptly annihilating the numerous wraiths while the sarcophagus was struck into the air with his fist. After that, an imposing consciousness spread out from the huge knight, “You two cowardly and despicable existences, that fellow from the Thousand Meter Dead Mountain Palace is coming over. If you cooperate with me in getting rid of him, the luster gem within the dead water is yours. I only want that fellow’s spiritual energy. What do you think?”

When the mummy lord and the apparition saw the evil knight give up and transmit such an intention, they were obviously slightly unsettled. The two of them discussed for a while, before the apparition transmitted a faint message, “Alright, the three of us shall make a vow to abide by this promise.”

Han Shuo looked at the interaction between the three formidable undead creatures from afar. From their conversations, Han Shuo understood that the large knight sensed the little skeleton’s existence and their tone indicated their fear of the little skeleton. Han Shuo couldn’t have imagined that in this netherworld, the little skeleton of the Thousand Meter Dead Mountain Palace was actually such a huge power.

The huge knight, the mummy lord and the apparition intended to ally due to their apprehension toward the little skeleton’s existence. As these three fellows dared to stay behind and face the little skeleton, that showed that they should have some confidence. Han Shuo who had already been watching for a while from afar thought for a moment before walking out from within the crowd of low ranked undead creatures.

“Count me in as well.” Han Shuo sent a message through his consciousness, expressing his opinion to the three undead creatures.

At the start, Han Shuo had only stood among the crowd of low ranked undead creatures in the surroundings of the valley. Having deliberately hidden as he watched, the three undead creatures that were constantly battling did not notice Han Shuo. When Han Shuo slowly walked out from the distance, he immediately caused the three undead creatures to panic.

At first, the three undead creatures clearly lost their heads out of fear, being intimidated by Han Shuo's appearance as a skeleton king. However, these three formidable undead creatures were different from the low ranked undead creatures that gave way to Han Shuo. They could sense from the aura on Han Shuo's body that it wasn't identical to a skeleton king's aura as well as the aura on Han Shuo's body wasn't as frightening as that of a skeleton king's.

After being startled, the huge knight reacted, sending Han Shuo a message, "Cowardly voyeur, what can you contribute and what do you wish to obtain?"

"I want a third of the serene luster gem. I can aid you in dealing with that fellow." Han Shuo replied through his consciousness.

"That would depend on your ability!" The knight sent an irascible message, driving the flaming horse toward Han Shuo. The earth-shattering rotting aura spread out from his body, converging on the broadsword as it stabbed toward Han Shuo.

Han Shuo was stunned, frantically chanting spells, on one hand sending a spray of bone spears to attack the huge knight, on the other hand, using his consciousness to condense the rich death qi, forming a gigantic saber to smash toward the charging knight. When the spray of bone spears landed on the huge knight's body, it only resulted in clanking sounds, unable to harm the formidable knight. Only when that saber condensed from rich death qi smashed on the knight's broadsword did he obstruct his attack.

Just as the knight avoided the spray of bone spears and had almost arrived in front of Han Shuo, he suddenly reined his horse, turning his head to look at the apparition and the mummy lord, transmitting, "He has the qualifications to share a third of the luster gem, do the two of you have any opinion? The fellow from the Thousand Meter Death Mountain Palace is extremely frightening, there is more hope with an additional helper."

The two other undead creatures hesitated for a moment. But when considering the little skeleton's frightening deterrence and their interest of the serene luster gem, they ultimately agreed completely with the huge knight's proposal, considering Han Shuo as an ally.

Chapter 386: A stronger hidden expert

Once the three undead creatures agreed on Han Shuo's participation, Han Shuo immediately started communicating with the little skeleton. As the distance between them was becoming shorter, Han Shuo could easily convey his thoughts to the little skeleton. The clever little skeleton who was currently flying over at high speed on a bone demon completely understood Han Shuo's intention.

When the three undead creatures saw that Han Shuo had agreed, they did not try to retrieve the serene luster gem in the middle of the black spring. Instead, they spread out in front of the spring, ordering the surrounding low ranked undead creatures to stop fighting and to slowly encircle this location.

There were two evil knights in the surroundings who slowly headed towards the huge knight that brandished the two meter broadsword, while a few hate warriors stood separately in front of the apparition and the mummy lord. They thoroughly guarded this area, intending to make this place the resting grounds of the approaching little skeleton.

A shrill whistle could be heard gradually coming closer. Under the dusky sky, a huge shadow slowly approached. The wings connected to the variant bone demon's rotting corpse were five to six meters in length when fully extended. In addition, its whole body was covered with fearsome bone spears. This caused the bone demon that could fly to have ample deterring strength.

More than ten sparkling white bones formed a cushion on the back of the flying bone demon. Seated on it was the little skeleton who held a long, sharp bone spear. Its Purple Demon Eye was filled with a glistening radiance while its small body gave off an imposing presence.

The huge knight waved his rusted two meter long sword at the little skeleton who was flying over on the bone demon, spreading out his indignant consciousness, "This time, you wouldn't be able to escape!"

"You are currently no longer a match for me. If you submit to me, I will spare your life!” When the little skeleton had arrived, he unyieldingly stayed in the air, looking down as he rode the bone demon, his dignified consciousness transmitted over.

“You can forget about that happening. I would rather let my soul be obliterated than to be your slave!” the knight roared. He then gave a command to his subordinates, “Kill this wretched skeleton!”

As the knight shouted out his orders, the mummy lord and the apparition also ordered their subordinates to attack. Hundreds upon hundreds of undead creatures were like a locust swarm as they charged toward the little skeleton and his bone demon mount. Among them were gargoyles that could fly, which formed groups and attacked in waves and were the first to charge towards the little skeleton with no fear of death.

Looking down on the various low ranked undead creatures approaching, the little skeleton’s Purple Demon Eye suddenly emitted purple light halos. They spread out like waves of running water from his Purple Demon Eye, gradually covering the surrounding area around the little skeleton. The whole area was filled with a vicious, imposing aura.

When the charging low ranked undead creatures were hit by the waves of mysterious aura, they were all suddenly stunned, seemingly forgetting that they had to attack the little skeleton. Even the gargoyles that didn’t fear death had bypassed the little skeleton and headed into the distance.

“ You lowly, weak existences, step down!” a harsh dignified consciousness was suddenly transmitted from the little skeleton, extending out in all directions.

All the low ranked undead creatures that were enveloped by the purple light from the Purple Demon Eye were caught in a daze. They hesitated for a moment, as though fearing the little skeleton’s might and actually disobeyed the suicidal orders from the knight and the mummy lord, all of them voluntarily opening up a path.

Only the two evil knights appeared to have barely resisted the corrosion of the Purple Demon Eye’s bright light on their consciousness. After being dazed for a long while, they actually charged toward the little skeleton again. Along the way, the two evil knights conveniently grabbed a few skeleton warriors by their sides, dismantling the skeleton warrior's bones and shot them toward the little skeleton in the sky.

“Bang, bang, bang...”

Without even waiting for the bone spears to close in, the little skeleton swept with the long bone spear in his hand. An earth-shattering death qi emerged violently, causing all the bone spears shooting toward him to explode.

The little skeleton did not seem to put the two evil knights in his eyes, still looking into the distance at the three undead creatures as well as Han Shuo. He transmitted another message through his consciousness, “Since you don’t acknowledge your allegiance, the only alternative is death!”

The bone demon beneath him suddenly flew forward, heading for the five meter tall knight. The little skeleton tightly grasped his three meter long bone spear, an enormous amount of death qi that carried dense killing intent assaulted the four undead creatures below. The mummy lord was the first to act, throwing out his sarcophagus toward the bone demon below the little skeleton. Numerous wraiths flew out of the apparition once again, heading toward the little skeleton in an orderly formation.

The huge knight guided his flaming horse, looking up at the incoming little skeleton while charging toward him. Under the momentum of his charge, he threw out the two meter long broadsword, slashing toward the little skeleton. His throw possessed an impressive force, appearing extremely powerful.

The little skeleton drew the spear before suddenly thrusting it forward. The long spear was like a sponge, absorbing the rich death qi in the surroundings before flying out like lightning toward the incoming broadsword. With a “clang”, the knight’s broadsword descended toward the ground. At the same time, the bone demon flapped its wings, pushing the mummy lord’s sarcophagus aside.

As for the wraiths sent by the apparition to attack, they were obstructed by the Purple Demon Eye’s purple rays of light even before they could get close to the little skeleton. The purple rays of light seemed to have suddenly formed an invisible barrier and the hundreds of wraiths were simply unable to charge through the barrier.

Han Shuo coordinated with the other undead creatures and shot out two rows of bone spears. However, the bone spears were similarly repelled by the invisible barrier created from the light of the Purple Demon Eye, descending from high above. This made Han Shuo even more amazed. How did the little skeleton control the Demon Eye of Datara that they obtained from the forest trolls to achieve such a miraculous effect?

Bone spears conjured with Han Shuo's grand magus leveled mental strength had strong penetrative strength. Although they were unable to pierce through those incomparably firm physical defenses, the barrier should theoretically be able to obstruct the formless wraiths, but shouldn't be able to block the powerful bone spears. However, the truth was actually so inconceivable. Han Shuo gradually felt that the little skeleton was becoming more and more mysterious.

After the little skeleton blocked all their attacks, he guided the bone demon to circle around toward the mummy lord and the apparition. The knight who had just caught his descending broadsword was a distance away from the mummy lord and the apparition and didn't have enough time to assist them.

Han Shuo was in comparison much closer to the mummy lord and the apparition. Seeing the mummy lord and the apparition's panicked expressions, Han Shuo took the initiative to transmit a message, "I'll assist the two of you!"

Han Shuo immediately rushed toward the mummy lord and the apparition after transmitting his message. As soon as he sent the message, Han Shuo immediately rushed toward the mummy lord and the apparition. He had already prepared the Soul Tremor magic as well as communicated with the little skeleton. Once the little skeleton attacked the mummy lord, Han Shuo would seize the opportunity to unleash Soul Tremor on the apparition.

Regardless the form of the undead creature, their soul was the foundation of their existence. This was the same for the peculiar apparition. If it was taken by surprise by Han Shuo's Soul Tremor, even if its soul wasn't destroyed, it would be severely injured. At that time, Han Shuo and the little skeleton would be able to easily kill the apparition first.

After that, with Han Shuo obstructing the mummy lord and the little skeleton directly killing the huge knight, they would be able to completely control the situation. None of the three undead creatures would be able to escape from the schemes of Han Shuo and the little skeleton.

Han Shuo's plan was extremely good. If the situation proceeded as planned, that would be everything he could wish for. However, just as Han Shuo's consciousness firmly locked onto the apparition and was ready to eliminate the apparition at any time. His consciousness suddenly felt a faint fluctuation from the depths of the pitch-black spring.

The fluctuation was extremely slight, as though it had been accidentally leaked due to a soul being excessively excited. If Han Shuo's consciousness had not improved to its current state, it would perhaps have been hard for him to sense that weak fluctuation. As the fluctuation seemed to contain an ancient aura, it was obvious that there was a formidable undead creature hiding in the spring. This formidable undead creature was unable to be detected by the nearby knight, apparition and even the little skeleton, sufficiently illustrating its strength.

Han Shuo's consciousness hurriedly circulated, attentively comprehending that unintentionally leaked aura with added caution. Han Shuo was suddenly alarmed, momentarily matching that aura with a formidable undead creature recorded in necromancy books.

The strongest existence known in general to necromancers was the bone dragon. The pitch-black spring had actually contained an extremely cunning bone dragon!

The bone dragon has always been a domineering undead creature in the netherworld. Apart from a few more frightening unknown existences, the bone dragon, skeleton king and zombie king were deemed the highest ranked undead creatures. In the Profound Continent, necromancers had to reach the rank of sacred magus to be able to summon bone dragons.

The bone dragon had always known as the strongest undead creature. This bone dragon that had concealed itself in the spring from beginning to end had made use of the wisps of smoke overflowing the serene luster gem above its head to attract strong undead creatures to this location. Its intentions were extremely clear for all to see.

It seems that the drop of serene luster gem in the middle of the pitch-black spring ought to have always been the bone dragon's bait to lure in strong undead creatures. The huge knight, mummy lord, apparition as well as Han Shuo had all fallen into the bone dragon's trap. If Han Shuo's consciousness had not suddenly sensed the slight fluctuation that arose from the bone dragon's excitement, he reckoned that the one who benefits eventually would have been the bone dragon.

As he charged toward the apparition, Han Shuo hurriedly communicated with the little skeleton, describing everything that he had just sensed to the little skeleton before inquiring if the little skeleton possessed the strength to defeat the bone dragon.

"Father, I would definitely be able to kill and behead the bone dragon in the future. However, I'm unable to do that now. I still do not have that strength for the time being!" The little skeleton sent a message over, on one hand stating that he possessed the possibility of infinite evolutions while on the other hand, he stated that he temporarily didn't have the power to deal with the bone dragon."

When Han Shuo heard that the little skeleton wasn't a match for the bone dragon, his brain rapidly worked. When he neared the apparition, he immediately issued a different instruction to the little skeleton.

The mummy lord's sarcophagus suddenly smashed toward the little skeleton, while the apparition erratically retreated, while unleashing an unknown enchantment. The wraiths that had emerged from its body suddenly assembled into a gigantic network of wraiths, attempting to trap the little skeleton.

Han Shuo materialized a bone shield, the huge sinister bone shield suddenly obstructed the mummy lord's way, establishing a solid defense for the mummy lord and the apparition. This allowed the mummy lord and apparition to relax, only focusing on attacking the little skeleton.

When the little skeleton who was riding the bone demon saw that he was about to be trapped by the apparition's network of wraiths, the bone demon suddenly changed its direction, descending toward the pitch-black spring.

While the undead creatures had yet to react, the seven bone spurs on the little skeleton's back suddenly shot out toward the sinister-looking plant. He also firmly threw his javelin-like three meter bone spear into the middle of the spring.

A frightening roar suddenly sounded from the depths of the lifeless spring. The pitch-black spring suddenly boiled, forming huge waves.

Bone spears condensed from the surrounding surging death qi suddenly shot into the depths of the boiling spring, appearing to have pierced the extremely cunning bone dragon, causing the bone dragon to temporarily be unable to emerge from the depths of the spring.

Right at this moment, the little skeleton's seven bone spurs shot toward the sinister-looking plant, completely chopping through the plant's rhizomes. Faint blue smoke started to leak out from the serene luster gem that seemed to be supported by numerous withered branches and leaves. After chopping through the plant, the seven bone spurs seized the opportunity to congregate and lift up the serene luster gem which flew into the little skeleton's palm in the blink of an eye.

The three meter long bone spear suddenly flew out from within the ground, resembling lightning as it returned to the little skeleton's hand. The little skeleton then urged the bone demon to fly toward Han Shuo without even looking at the rapidly boiling pitch-black spring.

"Treacherous, despicable skeleton, I, bone dragon Zasika, will inevitably exterminate you!" A loud roar could be heard from underground as a huge bone dragon whose whole body was made up of steel like long bones suddenly rose out of the spring, giving off a formidable death qi which spread through the entire valley.

The huge knight, mummy lord and the apparition who were about to attack the little skeleton from all directions suddenly glanced at each other in terror before frantically fleeing toward the surroundings of the valley, ignoring the little skeleton. The lower ranked zombie warriors and hate warriors seemed to be petrified in fear, instinctively submitting themselves and not daring to move from their positions.

Chapter 387: Absorbing the serene luster gem

The extremely cunning bone dragon Zasika was around fifteen meters long. His body was made out of thick and solid white bones, as though it was built from the hardest iron and stone. Its body was also overflowing in rich death qi.

When the bone dragon roared, all the higher ranked undead creatures started to flee, while the low ranked undead creatures stood still, shivering under the pressure of the bone dragon's imposing aura.

The netherworld's bone dragon was different from the Profound Continent's standard dragon race. As a special clan of dragons that were born in the netherworld, bone dragons possessed enormous strength from the moment they were born. This was because they were formed from pure white bones that were resistant to the majority of physical and magical attacks.

Bone dragons were peculiar creatures brought up in the netherworld's unusual environment. They were also able to nimbly manipulate the netherworld's death qi, even possessing a few mystical dragon breath abilities. This resulted in them being more powerful than most dragon clans in the Profound Continent.

The three undead creatures that had planned to surround and attack the little skeleton had already fled in different directions upon hearing the bone dragon's roar, no longer interested in attacking the little skeleton. The little skeleton who had obtained the serene luster gem while bone dragon Zasika wasn't paying attention immediately flew toward Han Shuo. When he was about to reach Han Shuo, Han Shuo immediately abandoned the skeletal body he had condensed from death qi and willed his consciousness to float by the little skeleton's side.

Once Han Shuo's consciousness reached the little skeleton's side, the little skeleton shoved the serene luster gem into Han Shuo's wraith-like consciousness without a second thought. He then urged the bone demon to escape into the distance.

When the bone dragon flew out of the pitch-black spring, it immediately emitted the imposing aura of a high ranked undead creature. Once the numerous undead creatures had fled, he stared at the rapidly fleeing little skeleton and roared, “Sinister, despicable skeleton, you won’t be able to escape.”

After uttering a long, loud cry into the boundless sky, the bone dragon directly pursued the little skeleton. The bone demon beneath the little skeleton had been remolded by the little skeleton with the bones of the supreme ranked magical creature found within the taboo land of the Profound Continent. Within the netherworld, the flying speed of the remolded bone demon was actually extremely quick. Even the lightning quick bone dragon Zasika wasn’t able to catch up in a short period of time.

At this moment, the serene luster gem that the little skeleton casually stuffed into Han Shuo’s consciousness suddenly blended with the mental energy within his consciousness. A mysterious mental energy suddenly entered Han Shuo’s consciousness, gradually combining with the original mental energy within.

Han Shuo suddenly trembled. This method of growing his mental strength had the same feeling as when he was imbued with mental strength under the Cemetery of Death. Han Shuo could almost confirm immediately that the item that had improved his mental strength in the Cemetery of Death must have also been a serene luster gem.

However, this wasn’t the time to ponder why there would be a serene luster gem in the Cemetery of Death. Having had prior experience, Han Shuo immediately absorbed the mental energy flowing out from the serene luster gem into his consciousness to his heart’s content. He also tried his utmost in seizing the chance to refine the serene luster gem’s mysterious energy.

Out of a sudden, an incomparably huge amount of mental energy rushed into Han Shuo’s consciousness. This caused a sharp pain to spread out, soon after Han Shuo was dizzy and wasn't sure what he should do.

“Argh...”

As Han Shuo gave out a resonant shout in pain, back in the Profound Continent, the skeletal staff his true body was holding on to whistled sharply and endlessly. Han Shuo's originally muddled eyes gradually regained clarity.

While a huge amount of mental energy was still revolving within his mind, Han Shuo suddenly felt that he was holding something hard in his left hand. Looking down, he saw that it was actually the mysterious skeletal staff. Han Shuo was shocked but became ecstatic shortly after. He understood that he had once again returned unfathomably to the Profound Continent from the netherworld.

Excessively excited, Han Shuo didn't ponder any further, hastily discarding all distracting thoughts and started melding the remaining pure mental energy flowing within his consciousness with his original mental energy. At this moment, he was filled with immense joy.

After an unknown period of time, Han Shuo gradually sensed that the mental energy from the netherworld's serene luster gem had been fully absorbed. At that moment, an intense shout was transmitted from the little skeleton in the netherworld. Han Shuo suddenly recalled the recent experience of escaping from the netherworld and remembered that the little skeleton was still being pursued by bone dragon Zasika.

The little skeleton's shout was obviously a cry for help. Han Shuo didn't hesitate, chanting the lowest ranked necromancy spell. The little skeleton riding the bone demon abruptly arrived in the hidden underground room.

The little skeleton had actually come out unscathed. However, the bone demon he was riding on had more than ten of its bones broken, probably by the bone dragon. Once he arrived from the netherworld, the little skeleton patted his chest like a human, while still having lingering fears. He then transmitted a message to Han Shuo, “That cunning bone dragon is truly extremely frightening. However, I will definitely make him pay in the future.”

Han Shuo looked toward the little skeleton, his heart truly had unbounded emotions. This little skeleton who had the ambition to kill the bone dragon was the same fellow that helped him at that time to clear the garbage in the middle of the night?

“Father, how did you enter my world?” The little skeleton asked, its Purple Demon Eye glistening as it looked at Han Shuo.

Han Shuo had gradually adapted to the way the little skeleton addressed him. He laughed bitterly as he shook his head, replying, “I have no idea. However, I understand that it has something to do with this skeletal staff. For the time being, I still have not fully comprehended how it happens. However, I believe I would be able to be clear about the situation very quickly.”

After Han Shuo explained the situation to the little skeleton, he knitted his brows, inquiring, “Do you know what exactly is the serene luster gem that I absorbed?”

“This type of serene luster gem is an extremely rare item in our world. It can temper our souls, causing our souls to become purer. It is extremely beneficial to our evolution.” The little skeleton explained for a while, pausing for a moment before continuing, “Father, in our world, there similarly are some unusual items as well as peculiar existences. For example, that apparition had evolved from a wraith. That huge knight is a soul from another plane that descended into our world and was developed from an evil knight’s body after absorbing death qi within the world...”

The little skeleton seemed to have planned to explain the world he knew to Han Shuo, taking great pains to explain the situation in the netherworld to Han Shuo, as though to sweep away the misunderstandings Han Shuo had of the netherworld.

From the little skeleton’s descriptions, Han Shuo gradually realized that he still had a one-sided understanding of the netherworld. It turns out that the creatures in the netherworld were not limited to those that he knew from necromancy texts. The undead creatures that were listed on necromancy texts were those that ancient necromancers were aware of and had found the corresponding summoning spell.

There were also a few evolved or mutated undead creatures as well as eccentric undead creatures that had been naturally produced by death qi in a particular occasion at a particular location. These undead creatures were not known to necromancers and had never been successfully summoned. These special existences were equally formidable, so much so that some of them were stronger than bone dragons.

However, previous necromancers had never encountered them nor had the way to summon them. Hence, they did not exist in necromancy books. However, for the little skeleton who had spent much time in the netherworld, he who had the same origin as these undead creatures naturally understood a few peculiarities that previous necromancers didn't know of.

According to the little skeleton's narration, Han Shuo also found out that the netherworld was split into regions and territories. Some of the most ancient formidable existences occupied vast territories, ceaselessly campaigning against one another. There were even extremely formidable undead creatures that possessed the strength to tear apart the restrictions of their position, having the frightening strength to travel across the world with their own strength.

"Father, I ought to return!" while Han Shuo was slowly comprehending the little skeleton's words, the little skeleton suddenly transmitted a message.

Much time has passed. As Han Shuo also had a mental connection to the earth zombie and the other zombies, he could directly send the little skeleton to their side. In that case, the little skeleton and bone dragon Zasika would be separated by an extremely large distance and the bone dragon would naturally be unable to endanger the little skeleton again.

Once the little skeleton reminded Han Shuo, he smiled as he nodded his head and then sent the little skeleton back to the netherworld. Even after the little skeleton had left, Han Shuo still pondered on the little skeleton's narration. The things that the little skeleton had just mentioned exceeded Han Shuo's comprehension, causing Han Shuo to momentarily be unable to adapt.

Han Shuo had gained a new level of understanding of the netherworld from the little skeleton's descriptions. He was also clear that that world was different from what he first imagined. It seemed like not all the creatures in the netherworld could be summoned by necromancers. Many formidable undead creatures that had transcended the bindings of their position would definitely not be restricted by the strength of a necromancer's contract.

Shaking his head, Han Shuo stopped thinking about matters concerning the netherworld. Han Shuo then chanted a spell and utilizing his mental energy, rows of bone spears took shape in front of him, silently forming motionlessly in the air. Han Shuo simply counted the number of bone spears and was pleasantly surprised to find out that the number of bone spears had increased by a third. This meant that Han Shuo's mental strength had indeed improved substantially. Although his mental strength was still within the realm of grand magus, the stronger his mental strength, the might from a spell would also be greater. Currently, Han Shuo could release that many more bone spears with the same spell. This sufficiently proved that Han Shuo's mental strength had indeed undergone substantial improvement in the netherworld.

"Serene luster gem. Truly a good item. However, why would a serene luster gem appear under the Cemetery of Death? Also, why would the skeletal staff be able to let the soul enter the netherworld, could it be that there was some kind of connection between the Cemetery of Death and the creatures in the undead world?" Han Shuo knitted his brows as he contemplated.

Han Shuo couldn't resolve this question in a short time. However, he knew that the Cemetery of Death definitely contained many secrets and planned to carefully explore the Cemetery of Death after a period of time, to take a look if there were other items that he had yet to discover.

After his consciousness had entered the netherworld, Han Shuo had lost track of time. Now that he had returned to the Profound Continent, Han Shuo didn't know how long had passed, hastily exiting the hidden room and returning to the ground level of his official residence and calling Steward Kallas over.

Steward Kallas immediately spoke when he rushed over, "Lord Count, where have you been the past few days! Miss Phoebe has come over three times to look for you and His Majesty has also requested for you to head to the royal palace and meet him. Furthermore, there has been bad rumors about you spreading around, making me extremely anxious."

"What bad rumors?" Han Shuo first grasped the main issue, inquiring from Kallas about the harmful news about himself.

"This... this..." Steward Kallas hummed and hawed, only replied fearfully when Han Shuo stared at him, "There has been rumors spreading that you are a member of the Calamity Church. Very few ordinary people know about the Calamity Church but many nobles and people of status understood that the Calamity Church was an evil organization.

Han Shuo was shocked when he heard Kallas's response. The Calamity Church was the symbol of evil in the eyes of many nobles. Of everyone in the continent that knew of the Calamity Church's existence, there shouldn't be many that held good impressions of them.

Han Shuo had never dared to have too much contact with the Calamity Church precisely because he was afraid of leaving such an impression. Never would he have thought that although he always kept a distance from them, such a situation still happened in the end.

Without much consideration, Han Shuo knew who the rumors had originated from. Apart from the Church of Light and Lawrence's political enemies, Han Shuo did not have many enemies within the Lancelot Kingdom. In recent days, it was the moment for Han Shuo who was rising rapidly within the kingdom to have major undertakings. However, it was precisely this rumor that could ruin Han Shuo.

This matter was quite thorny. Han Shuo hesitated a moment, before replying Steward Kallas, "I understand. You can withdraw first and help me invite Prince Lawrence and Miss Phoebe over. Just tell them that I want to talk to them tonight.”

After giving Kallas his orders, Han Shuo immediately left the manor. He hesitated a moment, before heading to the Dark Mantle’s headquarters to look for Candide.

When Candide saw Han Shuo, he immediately said, “Why have you only appeared now! Come with me to meet the king. I’m aware of your affairs and have already spoken to his majesty about it previously. This matter has become quite huge, we must handle it carefully.”

While on their way to the royal palace, Candide pointed out that the rumors had originated from the Church of Light, eldest prince Charles as well as the Grand Duke. As one of the three heavyweights of Dark Mantle, it was naturally very simple for Candide to investigate such a matter.

Han Shuo and Candide discussed for a while, before directly entering the royal palace through the Dark Mantle’s teleporting array, immediately heading for King Uhtred’s palace.

Chapter 388: His Majesty's plea

An old man past his prime sat on the throne, living the last vestiges of his life. The aura of life seemed to be slipping away from his body at every moment. He could only keep his frail body straight by leaning against the throne, his originally bright eyes had also been veiled by a layer of gray.

Han Shuo followed Candide inside. Glancing at the declining Uhtred, Han Shuo understood that his death was imminent. It was no wonder that the princes of the Lancelot Empire were so brazen in their attempts to seize power.

"Your Majesty, Count Bryan has come to see you!" Candide said respectfully after saluting the emperor.

Uhtred coughed violently, his gray eyes gradually showing a hint of vitality. Forcing himself upright, he swept his eyes over Candide and Han Shuo, ultimately fixing his gaze on Han Shuo as he asked weakly, "Bryan, Candide has already mentioned to me your achievements in Brettel City over the past few months, you've done quite well!"

"Your Majesty flatters me, this was my duty." Han Shuo had discussed with Candide on the way here and understood that it was best that he watched his mouth when speaking to such a person, only responding to any questions asked.

"I heard news circulating outside about you having some sort of relationship with the Calamity Church. Hoho, that's rather interesting. With your clean origins and the contributions you made for the Lancelot Empire, how could they implicate you with a sinister church like them!" Uhtred muttered, as though he was speaking to himself.

"Your Majesty should realize that those are purely rumors fabricated by enemies." Han Shuo replied. "In that case, do you know who is making up such rumors and what their intentions are?" Uhtred looked at Han Shuo and inquired.

Han Shuo replied while shaking his head, "I don't know."

“Candide, you can leave first. I have something I want to speak to Bryan about alone.” Uhtred did not question this matter in detail, glancing at Candide instead and instructed in a soft voice.

Candida didn’t respond, bowing politely toward Uhtred before turning around to leave the main hall. He only gave Han Shuo a meaningful glance as he passed by, to hint that Han Shuo should not say things that ought not to be said.

After Candide left, Uhtred suddenly sighed and said: “Among my sons, I feel I owe Lawrence the most. I heard you and Lawrence are very close, is that true?”

Han Shuo was started, unable to really grasp Uhtred’s intentions. Most of the nobles in Ossen City were in the know about the relationship between him and Lawrence, so it wasn’t at all strange for Uhtred to know about his relationship with Lawrence. Han Shuo hesitated for a moment, then nodded honestly and replied, “Yes, your Majesty!”

“In that case, you’re definitely supporting Lawrence?” Uhtred asked once more.

“Yes, Your Majesty!” Han Shuo answered once again.

Uhtred was silent for a long time, his two pupils affixed intently on Han Shuo. It was only when Uhtred saw Han Shuo looking a little uneasy that he spoke, “Bryan. There are some matters that I want to discuss with you.” “Your Majesty, feel free to tell me anything. As your subject, I will naturally willing to share some of your worries.” Han Shuo replied again.

Uhtred sighed. He suddenly stared at Han Shuo, saying, “Bryan, I hope you can promise me one thing. Regardless of how my other three sons treat you, please spare their lives.”

Han Shuo was momentarily speechless, suspiciously looking toward Uhtred as he inquired, “Why has Your Majesty said such a thing?”

“Bryan, if you agree to my terms, I will hand the throne to Lawrence and help you two to consolidate the power of Lancelot Empire.” Uhtred stared fixedly on Han Shuo speaking prudently.

Han Shuo felt extremely stirred up, astonished as he looked at Uhtred, momentarily unsure what was wrong with Uhtred to have actually said such an ineffable sentence. He simply looked at Uhtred in a daze, forgetting to reply.

“As long as you agree to my terms, I’ll assist you and Lawrence. What do you think?” Uhtred immediately followed up, appearing somewhat anxious, so much so that it contained a hint of pleading.

As the true ruler of Lancelot Empire, as long as Uhtred hasn’t passed away, even if he was extremely ill, he was still the person who held the utmost power in Lancelot Empire. However at this moment, Uhtred’s tone while speaking to Han Shuo unexpectedly had an odd hint of pleading. This was something Han Shuo could never have expected.

In such a moment, Han Shuo even thought if Uhtred’s illness was too severe, that caused Uhtred to absent-mindedly say such ridiculous things. However, when Han Shuo carefully observed Uhtred, he discovered that although Uhtred’s body was incomparably weak, his spirit wasn’t confused at all. That proved that Uhtred’s emotional state was indeed normal.

While Han Shuo was still extremely astounded, Uhtred asked once again. Han Shuo rapidly racked his brains and then probed Uhtred, “As long as I spare the lives of the three princes?”

Uhtred had a delighted expression as he rapidly nodding his head, hurriedly saying, “That’s right, as long as you spare their lives. You can strip them of all their power and even imprison them in a small cell, as long as they are able to survive.”

“In that case, I’ll agree to your terms, Your Majesty!” Han Shuo no longer hesitated, immediately responding.

Lancelot Empire’s true ruler, His Majesty Uhtred actually visibly sighed in relief. His weak expression gave a slight smile as he waved his hand as he said, “Bryan, I now confer you the title of Marquis. In addition, I will command space sacred magus Mister Sabakas to help establish a magic transporting array in Brettel City as well as help you eliminate the unfavorable news about you. Also...”

Uhtred suddenly narrated a series of promises, causing Han Shuo to be stunned, staring blankly as he wondered what was going on with Uhtred today. When Uhtred finished narrating his promises, he then said, “Bryan, you can take your leave. I hope you will not mention today’s matter to anyone else, not even to Candide or Lawrence.”

“Your Majesty, I’ll promise you. However, could you tell me the reason? I am truly unable to comprehend why you would make such a decision.” Han Shuo looked flabbergasted at Uhtred while he asked.

Uhtred shook his head, laughing bitterly as he replied, “It’s better if you aren’t aware. This is for your benefit. You may leave now!”

Han Shuo couldn’t make sense of the matter, looking at Uhtred bafflingly. He stared blankly for a moment before knitting his brows, bowing to Uhtred before exiting. He was feeling extremely puzzled but didn’t know who he could rant to.

When Han Shuo left, Uhtred seemed to age even more, sighing as he said, “As a father, I have done all I can for the three of you. Hopefully, all of you are able to survive after I die.”

Space sacred magus Sabakas and old astrologer Madam Grace abruptly appeared before Uhtred. Madam Grace was extremely pale, appearing more likely than Uhtred to die. There didn’t seem to be much vitality in her whole body.

When Uhtred saw the two of them appear, he sighed again. He looked toward old astrologer Madam Grace and said, “Madam, I’ve never doubted your judgement all these years. You said that Bryan will truly help Lancelot Empire prosper?”

Grace wiggled her lips, as though wanting to drive away the thick wrinkles by her mouth, replying with a weak voice, “Your Majesty, on your request I’ve consumed my vitality to make a divination. I only know that whoever this person assists, that person will be able to become the new king. As long as he is present in Lancelot Empire, Lancelot Empire will not perish. That is all!”

“That is already sufficient. I didn’t expect that the person influencing my Lancelot Empire’s future would actually be such a young fellow.” Uhtred muttered to himself, before looking toward Grace and Sabakas, suddenly saying, “My days are numbered. I hope that you will promise me one thing after I die.”

“Your Majesty, you need not exhort me, I think I might leave this world before you. I have also been extremely tired in recent years, my life has also finally ought to reach its end.” old astrologer Grace faintly sighed as she helplessly replied Uhtred.

“Madam, I’m sorry. You had consumed your vitality for Lancelot Empire.” Uhtred understood that every time old astrologer Madam Grace made a divination, it would consume her vitality. The more complicated the matter, the more vitality would be consumed.

The divination this time was regarding the fate of the entire Lancelot Empire and had completely exhausted her vitality. Her death could be said to be single-handedly caused by Uhtred. However, as it concerned Lancelot Empire’s future, Uhtred had no other choice and could only have old astrologer Grace give some clarity.

Even without old astrologer Madam Grace’s foretelling, matters might still progress along the same trajectory. However, the struggle for power among the princes would undoubtedly result in irreversible damage to Lancelot Empire’s overall strength. In that situation, even if Lawrence succeeded in seizing the throne, Lancelot Empire’s strength would be far from before.

Uhtred was precisely afraid of such a situation occurring. Hence he would rather have old astrologer Grace consume her vitality to foretell the future. This was so that he could minimize the loss in the kingdom’s strength so that when Lawrence succeeded the throne, Lancelot Empire would still be as prosperous as before.

“You need not apologize. My teacher had also exhausted her vitality and died for the sake of Lancelot Empire. Perhaps this is precisely the destiny for us astrologers. Ai...” old astrologer Madam Grace helplessly sighed, before looking toward Sabakas and said, "In the limited time I have remaining, I hope you can send me to places I have never seen before."

"Don't worry, no matter where you want to go, I'm able to bring you there." Sabakas amiably smiled as he replied, he then turned his head toward Lancelot Empire's King Uhtred and asked, "Your Majesty, what did you want to tell me a moment ago?"

"If Bryan does not abide by his promise, I hope that you can help me kill him." Uhtred hesitated a moment before replying Sabakas.

"Your Majesty, I can only promise you that I will try my utmost. If the day comes when I might not be able to deal with him, I hope you would forgive me." space sacred magus Sabakas carefully thought it over before replying Uhtred.

When one reaches a similar realm as Sabakas, they would long since considered to have surpassed authority. Even Lancelot Empire's king would not have the authority to order him to do things he isn't willing to do. Sabakas vaguely knew a few things from astrologer Grace's prophecy and that was why he replied Uhtred in this way.

Uhtred nodded, smiling as he said, "In that case, I can only thank you."

"Alright, Your Majesty probably has many matters to attend to, we wouldn't continue disturbing you then." Sabakas replied, neither haughty nor humble. He looked toward old astrologer Grace as a white light wrapped around the two of them. They then disappeared in a flash. Lancelot Empire's King Uhtred then started to help Lawrence pave the way to the throne.

When Han Shuo returned to his residence from the palace, he discovered that Lawrence and Phoebe had not waited till the evening and had already been waiting. It looked like they were extremely eager to meet Han Shuo.

Phoebe's eyes were glistening, her line of sight never leaving Han Shuo from beginning to end. When Han Shuo had sent his servants away and led the two of them to an inner living room, Phoebe protested coquettishly with a hint of rage, "What kind of guy are you. Having returned to Ossen City yet you never came over to look for me, has your time in Brettel City been too satisfying that you have forgotten this old me?"

Along the way, Han Shuo was somewhat muddle-headed, continuously pondering over what King Uhtred had told him. He was unable to understand what was going on with Uhtred, to have actually made such a queer proposal.

Han Shuo only reacted when he heard Phoebe protesting coquettishly, couldn't help but smile bitterly as he replied, "My lady, of all people to forget I would never forget you. You should know that whenever I obtain something good, the first person I think of is precisely you. If not, why would Starry Sky arrive in your hands so quickly."

Hearing Han Shuo's reply, Phoebe's beautiful expression had an added delight and her voice became much gentler as she tenderly questioned, "In that case, what shameful deeds have you done ever since you returned to Ossen City? I've come over a few times but the steward had always said that you weren't within the residence."

"That was because I had to handle some proper business. The majority of the time was spent in the Dark Mantle's headquarters participating in meetings. I had also just visited the palace. In short, I have not been idle." Han Shuo explained to Phoebe.

"Alright, alright. The two of you can slowly chat after I leave." Lawrence teased before looking toward Han Shuo and asked, "Bryan, you have just returned from the palace, what did my royal father talk to you about?"

When Lawrence spoke out, Phoebe blushed as though thinking that once Lawrence leaves, she would engage in wonderful matters with Han Shuo. She suddenly became silent while her face becoming red.

Han Shuo knew what Lawrence was concerned about, recalling his recent agreement with His Majesty. He couldn't help but have a bout of suspicion once again. He then smiled bitterly as he shook his head, replying, "Lawrence, I've promised His Majesty that I wouldn't divulge our conversation to anyone else. His Majesty had especially urged me before I left to not tell you about our discussion."

Lawrence became solemn and distracted, hesitating for a moment before asking, “Then, could you tell me if I was mentioned in your conversation and did the matters you discussed to my benefit?”

Han Shuo thought for a moment before nodding and replied, “Lawrence, I can definitively tell you, the focus of my conversation with His Majesty is precisely about you. Merely, they are all matters that are advantageous to you. I believe the likelihood of you obtaining the throne will increase dramatically.”

“Is... is that for real? Bryan, you are speaking the truth?” Hearing Han Shuo’s reply, Lawrence was clearly indescribably ecstatic, to the extent that he suddenly stood up from his chair. Lawrence, who was unable to hold back the ecstasy in his heart, directly stood in front of Han Shuo, pressing down on Han Shuo’s shoulders, impatiently inquiring as he looked into Han Shuo’s eyes.

Han Shuo gave his affirmation, repetitively nodding his head as he said, “That’s right. Although I can divulge the specifics of our conversations, I can guarantee that your royal father would definitely pave the way for you. Lawrence, your fortune has arrived!”

Lawrence endlessly laughed to his heart’s content, his wild side being revealed after experiencing a long period of oppression. He laughed heartily as he said, “Thank you, Bryan. You are my luck. No matter what you and royal father spoke about, I believe you definitely played a large part. I will never forget your kindness.”

Lawrence’s mind was extremely nimble, realizing that Han Shuo was a key person just from his words. Otherwise, why would Uhtred not find others to talk to, only looking for him?

“Bryan, you wouldn’t be joking right? Don’t tell me that His Highness plans to support Senior Lawrence?” Phoebe reacted from her charming and gentle reverie, having a shocked expression as she looked at Han Shuo, as if she didn’t believe what Han Shuo was saying.

“Don’t ask me about the specifics. Honestly speaking, even now I still can’t believe it myself. However, the truth is as such. You will be aware of it very soon.” Han Shuo spread his arms in a helpless posture as he explained to Phoebe.

Lawrence had yet calmed down from his surprise, animatedly saying, “Alright, in that case, I’ll return early to prepare. If it turns out as you said, I need to immediately make arrangements.”

“Go ahead, you should indeed make proper preparations.” Han Shuo gladly agreed.

“Senior, you only remember your own matters, did you forget what we discussed just now? Bryan is currently in great danger. If you don’t help him now, he would be labeled as a member of an evil church by Charles and the others!” seeing Lawrence wanting to leave, Phoebe snorted lightly, unable to resist rebuking Lawrence.

Lawrence slapped his own head. That was the reason why they were here. He first smiled apologetically toward Han Shuo before saying with a grave expression, “Bryan, there are currently some rumors that are extremely harmful to you. I think we should carefully figure out a strategy to handle this. This matter is disseminated by Church of Light’s Kosse and Charles. Their aim is to ruin the reputation and image you had exhaustingly established in Brettel City.”

“We shouldn’t bother about these matters. His Majesty has already agreed to help me clear up this matter.” Han Shuo calmly replied Lawrence.

Lawrence and Phoebe looked at each other, both having stunned expressions. Seeing Lawrence’s expression, Han Shuo couldn’t help but smile as he said, “Alright, you should just leave first and be busy with your own matters. There’s no need to be troubled about these matters, your royal father will help us with them.”

“Alright then, I won’t bother the two of you any longer.” Lawrence understood, winking at Han Shuo and Phoebe, laughing as he left.

“Hey, what’s with your expression. Dammit, you have been led astray by Han Shuo!” Phoebe’s charming face was captivatingly red as she rained curses towards Lawrence’s rear view.

Once Lawrence left, Han Shuo smiled as he walked toward Phoebe, pulling her into his embrace, carrying the flailing Phoebe directly to his bedroom. Along the way, he stroked his hands up and down restlessly along Phoebe's body. A while later, Phoebe had lazily curled up on Han Shuo's wide chest, her whole body not having the slightest strength. However, Han Shuo was still in high spirits, without any signs of exhaustion. He instead conveniently took out a necromancy book, assiduously studying it.

Phoebe had not used any of the aura in her body, her exhaustion was purely from her physical body. Looking at Han Shuo who was in great spirits, Phoebe had a sweet smiling expression. Her complaints from these few days had all disappeared, unable to conceal her extremely content amorous feelings. She was obviously extremely pleased.

A strand of mysterious energy flowed within Phoebe's body, slowly circulating through Phoebe's limbs and bones, nourishing Phoebe's body. It gave Phoebe an extremely comfortable feeling, as though that strand of energy was replenishing her body, helping her body gradually recover and even strengthen.

Phoebe finely examined the refinement and nourishment of that strand of energy, suddenly reacting. This mysterious energy came from Han Shuo. Previously every time after she had experienced pleasure with Han Shuo, Phoebe seemed to sense the existence of such an energy even while dazed. Merely the previous few times Phoebe had been overly exhausted and had fallen asleep immediately and had never sensed it as clearly before.

However, Phoebe could sense that her body was improving. Previously when she refined her niedan, her body seemed to also be purified. The training of her aura had been much easier as compared to the past. It also seemed like the changes in her body was the reason why Phoebe was able to become a great swordsman so quickly.

Slowly sensing for a while, Phoebe couldn't help but fiercely gaze at Han Shuo who was solemnly studying the necromancy book. She suddenly understood in her heart that every time they had engaged in pleasure, Han Shuo would send a strand of unknown energy into her body, helping her remold her body, causing her body's state to become better.

"Bryan!" Phoebe suddenly whispered softly, raising her head to look at Han Shuo.

Han Shuo, who was studying a bone demon's characteristics, lightly grunted in response, smiling as he looked at Phoebe, his large hand conveniently smacking Phoebe's perky and round butt as he asked teasingly, "Yes? You want more?"

Phoebe's stunningly beautiful face reddened, blushing in shame as she pulling up the thin quilt to cover her body, hiding her nosebleed inducing perfect curves, saying softly, "No, my whole body is already devoid of strength, you damned fellow!"

"Hehe, what do you want to say then?" Han Shuo put down the necromancy book in his hand, his left hand tenderly helping her pull the quilt to conceal her jade-like skin, smiling as he asked.

"Have you always left behind something special within my body every time we pleasured each other?" Phoebe's face was red as she inquired in a low voice.

"Of course, I have indeed left behind something special. Heh heh. Those are the seeds of life, the original essence in creating humans. Merely they haven't been able to germinate. Why have you asked about this? Could it be that you want to ask why your stomach has not become big? Oh, you can't blame me, perhaps you haven't worked hard enough?" Han Shuo smiled deviously as he replied Phoebe.

When Phoebe saw Han Shuo's evil smile, she knew that he must have misunderstood her question. She couldn't help but embarrassedly reproached him, "Not that thing. I am referring to the energy that helped me alter my body!"

When Phoebe said that, Han Shuo was suddenly enlightened, replying, "So you were referring to that. Hehe, don't worry, that energy is only beneficial to your body and would absolutely not cause any harm. You shouldn't care too much about it. In any case, you only need to know that it would cause your body to improve."

“I know, of course I know the benefits that energy brings about to my body. I’m only worried if it would cause harm to your strength?” Phoebe naturally understood the changes to her body. However, as a young great swordmaster, Phoebe knew that no matter what kind of energy leaves the main body, it would have an effect on the person involved. What she was worried about was whether Han Shuo was harmed.

“Heh heh, you need not worry. This is called duo cultivation. When I transmit energy into you, I’m actually also obtaining some energy from your body. It’s just that you aren’t aware of it. Otherwise, why would I make you perform so many unusual positions? This is actually a type of martial technique. To think that you still have wild thoughts.” Han Shuo smiled as he explained to Phoebe.

Listening to Han Shuo’s explanation, Phoebe’s blush had spread from her neck to her whole body. She couldn’t help but hammer Han Shuo’s chest, saying, “Nonsense! Since when was there a technique that was practiced this way. You wanting me to assume so many embarrassing positions was simply to satisfy your unusual hobby. You evil person. Still wanting to lie to me!”

Helplessly shrugging his shoulders, Han Shuo smiled bitterly as he explained, “My lady, I am truly not deceiving you. There are countless martial techniques that you don’t know about. However, this technique indeed exists. The positions I want you to assume also really have special purposes. It is just that you haven’t carefully experienced it and have instead been lost in pleasure. If you are able to carefully comprehend it the next time, you would know that I’m telling the truth.”

Phoebe was only somewhat convinced by Han Shuo’s explanation, staring blankly at Han Shuo for a while, realizing that Han Shuo didn’t seem to be joking. She then softly said, “Bryan, you are saying the truth. That is truly a type of martial technique.” Nodding his head, Han Shuo smiled as he replied, “Of course. It is precisely through this method that our pleasure would aid in increasing each other’s strength. Don’t you worry, the energy within your body wouldn’t cause me any harm.”

As Han Shuo explained, although Phoebe was still astonished, she didn’t continue questioning this matter. She instead knitted her brows as she pondered. After a while, Phoebe suddenly recalled something, intensely looking at Han Shuo as she asked, "Bryan, there's a question I've held back for very long, you must answer me today."

"Speak, what's your question?" Han Shuo's large hand caressed Phoebe's smooth back, his eyes squinting as he said lazily.

"What's the deal with Emily? Don't tell me that you have no relation with Emily. Hmph, I've seen her a few times, her skin and state of her body are simply identical to mine. Bryan, I hope you can honestly tell me about the relationship between the two of you and not lie to me." Phoebe stared fixedly at Han Shuo as she questioned him overbearingly.

When Han Shuo heard the name "Emily", he unexpectedly shuddered. When Phoebe finished her question, his mind had suddenly become a mess. After hurriedly considered for a moment, Han Shuo sighed as he said, "Since you already know, I won't hide it from you any longer. The previous time in the Dark Forest, due to my martial technique undergoing cultivation deviation, I raped her while I was unconscious..."

Since things have reached this point, Han Shuo knew that no amount of concealment would be effective, thus he systematically described the matters between Emily and himself.

"As I expected, you really had an affair with her. I had always been wondering why her skin was as white and glossy as mine. Great, it turns out it had been nourished by you. Bryan ah Bryan, you are truly awesome, to actually dare to rape the Betteridge Family's daughter-in-law..." on one hand, Phoebe was glaring angrily at Han Shuo as she clamored, on the other hand, she wanted to wear her clothes and leave in spite of Han Shuo's obstruction.

Han Shuo embraced Phoebe tightly, hurriedly explaining, "Under those circumstances, I had no choice. You should know that you are the most important to me. To have been together with Emily was just a coincidence..."

"I don't think it's that simple. That Emily has such a seductive appearance. Is she very good in bed? Did she tempt you till you are confused and disoriented? Do you know that she is Mister Han's daughter-in-law? That her brother is the terrifying Amyes?"

Han Shuo nodded and then explained, "However, when I raped her, I only took her as a spy of the Empire!"

Shaking of Han Shuo, Phoebe swiftly wore her clothes, hatefully staring at Han Shuo, her expression filled with resentment as she shouted, "I had already felt that there was something fishy between you and Emily previously at the banquet by Lawrence's father. It looks like you two have known each other since long ago. Emily has gone too far, to actually following your bad example in deceiving me."

When she finished her sentence, Phoebe had already finished dressing up and was furiously heading out.

"Where are you going?" Han Shuo was shocked, hastily putting on his clothes.

"I'm going to find that coquettish hussy, Emily. Don't follow me, I want to speak to her alone." Phoebe replied with a sentence before rushing out of Han Shuo's residence.

Chapter 389: Improving circumstances of the necromancy major

Phoebe was furious as she left, her last sentence firmly rejecting Han Shuo's plan to follow her. Han Shuo, who had gotten up to put on his clothes, hesitated for a while before ultimately deciding not to follow Phoebe.

The Betteridge Family was a celebrated noble family within the empire. Even though Mister Hahn has withdrawn from the military, his influence still remained. If Phoebe went to talk to Emily by herself, it would perhaps not cause much of a problem. However, if Han Shuo went along as well, what would happen between the two ladies and Han Shuo would be unpredictable.

Han Shuo definitely didn't want to be screamed at by two girls within the Betteridge Family. If that happened, not only would it affect Han Shuo's career, it would also ruin the reputation of Phoebe and Emily.

Han Shuo frowned as he blanked out momentarily, not knowing what he should do. He decided to just send out two mystical demons to follow behind Phoebe.

In recent times, Ossen City was shrouded in darkness, with hidden dangers everywhere. Han Shuo was afraid that Phoebe who supported Lawrence would encounter trouble. Furthermore, he also wanted to find out what Phoebe wanted to talk to Emily about. If the situation goes south, he would have no choice and be forced to step in.

As the mystical demons followed Phoebe to the Betteridge Family, contrary to Han Shuo's expectations, the originally enraged Phoebe had already concealed her emotions when she reached the doorstep of the Betteridge Family and was instead tranquil as she asked the guard if she could meet Emily.

When Han Shuo saw that Phoebe did not cause a racket the moment she reached the Betteridge Family, he couldn't help letting out a breath. He understood that although Phoebe was angry, she still knew to act appropriately. When Emily heard that Phoebe had specially come to visit, she was suddenly started. She knew she was hiding something and the previous few times she had met Phoebe, she had faintly felt that something was inappropriate and knew that an intelligent woman like Phoebe would definitely sense something.

Now that Phoebe had come to look for her specifically, Emily knew that the trouble that would have come has finally arrived. She calmed her disturbed state of mind and then actively head out to welcome Phoebe.

“Hey, Miss Phoebe? Hehe, it’s been awhile since we met, to what do I owe this visit?” Emily has been part of Dark Mantle for many years and was still able to show a natural appearance even though she had a guilty conscience, showing a splendid smile as greeting Phoebe like a sister.

“Hehe, Miss Emily, isn’t that because I miss you. Oh, it’s been a long time since we met, sister Emily seems to be looking much younger, what is your secret? You must share it with me!” Phoebe who has run a business for a long time was also able to hold in her anger, smiling as she greeted Emily.

Emily felt troubled. When Phoebe mentioned her sore spot, she knew that Phoebe did not come with good intentions. Emily naturally knew the cause of the changes to her body. The beautiful fair-skinned Phoebe was in an extremely similar condition as herself. It was naturally self-evident the reason for Phoebe to bring up this matter.

“I don’t deserve Miss Phoebe’s praise. Perhaps it is because there isn’t much happening recently, being idle and having slept much more. I definitely don’t look younger!” Emily smiled as she played down the matter. Seeing that there were still guards around, she couldn’t help but lightly chuckle as she walked toward Phoebe, smiling as she said, “Since it is rare for you to come over, let’s head to my room to talk about more intimate matters.”

“That was exactly my intention!” Phoebe smiled lightly as she replied, still keeping a natural expression as she walked into the residence with

Emily. The two of them looked like a pair of sisters, as though there was simply no friction between them.

Han Shuo who had seen and heard the whole conversation between the two of them through a mystical demon couldn't help but inwardly admire the calmness of both women and also sort of understood how elegant women fought. It wasn't the loud shouting and screaming he imagined, but was instead a more obscure and implicit battle.

After Emily led Phoebe into her personal room, Emily very carefully placed layer upon layer of enchantments around the room, perhaps to prevent their conversation from leaking. Phoebe looked on indifferently as Emily placed soundproofing, vision-obscuring enchantments, not saying a word.

Once Emily had finished placing her enchantments, Han Shuo's two mystical demons felt a dark aura gradually spreading out in all directions. After hesitating for a moment, Han Shuo withdrew the two mystical demons, having them stay outside the room. In that way, the mystical demons would not be discovered by Emily's enchantments, but he would also not be able to hear their conversation.

"Hai, having too many women is indeed troublesome!" Han Shuo couldn't help but sigh. However, he knew that by his nature, his self-control in this area was definitely lacking.

Just as Han Shuo was sighing, Steward Kallas came in, looking for Han Shuo, handing over a letter while saying respectfully, "Lord Marquis, this is a letter for you."

"Lord Marquis?" Han Shuo was stunned, looking over at Steward Kallas before questioning suspiciously, "Kallas, did you address me wrongly?"

"No, I definitely did not!" Steward Kallas answered, smiling as he looked toward Han Shuo before continuing, "Lord Marquis, although His Majesty's official document has not been issued, there's no need for you to keep us in the dark. Hehe, we are your staff, yet we had to find out from others that His Majesty had conferred upon you a higher title.

When Kallas made that statement, Han Shuo had a sudden realization.

He understood that Lancelot Empire's King Uhtred must have immediately set out to help Lawrence pave the way once Han Shuo left the palace. His title of Marquis must have also been announced in advance.

Now that even Steward Kallas knew about this, it adequately illustrated that King Uhtred had disseminated the news of Han Shuo's promotion. Han Shuo could only sigh at King Uhtred's high efficiency. He then knitted his brows and asked, "Oh, as for those negative rumors about me, are they still being spread?"

"Lord Marquis, His Majesty has already confirmed your innocent background and ordered that no one should doubt your loyalty to the Empire. If anyone dared to spread rumors about you, His Majesty would immediately punish him for slander. Within a day's time, there was no longer anyone that dared talk about you being from the Calamity Church." Steward Kallas looked at Han Shuo reverently as he answered sincerely.

Han Shuo had merely made a trip to the imperial palace, yet once he returned, His Majesty made a series of major actions, suppressing all the negative discussions about Han Shuo and even conferred the noble title of Marquis upon Han Shuo. This was ample proof of His Majesty's trust and generosity toward Han Shuo. Kallas was truly convinced by Han Shuo.

However, Kallas would never know that within the palace, Lancelot Empire's most powerful person actually had a pleading tone when talking to Han Shuo, not having the slightest arrogant attitude of a superior towards a subordinate.

"Who sent the letter?" Han Shuo nonchalantly asked while looking at the letter.

"The person who sent it seemed to be a student of Babylon Academy of Magic and Force. He said that it was Master Fanny that told him to pass this to you. You had previously made it clear to pay special attention to matters regarding Master Fanny. Hence, I didn't dare tarry, delivering it to you immediately." Steward Kallas replied.

"That's good!" Han Shuo gave praise before waving his hand for Kallas to withdraw. He then opened the envelope to retrieve and read the light green letter within.

Fanny's penmanship was deft and graceful. The contents of the letter contained faint attraction, faintly displaying part of Fanny's longing. It also mentioned that today was the first day for the necromancy major to recruit new students and she hoped that Han Shuo could find time to make a trip to the necromancy major and perhaps make a speech, so as to keep up appearances for the necromancy major.

After he finished reading the letter, Han Shuo's nose was filled with the delicate fragrance of the light green writing paper, as if smelling the refreshing scent on Fanny's body. Remembering Dean Emma's previous expectations of him, Han Shuo hesitated for a moment, before deciding to make a trip to Babylon Academy of Magic and Force. Brimming in the scent of spring, Babylon Academy's yearly recruitment was in full swing.

As Lancelot Empire's largest incubator for talent, Babylon Academy of Magic and Force was the place everyone, regardless of nobles or commoners, yearned to join. Every youngster's goal was to become a noble mage or knight. If one did not have outstanding talent in magic, picking the next choice in becoming a swordsman was also a decent choice.

As the empire's largest training institution, the yearly recruitment of Babylon Academy of Magic and Force which is located in the empire's capital was always extremely lively. Most of the empire's talents would flock to Babylon Academy of Magic and Force, hoping to be able to be a student of the academy.

Generally, as long as one enters Babylon Academy of Magic and Force, and successfully graduates, one would have a beautiful future, regardless if they are a commoner or a noble. Of course, if the student was a child of nobility and studied magic, the student's prospects would naturally be even brighter.

Students would undergo many tests and would be able to choose a major suited to their mental strength and their ability to sense the magical elements. Generally, if one was able to sense a particular element better, it would be easier for them to study in that major. Of course, this wasn't absolute. There were people who were only able to weakly sense the darkness element, but due to their interest, they eventually became dark grand magi. The foundation only plays a small part while one's final accomplishments would still be dependent on themselves.

Hence, when students pass all the different tests and reach the time in choosing their major, the crux would often be their interest and the major's strength rather than the student choosing the major based on which element they could sense the strongest.

All along, Babylon Academy of Magic and Force advocated and insisted all along on respecting the student's interest and choice. None of the majors had the right to force outstanding students to join their major. The final decision would be made by the student, while what each major had to do was to take advantage of their strengths in attracting excellent students to join.

This was the same for the necromancy major. The necromancy major that had declined for many years had become a branch of the dark major. However, the necromancy major and dark major were after all not the same major. When it's time to recruit new students, the necromancy major also had the qualifications to recruit students independently.

In an incomparably wide plaza, each magic major of Babylon Academy of Magic and Force occupied their own area, individually establishing numerous recruitment points for the light, dark, fire, water, wind, earth, lightning, summoning, space and necromancy majors.

Every major had made their recruitment point noticeable, either displaying large banners that stated their major's strengths or inviting outstanding seniors that had graduated from their major to attend and attract the crowd or promising benefits for entering their major. Every major spared no effort in showing off their major, so as to draw outstanding students to their own major.

Talent was the most fundamental aspect of a student in Babylon Academy. As long as a major was able to produce an extraordinary mage, not only would it bring glory to the whole major, the major would also have an advantage in all future school activities. The stronger the major, the more funds and resources they could apply for.

Taking the earth major for example. Thirty years ago, the constantly declining earth major had welcomed Dempus Gaier, causing the earth major to lead in many consecutive school competitions by a wide margin. The current Dempus Gaier had become a well-known earth sacred magus within Lancelot Empire, allowing the earth major to rise from many years of decline to be the strongest major in the academy.

There were many similar examples, the reason why the light and dark major had held the advantage for so many years was also due to the appearance of a few outstanding students in recent years. The weak and bullied necromancy major also stood out due to Han Shuo's appearance, faintly showing signs of splitting from the dark major and becoming independent.

In the remote northeast corner of the plaza, five tall skeleton warriors raised a large banner which showed "The necromancy major welcomes you to join them" behind a large table. The two instructors, Fanny and Gene sat at the desk, while Lisa, Amy, Athena and the other necromancy students were shouting their lungs out.

"Why are we allocated this area, this area clearly deviates from the core zone. Those fellows in the dark major are obviously forcing us aside. Hmph!" Lisa angrily shouted, turning her head to look at the calm Fanny before asking, "Master Fanny, do you think Bryan will come? It has been a long time since he last came by the necromancy major. That fellow has become a celebrity in the empire, could it be that he has forgotten his friends here, oh and you as well?"

A long time has passed and Lisa had long since got over her previous anger toward Fanny and Han Shuo. However, only Lisa knew if she still bitterly longed for Han Shuo, and even Fanny was unable to see through her.

Having experienced the tragic downfall of her family, Lisa was much stronger than Fanny could imagine. She was no longer the previously willful girl who only knew to cause trouble. Rather, she had truly calmed her mind in studying necromancy magic. Currently, Lisa had actually become a journeyman mage with Fanny's assistance.

Fanny smiled as she glanced at Lisa, explaining, "Haven't I already asked Derek to send a letter to him? If he has received my letter and just so happen to have nothing to handle, I believe he would come. Hehe, don't be worried. Although the location of our necromancy major is slightly secluded, I still believe there will be students that come on account of its reputation."

Fanny naturally wouldn't tell Lisa that when Han Shuo had returned from Brettel City, the first person he had looked for was herself. At that time, when Han Shuo told her that he had immediately headed to Babylon Academy to look for her once he entered Ossen City, Fanny was secretly delighted for quite a while.

In this period of time, Han Shuo has risen rapidly within the empire, with nobles and commoners everywhere spreading Han Shuo's impressive accomplishments. In particular, Han Shuo's achievement of killing the leader of Brut Merchant Alliance's Redbud Knights, Celt and his green dragon was spread widely to every corner of Lancelot Empire.

Han Shuo's rise had caused the necromancy major to similarly be in the spotlight. Currently within Babylon Academy of Magic and Force, none of the other majors dared to blatantly bully the necromancy major. Even Dean Emma was clearly siding the necromancy major, which made Fanny feel extremely relaxed.

"Master Fanny, how many new students do you think we can recruit this year?" Gene asked Fanny who was sitting beside him. Gene who was originally infatuated with Fanny had previously seen Fanny and Han Shuo being intimate by accident. In addition, with Fanny had succeeded in becoming a necromancy archmage, his feelings had gradually faded.

No matter which aspect was compared, an adept mage instructor like himself was a far cry from the rising necromancy grand magus Han Shuo.

When Fanny had also become a necromancy archmage, Gene had given up even more completely.

In this way, Gene focused his energy on his career, on one hand striving hard in studying magic, on the other hand, attempting to develop and promote teaching as a career. His contribution to the growth of the necromancy major in this period of time wasn't small.

Previously when he had returned to his hometown, Gene had mentioned that he was once the instructor of Brettel City's Count Bryan, immediately causing a sensation in the small town. Gene had also benefited from Han Shuo's status, causing Gene's resentment toward Han Shuo to slowly dissipate. "Who knows? Hehe, perhaps there will be a few." Fanny smiled as she replied.

"Excuse me, may I ask, is this the necromancy major? Did the Empire's necromancy grand magus Count Bryan graduate from this major?" a youngster that was dressed exquisitely and was followed by a steward had come over and inquired courteously.

"That's right, Bryan did indeed graduate from our major." Gene was delighted, hastily answering.

"Ha, I've finally found it, why are you so secluded!" The youngster shouted excitedly, before animatedly saying, "My mental strength is excellent and have the strongest affinity for dark magic. However, I choose the necromancy major, I hope you will accept me!"

After finishing his sentence, the youngster shouted loudly toward a few companions that were pacing back and forth in the distance, "Friends, I've found the necromancy major. They are over here, you should come over!"

After the youngster shouted, the other teenagers all had delighted expressions, excitedly running towards Fanny's direction. The results of these students in the mental strength test were exceptional and they were also all from noble backgrounds. They were precisely the people that instructors of every major coveted. No one expected that all of a sudden, all of them would run toward the necromancy major.

Chapter 390: Respect

“Haha, welcome, welcome. Choosing the necromancy major is definitely the correct decision!” When Gene saw these few young students making a beeline for their position, he couldn’t help but chuckle as he hastily stood up, taking out a few pamphlets and passed one to each person. He smiled as he explained, “Everyone fill in your details. Hehe, there aren’t many rules in our necromancy major and the school fees is the lowest.”

These youngsters that came over were clearly attracted by Han Shuo’s reputation. After hearing Gene’s instructions, all of them excitedly leaned over the table to fill in their forms.

There were a few youngsters that had been lingering a distance away and they didn’t seem to be from the same group. However, their goal was identical and were also searching for the necromancy major’s location. When they heard the shouts coming from this direction, all of them had an excited look as they headed for the necromancy major’s area.

“Hey Carlisle, your mental strength is excellent and your affinity with the darkness element is extremely high. As long as you are willing to study dark magic, you will definitely become a dark grand magus. Don’t leave, for a student like you, our dark major also gives many benefits.” a dark magic professor hastily shouted as he looked at a youngster directly heading toward the necromancy major in the corner.

“I’m sorry but I was under the impression that the dark major and necromancy major were the same and hence came over here. I didn’t that that the necromancy major could actually enroll students on their own. I apologise. The reason I’m here is because i want to become a necromancy grand magus like Marquis Bryan, not because of the dark major!” For this youngster to find out about Han Shuo’s title of Marquis, he definitely does not come from a simple background. He was neither haughty nor humble as he replied, performing a bow before leaving the dark major’s recruitment point in large strides without any hesitation.

The expression of dark major archmage Deo who was sitting behind the dark major's recruitment table gradually became unsightly. Carlisle was a student that he fancied for a long time. From the start when Carlisle entered Babylon Academy of Magic and Force, Deo was immediately certain that Carlisle was a good seedling in studying dark magic.

So as to recruit Carlisle, Deo even sent a few teachers to separately approach him. Carlisle had also showed great passion from the start and was always extremely pleased. Who would have known that in the end, Carlisle actually headed for the necromancy major without even looking back, even saying that the reason why he was amicable with them was purely because he misunderstood the relation between the dark major and the necromancy major. That was practically a slap to Deo's face.

"Isn't it just a petty slave achieving unexpected success, what is so amazing about that. Hmph." The dark major teacher that was rejected by Carlisle couldn't help but censure furiously, attempting to vent the resentment in his heart.

"Deo, isn't the necromancy major a branch of the dark major? Why does the current situation seem like the necromancy major faintly pressuring the dark major instead. I didn't expect that in the time that I left the dark major, not only did you not progress, you actually led the dark major to such a state?" A tall and lean middle aged magus appeared next to Deo, frowning as he berated Deo who was the dark major's person in charge.

"Crowley, although you have become a dark grand magus, you have always been outside the Lancelot Empire. Previously your reputation was very big, but there hasn't been any youngsters that know about you for a long time. However, this Bryan has been rising rapidly these days and within the hearts of the youngsters in the Empire, only he is a true hero. Your era has passed." Deo glanced at the middle aged magus, smiling bitterly as he replied.

Crowley and Deo were both previously from Babylon Academy's dark major. At that time when Crowley was in the dark major, the competition between majors had been dominated by the dark major for consecutive years. He only took a very short time after he advanced to the rank of adept mage and graduated to advance even further to become a dark archmage, causing a sensation within the Lancelot Empire for many years.

However, after Crowley became an archmage, he couldn't make a breakthrough. After a while, he left Lancelot Empire, travelling to many nations within the Profound Continent and was finally able to become a dark grand magus a few years ago. Deo and Crowley were from the same year, but Deo clearly didn't have as much talent as Crowley, only reaching the rank of dark archmage. Deo had heard that Crowley had returned to the Lancelot Empire and thus invited him to show his support.

Unfortunately, Crowley had left the Lancelot Empire for too long that even some of the elderly had forgotten about him, not to mention the young students that adored heroes. Crowley had been standing here for quite a while and even though Deo painstakingly introduced him, there wasn't anyone that took notice of him.

"Deo, that fellow Bryan really became a necromancy grand magus in such a short time?" a magus who studied dark magic would naturally have a sinister aura wrapping around their body. Candide, one of the three heavyweights of Dark Mantle had this aura, and this grand magus named Crowley had this aura too. The somber expression he gave Deo would definitely cause an average person who saw it to be fearful.

When Deo heard Crowley's question, although he was extremely unwilling to admit it, but the truth could not be changed. He could only smile bitterly and replied, "That youngster is a freak, he really became a necromancy grand magus that quickly. What is more frightening is that he simply didn't stay in the necromancy major for a long time, only appearing a few times at crucial moments. No one knows how he managed to train that quickly."

"Oh, hehe, that's indeed somewhat interesting. Unfortunately that person isn't here, otherwise I would truly want to meet him. I have been forgotten by the people in Lancelot Empire for too long and would indeed need to compete with an expert so that more people will know that I've returned." Crowley muttered to himself while having a pensive expression.

Deo glanced at Crowley, egging him on, "That's right, Crowley, currently that fellow is having rising prestige within Lancelot Empire. The fastest way for you to make a name for yourself is to defeat him. Hehe, you can indeed try. That fellow had just advanced to necromancy grand magus and I feel he is surely not your match.”

As Deo and Crowley were previously in the same year, Deo was extremely clear about Crowley’s character. Deo could tell just by looking at Crowley’s expression what he was thinking about and couldn’t help but egg him on. In the years when Crowley was still in the dark major, he was famous for being proud and arrogant. Deo could see that Crowley’s temperament had not changed even after so many years.

“Unfortunately, that fellow isn’t here today. Otherwise I could seize the opportunity to stop his rise!” Deo’s suggestion matched Crowley’s intentions. He was absolutely confident in his own strength and couldn’t help but become restless.

While they were discussing at the dark major, other teachers in the rest of the majors were also silently cursing. This was especially so at the light major. At this moment, the person in charge of the light major, archmage Voigtlander was similarly having a deflated expression as he shouted furiously, “What is going on!! Liliac had such a strong affinity with the light element but actually headed to the enemy necromancy major. Doesn’t she know that with her circumstances, studying light magic would have the best prospects? How can those dark creatures of the necromancy major be able to match light magic, this is simply preposterous!”

Seated behind the light major’s area was someone Han Shuo was familiar with – one of Dark Mantle’s three heavyweights, light grand magus Amyes. Currently, Amyes was enjoying a pot of good tea, sitting leisurely and smiling as he looked at Voigtlander, not sharing any opinions.

The swordmasters stood behind Amyes, dedicated to Amyes’ protection. They also didn’t care about Voigtlander’s words. In their eyes, Amyes’ safety was the most important.

Voigtlander indignantly complained and then faced the invited Amyes and said, "Lord Amyes, do you think this matter is absurd? The necromancy major is such a small major, yet they actually became so lucky because of a small servant, even snatching away our light major's students."

Amyes had previously graduated from the light major, eventually becoming a chancellor of authority within the Lancelot Empire. In the eyes of Lancelot Empire's nobles, Amyes was a terrifying demon. Once Amyes has fixed his attention on a certain noble family, that noble family will definitely meet with misfortune.

However, although Amyes didn't have a favourable impression of Voigtlander who was two ranks below himself, he still had some feelings for the light major. Hence when he received Voigtlander's invitation, Amyes agreed to attend. At present, as he heard Voigtlander's complaints, Amyes only smiled faintly and replied gracefully, "Bryan is a Marquis of the Empire and is regarded highly by His Majesty. It is best that you are careful with what you say."

For Voigtlander who didn't know that Han Shuo was a member of Dark Mantle to blindly ridicule Han Shuo in front of Amyes, he would definitely not get any benefits. When Voigtlander heard Amyes reply, he was astonished as he looked at Amyes, not understanding why Amyes was speaking on behalf of Han Shuo.

"Haha, you should just carry on with your own matters. Those students that enter the necromancy major have all done so out of blind adoration of a hero. After some time, when they realise they are not suited to studying necromancy magic, I believe they will still recognise the facts and return to the light major. There's no need for you to worry." As a high-ranking member of Dark Mantle, Amyes could see the main issue in a glance and couldn't help but console Voigtlander. "I, I just can't swallow my anger!" Voigtlander pondered for a moment and understood that what Amyes said was reasonable. However, he still couldn't help but shout angrily.

Amyes hiddenly looked at Voigtlander in disdain, thinking in his heart that the current Bryan is simply not someone a teacher of the light major can contend against. Pondering for a while, as well as taking to account his feelings for the light major, Amyes reminded, "Voigtlander, I'll say one thing, this Bryan isn't someone you can provoke. Even if you can't swallow your anger you should forcefully contain it. If not, it would lead to your own demise."

Amyes controlled a division of Dark Mantle and had a close relationship with His Majesty. From the series of arrangements His Majesty had made today, he could already spot some clues and understood that prior to His Majesty's passing, no one within Lancelot Empire would be able to act against Han Shuo. Even he himself wouldn't not be able to, much less a light major's teacher?

"Th-this, Lord Amyes, where do these words stem from?" Voigtlander was startled, somewhat baffled as he inquired.

"Go comprehend it yourself. Haha, the reason why I've said this to you is on the account of you inviting me. Look at those fellows in the dark major, I can guarantee that they would pay bitterly sooner or later. Oh, it's not sooner or later, maybe they would pay bitterly very soon. Ha, That fellow actually came, didn't he just depart from His Majesty's place not long ago?" Amyes first warned Voigtlander, before suddenly spotting a tall and imposing figure in the distance. He couldn't help but exclaiming softly.

Following Amyes line of sight, Voigtlander also saw the approaching Han Shuo. He couldn't help but cry in alarm, "Good gracious, how has that fellow become so tall!"

The previous time Voigtlander saw Han Shuo, he wasn't even 1.80 meters. Han Shuo had immediately looked for Fanny every time he went to the necromancy major and normal people would simply not have the chance to see Han Shuo. The figure of Han Shuo who trained in demonic magic was currently as imposing as a demonic god, naturally exuding devilishly attractive traits.

Even though he was within a sea of people, Han Shuo's tall and imposing body and traits would still draw in everyone's gaze, causing everyone to focus their attention on him, inevitably becoming everyone's focal point.

“Master Fanny, it’s Bryan!! Bryan’s here, he really came!” Lisa was originally glancing around senselessly, not expecting Han Shuo to really return. When she saw Han Shuo’s prominent figure in the corner of her eye, her heart was in upheaval and she was unable to resist crying out in surprise.

“It seems that only when I truly see him that I realise that all these days of trying to forget him has been useless. I, I’m still unable to forget him!” after crying out in surprise, Lisa’s expression suddenly dulled as she sighed inwardly.

When she heard Lisa’s cry, Fanny’s eyes gave off a joyous radiance of disbelief. She was somewhat unable to resist immediately standing up, but remembered that there were many people around. She couldn’t help but blush as she sat back down, scolding herself inwardly for losing control. She imitated the action of taking a sip of water, controlling her tone as much as possible as she said to the group of excited youngsters, “That person is Bryan, he can be considered as your senior.”

These new necromancy students that rushed over due to Han Shuo’s reputation had just completed the procedures to enter the necromancy major. When they heard Fanny’s sentence, they couldn’t help but blush, all of them standing on tiptoe to do their utmost in seeing a little further, searching for any trace of their hero. In that moment, their young and tender hearts were filled with emotions and excitement.

As Han Shuo continued walking, he realised that due to his appearance, numerous gazes were uniformly converging on him. When Han Shuo looked around and did not immediately see the necromancy major’s recruitment point, he couldn’t help but become suspicious.

However, Han Shuo understood that the necromancy major was a branch of the dark major and the dark major’s location was actually extremely conspicuous. Only after a mystical demon floated upward to overlook the area, did he spot Fanny in a corner behind the dark major. When Han Shuo saw the words on the banner being held up by five skeleton warriors, he couldn't help but laugh and think inwardly, as Lancelot Empire's largest magic academy, why does the recruitment seem like a food market?

Han Shuo continued walking toward the necromancy major as he pondered. Just as Han Shuo was about to reach the necromancy major's recruitment point, Deo hastily pulled Crowley, saying in a low voice, "That fellow is Bryan, if you intend to seize the chance to become famous, defeating him is a good idea!"

Crowley followed Deo's gaze, couldn't help but blew a raspberry, "Deo, did you make a mistake, is that fellow really a necromancer? Why does he look like he's more well-built than barbarian warriors!"

Deo was somewhat speechless, having an ugly expression as he explained, "That's right, it's him. Merely, it is said that he also practices a mysterious martial technique and had previously defeated Brut Merchant Alliance's Leah Cain. Crowley, could it be that you are afraid?"

"Also practices a martial technique..." Crowley stared blankly, before smiling confidently as he replied, "A magus that isn't focused on one thing is the easiest to deal with. If you didn't mention this point, I would still be somewhat apprehensive. Since that is the case, I feel reassured."

As Han Shuo headed for the necromancy major, he was slightly surprised at the amount of attention he was getting. He didn't think that his appearance would actually cause such so many people to be flustered.

The light major's recruitment point was also at a very eye-catching location. Han Shuo had noticed Amyes through a mystical demon and when he passed by the light major's recruitment point, he couldn't help but nodding his head to send his greetings to Amyes who was leisurely sipping tea. As Amyes was one of the three heavyweights of Dark Mantle, he could also be considered Han Shuo's immediate superior. Furthermore, Amyes was Emily's brother. No matter publicly or privately, Han Shuo had to show respect when he saw Amyes.

When Amyes who was originally sitting there leisurely sipping tea saw Han Shuo's greeting, he didn't dare be disrespectful and actually stood up and smiled as he returned the greeting.

For someone like Amyes to be so respectful to an upstart like Han Shuo, Voigtlander was slightly surprised. As he recalled what Amyes had advised him, Voigtlander suddenly understood, and instead viewed the dark major in schadenfreude. Seeing Crowley's restless appearance, it seemed like a show was about to begin.

Seeing Amyes stand up to return the greeting, Han Shuo was similarly astonished. No matter how he saw it, with Amyes' status, even returning the greeting while seated was already showing face to Han Shuo. He truly didn't think that Amyes would actually stand and show his respect.

This signified that Amyes treated Han Shuo as someone on the same level and simply not treating Han Shuo as a subordinate. Otherwise, regardless of his age or qualifications within Dark Mantle, there was simply no need for Amyes to stand and return the greeting.

Showing a splendid smile, Han Shuo who was slightly confused directly headed for the necromancy major, not thinking deeply about the reason behind Amyes' friendliness.

Suddenly, a malicious looking middle aged magus stood in Han Shuo's way. Crowley hiddenly measured up Han Shuo, suddenly saying, "Are you Count Bryan? Haha, let me introduce myself, I am Crowley and have graduated from Babylon Academy's dark major. I have always been fascinated by the exploration of magic and have recently just returned to Lancelot Empire..."

"Get to the point!" Han Shuo knitted his brows, interrupting before Crowley could complete her sentence.

Crowley had an embarrassed expression, not expecting that with Han Shuo's position as a noble Count, he actually rudely interrupted his speech. That caused Crowley to be dazed for a moment.

"I heard that Count Bryan is a necromancy grand magus. May I know if Lord Count would give me the honor of comparing notes with me?" After Crowley was interrupted by Han Shuo, he was a little annoyed, getting right to the point and issuing his challenge.

When they heard this sentence, the students and teachers in the dark major were shocked. The attention of the nearby majors were all focused here and had also heard Crowley's loud challenge. They all became excited in an instant, hastily abandoning their current tasks and rushed over.

Over at the necromancy major, Fanny had continuously gazed at Han Shuo once he appeared and had clearly heard the challenge by dark major's Crowley. Before Fanny could express anything, Lisa and the other students had already headed over. Fanny hesitated a moment, turning around and said to Gene, "Master Gene, sorry to trouble you to look after this place, I'll head over to take a look!"

"Sure, go ahead. I will look after this area." Gene knew the real relationship between Fanny and Han Shuo, nodding understandingly as he replied.

"Let's go over and take a look too. Haha, where did this fellow come from, to go as far as to challenge our hero." all the new necromancy students that had joined because of Han Shuo's reputation excitedly ran over.

Amyes who had just sat down suddenly spurted out a mouth of tea, awkwardly looking at Voigtlander who was on the receiving end. He embarrassingly smiled before saying, "I'm really sorry, that fellow really did as i predicted, wanting to seize the opportunity to make a name for himself. Haha." "It's nothing, it's nothing, my lord is indeed formidable." as Voigtlander used a napkin to wipe away the tea on his body, he smiled and complimented Amyes. He wouldn't dare blame Amyes!

Chapter 391: No turning back

Han Shuo surveyed the no longer young magus in front of him. Crowley was a dark grand magus. An average student in Babylon Academy of Magic and Force might not have any impression of him. However, Han Shuo who once did odd jobs within the necromancy major knew of this person's existence.

At that time, Han Shuo and Jack were always in charge of cleaning the statues along the path first thing in the morning. All the outstanding graduates from past years of the academy each had a statue placed along the path. Crowley was impressively one of the numerous statues which Han Shuo had previously cleaned for a period of time.

The time when Crowley was in the dark major was formerly also the dark major's period of glory. Ever since Crowley became a journeyman mage, four consecutive years of the academy's competition between majors had been swept by the dark major's team that was led by Crowley. After Crowley had graduated from the dark major, he very quickly also became a dark archmage. Crowley really had many major achievements before he traveled around the Profound Continent in the past few years.

Merely, too much time has passed. Due to Crowley's fascination in further advancing, his reputation had slowly waned and was gradually forgotten by the people in Lancelot Empire. It even reached the point where some new teachers and students of the dark major had never heard any information about him.

Han Shuo looked at Crowley who had issued him a challenge, recalling the time when he was an errand slave looking up at Crowley's statue. Han Shuo suddenly had an absurd feeling in his heart. Just a while ago, he had actually become such a person's opponent and was even being challenged by him. Han Shuo could feel a sense of pride rising within himself.

It was precisely because of this that Han Shuo had an extremely splendid smile. However, when Crowley saw Han Shuo's splendid smile, Crowley interpreted it as Han Shuo completely looking down on him. Crowley felt that he was being insulted, holding back the anger in his heart and said, "Count Bryan, what is the meaning of this. Could it be that you feel contempt about my challenge and intend to reject it?"

Smiling as he shook his head, Han Shuo couldn't help but straightened his mind which was imagining wildly. He then sized up Crowley more seriously, hesitating a moment before knitting his brows and said, "You have misunderstood. I was only recalling past events. When I was still an errand servant in the necromancy department, I had previously cleaned your statue. Who would have guessed that today you would issue a challenge to me? Honestly speaking, I feel extremely honored!"

Crowley was astonished and couldn't help but turn his head to look at his old friend in the dark major, Deo, seemingly wanting to seek confirmation from Deo about the matter.

"That's right. A few years ago, as an errand servant, he had previously cleaned the hallway leading to the dark major's building. Ah, when you became a dark grand magus had previously applied with the dean to place your statue there. What is said is correct, he had indeed cleaned your statue before." Deo felt somewhat awkward as he explained but still narrated in full detail to clear Crowley's doubts.

When Crowley heard Deo's explanation and considered that Han Shuo had previously cleaned his statue, he couldn't help but hesitate slightly in his heart and actually didn't really want to challenge Han Shuo anymore. No matter what, Han Shuo had previously shown respect to him. For him to act in this way appeared slightly insincere.

By the side, the dark major's person in charge Deo saw Crowley showing some hesitation, he couldn't help but hastily gave Crowley a meaningful glance before smiling slightly and said to Han Shuo, "Count Bryan, so do you actually plan to accept Crowley's challenge or not?"

"Of course, didn't I just say it a moment ago, I'm extremely honored!" Han Shuo smiled cheerfully as he replied, shooting a glance at Deo. Han Shuo understood what Deo was planning, but he had absolute confidence and wasn't afraid of defeating Crowley here.

“Very good. In that case, I would act as the witness, are both of you agreeable?” Suddenly, Amyes walked over from the light major’s area, gracefully smiling as he suggested.

The light major’s person in charge, Voigtlander had also walked over with Amyes. Voigtlander had a schadenfreude expression as he looked over. Regardless of the dark major’s Crowley or Han Shuo, they were considered the enemy to Voigtlander. For these two sides to battle, he would be enjoying happily no matter who won or lost.

“Crowley, this is Lord Amyes, you should have heard of him!” When Deo saw Amyes turning up uninvited and even made such a suggestion, hastily introducing Amyes to Crowley who had left the Lancelot Empire for a long time.

Previously when Crowley left the Lancelot Empire, Amyes was only a Dark Star envoy of Dark Mantle. Thus, he would naturally not know Amyes. However, when he returned to the Lancelot Empire, he did find out about the current bigwigs in the Lancelot Empire. When he heard Deo’s introduction, he immediately greeted Amyes respectfully, grinning as he said, “Of course. With Lord Amyes witnessing this battle would be for the best.”

“I’m extremely honored as well.” Han Shuo bowed toward Amyes courteously as he replied, causing Amyes to return the greeting once again.

The surrounding teachers and students from the various factions all continuously rushed over. These people have heard of Han Shuo’s great name and seeing that Han Shuo, a recently broken through grand magus necromancer upstart was sparring with a dark grand magus of unknown origin, all of them were indescribably excited.

There weren’t many grand magus ranked characters within Babylon Academy of Magic and Force, with most teachers of the various factions being at adept mage or archmage ranks. As the students would hardly even be able to see teachers sparring with each other, they had definitely not come across a spar between two grand magi and hence were extremely excited.

“Bryan, all the best, you will definitely win!” Out of a sudden, a familiar voice rang in his ear. Han Shuo turned to take a look, noticing Lisa in a corner of the surrounding waving a fist animatedly to cheer him on.

Han Shuo felt a warmth in his heart, recalling how Lisa had always believed and supported him a long time ago. After all these time, Lisa had matured from an unruly and willful girl, not only appearing more youthful and energetic, she also had an additional unyielding temperament. It seems that the period of time where she suffered pain had also given her benefits.

While Han Shuo gazed at Lisa, he also saw Fanny who was beside Lisa. Fanny didn't have the same unconditional trust that Lisa had in Han Shuo. Instead, her eyes were forever filled with worry. No matter how strong Han Shuo became, as long as there was a trace of danger, she would be worried for Han Shuo.

Admiring the two women's splendid grins, Han Shuo then turned back to face Crowley, courteously inquiring, “How would you like to compete? With my persistent character, those that have battled me opening have never been able to survive.”

Hearing this statement, Crowley was startled, showing an obvious stunned expression. What Crowley knew about Han Shuo's origins and past was based on what Deo had told him. He personally didn't know much about Han Shuo's matters. Now that he heard Han Shuo making such a statement, he suddenly had an uneasy feeling.

“On this point, I can help Bryan elaborate. Including Brut Merchant Alliance's Leah Cain, Bryan had dueled and killed his opponent on thirteen occasions. Right, just to warn Mister Crowley, among those that Bryan has killed include Redbud Knights commander, dragon rider Celt. Hehe, I was afraid you didn't know, hence I'm informing you in advance.” Amyes could see that Crowley was somewhat astonished, figuring out that he perhaps was clear about Han Shuo's past and hence couldn't help but enlighten Crowley.

Hearing Amyes' comments, Crowley was shaken once again, his gaze towards Deo already containing hints of resentment. When Deo saw Crowley looking at him resentfully, he clearly had a guilty conscience, awkwardly turning his head. After hesitating for a moment, Deo suddenly said, "Let's forget about it, hehe, both of you are in fact considered members of our dark major. Let's not compete on such an auspicious day, lest we harm the friendly relations."

When Deo saw Crowley's resentful gaze, as well as heard Amyes' reminder, he finally cleared his mind of his fury. Crowley was invited by the dark major, if he was defeated by Han Shuo, Deo would definitely be reproached and perhaps even the dark major's teachers would push the blame to him after the event.

"Mister Crowley, I feel that we should just let it pass. Hehe, what Mister Deo said is reasonable. Let's not hurt the harmony, both of you are considered to be on the same side!" Amyes smiled gently as he advised Crowley.

"No, I still wish to compare notes with Count Bryan." Under the gaze of the crowd, Crowley had no means of backing down. Hence, he forced himself to insist on competing.

At this moment, a ray of white light radiated in the center and Babylon Academy's Dean Emma appeared. She looked at both Han Shuo and Crowley before smiling and said, "Comparing notes in magic is a common way of improvement among magi. However, as you aren't enemies, there's no need for a life or death duel. Bryan, today's our annual recruitment, you wouldn't be thinking of not giving face to your alma mater right?"

"Of course not, I was just joking. Hehe. In any case, it's just a spar. If Mister Crowley doesn't mind, how about we change our location?" When Han Shuo saw Emma appear, he immediately had a friendly smile on his face and invited Crowley to another location.

Crowley was clearly relieved, forcefully laughing as he replied, "I've left for too long and aren't familiar with this place. Where do you think would be a more suitable location?"

“There’s no need to choose, just use the dark major’s number one practice grounds. There’s a large-scale magic barrier there. It should be fine as long as the both of you pay a little attention, please do not harm the friendly relations.” when Emma saw that Han Shuo wasn’t serious, she felt relieved, smiling as she spoke.

Just like this, Han Shuo and Crowley both agreed. The recruitment was suddenly paused midway and when Han Shuo and Crowley entered the large practice grounds, teachers and students of the various majors had also rushed over.

Chapter 392: I admit defeat

The dark major's number one practice field was extremely wide. The sparring between Han Shuo and Crowley had attracted numerous teachers and students over to watch. Among them were Amyes and Dean Emma, who were the witnesses for the battle as well as being in charge of ensuring everyone's safety.

There was a barrier deployed within the practice field to prevent the strength of the magic from spreading out. On top of that, Emma personally partitioned a separate small space for the audience to hide in while they watched the battle. The recruitment outside could be considered to have been temporarily ceased.

"Dean, why are you willing to let the two of them duel on such an occasion?" as Amyes and Emma stood together, Amyes who was dressed in a spotless white robe and appearing otherworldly refined, had a smile on his face as he asked Dean Emma.

Emma glanced at Amyes who was just walking out of Babylon Academy of Magic and Force. Previously when Amyes was studying in the light major, Emma was already the teacher in charge of the space major. Emma could also be considered as Amyes senior within Babylon Academy. Hence, Amyes was very respectful toward her.

"During that time, that fellow Crowley was proud and arrogant. I see that he has not really changed even after such a long time and dampening his spirit isn't a bad thing. Besides, Bryan had just become a grand magus necromancer and probably still isn't very adept at controlling some of the new necromancy magic. A spar which doesn't cause disharmony would actually really be beneficial to their progress." Emma benevolently smiled, her face covered with wrinkles as she explained to Amyes.

"In that case, who do you think will win?" Amyes pondered for a while, before inquiring.

"Hehe, I believe you ought to be clearer than me on this?" Emma faintly smiled as she glanced at Amyes, as though implying something.

Amyes chuckled when he heard Emma's response, nodding his head without replying. As one of the heavyweights of Dark Mantle, Amyes knew of Han Shuo's accomplishments in recent days. Through the baptism of blood and fire, Han Shuo, as a necromancer who grasped mysterious techniques, had already done many hidden large-scale moves.

Apart from Redbud Knights' leader dragon rider Celt, Han Shuo had also fought with the Church of Light's Red Archbishop Kosse multiple times. Amyes was also aware of other news. To be able to kill light grand magus Ferguson before becoming a grand magus himself, regardless of how you saw it, Han Shuo had a higher chance of winning.

The reason why Amyes was interested to judge the battle this time around, was simply because he wanted to personally witness Han Shuo's improvement. In fact, Amyes wouldn't be surprised at a victory. Han Shuo beating Crowley was something both Amyes and Emma felt was inevitable.

Members of every faction were full of expectations as they watched the two grand magus in the center. The eyes of necromancy major's Fanny, Lisa and other students were even brighter, their gazes fixed on Han Shuo, wanting to clearly see Han Shuo's every move.

"Within the Lancelot Empire, it isn't that there aren't grand magus necromancers. However, those people were absorbed in exploring magical knowledge and rarely appeared before others. This would perhaps be the only time your generation would be able to watch a grand magus necromancer fight. No matter what, you have to watch attentively."

Although Fanny was worried for Han Shuo, there wasn't much she could say now that things have developed to this point. As an instructor for the necromancy major, Fanny gave instructions to all the students to watch carefully, with Fanny herself also completely focusing her attention on the fight.

"Teacher Fanny, don't worry. We will earnestly watch Bryan's moves." Lisa shouted excitedly, her bright eyes fixed on Han Shuo's figure from the beginning.

“Although it’s just a spar, Mister Crowley shouldn’t hold back. Hehe, I’m a necromancer, if you give me the time to summon undead creatures, I think that would be disadvantageous to you.” Han Shuo smiled calmly as he said to the opposing Crowley who had taken out a green magic staff.

Han Shuo had complete confidence in dealing with Crowley. As his mental strength had once again improved greatly after just returning from the netherworld, Han Shuo’s mental state was unprecedentedly good. Having reached the separate demon realm, Han Shuo could monitor Crowley’s every movement with the assistance of a few mystical demons. The strength and speed of his body were also something Crowley couldn’t compare to. As Han Shuo stably surpassed Crowley in all aspects, he appeared extremely confident.

“In that case, I wouldn’t be polite. Count Bryan, please be careful.” Crowley, who had learned of Han Shuo’s prowess from Deo and Amyes just before entering the practice field, did not underestimate him because of his age. He instead regarded Han Shuo as the strongest opponent in his whole life. Once Crowley, who did not dare relax the slightest, finished speaking, the magic staff in his hand started emitting grayish-brown light following his incantation. The dark elements within the practice field suddenly seemed to enliven like elves. As Crowley slowly chanted his magic spell, six huge Hands of Death suddenly formed around Han Shuo, fiercely crushing down toward Han Shuo.

The grand magus ranked Crowley was indeed outstanding, already using the mighty Hands of Death as his first move. Furthermore, he was able to form six at once, clearly treating Han Shuo as his life’s most formidable opponent.

The six Hands of Death were much more lifelike than what Emily had used. The six gigantic Hands of Death even had fine veined patterns on their palms, as though really belonging to some dark world’s creature. The coarse and long fingers also had sharp hook-like fingernails, appearing extremely terrifying.

It could be seen that Crowley was extremely cautious and didn’t immediately attack Han Shuo violently. He simply nimbly manipulated six Hands of Death to gradually approach Han Shuo. In this way, he would slowly cause terrifying pressure to Han Shuo yet still abiding by the principles of a spar.

When Han Shuo saw the six Hands of Death uniformly pressing on, he understood that Crowley really did not intend to gun for his life and was really in accordance with Emma's words to purely spar. This caused Han Shuo who was prepared to deal with sudden changes to have a favorable impression of Crowley.

Taking out his white bone staff, Han Shuo recited the incantation for the Soul Vortex necromancy magic. Out of a sudden, hundreds of wraiths appeared, revolving rapidly in the void in front of Han Shuo, forming a vortex that sucked up the surrounding magic elements. The six Hands of Death that were slowly pressing toward Han Shuo suddenly felt the intense force of attraction generated by the Soul Vortex, one after another involuntarily being sucked toward the Soul Vortex in front of Han Shuo.

'Soul Vortex' was a grand magus ranked necromancy magic that Han Shuo had just mastered. This necromancy magic utilized the power of wraiths. In the netherworld, a single wraith's strength was next to nothing. However, by controlling hundreds of wraiths with his mental energy and forming 'Soul Tremor' according to necromancy laws, Han Shuo was able to generate enormous might.

Against those peculiar magic that contained magic elements, this 'Soul Vortex' was able to create an intense suction force, pulling these magic attacks into the vortex and using the numerous wraiths to grind them away little by little. Furthermore, if creatures with souls were sucked into the 'Soul Vortex', the numerous wraiths could directly bind the creature's soul and dragging it from the Profound Continent into the netherworld.

For all living creatures in this world, once they were dragged to the netherworld, their soul would never find the way to return. To the people in the Profound Continent, creatures who were dragged into the netherworld can be considered as dead.

After the 'Soul Vortex' was formed, Han Shuo's silk-like mental energy entered the spell, assisting the revolving of the wraiths and vortex. The strength of the suction force gradually increased after the insertion of Han Shuo's mental energy and the revolving of the vortex. The six Hands of Death which were slowly pressing towards Han Shuo suddenly became extremely heavy, as though becoming a stream flowing into the ocean, slowly entering the 'Soul Vortex'.

Crowley and Han Shuo were separated by a big distance, hence Crowley wasn't affected by the pull of the 'Soul Vortex'. Furthermore, the suction force formed by the 'Soul Vortex' was only effective toward attacks formed from magic elements and living creatures possessing souls. It wasn't effective toward ordinary objects and physical attacks.

When Crowley saw the six Hands of Death actually being absorbed completely, his expression became even heavier. He understood in his heart that Han Shuo's grand magus necromancer strength was indeed extremely formidable. The disappearance of the six Hands of Death caused Crowley to be fearful and simultaneously become even more cautious.

Following his reciting of another spell, the green magic staff in his hand started slowly emitting gloomy light again. When Crowley finished reciting his spell, he pointed the green magic staff at Han Shuo, causing a mysterious contract to suddenly form between himself and Han Shuo.

Dense dark elements suddenly condensed together, violently crowding into the space surrounding Han Shuo. Han Shuo's body suddenly tense and was actually unable to move. Not only his limbs were bound, even his mouth seemed to be covered, the dark elements were like a rope, slowly constricting around Han Shuo.

'Prison of Darkness' was an advanced dark magic, utilizing one's mental energy to gather the dark element and form a contract with the enemy and firmly imprisoning the enemy, causing the enemy to be unable to move his body.

In just a sudden, apart from his mental energy and demonic yuan energy that could still be circulated, Han Shuo's physical body had been firmly bound by the dark elements. During this process, Crowley waved his green magic staff once again and five Spheres of Destruction slowly formed and approached Han Shuo.

Crowley had a slightly pleased expression. This was his most proficient and most confident magic. Han Shuo had just advanced to become a grand magus necromancer, hence his mental strength definitely shouldn't be as resilient as his own. 'Prison of Darkness' was actually just a contest of mental strength. For a high ranked dark grand magus like Crowley, he could use 'Prison of Darkness' to completely imprison magi who had lower mental strength than himself, causing them to be unable to move.

He had specifically focused on this weak point of Han Shuo just advancing to become a grand magus necromancer, believing that Han Shuo's mental strength was definitely not as abundant as his own. This was why he had suddenly unleashed the 'Prison of Darkness'. When Han Shuo was restricted by 'Prison of Darkness' Crowley felt pleased with himself, thinking his heart that such a prominent figure was actually restricted by the 'Prison of Darkness'.

Emma and Amyes who were by the side both watched him attentively. Adding that Crowley had only wanted to make use of Han Shuo to become famous, he would definitely not plan to kill Han Shuo. Thus, when the deadly Spheres of Destruction were formed, Crowley did not immediately launch them at Han Shuo and had slowly sent them toward Han Shuo instead.

"Count Bryan, you've lost. Concede before the Sphere of Destruction hits you!" Crowley had a confident expression, smiling as he looked at the motionless Han Shuo.

Hearing this sentence, the surrounding spectators were in an uproar, evidently not foreseeing such a situation to happen. Those necromancy students that had joined due to Han Shuo's reputation all showed doubtful, hesitating expressions. Lisa upon seeing their expressions suddenly shouted angrily, "You brats, what kind of expression is that. How could Bryan lose to such an old fellow."

Lisa's fiend-like appearance actually intimidated the new students, causing them to involuntarily turn their heads and not dare to look at the fiery Lisa, so as to avoid Lisa unleashing her anger on them.

"Hehe, Crowley is indeed Crowley. Once he spotted the weakness in the brat's mental strength, he used the 'Prison of Darkness' to restrict him before he could summon any undead creatures. Who would have thought, it seems like Crowley is really going to win!" Dark major's teacher-in-charge Deo couldn't repress his happiness, his voice sounding happier than usual as he explained to the surrounding dark major's instructors and students.

Contrariwise, Dean Emma and Amyes both had calm expressions, as though not at all anxious for Han Shuo and instead gazed amusingly at Han Shuo, wanting to see how Han Shuo responded.

Having absorbed a serene luster gem, Han Shuo's mental strength wasn't weaker than Crowley's. However, Han Shuo did not use his mental strength to resist Crowley and instead incited his demonic yuan energy to strengthen his body once again. When Han Shuo suddenly struggled, a sharp and clear "Pa" sounded.

"That doesn't seem likely!" Han Shuo smiled as he replied. The 'Prison of Darkness' had been broken and he waved the white bone staff, shooting out rows of bone spears, smashing apart the five Spheres of Destruction that had yet to reach his body. He then summoned an old fey demon to charge toward Crowley, before summoning a few evil knights and an undead army to emerge.

"Crowley lost!" Emma smiled as she said, before looking at Amyes and asked, "However, how did Bryan break Crowley's 'Prison of Darkness'? I did not detect any fluctuation in his mental energy. Hehe, Amyes, did you notice how he did it?"

Amyes shrugged his shoulders as he replied gracefully, "Even the Dean did not see it clearly, how could I have figured it out. Hehe, however, Bryan has always been following Lord Candide. I believe based on your relationship with Lord Candide, you ought to be more familiar regarding Bryan's situation."

Amyes had previously focused his attention on Han Shuo, precisely to see how he reacted. He had never doubted Han Shuo's victory because as a character who could defeat Celt as well as Red Archbishop Kosse, Han Shuo was definitely not someone Crowley could defeat.

Merely, what surprised Amyes was that even with his complete attention, he did not decipher how Han Shuo had achieved victory. However, the only thing Amyes could confirm was that Han Shuo really did not utilize mental energy!

Right, it must definitely be that mysterious martial technique. This fellow could already unleash such strength just by using his martial technique. With his strength as a grand magus necromancer in addition to that, it seems that Lancelot Empire would really be his to control in the future. To have such a mysterious martial technique, who exactly is his master? Why have i not heard of him and have also not been able to find out? This is indeed too strange. Amyes thought silently as he gazed at Han Shuo.

"Did you see that, did all you fools see that?" Lisa was ecstatic, shouting at the youngsters, cheering after Han Shuo easily neutralized the Prison of Darkness.

When Han Shuo summoned his undead creatures, these youngsters had all cried out in surprise. Some of the youngsters were incomparably excited as they saw the sinister dark creatures, shouting to their companions, "Look at that, that's called an evil knight. It's as powerful as a human earth knight but its physical body is even harder."

The girls were somewhat instinctively fearful of these fierce undead creatures. However, with the explanation of these youngsters, they became extremely inquisitive. In particular, Lisa's shouting had allowed them to relax and start to timidly size up these undead creatures.

From the moment Han Shuo opened his mouth to speak, Crowley knew that he had lost. When he saw the enormous undead army appear, Crowley had thoroughly lost confidence in achieving victory.

In the Profound Continent, the bane of necromancers are light magi. Apart from them, in duels between magi of the same rank, once numerous undead creatures appear, it would essentially signify the necromancer's victory. For instance, just the old fey demon that had appeared this time was enough to cause a headache for Crowley. Adding on the numerous undead creatures, apart from rapidly purifying them with light magic, magi of other majors would appear to be out of options.

Sure enough, even before the old fey demon had reached Crowley, Crowley sighed dejectedly, putting down the green magic staff in his hand and shouted loudly, "Count Bryan, I admit defeat!"

Chapter 393: Being a role model

At this moment, the old fey demon and its thick sharp claws had already charged before Crowley. Hearing Crowley's declaration, Han Shuo gave orders with a thought. All the undead creatures froze in a flash, displaying Han Shuo's extraordinary manipulation ability to the extreme.

Although Crowley was conceited and vain, he still abided by the rules during the sparring. When he felt that he was able to beat Han Shuo comfortably, he still didn't increase the speed of the Spheres of Destruction to attack Han Shuo. This caused Han Shuo to have a good impression of him and thus when Han Shuo saw him admitting defeat, Han Shuo immediately made the undead creatures cease their attack.

When Crowley was flustered as he looked at the old fey demon in front of him, all the undead creatures from the surroundings suddenly disappeared following Han Shuo's long incantation. Only when the old fey demon that was the first to appear in front of him also suddenly disappeared did Crowley truly loosen his breath.

"Mister Crowley, your strength is extremely profound. I believe that most grand magi would not be your match. If Mister Crowley is interested, I can help to recommend you to Third Prince Lawrence, there's no harm in considering it." after sending all the undead creatures back to the netherworld, Han Shuo had gone over to the side of dark grand magus Crowley, commenting in a low voice.

Crowley's strength was truly remarkable. There weren't many magi who could become grand magus in the Lancelot Empire and all of them possessed lofty positions. Since Crowley had returned from travel across various countries, he would surely wish to have an illustrious status within the empire. Such a character was a target that every power would pursue. This was the same for Lawrence as well, hence Han Shuo invited him on behalf of Lawrence.

Crowley clearly understood a little of Lancelot Empire's current situation and couldn't help but show an uncomfortable expression. As His Majesty's illegitimate child, Lawrence was the least supported successor. If Crowley followed Lawrence, he simply wouldn't know if he would suffer a calamity after the successor has been chosen.

"Mister Crowley, I know what you are apprehensive about. However, some matters aren't determined by external rumors. Hehe, you give Lawrence some time which can also be considered giving yourself some time. You can decide again on which power you choose after a few days." When Han Shuo saw that Crowley didn't respond, he smiled and elaborated further.

"Alright, on account of Count Bryan's honor, I'll consider for a few more days." Crowley could tell that there were hidden meanings within Han Shuo's sentence and thus hesitated a while before replying.

Han Shuo nodded his head, smiling as he replied, "In the future, you will definitely be proud of your decision today!"

Han Shuo directly departed the practice field without explaining further, not showing any reaction to the crowd's shock and the necromancy students' cheers. He first nodded his head toward Amyes and Dean Emma from afar to send his regards, before heading toward Fanny's group of necromancy major student, smiling as he said, "Teacher Fanny, the recruitment can continue."

When Fanny saw Han Shuo heading over with his eyes on her from beginning to end, she felt shy yet delighted, hurriedly saying, "Let's go, everyone shouldn't stay here anymore. Let's continue with our unfinished matters."

When Han Shuo and Fanny left the area together, Amyes's gaze was continuously fixed on Han Shuo's movement. Only after Han Shuo disappeared from the practice field did he mumble softly to himself while seeming to be thinking about something, "That youngster is still a Casanova. That female teacher, why does it seem like I've seen her before somewhere..."

Dean Emma glanced at Amyes who seemed to be deep in thought and felt somewhat amazed. Who knew that Amyes' gaze was that sharp, appearing to recall something just by taking a glimpse at Fanny. This caused Emma to be shocked, thinking inwardly that as one of the three heavyweights, just like Candide, Amyes really can't be belittled.

"Alright, this matter has already ended, I'll also take my leave. Hehe, Amyes do take a good walk around, it seems like you haven't returned to your alma mater for a long time." Seeing Amyes having an expression of deep thought, Emma suddenly spoke, as though not wanting him to realize Fanny's identity that quickly.

As one of the three heavyweights of the Empire's Dark Mantle, Amyes knew the secret matters of each noble at the back of his hand, even Firenze at the southern border of the empire was no exception. Having browsed over numerous materials, Amyes had once seen information pertaining to Firenze's family. However, Fanny was much younger at that time and Amyes only saw a few pictures at that time. For him to be able to feel that someone was familiar just based on pictures he saw a few years ago, his memory is already extremely astonishing.

Amyes who was pondering deeply had his thoughts broken by Emma's words. He didn't continue contemplating and instead smiled gracefully and replied, "Dean, go ahead to handle your matters, I'll just walk around casually and will be leaving soon."

Emma smiled and nodded, a streak of white light flashed as she disappeared. After Emma left, Amyes couldn't help but glance at Crowley who had just walked out of the practice field. He suddenly said, "Mister Crowley, it's best if you carefully consider what Marquis Bryan had just said. Hehe, as a schoolmate, I hope that you would make the right choice."

"Mar... Marquis?" Crowley who was currently sampling the bitter taste of defeat raised his head and say that the one who spoke was Amyes. Thinking over what Amyes had just said, he couldn't help but become suspicious.

"Yes, Marquis Bryan! Just today, His Majesty has already officially conferred Bryan as Marquis. The various cities and towns surrounding Brettel City, including a few bandit areas that he occupied, would be Marquis Bryan's territory. Besides, I'm afraid that no one amongst equally ranked grand magi would be able to defeat him. For you to lose to him isn't something shameful, you shouldn't mind too much about it. Instead, you should properly think about what he said to you previously. I've said my piece, it's up to you if you listen!" Amyes smiled as he explained, before leaving with two swordmasters, not waiting for Crowley's response.

"Marquis, he's actually already a Marquis!" Crowley muttered to himself, before his eyes slowly brightened, saying to himself softly, "That Amyes is His Majesty's Hand of Darkness and surely knows of certain matters. It looks like in this trip back to school, it appears that apart from being defeated, I still gained something. I must definitely consider things properly."

While Crowley was still deliberating which power he should join, Han Shuo and Fanny's group had already reached the necromancy major's area. With Han Shuo overseeing the necromancy major, the recruitment of the necromancy major was incomparably smooth. In the end, there were actually more than fifty students joining the necromancy major. Amongst them, there were more than ten who had excellent mental strength, greatly surpassing the other majors.

"Haha, this is great. According to our academy's regulations, as long as the number of students in a major exceeds a hundred, the major can become a completely independent and self-sufficient major. Teacher Fanny, our current enrollment has a hundred and thirty-two people and can clearly apply to the dean to be independent of the dark major." after tidying up all the documents, Gene couldn't help but laugh heartily.

When she heard Gene's statement, Fanny was also delighted, smiling as she said, "That's right. Our necromancy major can now become completely independent and no longer be part of the dark major. That shouldn't be a problem!"

"Awesome, I have long since had enough of the faces of those fellows in the dark major. In the future, we no longer need to mix with them. Our necromancy major would just be the necromancy major, no longer a branch of another major." Lisa was extremely excited as she shouted loudly.

Lisa's voice was extremely loud, transmitting into the distance. The dark major wasn't far from the necromancy major and the dark major's teacher-in-charge Deo clearly heard Lisa's deliberate shout. However, Han Shuo was currently with the necromancy major, and Crowley had just been defeated by Han Shuo. Furthermore, Deo found out from Crowley that Han Shuo had already become a Marquis. This made Deo even more fearful of provoking Han Shuo. Although he was extremely unhappy, he didn't dare to respond.

Amidst the cheers from everyone in the necromancy major, the two instructors, Fanny and Gene led the newly accepted students to the necromancy major to handle the relevant procedures. When they reached the necromancy major's area, Gene took charge of matters, while Han Shuo followed Fanny, talking a little about the essence of necromancy magic in the necromancy major's practice field, as well as helping to clear some of the problematic doubts of the students.

Having studied necromancy magic to the rank of grand magus necromancer, Han Shuo's theoretical and practical knowledge both greatly surpassed Fanny. His comprehension of necromancy magic was much higher as well. Many questions that Gene and Fanny couldn't explain became easy when they reached Han Shuo.

Afterwards, even Gene who had finished handling matters had come over. After hesitating a while, Gene also asked Han Shuo about a few questions he usually came across. The necromancy major had a harmonious atmosphere, with Han Shuo's existence bringing hope to both the necromancy major's new and existing students.

It seemed that from this moment onward, the necromancy major who had always had a small and weak image no longer existed. With Han Shuo's astronomical rise within the Empire's ranks, the necromancy major also rose in tandem within Babylon Academy of Magic and Force, gradually having its own sense of proportion, breaking away from the longstanding dependent relationship with the dark major.

Only when the sky had gradually darkened did everyone disperse at Fanny and Gene's instructions. Toward the end when even Gene had left, Lisa hesitated a moment, staring at Han Shuo as she asked, "Bryan if I want to look for you, can I find you at your residence?"

"Of course. If you are free, you can come over to look for me anytime. Hehe, of course, I wouldn't be in my residence most of the time. If you are unable to find me, please don't blame me." Han Shuo smiled as he replied.

"Hee hee, as long as you agree. Alright, I'll leave first. Teacher Fanny, Bryan is extremely popular nowadays, you need to watch him closely!" Lisa smiled happily before winking toward Fanny, pulling a funny face before leaving.

After Lisa had left, Fanny's charming face was flushed. She gazed at Han Shuo affectionately and said, "Bryan, thank you. I didn't think you would come by today."

"I just happen to be free and no matter what I have to give you face. Right, if you really want to thank me, you shouldn't simply use words. I generally prefer people to express themselves through their actions." Han Shuo laughed deviously, beaming at Fanny as he replied.

Fanny resentfully rolled her eyes at Han Shuo, before hesitating a moment and whispered, "In that case, how do you want me to show my thanks?"

Out of a sudden, Han Shuo had already appeared in front of Fanny, lowering his head as he looked at Fanny whose blush had spread to her neck, extending a finger and pointed at his lips, chuckling as he said, "Take the initiative to kiss me once, that can be considered expressing your thanks!"

"You, you brat. You have already become a high-ranked noble, why have you still not changed your lewd heart!" Fanny blushed, unable to resist beating Han Shuo's chest with her fist as she pouted playfully.

"Come on, who asked Teacher to be so beautiful and alluring. Hehe, my soul has already been hooked by you. If I don't flirt with you, who should I flirt with!" Han Shuo frivolously moved his lips toward Fanny, continuously pestering Fanny.

Fanny's present mood was unprecedentedly good and besides, she also truly liked Han Shuo. After acting coy for a while, she was eventually still unable to resist Han Shuo, blushing as she superficially kissed Han Shuo's lips.

However, when Fanny shifted away, she was embraced by Han Shuo, who forcefully kissed her. Out of Han Shuo's expectations, Fanny responded ardently soon after, giving Han Shuo a carefree, uninhibited and breathtaking feeling. Overwhelmed by Fanny's response, Han Shuo's hands started moving dishonestly again, wandering around Fanny's beautiful body.

Only when Fanny was kissed till she was out of breath and her body was incomparably fervent did she moan softly as she pushed Han Shuo away to gasp for breath. Still blushing, she moved further away from Han Shuo, calming her rapidly heaving plump peaks. She then said tenderly, "Bryan, my father will reach Ossen City soon. If you don't meet him this time around, he said that he would lead his troops to attack Brettel City!"

Hearing this, Han Shuo suddenly sobered, as though a bucket of cold water had been poured on him. He knitted his brows and forced a smile as he asked Fanny, "You've told your father my identity?"

Nodding her head, Fanny hastily explained, "He has constantly asked and even investigated. I only told him when I knew that we would definitely be unable to conceal it any longer. Furthermore, you might not know my father's identity. You shouldn't be under the impression that he is joking. My father is different from other people, he is capable of doing anything."

"I know, your father is the true lord in the eyes of the people at the southern border, Howling Legion's Firenze?" Han Shuo took a deep breath before looking at Fanny and replied.

"How, how did you find out? When did you find out about this?" Fanny was shocked as she lightly cried out.

"A few days ago. When I had just returned from Brettel City, Dean Emma told me when I came to look for you.” Han Shuo honestly explained to Fanny, before replying reluctantly, “Alright, when your father arrives, I’ll go with you to meet him.”

Han Shuo knew that since Firenze was clear about his origin as well as his relationship with Fanny, Han Shuo could forget about avoiding him. Presently, Han Shuo was already hard pressed by Emily and Phoebe. He didn’t know what the two of them were talking about and even now, they still haven’t come out of the room. Adding in Fanny into the equation, once the three of them know about each other, he wasn’t sure what problems might arise.

Emily was Betteridge Family’s daughter-in-law, her older brother was one of the three heavyweights, Amyes. Behind Phoebe was sacred swordsman Karel, while Fanny’s father, Firenze was a well-known madman, known to be someone you wouldn’t want to provoke. Han Shuo had a headache thinking about what he had to endure once the matter was thoroughly exposed “Don’t worry, my father treats me the best. He wouldn’t do anything to you. Furthermore, you might just be the type my father likes. Hehe, there’s no need for you to worry.” Fanny thought that Han Shuo was worried about her father, thus she couldn’t help but laugh as she explained.

Han Shuo smiled bitterly as he nodded, before saying, “Alright, I understand. It’s already quite late, I have to leave.”

“Ok, I’ll send you off.” When Fanny knew that Han Shuo agreed to meet her father, her mood clearly improved. She cheerfully walked toward Han Shuo, blushing as she tiptoed and gently kissed Han Shuo’s cheek, before pulling the infatuated Han Shuo along as she said, “Let’s go, I’ll walk you out.”

Han Shuo who had just been kissed by Fanny suddenly made up his mind. No matter what happened in the future, as long as Fanny was willing to be with him, no matter Firenze, sacred swordmaster Karel or Amyes, no one should think of meddling in his affairs. If a peaceful solution couldn’t be found, he wouldn’t hesitate in using force to resolve matters.

Han Shuo steeled his heart and was no longer agonized, deciding to just deal with matters as they arose. He talked and laughed with Fanny as they walked out of the academy.

“Alright, I’ll take my leave.” Han Shuo turned around and smiled at Fanny, before heading back to his own residence.

After Han Shuo left, Fanny returned to the necromancy major alone. Along the way, Amyes just happened to be leaving and coincidentally saw Fanny. When Amyes saw Fanny once again, the sense of familiarity became stronger. He knitted his brows as he watched Fanny disappear into the distance. After a moment of serious thinking, Amyes suddenly started, muttering softly, “Could it truly be that lunatic’s daughter!”

“Lord, what’s wrong!” one of the swordmasters next to Amyes inquired.

“No, nothing’s wrong. Come, let’s quickly return to the Dark Mantle, I’ve some matters to investigate.” Amyes answered, suddenly hastening his steps.

Chapter 394: Han Shuo's promise

After leaving Babylon Academy of Magic and Force, Han Shuo had originally decided to return to his residence. However, he discovered through his mystical demon that Emily and Phoebe were walking out of her room.

Contrary to Han Shuo's expectations, Emily's eyes were red, as though she cried. Phoebe, who originally came to admonish Emily was not as overbearing as he had imagined and was instead repeatedly persuading Emily.

Holding each other's hands, their friendship had deepened since the time when they were in the Valley of Sunshine. Emily's eyes were red as she continuously took tissues to wipe the corners of her eyes, her miserable appearance causing others to feel pity for her. Phoebe gently supported Emily as she sighed, "Elder sister, I was rude. I didn't know your life had been like this."

"Let it pass Phoebe, it's already hard for you to be able to forgive me. I am indeed at fault regarding this matter. An unexpected combination of factors just so happened to occur. Ai..." Emily gently wiped the corner of her eyes as she confided in Phoebe.

"Alright, alright. We've almost reached your doorstep, you should head back in and not let others see you in this state. It's all that guy's fault, not yours. I'll settle scores with him and shouldn't have caused trouble for you." Phoebe persuaded Emily, stubbornly urging her to return to her room.

"Phoebe, thank you. You are a good woman, no wonder he likes you so much." After entering her room, Emily held Phoebe's hand and said sincerely.

"Haiz, I wouldn't have expected that Sister's life was worse than mine. I had always thought that as a daughter-in-law of Betteridge Family and also having a brother who wields great authority, your life was surely more blessed than mine. Let's forget it, I will be leaving first. It's already quite late, you should get some rest.” After she finished speaking, Phoebe released Emily’s hands from her grasp and departed from Emily’s residence.

Han Shuo had heard the whole conversation through his mystical demon, causing him to momentarily feel puzzled. He had originally believed that even if both of them did not cause a ruckus, they would be ridiculing and abusing each other. Who would have thought that the matter would turn out in this way?

Altering his direction, Han Shuo headed towards Betteridge Family. Emily who had just wept precisely needed his comfort at this moment. No matter the situation, Han Shuo did not wish for Emily to be hurt. Having made this decision in his heart, he hastened over.

Having been busy in Babylon Academy of Magic and Force for a long time, the sky had already darkened when Han Shuo left. There were currently very few people on the streets as the night quietly descended. Han Shuo was like a demon in the night, drifting silently across the empty streets toward the Betteridge Family.

Han Shuo did not bother about Phoebe who had left on a carriage, only dispatching a mystical demon to observe and ensure her safety. He had observed during the conversation between the two girls that Phoebe’s emotions seemed to be in check and there shouldn’t be any problems. Currently, only the red-eyed Emily required his comfort. Hence Han Shuo was naturally able to distinguish who he should prioritize.

Although the security of the Betteridge Family was tight, it meant nothing to Han Shuo who had the mystical demons. He easily avoided the guards and silently arrived in front of Emily’s room.

Emily’s magic barrier was still active around her room, hence Han Shuo did not force his way in, for fear of Emily’s erroneous retaliation. Instead, he gently knocked on the door.

“Who’s that!” Emily asked as she slowly headed toward the door.

“It’s me!” Han Shuo said softly.

Emily hastened her steps and arrived at the door within a breath. Upon opening the door, Emily saw that it was indeed Han Shuo and her red eyes suddenly brightened. Looking around to ensure that there was no one around, she then pulled him into the room.

“Why are you here? This is the Betteridge Family, what would happen if you were seen?” After pulling Han Shuo in, Emily hurriedly closed the door and set up a soundproof barrier before questioning him.

“I was worried about you.” Han Shuo suddenly embraced Emily tightly as he replied tenderly.

“I am alright. Phoebe had just left, did you see her?” Being held tightly by Han Shuo, Emily felt her heart calm down and asked softly.

“No, after she found out about this matter today, I was afraid that she would make a scene. Hence I did not head over as well. However, I was keeping an eye on the situation the whole time. Did Phoebe do anything to you? You, you cried?” Han Shuo’s heart ached as he stretched his hand over to stroke the corners of Emily’s eyes as he replied tenderly.

“Hehe, it’s enough for me as long as I know you are worried about me. Phoebe is a good girl, she did not come over to cause a scene. Instead, we bared our hearts to each other and talked. Phoebe even consoled me constantly. You have a good eye for women.” Feeling Han Shuo’s tenderness, she suddenly felt that all her previous sufferings were worth it.

Han Shuo did not speak anymore and instead embraced Emily and gave her a kiss. At this moment, what Emily needed was precisely Han Shuo’s comfort. She couldn’t help but respond enthusiastically, even taking the initiative to help Han Shuo undress. As they kissed intensely, she led Han Shuo to her inner chamber.

Han Shuo could feel Emily’s fiery passion. With thoughts of atonement, Han Shuo was more deliberate in pleasing her. His large hands started wandering around Emily’s body tenderly while his lips were continuously joined with hers. When Emily was out of breath, he whispered sweet nothings into her ears instead.

“Bryan. Oh... Bryan...” Emily moaned softly, appearing extremely aroused.

While Han Shuo's large hands were fondling Emily's round, satiny bum, Emily had already spontaneously assisted in stripping off her clothes completely. She suddenly fell backward onto her soft pink colored bed, displaying her naked body to Han Shuo. Her almond eyes gazed longingly at Han Shuo, gasping as she said softly, "Bryan, I don't need you to be gentle, be rougher with me!"

Han Shuo was startled for a moment, but soon after he growled as he pounced toward Emily. Discarding all notions of being gentle, he instead treated Emily violently.

The Emily today was wilder than ever before, intensely pandering to Han Shuo till the point where her delicate body could no longer withstand Han Shuo's tempestuous priapic assault. In the end, she fell asleep immediately, devoid of any trace of energy in her body.

As Han Shuo gazed at Emily as she slept in the wake of their pleasure, having been utterly wrung out, he suddenly felt a sense of guilt. Emily was actually his first woman. He had raped her at the beginning and he had only viewed her as a tool to satiate his lust for the longest time.

Only following Emily's silent efforts toward Han Shuo, did he gradually developed feelings for her. However, due to her unique identity, he was unable to give her a proper status. In principle, Phoebe should actually be the one that he should denounce. Emily, who had become his woman while bearing an unusual identity was the real victim.

Ever since Emily and Han Shuo got together, she had always considered his needs and gave her all in doing things for him. As he gazed at the woman fast asleep in front of him, Han Shuo started unwittingly reminiscing about the past. The more he recalled past events between the two of them, the guiltier he felt.

"Ai, I owe you too much, it has been hard on you." Han Shuo sighed, muttering to himself as he gently caressed Emily's face.

"Everything was by my own will, I have never blamed you. Besides, I know you treat me well, there's nothing to feel guilty about." The side of Emily's lips suddenly curled into a blissful smile, as she opened her eyes after finishing her sentence.

"Oh? Why have you woken up so quickly and not sleep a while more?" Seeing Emily awaken, Han Shuo couldn't help but knit his brows as he gently chided her.

"It's alright. After having sex with you, I could feel the mysterious energy you left within me. This energy has helped me improve my body, which is why I could recover so quickly. Bryan, everything was really of my own will. I know that your heart actually aches for me, but so long as you love me, I don't hope for anything else. After all, my identity has been fixed." Emily stretched out her hand to caress Han Shuo's firm face, smiling as she spoke softly.

"You will definitely get a formal status soon. I swear that I will give it to you, this is something you deserve!" Han Shuo looked at Emily who had done much for him and promised resolutely.

"Bryan, do you want to know what is Phoebe's stance regarding our relationship?" Emily had a joyous expression, kissing his chest before smiling as she asked.

"No matter what Phoebe's stance is, it will not affect our relationship. Even if she firmly disagrees, it wouldn't change a thing. Don't worry, I will talk to Phoebe about this." Han Shuo promised once again, determined to not let Emily suffer any grievances.

"Gege, your words really made me happy!" Emily chuckled and continued, "In any case, Phoebe agreed!"

Chapter 395: Entering the sect

“Agreed? What did she agree to?” Han Shuo stared blankly and asked suspiciously.

“Naturally it’s agreeing to our matter!” Emily explained cheerfully, “I told Phoebe everything regarding our relationship, emphasizing that due to my identity, we can’t reveal our relationship. I also shared how my husband had suddenly died on the battlefield soon after I entered Betteridge Family. After hearing me out, Phoebe even advised me for quite a while!”

Han Shuo was amazed, suddenly feeling that Phoebe was really fair and reasonable. On the other hand, Emily was also extremely intelligent to be able to be apart of Dark Mantle for so long. Making Phoebe approve of her identity with a few words was enough to prove that Emily’s ability.

Hearing Emily’s words, Han Shuo finally relaxed. He smiled as he gave her a light kiss before saying, “Emily, you are really capable.”

“Alright, alright. Enough of your honeyed words.” Emily happily pushed Han Shuo before saying, “It’s already quite late, you shouldn’t stay here. I still need to go over and send my regards to Father.”

Hearing Emily mention the Betteridge Family head Mister Hahn, Han Shuo thought for a moment before asking, “Which prince does Mister Hahn support?”

“I don’t know, perhaps it is because Father has retired from the military for too long. When the empire was in turmoil, Father was not part of the empire’s government and neither has he mentioned the matters between the princes to me.” Hearing Han Shuo bring up official matters, Emily knitted her brows as she answered. Being silent for a moment, Han Shuo then replied, “If Mister Hahn mentions this matter, or has plans to support a certain prince, you should urge him to not act impulsively this few days, so as to not lead the Betteridge Family down the wrong path.”

Emily was shocked, asking astoundedly, “Why would you say this?”

“Everyone doesn’t think highly of Lawrence. However, if nothing unexpected happens, the next king would be Lawrence. These few days, you should quietly observe from the side. I reckon that His Majesty would make major decisions very soon.” After discussing terms with King Uhtred, he understood that Lawrence’s situation would change drastically. Hence, he reminded Emily.

“Are you sure your information is accurate?” Emily clearly understood the gravity of this information, having a serious expression as she asked Han Shuo.

Han Shuo nodded his head affirmatively and said, “I went to the palace today and heard this from the king himself. It’s definitely true.”

“In that case, I must share this news with my father and brother immediately. In addition, there are a few other friends who are still observing the situation, I must remind them before it’s too late.” Upon hearing Han Shuo’s words, Emily already started wearing her clothes, carrying a worried expression.

As this matter concerned all nobles of Lancelot Empire, every noble must take a side in this matter. If they chose the wrong side, their family might suffer a decline. Therefore, they must act with caution.

Han Shuo could understand Emily’s anxiety. He stood up and gently helped her put on her silk dress, helped her straighten her disheveled hair and even applied rouge amidst her blissful smile before saying, “Alright, be careful on your way.”

Emily obediently waited for Han Shuo to finish helping her before happily giving him a kiss. She said with a smile, “I know, you shouldn’t stay here for too long. We are in the Betteridge Family residence.”

“I will leave now.” Han Shuo smiled. After sorting his clothes and watching Emily leave to find Hahns, he left silently as well.

Upon entering his residence, Han Shuo felt the heavy killing intent from Bollands. With a glance, he saw Bollands hiding in the shadows.

“Lord Marquis!” Han Shuo hadn’t even entered his room when Bollands suddenly shouted in a low voice and walked out from the shadows.

There were no strong guards within Han Shuo's residence. Apart from Han Shuo, there was no one else within the residence that he would be worried about. Therefore he did not lay down any formations. After all, an expert like Bolland would not be seen by normal people.

Bolland was dressed in long gray robes, had a malevolent face and was shrouded with dense killing intent. Any normal person who saw him would definitely be filled with fear. "Let's talk inside!" Han Shuo glanced at Bolland, smiling before entering his room with Bolland following behind.

Inside the room, Han Shuo surveyed the area through his mystical demons. He saw that there were no suspicious individuals in the surroundings. Phoebe had also returned to the Merchant Guild after being unable to meet Han Shuo.

Sitting down, Han Shuo smiled at Bolland and asked, "So what is your decision?"

Bolland had an excited expression as he nodded his head and answered, "I would like to learn your martial technique. Lord Karel has already agreed, but he wants to meet you in person."

Han Shuo wasn't shocked. In this world, only Han Shuo could give Bolland what he needed, with Bolland's degree of obsession with this martial technique, he would definitely agree. What Han Shuo did not understand was why Karel Ascot would want to see him.

Staring blankly for a moment, Han Shuo frowned as he asked, "Why does Mister Karel want to see me?"

Bolland answered while shaking his head, "I'm not sure."

"I see." Han Shuo muttered to himself before asking, "When does he want to see me? Where should I look for him?"

"If you have the time, my Lord wants me to bring you to see him." Bolland respectfully answered.

"In that case, how about I go meet him immediately. Oh, it is late already. Would Lord Karel already be resting?" Han Shuo originally wanted to meet him immediately, but thinking further, he corrected himself.

“It’s alright, my lord usually rests very late. If you are free, we can leave now.” Bollands answered.

“Alright then, let’s leave now.” Han Shuo coolly said before heading with Bollands in the direction of the northern Rose Garden.

Under the serene glow of moonlight, Han Shuo and Bollands made their way toward the north. The speed of Bollands who was an experienced assassin was as fast as lightning. In addition, he was used to moving through dark places, therefore normal people could not detect his presence.

Han Shuo, who had reached the separate demon realm, had a few mystical demons to observe his surroundings. Han Shuo drifted around like a specter, not afraid of being seen even on the bright streets. As his speed was also extremely fast, Han Shuo’s shadow was like a stream of smoke brushing past.

Compared to Bolland’s carefulness, Han Shuo appeared calm. With his mystical demons, Han Shuo could easily avoid areas where there were people and still follow Bollands closely.

Upon reaching the region of the Northern Rose Garden, both of them decreased their speeds. In the dead of night, it was the perfect time to carry out indecent matters. On the streets towards Northern Rose Garden, many beautiful carriages could be seen quietly traveling along, with a few butlers or servants gracefully leading them from the front. All of them were headed for the Northern Rose Garden.

As Lancelot Empire’s famous red light district, business at the Northern Rose Garden was fantastic. With the saint swordsman Karel overseeing the safety and Lawrence excelling at running a business, the Northern Rose Garden had simply become a lair for ecstasy.

It was because of the sudden increase in traffic toward the Northern Rose Garden that Han Shuo and Bollands had to slow down. Since Bollands was familiar with the area, he led Han Shuo toward the back door.

The back door of the Rose Garden was more remote. Usually, only staff used this entrance, unless it was to receive those with sensitive identities. The nobles who were seeking pleasure would not pass by this place.

“Bollands, since you have already decided to join my sect, there are some matters I need to make clear.” Han Shuo said to Bollands as they headed toward the rear entrance.

“Please give your instructions!” Bollands respectfully replied.

“Bollands, you need not be too polite. In the future, you can just call me Senior Brother instead of Marquis. Our sect is called Heavenly Demon Sect and only a few people within the Profound Continent know of us. Our master was formerly an otherworldly expert. He had come to the Profound Continent by chance and imparted this martial technique to me before leaving...” Han Shuo suppressed his voice as he spun some lies.

Bollands listened earnestly. After Han Shuo finished, Bollands was shocked and excitedly said, “To think that Master was so powerful, he was actually an otherworldly expert. No wonder he possessed such mysterious techniques which are unheard of in the whole Profound Continent. Not being able to meet such a figure is indeed regrettable!”

“Heh heh, Master’s strength is unfathomable. I will impart Heavenly Demon Sect’s marital technique to you on behalf of Master. With your aptitude, it will definitely be of much use. Don’t worry, the use and concealment of killing intent is the fundamentals of the Heavenly Demon manual. You will not only be able to quickly grasp it, you will also obtain stronger killing techniques.” Han Shuo solemnly said.

The technique Han Shuo would impart to Bollands was called God Slaying Devil Path, it is not an orthodox demonic cultivator’s technique. Even if Bollands cultivated it to the peak, he would not be able to reach Han Shuo’s level. However, if Bollands was able to proficiently grasp this technique, his strength would definitely soar.

However, this kind of progress had the slight intention of spoiling things through excessive enthusiasm. It completely took advantage of Bollands’ dense killing intent to rapidly increase his strength. However, it wasn't a step by step technique like the one Han Shuo was practicing and didn't have the unlimited possibility for improvement. Han Shuo only needed a junior brother that was able to help him root out dissidents and not someone who could contend against him in terms of demonic arts. Therefore, no matter how much Bolland's improved, he wouldn't be able to threaten Han Shuo's position.

"Senior Brother, thank you." When they were about to enter Northern Rose Garden, Bolland's bowed respectfully to Han Shuo.

Han Shuo wasn't in a hurry to enter Rose Garden. He smiled and replied after receiving Bolland's bow, "As you have yet officially entered the sect, I still can't immediately impart our sect's technique to you. Once I met Mister Karel, I will help you handle the entrance rites. After you have officially joined Heavenly Demon Sect, I will help you reform your body before teaching you our sect's techniques."

"I will listen to senior brother." Although Bolland's was older, he was still respectful in front of Han Shuo and did not dare to have any slightest neglect.

Han Shuo smiled as he nodded his head, "Alright, bring me into the Rose Garden."

Bolland's led Han Shuo down the path Lawrence had previously used that led to the secret chamber. After opening the passageway, Bolland's led Han Shuo through many complicated alleys before they finally reached the location of saint swordsman Karel.

Saint swordsman Karel was sitting on a boulder in the huge white space. Although his hair was white, he was glistening with vigor as his kindly eyes leisurely looked toward the front. Seeing Han Shuo enter, Karel smiled, "Kid, you are truly not simple!"

Bolland's left after leading Han Shuo to the location, leaving Karel and Han Shuo alone. After hearing Karel's praise, Han Shuo couldn't help but smile reservedly, "You are overly praising me."

"For you to have gifted divine weapon Starry Sky to Phoebe, hehe, your intentions are very good.” Karel smiled before continuing, “I won’t get involved in the matter of you instructing Bollands, you need not be worried. I have never regarded Bollands as a servant and he always had his freedom. For him to be so excited to learn this martial technique from you, you must definitely possess something that attracts him. I will respect his decision.”

“In that case, why have you summoned me?” Han Shuo had a relaxed expression as he smiled and asked.

“I only wish to see the person whom old astrologer Madam Grace had prophesied to be able to bring prosperity to the Lancelot Empire. And also to find out what do you plan to do for the Lancelot Empire.” Karel stared brightly at Han Shuo, smiling as he replied.

Han Shuo suddenly realized why Uhtred had spoken in such a strange manner!

Chapter 396: Sacred swordmaster's proposal

It turns out that everything was because of old astrologer Grace's divination. It seems like he would really be the savior of the Lancelot Empire in the future? Previously in the Dark Mantle headquarters, Grace had a peculiar expression as she looked at him. Could she have seen something then?

Hearing Karel's sentence, Han Shuo suddenly had some realization. He knitted his brows to ponder for a moment, before smiling bitterly as he looked toward Karel and said, "To be frank with you, I have only just heard of this news. I have not thought about what I can do for the Lancelot Empire and have only considered what I should do for myself."

When Karel heard Han Shuo's truthful answer, he laughed involuntarily and said, "Perhaps, in the course of you helping yourself, you would have also unknowingly helped Lancelot Empire alter its power and accomplishing an expansion of its territory. For example, assisting Lawrence in becoming king or you ambitiously attacking the seven duchies. Although these can be considered your own actions, their final outcome would still alter the structure of the Lancelot Empire."

Han Shuo couldn't help but consider for a moment upon hearing what Karel said. He suddenly realized that what Karel said indeed made sense. He had been considered a member of the Lancelot Empire ever since he arrived in this world. He personally felt that life in this country was pretty good and he also had many friends and lovers within the country. In this case, when Han Shuo realizes his own ambitions, he is also considered to be benefiting the Lancelot Empire at the same time.

"Haha, my lord is truly a wise person. What you said really makes a lot of sense." Han Shuo looked at Karel, not hiding his flattery at all.

When Karel heard Han Shuo flattering himself so brazenly, his gaze became a little odd. He smiled faintly as he said to Han Shuo, "Phoebe is my dearest disciple and your relationship with Phoebe can be considered to be official. Furthermore, Lawrence is also my disciple. You aren't really an outsider. There isn't a big difference in Bolland's following you or me. Also, I'll mention some things openly to you."

"If senior has any advice, do not hesitate to share them. I will definitely keep your words in mind." Han Shuo was initially still worried that Karel would not allow Bolland's to study under him. Now that he heard Karel putting it this way, he also felt that it was reasonable. Based on Karel's relationship with Phoebe and Lawrence, they were truly not strangers to each other. For Bolland's to follow Han Shuo, they were still considered to be on the same faction.

However, Han Shuo faintly realized inwardly that Bolland's finding him today to give his reply was most likely because Karel had received some information from old astrologer Grace. He understood that Lawrence and Han Shuo were the future hope of Lancelot Empire and thus was willing to allow Bolland's to train under Han Shuo.

Seeing that Han Shuo was sincere, Karel smiled as he nodded and said, "You might have already learned a little from Lawrence regarding Bolland's' origins. At that time when Bolland's was an assassin, his hands were truly considered to be reeking in blood. Bolland's' assassin habits have not diminished even after so many years. I hope that you are able to lead him onto the path of righteousness and not become an irrational tool for slaughter. Can you promise me this?" It seems that Karel was pretty good to Bolland's. Not only did he respect Bolland's decision and allow Bolland's to leave his side, he was also worried about Bolland's' future. However, Han Shuo's purpose in teaching Bolland's the God Slaying Devil Path was to groom Bolland's into a tool to eliminate dissidents. Merely, with a proper demonic cultivation, Bolland's wouldn't lose his rationality to become a madman that only knows of slaughter.

Han Shuo hesitated for a moment, frowning as he pondered over and over before honestly replying Karel, "Bolland's' bloodthirsty nature wouldn't be altered even after training with me. However, my martial technique would be able to properly guide him and allow him to not lose his rationality. When he is able to break through his own bindings, he would no longer need to rely on slaughter to increase his strength.

Therefore, I can only guarantee that he would always be clear-headed and not become a killing machine that you mentioned. However, for him to progress in the early stages of the martial technique, it would definitely require his potential to be ignited through killing. Only by releasing the killing intent he had forcefully suppressed all these years would he improve by leaps and bounds.”

Karel was stunned when he heard Han Shuo’s explanation. He stared at Han Shuo for a long time before saying, “What exactly is this unusual training method that you want to impart to him? Why does it sound like one of those evil techniques of the Calamity Church? Could you really be as the rumors said, being a member of the Calamity Church?”

Shaking his head, Han Shuo smiled bitterly as he explained, “It’s completely different. My martial technique is a practice method that is similar to fusing fighting aura and magic. Ah, I’m also unsure of how I should explain it. In any case, my master said that such a martial technique doesn’t originate from the Profound Continent.”

Karel was shocked when he heard this, gazing deeply at Han Shuo for a long time before exclaiming with an excited expression, “A martial technique not belonging to the Profound Continent?! What kind of extraordinary person is your master?”

“That is indeed what he told me. My master possesses enough formidable strength that he could escape the bindings of planes without the use of magical arrays. He also has magical powers able to move mountains and drain seas...” Han Shuo based his description on his understanding of Chu Cang Lan’s abilities.

Ever since Han Shuo revealed his demonic magic, Lancelot Empire’s King Uhtred had known that Han Shuo possessed a mysterious martial technique. sacred swordmaster Karel had naturally known about this long ago. However, the origin of this martial technique was a perpetual curious question to them. Han Shuo naturally required a set of lies to fill this gap and hence repeated to Karel what he had said to Bollands.

When Han Shuo finished his description, Karel was looking at Han Shuo appalled and said, "Your master is perhaps a true divine ranked character. I really don't know how you were that fortunate to run into such a character. No wonder Grace prophesied that whoever you support would be able to become Lancelot Empire's newly-appointed king. It seems like Grace's astrologer is indeed mystical."

Whoever I support would be able to become Lancelot Empire's king? Han Shuo was similarly shocked and became emotional once again. It's no wonder Uhtred even had a trace of pleading in his tone when he spoke with Han Shuo. The old astrologer seemed to have really helped him.

However, the old astrologer was able to predict the future, was she also able to see the past? Was she able to see his true origins and find out that the original Bryan had already died long ago?

"Bryan, is-is your master currently still in the Profound Continent? Can I visit him?" While Han Shuo was letting his imagination run wild, the emotions of sacred swordmaster Karel were suddenly in chaos, his eyes glistening as he looked at Han Shuo and asked.

Han Shuo abruptly returned from his wild thoughts, smiling bitterly as he shook his head. Repeating what he said to Bolland to fob Karel off, "After Master imparted this martial technique to me, he departed from the Profound Continent. I'm also clueless regarding his whereabouts. I'm sorry."

"So that is the case!" Karel was clearly somewhat disappointed as he muttered, "It's truly a pity. I've already remained in this rank for so long, if I have the opportunity to meet such a formidable person and maybe ask for guidance regarding some problems, perhaps I would be able to break through my bindings..."

For people who have reached the level of sacred swordmaster Karel, their only concern was to constantly improve their strength. At his age, he was already numb toward wealth, rank, fame, and power. Even the strength of a country was unable to contain people like him and they only longed for and pursued the rumored half-divine realm mentioned by their ancestors.

“Previously when I visited the underground world, I met a grade five magical creature. Maybe you have already found out some information about him through the Dark Mantle. The Ancient Lizard King Dagassi had left after reaching the half-divine realm. I suspect that maybe he has also left the Profound Continent and headed for a more expansive plane.” Han Shuo was silent for a while before suddenly speaking again.

Karel who was contemplating something was roused by Han Shuo’s statement. Soon after, Karel sighed and said, “Legends have said that those who reach the half-divine realm would be actively approached by the guardian of the plane of the Profound Continent and the guardian could assist these characters to break away from the Profound Continent’s constraints.

This information was told to us by Stranglethorn Vale’s Stratholme when we previously went to the Seven Grand Duchies. Stratholme was only a step away from the half-divine realm and he vaguely knew some of the Profound Continent’s deeper secrets. It appears that the half-divine magical creature should have obtained the qualifications to leave.”

Old demon Stratholme! Han Shuo creased his brows when he heard of this person once again, this time from Karel. Han Shuo completely understood Stratholme’s true strength, a step away from the half-divine realm. It would seem that he was more formidable than Karel.

Only experts that reached the strength of half-divine realm would possess the qualifications to be summoned by the plane’s guardian. It seemed like the Profound Continent was indeed full of unknown mysteries. Han Shuo was secretly alarmed as he replied, “I reckon that Dagassi has indeed left. Ah, such a distant dream, I truly don’t know when would I have such qualifications.”

“You still have a long time to explore. Furthermore, you have a good master and ought to be quicker than us. Ai, for people like us who are already too old, this bottleneck has been restricting us all along. We can only wait bitterly if we are unable to make a breakthrough.” Karel sighed, his snow-white hair and loose skin demonstrating the ruthlessness of time. An expert like him could really live much longer than ordinary people but the distance of this final step was incomparably far.

As he looked at Karel, this was the first time Han Shuo realized that even those supreme characters in the Lancelot Empire had their own troubles. Perhaps this was also his only worry! Han Shuo didn't know how to respond and only maintained taciturn in front of Karel, waiting for Karel to awaken from his moodiness.

After a while, Karel vaguely had a trace of comprehension. He then looked at Han Shuo engrossingly, smiling as he said, "I've heard Bollands describe many of your miracles but I've still never truly seen your martial technique. Maybe your martial technique would be able to give me some inspiration. If you don't mind, we can spar a little."

Han Shuo was somewhat startled that with Karel's status, he would suggest to spar with himself. However, Han Shuo understood that what Karel fancied was the technique he practiced and not Han Shuo's personal strength.

Han Shuo stared blankly for a moment before smiling and replied modestly, "A spar is out of the question. For you to be willing to advise me is already more than I could wish for. Do forgive me in advance for being presumptuous."

Karel seemed to appreciate Han Shuo's straightforwardness, smiling as he nodded his head and said, "Don't worry, just use your martial technique to attack me. I'm extremely curious about your martial technique. Let's see what's the difference with the fighting aura I cultivated!"

Han Shuo was similarly excited when he heard Karel's sentence as he had not figured out his true strength ever since he reached the separate demon realm. Han Shuo felt sufficiently confident when facing great swordsman ranked opponents but he had yet to come across sacred swordmaster ranked experts.

Although the dark elves' matriarch Adele that he previously met in the underground world was extremely strong, Han Shuo realized as he stood before Karel that Adele was still weaker than Karel. Furthermore, Han Shuo didn't truly fight with Adele previously, purely using evil ways to harvest yin to replenish yang and sucked Adele dry and not genuinely fought with Adele.

Han Shuo could perhaps be able to truly understand the current strength of his separate demon realm through fighting with sacred swordmaster Karel. This would also help him make an accurate judgment the next time he met a strong opponent. Therefore, Han Shuo was somewhat excited when he heard Karel's proposal for them to spar.

"The martial technique i practice is called demonic magic, which resembles fighting aura but has different characteristics to fighting aura. Perhaps you would be able to sense it in a while." Han Shuo retreated a few steps, the Demonslayer Edge suddenly appearing in his hand.

"For Bolland to think so highly of you, it proves that your martial technique definitely has its peculiarities. Hehe, Bryan, you don't need to hold back. Don't hesitate to attack me." Karel stood up from the boulder, taking out a translucent longsword from his spatial ring. The longsword was three fingers wide, a hundred and thirty centimeters in length and had a cross engraved on the sword hilt.

Chapter 397: Cross Slash

Han Shuo was fully aware that when one trained their fighting aura to Karel's level, its power would be extremely frightening. Besides, Han Shuo had intended all along to test his strength against Karel, hence he did not hold back.

Demonic yuan energy rushed into the Demonslayer Edge, activating the power of the violent spirits within, causing it to suddenly burst out with killing intent. With the Demonslayer edge as the core, the killing intent rippled out into the surroundings.

The waves of killing intent appeared material, the friction with the atmosphere producing a peculiar 'chichi' sound as it rippled in the sky. A sinister and ruthless aura could no longer be contained as it flowed out from Han Shuo's body.

Sacred swordmaster Karel was visibly moved, his snow-white brows tightening as his abstruse eyes brightened. As Karel was able to reach the level of sacred swordmaster, it naturally showed that he had outstanding talent. Over many years of fighting, he had seen countless experts as he watched over Lancelot Empire with his rich fighting experience.

Karel could clearly sense the Demonslayer Edge in Han Shuo's hand bursting with frightening killing intent. The killing intent that had spread all around had a hint of viciousness, as though containing a violent explosive force, causing Karel to truly be startled.

Within the Profound Continent, most experts gradually realised the importance of imposing themselves before battle. However, there has never been anyone who could transform this vigor into strength during battle. This was similar to Bolland's use of killing intent to destroy a person's willpower. However, Han Shuo's killing intent was more material. Karel understood that this sort of aura truly existed, unlike Bolland's killing intent which could only intimidate a person's spirit.

As sacred swordmaster Karel was staring at Han Shuo, Han Shuo swung the Demonslayer Edge filled with demonic yuan energy toward Karel, unleashing the 'Bloody Radiance of Ten Thousand Cuts'. The Demonslayer Edge suddenly revolved rapidly, the bloody radiance resembling the petals of a blooming flower.

With every rotation, a quill-like blood light was formed. Midway through the 'Bloody radiance of Ten Thousand Cuts', the blood colored light have already formed a hedgehog-like ball of quills, containing dense killing intent and giving off a sharp whistle as it flew at high-speed toward saint swordmaster Karel.

"Mystical martial technique!" Karel suddenly praised loudly, suddenly raising the longsword in his hand, gathering a golden colored fighting aura and sending a sword thrust toward the approaching blood colored ball of quills.

Golden fighting aura was something only sacred swordmasters and sacred knights were able to use. This was the appearance of fighting aura at peak concentration. Han Shuo could clearly sense the destructive power it contained. Although the golden fighting aura was different in nature from demonic yuan energy, it similarly contained formidable explosive strength.

As Karel raised his longsword, it emitted lustrous golden light. As his raised arm drew circular arcs, the tip of the longsword suddenly shot out waves of crossed-shaped swordlight. The crossed-shaped swordlight were arranged from small to big as they struck Han Shuo's blood colored ball of quills in succession.

With the moniker of 'Cross saint swordmaster', Karel was indeed befitting of his reputation. The various sword lights all formed crosses as they shot toward Han Shuo's ball of quills, rapidly grinding away at the demonic yuan energy contained within the Demonslayer Edge.

The tyrannical 'Bloody Radiance of Ten Thousand Cuts' was neutralized by the cross-shaped sword lights even before reaching Karel. From start to finish, Karel had a relaxed expression, clearly yet to use the limits of his strength.

When the blooming Ten Thousand Cuts were all obliterated and revealing the Demonslayer Edge's original appearance, Han Shuo acted. The Demonslayer Edge which had been shooting towards Karel in a straight line suddenly froze in midair, before suddenly following a mysterious curved trajectory as it slashed toward Karel.

"Oh? Interesting!" Karel exclaimed softly, raising his head to watch the Demonslayer Edge's downward chop as he struck out with his sword to brush away the approaching Demonslayer Edge.

Han Shuo who was originally watching Karel with both eyes suddenly shut his eyes, fully concentrating on controlling the Demonslayer Edge, using the 'Law of Activating Magic' to unceasingly slash at Karel from all directions.

At the beginning, the Demonslayer Edge wasn't very fast. However, Han Shuo slowly increased its speed, causing the Demonslayer Edge to gradually become a lightning-like phantom. He also incited the violent spirits within the Demonslayer Edge, causing an endless resentful aura to spread out.

At first, saint swordmaster Karel was still able to effortlessly deal with Han Shuo's attacks. However, his expression became serious soon after. Bright golden light enveloped Karel's body, as crossed-shaped sword lights shot out. On one hand, he had to use his longsword to resist the Demonslayer Edge's high speed slashes while on the other, he has to concentrate his mental strength to withstand the demonic aura emitting from the Demonslayer Edge.

It must be said that sacred swordmaster Karel was indeed exceptional. As Karel who was able to stand proudly at the peak of Lancelot Empire faced Han Shuo's all out tempest, he had never given off the slightest indication of defeat, appearing as calm as before.

When Han Shuo had exhausted half of his demonic yuan energy, he saw that Karel still hadn't shown any weariness. Han Shuo then poured mystical glacial spellfire into the Demonslayer Edge, causing blossoms of red and purple spell fire to shoot out with every slash of the Demonslayer Edge. Extremely cold and extremely hot energy constantly shot out, causing much inconvenience to Karel.

Afterwards, twelve mystical demons became corporeal, becoming malevolent ghosts as they attempted to enter Karel's body. Karel gave a gasp of surprise before suddenly exclaiming, "Truly mysterious. This martial technique is indeed different from any training method in the Profound Continent."

Facing numerous attacks, Karel still had the opportunity to shout. Shortly after, the longsword in his hand suddenly exploded in resplendent golden light as a giant cross-shaped sword light emerged abruptly, carrying a ravaging force as it spread in all directions, unexpectedly causing a sudden explosion.

The boulder he was on was the first to be unable to bear the impact as it broke into pieces with a bang. As rubble flew about, the ground actually started to cave in, as though a enormous force had bombarded the ground, crushing everything in the surroundings.

Han Shuo was shocked, rapidly recalling the twelve mystical demons and soared into the sky and landed next to Karel in a flash. The Demonslayer Edge that had been attacking constantly flew back into Han Shuo's hand, the remaining demonic yuan energy frantically pouring into the Demonslayer Edge while the killing intent and the wrathful energy from the violent spirits within the Demonslayer Edge converged to form a seven meter long blood colored edge which violently slashed in tandem with the Demonslayer Edge toward Karel's astonishing giant cross-shaped sword light.

A fierce explosion spread out from the point of contact, causing the barrier that enveloped the area to collapse. The vast space suddenly regained its original appearance, revealing the original form of the wide stone room. When the barrier was destroyed, a fierce ripple simultaneously spread out, causing the ground to tremor in its wake.

An astonishing explosive force suddenly rushed through the Demonslayer Edge, rushing through the sword hilt into Han Shuo's body. Han Shuo's descending body couldn't resist flying backward at high speed before finally crashing into the rock ceiling and forming a three meter deep indent.

“What’s going on, what’s going on?”

“Is there an earthquake?”

“Ah, the bed is still moving!”

Within the Rose Garden above the two of them, nobles who were in the process of seeking pleasure with beauties suddenly felt the tremors under their feet. They were all shocked and started talking about it one after another.

A few of the guards watching over the Rose Garden were surprised as well, not knowing what had happened as they aimlessly attempted to find the cause of the earthquake.

Just at this moment, the fierce looking Bollands suddenly appeared among the guards of the Rose Garden, chiding coldly, “What are you panicking for, it’s just a small earthquake. We are at the heart of Ossen City. Apart from some alteration to nature, what else can happen.”

Bollands was a true fiend in the eyes of these guards. When Bollands spoke, all the guards quietened down, following Bollands instructions to console the fearful nobles. The majority of the nobles calmed down upon hearing the guards’ explanation.

However, there were still a few cowardly nobles who immediately abandoned the beauties in their bed and hurriedly fled the Rose Garden, afraid that there would be a few more tremors from below the Rose Garden, causing them to leave their precious lives in this place.

Although Bollands calmed the frenetic mood of the guards, he was still restless, unable to understand what had happened. He had just brought Han Shuo underground and Bollands didn’t wish that anything happened to either his old master Karel or his newly recognised senior brother.

Yet, the fierce tremors was clearly caused by the exchange between the two of them. Bollands was aware of saint swordmaster Karel’s terrifying strength and also knew that Han Shuo was a reckless, unfearing character.

He feared that the two of them had not reach a conclusion in their fight and after finally waiting for the people aboveground to settle down, Bollands hurriedly headed for the secret location.

The flustered Bollands had just entered the underground when he heard Karel's bright laughter even before reaching Karel's location. Once he heard Karel's laughter, he suddenly relaxed yet was somewhat apprehensive.

A space archmage had deployed a complicated barrier around Karel's wide practice chamber. Not only was it able to isolate sound and sight, once someone entered the barrier, they would have the feeling of entering a separate world. Currently, Bollands was able to hear Karel's laughter even before nearing that area, which indicated a shocking fact.

The barrier has been destroyed!

Once Bollands verified this matter, he hastily entered the vast stone room. The scene that entered his eyes was beyond his expectations. The boulder which saint swordmaster Karel usually sat on had become a small stone, while Karel stood on an area which seemed to be the epicenter of the earthquake, smiling as he looked at an indent in the ceiling.

Within the indent, Han Shuo shook his shoulders and twisted his body within the deep indentation. The solid rock shattered and fell as Han Shuo similarly smiled as he leaped to the ground.

"Bollands, it seems like your choice is indeed decent. This brat's martial technique is atrocious. In my many years of traveling the continent, I've never seen nor heard of such a martial technique. He had only trained for a few years and already possess such frightening strength. As time passes, I really don't know how strong he would get. No wonder old astrologer Grace made such a prediction." saint swordmaster Karel smiled as he look at the entering Bollands, showing his approval.

Bollands was very respectful as he faced Karel and said, "I've seen senior brother's martial technique before and it's extremely mysterious. He had long since proficiently use the thing that I have always bitterly studied yet have been unable to comprehend to a level that far exceeds my imagination.

Popping sounds emitted from Han Shuo who had just landed on the ground. As Han Shuo moved his muscles and bones, traces of blood and black colored radiance circulated through his skin like electricity. Han Shuo smiled as he creaked his neck and said, "Mister Karel's truly deserving of his reputation. It seems that you still haven't utilized your full strength. Hehe, I've truly benefited from this battle."

With just a sword and golden fighting aura, Karel stood tall while under Han Shuo's torrential attacks. At the end, his strike of explosive force possessed unparalleled ferocity, completely clashing with his elderly appearance of one past his prime. This caused Han Shuo to truly be amazed.

Wine truly gets better with age. Han Shuo understood that just with his demonic magic at separate demon realm, he shouldn't be able to defeat Karel. However, if he used necromancy magic as well as summoned the little skeleton and the four zombies, he had confidence in beating Karel. From his previous visit to the other dimension, Han Shuo knew that the little skeleton's strength was far from ordinary.

"I didn't utilize my full strength, but you didn't use necromancy magic either right? Hehe The undead creatures summoned by a grand magus necromancer would indeed be troublesome to deal with. Brat, you are pretty good, Phoebe really has good taste." Karel smiled as he said, pausing for a moment before continuing, "Our spar has let me realize that your martial technique is extremely peculiar. It's similar to the fusion of fighting aura and magic and looks like it is indeed suitable for Bolland's to train in."

Fighting aura only possessed pure destructive energy. However, Han Shuo's demonic yuan energy was able to forge the body, treat certain illnesses and even influence an opponent's soul, truly possessing all kinds of remarkable abilities.

Fighting aura was slowly formed by purely training the body. Demonic yuan energy could form a consciousness and a demon infant. Killing intent as well as the unique energy of Heaven and earth or even some herbs and strange items were able to enhance demonic yuan energy. From certain angles, demonic yuan energy was indeed way more mysterious.

“Bollands, wait outside with Bryan. I need to properly meditate. I’ve obtained great gains from this battle!” Karel smiled and instructed Bollands while Han Shuo was contemplating.

Chapter 398: A structure from the other dimension?

As they walked out the Northern Rose Garden, Bollands followed Han Shuo closely the entire time.

As Han Shuo stared flabbergasted at Bollands, Bollands said respectfully, "Senior brother, from today onward, I will officially leave the Rose Garden and follow you."

Han Shuo hadn't expected Bollands to be so straightforward. After thinking for a moment, he smiled and said, "How about this? In this period of time, you will still be in charge of protecting Lawrence and ensuring his safety. When he doesn't need your protection anymore, you can return to my side. I make preparations to arrange for your entrance ceremony after some time. Once we performed the ceremony, I will immediately impart to you the martial technique."

"Alright then. In that case, I will continue to protect Prince Lawrence." Hao Shuo's instructions were now of higher importance than Karel's. Bollands was used to listening to orders, hence he nodded and agreed.

Under Han Shuo's orders, Bollands gradually sunk into the darkness. Han Shuo understood that Bollands had gone to secretly protect Lawrence and headed back to his residence alone.

It was currently a sensitive time in Ossen City. The streets were tightly guarded during the night as city guards patrolled all pathways within the city. Even while the nobles entertained themselves at night, they still wouldn't forget to talk about proper business.

Han Shuo had previously heard via a mystical demon the discussion between many nobles within the Northern Rose Garden about the princes, debating about which prince they should support.

Han Shuo had also just realized abruptly why King Uhtred already acted quickly. All of a sudden, all officials who had close relations with Lawrence had been, more or less, promoted for all kinds of reasons.

Lawrence, who originally had the least support, was suddenly being ardently paid attention to.. King Uhtred's obvious favoritism caused the nobles and princes to be apprehensive, as they couldn't understand the reason behind Uhtred's actions.

Sacred swordmaster Karel, who had always maintained neutrality and had never expressed his support for Lawrence, had declared when he left the imperial palace that if anyone dared to deal with Lawrence underhandedly, they would face his wrath. Karel had even hinted at Duke Ashburn's despicableness.

Even the Dark Mantle organization which acted as the empire's underground agents suddenly had close dealings with Lawrence. Amyes who was feared by all nobles was even seen visiting Lawrence's residence at night. This seemingly proved that the Dark Mantle and Lawrence had allied secretly.

Lawrence, who had been suppressed by the other princes for a long time, suddenly had a surge in circumstances and became the topic of discussion between nobles. A number of influential personages who had never taken Lawrence seriously now had a sudden change of opinion.

"King Uhtred has been in power in the Lancelot Empire for many years. It seems that before Uhtred dies, the whole Lancelot Empire will act as he commands. His successor would ultimately still be his personal choice." Han Shuo pondered inwardly as he unhurriedly walked toward his residence.

Late in the night, the streets were quiet. Han Shuo moved swiftly, not leaving any tracks on the streets. A couple of mystical demons watched the surroundings stealthily as Han Shuo easily evaded the city guards and returned quickly to his own residence.

When Han Shuo reached his residence, he realized that other than a few guards and the old steward, all the servants had already slept. When Kallas saw Han Shuo appear, he hastily greeted him and soon after said in a low voice, "Lord Marquis, there's someone in the room who wishes to see you."

Han Shuo stared blankly, baffled that someone actually came over so late at night and couldn't help but be astonished. A mystical demon flew over in the direction Kallas had given and soon after a handsome and graceful figure suddenly entered Han Shuo's sight.

It was actually him! Han Shuo was shocked. He then nodded towards Kallas and instructed, "Alright then, it's already quite late. You should rest early. I can go over by myself."

Kallas didn't say anything else, bowing towards Han Shuo and then immediately withdrawing.

Han Shuo walked over to the room for receiving guests. Once he entered, the door closed automatically. Han Shuo frowned when he saw the handsome grand magus necromancer before him and asked, "Why are you here?"

Wolf gave a carefree smile and leisurely looked at Han Shuo, "I came over to thank you. Thanks to the skeletal staff, you've helped me regain my youth. Hehe. I'm especially grateful for this.."

"In recent days, there have been some rumors circulating that are not beneficial to me. I wouldn't want your arrival to cause misunderstandings. If there aren't any matters, it's best that you don't come over and cause trouble for me. Your identity is too sensitive and you're someone I cannot provoke." Han Shuo didn't have any enmity towards Wolf, but he didn't have any favorable impression of him either. Nowadays, Kosse's group had been stopping at nothing to cause him to lose his standing within Ossen City. Even though Han Shuo had Uhtred's help, if he really let Kosse latch onto credible evidence, it would be hard for Han Shuo to manage.

"Relax. It's precisely because I don't want to give you trouble that I chose to appear so late at night. Furthermore, an average people wouldn't know my identity. Even if it were previous enemies from the Church of Light, they probably wouldn't be able to recognize me too. Hence, you need not worry, I won't bring you any trouble." Wolf explained.

Hearing him say this, Han Shuo examined Wolf's appearance carefully and couldn't help but agree that his words did contain some truth. It was impossible to connect the current Wolf who was elegant, handsome and full of a dignified aura with the previous Wolf who looked inhuman and had a dense aura of death. If not for the changes due to the skeletal staff, even if someone were to beat Han Shuo to death, he wouldn't believe that the graceful youth in front of him was that centuries-old Wolf.

"Why have you come to find me?" Han Shuo relaxed slightly, but still wrinkled his brows and annoyed looked at Wolf.

"Hey, we should be considered allies, and are truly friends. From the beginning, our Calamity Church has always thought of you as a friend. Besides, I'm also a necromancer, you shouldn't be so indifferent toward me." Wolf shrugged and said with a little sorrow.

Han Shuo was shocked by his words. Thinking about it, it was indeed as Wolf said. Everyone in the Profound Continent was afraid of the evil Calamity Church. Once he showed his ability to refine undead creatures that weren't afraid of light magic, they had tossed him an olive branch and even spared no effort in protecting him.

When Wolf discovered that Han Shuo had the skeletal staff, Calamity Church's attitude towards Han Shuo was so amicable that it made him a little vexed. Looking at the earnest Wolf in front of him, Han Shuo really didn't know how to treat him.

Han Shuo relaxed, no longer having a cold and emotionless expression. He smiled faintly as he pulled over a chair, sat down and asked, "In that case, could Mister Wolf tell me what you came here for? And also, how exactly does Calamity Church want to treat me?"

When Wolf saw that Han Shuo's expression was no longer indifferent, he smiled happily and said, "This should be the way! We will be friends. Hehe. Very good friends!! There aren't many necromancers in this world and even fewer Grand magus necromancers Yet, both you and I are grand magus necromancers. We ought to have many similar interests. Ha. I really had not expected that you would actually become a grand magus necromancer so quickly. Hehe. It seems like you must have gained many things from the Holy Land.”

“Holy Land? What Holy Land?” Han Shuo looked distracted and asked suspiciously.

Wolf seemed to know that Han Shuo would ask this question. He straightened himself, appearing slightly excited as he said, “ The Holy Land is what our Calamity Church calls that place. Most of the people in the Profound Continent call it the Cemetery of Death. Hehe, since the skeleton staff is in your possession I don’t think you would be able to deny that you’ve been to the Holy Land.

Moreover, you’ve only practiced necromancy for less than five years and yet you’ve already become a grand magus necromancer, which took me a couple of centuries to reach. This is already enough to illustrate the issue. There’s also the undead creatures that aren’t afraid of light magic and other mysteries that prove that you’ve been to the Holy Land.”

When Wolf said this, Han Shuo’s heart surged with waves of emotion. He realized that he hadn’t been cautious enough, or it could be said that he knew too little about the Calamity Church and the secrets about necromancers. This was why Wolf was able to recognize the skeletal staff. For Wolf to be so certain in his words, clearly showed that he had surmised the truth.

Han Shuo’s expression momentarily wavered, his eyes indistinctly revealing an ominous glint. He was considering if he should kill everyone who knew his secrets but after a round of contemplation, he knew it was already too late. Wolf had probably already shared this information with the Calamity Church.

Observing Han Shuo’s virulent gaze, even Wolf who had lived for a long time felt apprehensive. As a necromancer who had high accomplishments, Wolf could clearly sense Han Shuo’s concealed killing intent. Wolf who was being stared fixedly by Han Shuo unexpectedly had a feeling of palpitation, causing him to be startled.

Only when faced with the rebuke of high-ranked people in the evil Calamity Church would Wolf have such a feeling of apprehension. He would never have thought that he would feel a hint of fear from someone who was so much younger than him. Wolf was very clear what this feeling implied.

He knew that only when experts who could threaten his life were discontented and had the intention to kill him would he instinctually palpitate in fear!

Could this youth who had just become a grand magus necromancer possess the ability to kill him?

Illusion, it must be an illusion! Wolf reassured himself before awkwardly saying to Han Shuo, "Don't be so hostile towards me. Our Calamity Church will really never become your enemy. Since the skeletal staff has already recognized you as its master, you are a noble within our Calamity Church. There are many areas in which the Calamity Church will need rely on you, hence we require you to be living well."

"In that case, if my death brings about more benefits, you all would've already acted?" Han Shuo squinted his eyes, sizing up Wolf as he replied slowly.

"Uh..." Wolf's expression became more awkward. He hesitated for a while before nodding and said, "If we could kill you and there would be only benefits and no harm to the Calamity Church, I think my superiors would have given the order to kill you long ago and not decree to protect you and cooperate with you."

Wolf could still be considered as a frank person. Han Shuo knew how the infamously evil Calamity Church handled matters. When he first saw Belinda, even though she was just an alchemist, she had already attempted to kill everyone in the hotel without inhibition. She didn't place any importance on the lives of strangers, believing that everything was proper and as a matter of course.

Coldly snorting, Han Shuo knew that Wolf already knew about the matters regarding the Cemetery of Death. However, Han Shuo naturally wouldn't reveal any details. He expressionlessly replied, "Don't stick your noses into my business. Be honest about the reason why you are here!"

Seeing Han Shuo becoming displeased, Wolf hastily explained, “Regarding the Holy Land, we can temporarily not discuss it. I came here to inform you regarding some secrets of the skeletal staff and the Holy Land. This would probably be the information that you long for the most.”

“Oh? Didn’t you previously say that if I didn’t join the Calamity Church you wouldn’t tell me the secrets about the skeletal staff? Why have you now specifically come here to tell me this information? I had clearly stated previously that I wouldn’t join the Calamity Church. It’s best if you don’t act rashly.” Han Shuo said to Wolf.

For some unknown reason, the grand magus necromancer Wolf, who should’ve been aloof and surpassed ordinary people, was unbelievably humble and even seemed to be deliberately currying favor as he spoke to Han Shuo.

From the time you picked up the skeleton staff, you’re already considered a member of our Calamity Church! Wolf said inwardly before smiling as he explained, “Don’t worry. My superiors gave me the order and so I will naturally tell you the situation of the skeletal staff and the Holy Land. However, what I will tell you is only what I know. There are things that I don’t know about and I’m powerless to help.”

“In that case, it would be a waste to not listen. Go ahead then.” Han Shuo spoke indifferently, no longer appearing as pressing as the previous time. However, he was inwardly so curious that he could die. Only he himself could understand this fact.

“Then I’ll first talk about the Holy Land. Within the Calamity Church, it is rumored that the Holy Land possesses a magical transportation array. That transportation array has the mysterious ability to connect between planes, in particular, it can intercommunicate with the netherworld. Necromancers can rely on their original body to enter the netherworld to explore unknown territories within the nether realm and improve their necromancy magic.

Furthermore, there is another legend within the Calamity Church. I’m not sure whether this legend is true but I’ve once heard the pope say that the Holy Land wasn't a structure of the Profound Continent. Instead, it came from another plane to the Profound Continent. I surmise that the plane it came from was the netherworld." Wolf breathed in deeply as he explained to Han Shuo.

Chapter 399: Three abilities of the Tri-colored skeletal staff

Hearing what Wolf said, emotions surged uncontrollably within Han Shuo's heart. The Calamity Church was probably aware of some information regarding the Cemetery of Death. What Wolf had just stated was probably true.

The center of the first layer in the Cemetery of Death was indeed an ancient magic transportation array. It is precisely through this ancient magic transportation array that Han Shuo could travel everywhere without restrictions. When he heard Wolf say that the transportation array could also connect between planes, Han Shuo was indescribably astonished.

Common magic transportation arrays within the continent normally had a limitation of distance. For example, the transportation arrays between large cities in Lancelot Empire could only cover a few hundred kilometers. No one has ever heard of deploying a transportation array that could cover a distance of several thousand kilometers.

The further the limit of the transportation array, the higher the requirements were. Apart from the comprehension of the person setting up the array, a painstaking effort had to be expended on materials and finding a favorable location. A space sacred magus could only set up a transportation array that had a maximum distance of two thousand to two and a half thousand kilometers.

Yet, the large-scale transportation array in the center of the Cemetery of Death could, according to Wolf, transport across planes. This was extremely inconceivable to Han Shuo. When Wolf mentioned that the Cemetery of Death was a structure from a different plane, Han Shuo felt even more light-headed.

Seeing Han Shuo's shocked expression, Wolf continued, "Of course, the Holy Land also has another saying. It is said that the transportation array can be moved and it was similar to a Magic Tower and was self-sufficient in attacking and defending. These were all legends handed down within the church, but I think they are trustworthy.

“As for the skeletal staff in your hands, you can see it as the key to entering the Holy Land. The tri-colored skulls on the skeletal staff each possess a strange power. Firstly, it can multiply the strength of a necromancer’s spells. I think you are already very clear about this power. The second strange power, you’ve already tried it on me. It is the miraculous ability to let a necromancer become youthful again. Not only can it be used by the necromancer in possession of the skeletal staff, it can also be used on other people.

The final power of the skeletal staff, which I’m unsure if you have tried it before, is rumored to be able to open the pathway to the netherworld. The user would be able to enter and exit the netherworld with just a thought. This ability is the most unfathomable. It can allow necromancers familiarize with the netherworld and let them reach a higher level of understanding in necromancy.

Each of the tri-colored skulls contained a different power. However, these three abilities are only theories that have been passed down in the Calamity Church for a long time. As for whether the skeletal staff has more secrets, it’s not something I’m able to comprehend. What I have just told you is all that I know.”

Han Shuo had seen all of the three peculiar abilities of the tri-colored skeletal staff. Hence, he believed Wolf without any doubt. Increasing the strength of magic, recovering one’s youth and voluntarily entering the netherworld with his soul. Han Shuo had experienced all of the three abilities, but other than the first ability to increase the strength of his spells, Han Shuo simply have not comprehended the other two mystical abilities.

In particular, Han Shuo didn’t know anything regarding the mysteries of the last ability. Both the times he entered the netherworld had all been him unexplainably entering and exiting. It was absolutely not how Wolf described, going back and forth with just a thought. It seemed that it wasn’t caused by the skeletal staff, rather it was that Han Shuo hadn’t truly grasped the key in utilizing the skeletal staff.

According to Wolf, once Han Shuo truly controlled the skeletal staff's powers, he would really be able to go back and forth with just a thought, meet up with the little skeleton and the various zombies within the netherworld, easily investigate the unknown mysteries of the netherworld and clarify if the Cemetery of Death was really an unusual structure originating from the netherworld as Wolf had described.

"I came here in accordance with my superiors' orders to tell you some secrets about the skeletal staff and the Holy Land. I think that once you know of these things, you should have a direction for exploration. Hehe. The Calamity Church will become your strong backing. You who wields the skeletal staff is an important part of our Calamity Church. You can deny this, but our core members have already acknowledged this." Wolf smiled as he explained to Han Shuo who was currently deep in thought.

Han Shuo's contemplation was interrupted by Wolf. Soon after, he gave Wolf a glance and said, "What you acknowledge should be the skeletal staff and the Cemetery of Death, right?"

"They're all the same. The role of the skeletal staff on our Calamity Church is extremely important. Once you've truly grasped all the uses of the skeletal staff, there will be superiors who will personally come to find you." Wolf replied without answering Han Shuo's question directly.

"The skeletal staff is of great use to the Calamity Church? Is it primarily because of the last two abilities?" Han Shuo hesitated for a while before questioning closely.

Wolf stared blankly, thinking for a while before nodding as he replied, "You can put it that way. I'm not clear of the specific circumstances, but I know that the Calamity Church has some very powerful existences. However, due to their old age, their bodies have already become extremely weak. Some of them are even reaching the end of their lives. If the skeletal staff is able to grant them a restoration of their youth, these unparalleled existences would cause the Church of Light to tremble.

"And you are a person who can bestow upon them renewed physical strength and allow them to live longer. Hence, your importance to the Calamity Church is self-evident. More importantly, only you can open the Holy Land. In the future, secrets regarding the Holy Land would also need to be uncovered by you.”

These words were probably not what the superiors instructed him to say and were simply Wolf taking the initiative to show goodwill. Thus, he paused before adding another sentence, “Bryan, these are my own words. I hope you will have a good impression of me. That way, I’ll be inwardly grateful.”

Han Shuo was still reveling in the shock of Wolf’s words. He nodded when he heard what Wolf said, but didn’t make any promises.

“Alright then, it’s already quite late. I will be leaving now.” After Wolf finished speaking, he respectfully gave Han Shuo a card and said, “This contains the way to contact me. If you require my or our strength, you can look for me at any time. We will spare no effort in assisting you.”

Han Shuo received the card in passing as he apathetically nodded again. His head was filled with the details of the Cemetery of Death and the skeletal staff. Han Shuo was extremely shocked when he heard about these matters from Wolf, causing him to want to rapidly understand the main points.

Han Shuo knew all along that the Cemetery of Death contained many secrets. However, he hadn’t been able to decipher its real secrets despite staying in the Cemetery of Death for quite a period of time. However, Wolf’s sharing had given Han Shuo a direction to explore, allowing Han Shuo to realize the aspects of the Cemetery of Death which were the most attractive.

“Perhaps I should enter a deeper level in the Cemetery of Death to explore. Maybe the next level might have the answers I need!” Han Shuo silently assessed the situation and made a decision.

While Han Shuo was pondering quietly, grand magus necromancer Wolf had already left soundlessly. Han Shuo raised his head to look outside, realizing that the full moon in the sky was gradually becoming hidden. Without him knowing, the night had almost passed by.

Han Shuo thought for a while. His curiosity about the mysteries of the Cemetery of Death and the skeletal staff was getting stronger and stronger. With the magic transportation array that directly led to the Cemetery of Death, traveling to and fro was extremely convenient. Since there didn't seem to be any important matters tomorrow, Han Shuo immediately went to the secret chamber and activated the transportation array.

Once Han Shuo reached the Cemetery of Death, even before Han Shuo could uncover the secrets within the Cemetery of Death, the connection between dark dragon Gilbert and himself was immediately established.

The distance between Lancelot Empire's Ossen City and the Valley of Sunshine was too far. Although Han Shuo and Gilbert had the power of the contract between them, it only allowed Han Shuo to detect whether Gilbert was dead and couldn't sense his location or thoughts.

However, the Dark Forest was very close to the Valley of Sunshine. As both Han Shuo and Gilbert's strength had increased by a substantial amount, the connection between them had become clearer. Once Han Shuo established a connection with Gilbert, he immediately sensed that Gilbert wanted to meet him urgently.

Han Shuo, who had originally planned on exploring the secrets of the Cemetery of Death, recognized Gilbert's urgency. He had no choice but temporarily shelve his plan of immediately investigating the Cemetery of Death. He hurriedly left the Cemetery of Death and rushed toward the Valley of Sunshine.

Along the way, Han Shuo unleashed the Art of Demonic Nine Heavens. Without wasting too much time, he arrived at the cliff within the Valley of Sunshine where the Soul Destroyer Mercenary Group were hiding. Gilbert had already felt Han Shuo's aura and had waited at the bottom of the cliff for a long time.

There was also a coquettish and attractive woman standing beside Gilbert. The woman had a well-developed body and a gorgeous appearance. Her sepia-colored hair was weaved into nine little braids which cascaded down her shoulders, making her appear pretty and mature, possessing a unique flavor.

When Han Shuo landed, the woman was evidently somewhat fearful, unconsciously moving nearer to Gilbert. Gilbert casually embraced the charming woman and explained to Han Shuo, “This is Lania. She was subdued by me in the Dark Forest. You’ve seen her before!”

Hydra! Han Shuo stared blankly but understood soon after. He couldn’t help but take another look. Lania bowed politely toward Han Shuo and said delicately, “Master!”

Han Shuo didn’t further question the hydra, Lania, and only nodded toward her. He then frowned and asked Gilbert, “What happened that made you so anxious for me to come?”

“Trunks is missing. There’s no sign of him in the whole Valley of Sunshine!” Gilbert said worriedly.

Chapter 400: Fallen tiger in grassland [1]

“What happened?” Han Shuo was somewhat in disbelief. Trunks currently had the strength of a great swordmaster and perhaps in the entire Valley of Sunshine, only the thrice berserk berserker Laureton could overpower him in battle. However, even Laureton didn’t have the power to kill Trunks by himself.

Trunks was a cautious man who was also very familiar with the terrain near the Valley of Sunshine. He shouldn’t have met with any trouble, but now that he had suddenly went missing truly surprised Han Shuo.

“After he returned from Janet’s place, there had been no trace of him for four days in a row. Even when there were no missions, he had never been away for that long. And even if he didn’t return, he should have left a message, but there has been no news this time around. We sent people to ask Janet and learned that Trunks had indeed left from her place. He’d brought a dozen brothers along, there is no trace of them, either.” Dark dragon Gilbert explained to Han Shuo with a glum face.

Knitting his brows, Han Shuo pondered for a while before asking, “Has Trunks had disputes with any powers recently?”

“Ten days ago, we ambushed the Butcher bandit group together with Janet under Trunks’ lead. Trunks and Janet even killed Butcher Gustav. His bandit group can be considered to be wiped out from the Valley of Sunshine. Apart from this, we didn’t have any other disputes with other forces.” It was Grant who’d spoken. As Trunk’s old friend, he was very worried for Trunks’ safety. As the Valley of Sunshine was in an area situated at the center of three countries, over the years, it had become a special area where the most abundant goods from the three countries could be gathered. Han Shuo had provided Trunks the capital to create the Soul Destroyer mercenary band with the original intention precisely to take over the Valley of Sunshine. Otherwise, he wouldn’t have given Trunks a Rebirth Pill for Trunks’ reformation.

These days, the Soul Destroyer mercenary group had gradually grown in scale, becoming one of the powers within the Valley of Sunshine. Trunks suddenly having a mishap had already impacted the development of the Soul Destroyer mercenary group, which wasn't an outcome Han Shuo was willing to see. As he listened to Gilbert and Grant narrate what'd happened, Han Shuo had been completely silent.

"Honored master, do you think something has happened to Trunks?" Gilbert couldn't help but ask upon seeing Han Shuo staying silent.

"Nonsense!" Han Shuo unhappily berated. He thought for a bit before saying, "We temporarily don't know Trunks' situation, so everyone shouldn't act rashly. Don't take on any missions for now, let's wait for Trunks' matter to be settled first."

"Master, we have been searching for Trunks for days but there's no news of him. Do we keep looking?" Gilbert scratched his head in distress as he asked Han Shuo.

"You guys assemble everyone, I think we have run into big trouble this time. Currently, in the Valley of Sunshine, the number of powers that dare to touch the Soul Destroyer mercenary band can be counted on the fingers. Since something bad has happened to Trunks, I think the Soul Destroyer is next on the list." Taking a deep breath, Han Shuo told the dark dragon and Grant.

"Right, why don't I see Odysseus' group?" Han Shuo couldn't help but ask in surprise when he discovered that Odysseus' unique little group wasn't here.

"They are on a mission and temporarily haven't returned to the Valley of Sunshine. They should still be in the Orc Empire at the moment." Gilbert quickly answered.

"Alright, Gilbert, follow me outside, the rest remain in the valley. It's best to call the brothers outside to return. Watch over this place carefully." Han Shuo threw Gilbert a glance before directly walking out.

Lania the hydra was in human form as Gilbert casually held her in his embrace. She couldn't help but speak out upon hearing Han Shuo's words, "Master, I can also be of help!"

The hydra race was also one of lascivious nature, no different from the underground world's dark dragon race. In the previous trip to the depths of the Dark Forest, this hydra had once tried to surreptitiously kill Han Shuo and Gilbert, which had unexpectedly inconvenienced Gilbert. The hydra and Gilbert's deadly combat had instead evolved into a sex war and the dark dragon had used the demonic method Han Shuo had taught him to subdue her.

The current strength of the hydra Lania was obviously beneath that of Gilbert. As someone who indulged in sexual desire, after she was conquered by Gilbert, she had unwittingly become the submissive one in the relationship. Gilbert was Han Shuo's magic pet, so the hydra naturally addressed Han Shuo as master.

Furrowing his brows, Han Shuo thought for a while. He then glanced at the hydra and said, "You stay here for now. It'd be bad if there's no expert to oversee this place."

"Mhm, you remain here." Gilbert stared at the hydra and chided, "What master says goes. From now on, you aren't allowed to have any objection."

Lania softly smiled in a coquettish, fawning manner and chuckled, "Alright then, I'll stay here and guard this place well for you guys."

Seeing that Han Shuo didn't have his previous ruthless appearance, the hydra Lania slowly relaxed, her speech and behavior no longer as cautious as before.

Han Shuo didn't say anything else. He glanced at dragon Gilbert and leaped into the air. Gilbert transformed right at Han Shuo's feet to accurately catch him and flew up high into the sky.

"Master, where to?!" After Gilbert flew Han Shuo up high in the sky, he inadvertently asked.

"Nowhere. Just take me to a high altitude and stop there!" Han Shuo instructed. The twelve mystical demons floated out one by one, flying towards the directions of the big powers in the Valley of Sunshine.

The Valley of Sunshine was only that big of an area, there weren't many people who'd have the guts to attack Trunks, only those that were afraid that he'd be a threat to their status. Han Shuo didn't need to think to know that Trunks' disappearance certainly had to do with those people.

It made sense when one thought about it. The Soul Destroyer mercenary band had gradually expanded to the point that it had the power to control the Valley of Sunshine. To the other powers, Trunks had without a doubt become the thorn in their flesh. They'd be very willing to eradicate the Soul Destroyer mercenary band.

The twelve mystical demons spread out and drifted in every direction of the Valley of Sunshine, towards the Cairo mercenary band, the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band, the Menlo family, the Katar Orc tribe and even Janet's bandit group along with some other small powers. Each power was visited by a mystical demon.

With the existence of these twelve mystical demons, Han Shuo had the entire Valley of Sunshine and its major forces under his monitoring. Since the Valley of Sunshine was only that big, the people who'd put their hands on Trunks would definitely reveal themselves, Han Shuo was a hundred percent sure of it. Deep within the forest, there was an extremely hidden cave surrounded and heavily concealed by thick tree branches. The cave itself was very narrow and hard to move within.

However, from the depths of this cave echoed the miserable screaming of Trunks. Both his hands and feet were restrained by coarse black manacles while a long and thin iron chain was pierced through his shoulder blade.

Thunder archmage Asa, who followed Florida of the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band, was currently staring viciously at Trunks. As he waved the magic staff in his hand, bolts of lightning struck on Trunks' body like electric snakes, adding many black scars on Trunks' already seriously injured body.

"Trunks, you also have such a day. When you killed my father Gustav, you didn't think that such a day would come right?" Thunder archmage Asa glared at Trunks with deep hatred. He maliciously whispered an incantation while elatedly striking bolts of lightning on Trunks' body.

"Damnable old dog. Ahh..." As Trunks screamed out loud in agony, a lightning bolt struck right at his mouth, leaving a black scar on his lips. Two streaks of blood slowly trickled down from the corners of his mouth.

Trunks' entire body was covered in cuts and bruises and tightly imprisoned. In the surrounding was several experts that were sent by various powers to keep watch on him. Asa indeed held a bone-deep grudge towards Trunks, which was why he'd secretly come to take it out on him. If not for the tacit understanding between the experts of the other powers, Asa might have ruthlessly killed Trunks the day Trunks had been caught.

Trunks looked at Asa who was continuously striking him with lightning bolts, his heart also filled with an endless hatred. He had never expected the thunder archmage always following Florida to be the son of Butcher Gustav. No wonder the relationship between the Butcher and the Rainbow Sickles mercenary band was so amicable. It turned out this was why Florida regarded Asa so highly.

"Heh heh, although I can't kill you, I will slowly torture you. The Soul Destroyer mercenary band has rapidly developed in the past two years, but so what? Haha, in two days, they shall be exterminated by our allied forces. After the Soul Destroyer is finished, I will peel your skin off a bit at a time while you are still alive.

Hah, even if you want revenge, you shall never have that chance. Annie who you consider your sister, heh heh, not just Florida who have ridden her, even I and my father have played with her. What can you do about that? Aren't you just like a dog all chained up by me? Haha..." Asa had gone insane as he screamed loudly, striking down one lightning bolt after another.

"Ahhhh... I'll kill you beasts, I swear I will!" Trunks could no longer suppress his fury and howled wretchedly when he heard Asa's narration. The chains all over his body resounded with metallic sounds as Trunks appeared as if he was truly going insane.

1. Fallen tiger in grassland is a Chinese saying which describes that when the tiger leaves the mountains and is trapped in the grasslands, even a dog can bully the tiger. It describes people of status and power losing their status/power.

Chapter 401: The alliance based on benefits

It didn't take Han Shuo much effort to thoroughly understand the situation through the mystical demons snooping around. The one behind this hostility directed at Trunks and the Soul Destroyer was Florida of the Rainbow Sickles mercenary band. The other participants included the House of Menlo as well as Laureton of the Cairo mercenary band.

In this world, there was no eternal friends, only eternal benefits. These words had accurately summed up the situation!

In the past, when Laureton and Florida had been competing for power, Han Shuo and Trunks had sided with Laureton. The night Laureton had been surrounded by the four great powers in the small mountain valley, Han Shuo had even aided him to come out of it alive.

From that time, the Cairo mercenary band and Soul Destroyer mercenary band had close relations with Laureton and Trunks constantly cooperating. In the eyes of outsiders, the Cairo and Soul Destroyer mercenary bands had seemed to have formed an alliance.

However, with the Soul Destroyer rapid development in addition to Han Shuo's blazing reputation in the Lancelot Empire, it had pushed the Soul Destroyer mercenary band to become the fifth great power in the Valley of Sunshine. In the recent days, Trunks killing Butcher Gustav had caused the residents in the Valley of Sunshine to be alarmed. Laureton and Florida who were originally the two most promising contenders for the control over the Valley of Sunshine had finally realized that the situation was delicate.

When one's own interest was threatened, friendship and alliance were as fragile as the vows of politicians. Florida and Laureton immediately joined forces. Since Adam Menlo had been heavily injured by Han Shuo previously, he was extremely happy to also participate in this long-planned insidious scheme.

The result was Trunks being ambushed by Laureton and the rest while on the way back from Janet's place and the mercenaries with him completely annihilated. Trunks himself had been captured alive and imprisoned in a hidden cave within the belly of a mountain valley. The major powers had all sent their experts to keep watch over him.

They didn't immediately kill Trunks because although Laureton and the rest coveted the wealth of the Soul Destroyer mercenary band, they didn't have much information on the detailed layout of the Soul Destroyer mercenary band's base. Therefore, they intended to get it from Trunks' own mouth before making their next move, which would also help decrease the losses on their side.

However, Trunks' tenacity was beyond their expectation. Under the rounds of torture and extortion, he still hadn't revealed any information that they'd wanted. Hence, his body was tormented black and blue till he was on the verge of death.

Presently, in a mansion defended by the Cairo mercenary band within the Valley of Sunshine, the three powers were discussing when to launch their attack on the Soul Destroyer mercenary band. The Soul Destroyer mercenary band had existed in the Valley of Sunshine for a long time. Laureton and the others had long since known its exact location even without Trunks telling them.

Were it not for them not understanding how dangerous the terrain of that area truly was, they'd have already joined hands to wipe out the Soul Destroyer mercenary band, instead of waiting until now to make their move. In the past several days, the three powers had constantly sent people to that region to explore. They had clearly seen the defensive layout on the surface and were about to make a move in a few days.

The major powers in the Valley of Sunshine had been through repeated wars, from which all the parties had sustained a great loss in strength. After Han Shuo had killed light grand magus Ferguson, the relationship between Florida and the Church of Light had been somewhat frail. However, with the existence of the secret silver mine in this area, their relationship slowly stabilized again.

Because of Han Shuo, Calamity Church's dark archmage Edwin naturally wouldn't deal with the Soul Destroyer mercenary band. The Calamity Church and Edwin had originally been cooperating with Laureton, but they had gradually drifted apart. Edwin had sought Trunks out a few times to offer his help, but Trunks had refused his goodwill.

Following Trunks' disappearance, the Calamity Church's Edwin had actually made quite an effort to find out the truth of the situation. However, with the alliance of the three powers in the Valley of Sunshine and the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band being backed up by the Church of Light, Edwin didn't dare to act rashly even though he knew the truth.

The twelve mystical demons had dispersed, scenes of what they see constantly being reflected in Han Shuo's mind. His brain that'd been expanded by demonic magic methodically took in those images, analyzing the contents of speech and actions to gradually discover what was going on.

Finally, he found out the exact location where Trunks was imprisoned!

As dark dragon Gilbert floated in the sky above the Valley of Sunshine, puffs of white clouds drifted around him. The glorious sun shone down upon the entire mountain valley, causing even the pitch black body of the dark dragon to be glistening under the sunlight.

Sitting cross-legged on Gilbert's back which was much wider than a horse carriage, Han Shuo had his eyes closed as he collected information. Suddenly, he slowly opened his bright eyes. As he glanced down at the lush forest within the Valley of Sunshine, his eyes became increasingly bright.

"I must quickly settle the problems in the Valley of Sunshine. My steps can't just stop at this place!" Han Shuo murmured.

The matters of Brettel City, the seven grand duchies, the internal struggle in the Empire, the unceasing disturbances from the Church of Light, the secrets of the Cemetery of Death and the skeletal staff, the study of demonic magic and necromancy magic, the rivalry of the women. Too many matters were constantly piling up, waiting for him to handle. Han Shuo now had this feeling of wanting to be able to use the doppelganger technique.

Han Shuo's increasingly heightened vision was proportionate to the growth in his ambitions and strength. Now that he looked at the various disturbances in the Valley of Sunshine, he felt that it wouldn't be very hard to deal with all of them. From the time he learned that Trunks was captured, Han Shuo wanted to take care of all of the matters in the Valley of Sunshine in one go.

"Go, fly downward!" Han Shuo instructed dark dragon Gilbert, showing him the exact location.

"Master, you've found Trunks?" Seeing that Han Shuo, who'd closed his eyes and been silent for a long time in the air, suddenly pointing out a location for him, Gilbert couldn't help but ask suspiciously.

"Of course, the direction we're heading is where Trunks is held." Han Shuo replied before urging, "Alright, hurry up a little!"

In the depths of a dark, gloomy mountain cave, thunder archmage Asa was still tirelessly torturing Trunks. Trunks had been roaring in madness, but after the violent electric currents had pierced through his body in addition to Asa pressing a burning red iron piece on his body, Trunks couldn't bear it anymore and had fallen unconscious.

However, Asa clearly had no intention of letting Trunks get off easy. Every time Trunks passed out, Asa would be sure to ruthlessly woke him up. After a few rounds, Trunks was on his dying breath and no longer had the strength to roar anymore. His unfocused eyes carried a deep-rooted hatred as he calmly glared at Asa, his eyes containing a light which frightened Asa.

Asa's guilty conscience churned in fear of Trunks' deep-rooted enmity. However, this feeling of guilt quickly turned into even more insane torturing as the burning red iron once again pressed upon Trunks' chest. Trunks could only stretch his mouth wide in agony, not even letting out a single groan. His face twisted into a terrifyingly savage expression like a demon from stepping out from the eighteenth level of hell.

“Lord Asa, you should stop now, or he might die!” A swordsman named Trulla came over with a frown, reaching his hand out to forcefully seize the burning iron which Asa had been clutching tightly.

Asa’s face darkened, he glared at Trulla and said in a displeased manner, “Trulla, my matters isn’t something your House of Menlo can care about!”

“I have no interest in caring about you, but Trunks’ life is to be kept. This is the decision agreed by all three leaders. No matter how you tortured Trunks, I have no problem as long as he doesn’t die. But if you kill him, we will have to bear the blame of negligence. Do not cause troubles for us!” Trulla wasn’t afraid of Asa, placing the iron in its original place as he said coldly.

Some of the injuries on Trunks’ body were starting to rot, there was even pus flowing from his neck and chest. Trulla who standing nearby involuntarily covered his mouth when he smelled the nauseating smell, disgusted as he fanned with his hand, “F*ck. You can still stand it?! Forget about it for today. Wait until his body gets better before toying with him again. Otherwise, everyone will object.”

As Trulla said this, he had already lost his patience and walked out. A few members of the Cairo mercenary band looked at Asa in annoyance. One person chimed in, “Asa, your Florida has also agreed. You’d better be more content, don’t break the rules.”

The others people in the mountain cave all revealed an annoyed expression. Even the members of the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band who were stationed here with Asa also persuaded him to not make a fuss. Thinking for a while, Asa turned his head to glance at the unconscious Trunks who was on the verge of death, the fury in his heart subsiding a little.

With that many people dissuading him, Asa also didn’t dare to recklessly act on his own accord, so as to avoid rousing the anger of others. He understood that his position in the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band was no longer as firm due to the death of his father Gustav. What was more loathsome was that the bandit group had split up after his father died and simply didn't remain under him. Otherwise, he wouldn't have had to stay in the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band and suffered humiliation.

While Asa was drowned in hatred, sounds of heavy steps resounded from the outside. The sounds were very faint at first, gradually becoming clearer.

"Who is it?" The still unhappy Asa shouted loudly, "Since you've already come, don't you know to report your name?"

The sounds of footsteps were still approached slowly. However, the person didn't respond. Asa couldn't help but curse again, "F*ck, are you mute? Don't you know how to speak?"

"Something's not right!" Trulla frowned, suddenly taking out a long sword as he said to the people next to him.

"Only we know about this place, what can go wrong? You're overly suspicious. Don't those fellows always deliver our food at this time? It must be them!" Asa took this opportunity to say a few words to Trulla.

The footsteps were still approaching. The sound of each step contained a strange rhythm, giving rise to a sense of terror in people's hearts. It was as if a demon was slowly nearing, its ghastly huge mouth hidden within the darkness, ready to bite into your neck at any moment.

Trulla threw a disdainful glance at Asa, thinking that this bandit's son was indeed not a true mercenary. Be it Cairo mercenary band or the House of Menlo, they were both strict and well-disciplined organizations. There would absolutely not be such a conduct of coming without giving a signal.

"Brothers, be a little careful. The situation is a bit strange!" Trulla tightly grasped his long sword and warned the people on his side.

Some experienced mercenaries from the Cairo mercenary band didn't need Trulla's reminder and had already gathered together cautiously. Even Asa's group from the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band had also clearly separated from the other two powers.

At this critical moment, as the three powers had only joined forces for profit, they still only trusted their own people rather than the fake allies who reluctantly cooperated for the sake of benefits. The Valley of Sunshine was precisely such a place. They were enemies, be it past or future. However, they currently stood together peacefully in the face of a common enemy.

Tap... tap... The footsteps were getting closer, becoming clearer!

Trulla glanced at the fire adept mage next to him and said, "Cast a flame!"

When that fire adept mage heard Trulla's order, a fire snake meandered its way into the passage, the brown-gray wall could be seen clearly when it glided through.

At this point, even Asa knew that something was wrong. He stared raptly at the only entrance. The members of the Cairo mercenary band had a tacit understanding among themselves as they formed a square formation, ready to face the incoming person's attacks at any moment.

While everyone was focusing their attention on the only tunnel, a string of clear, crisp sounds suddenly rang out from Trunks' location behind their backs. All of them who had their eyes glued on the tunnel turned around to look when they suddenly heard such loud sounds breaking the silence.

Right next to Trunks was Han Shuo with the Demonslayer Edge in hand and a darkened expression as he cut off the iron chains on Trunks' body. The durable iron chains which were made from the recently mined mithril broke apart with each crisp sound. The slender chain piercing through Trunks' shoulder blade was also carefully taken out by Han Shuo.

Trulla's group who had suddenly turned around didn't know how Han Shuo got in. There was only one tunnel which they heard the sound of footsteps from within the cave and they'd all placed their full attention there. Yet, they really hadn't seen anyone coming in from the tunnel!

However, Han Shuo had indeed suddenly appeared out of thin air, as if he'd been standing there all along. His sudden arrival was in such an eerie way that it gave people an extremely vexed feeling.

Seeing the gloomy-faced Han Shuo appear, all of the people keeping watch on Trunks inside the mountain cave felt their hearts tremble momentarily. They saw that Han Shuo had acted as if he didn't see them and only focused on breaking Trunks' shackles with a dark expression. Unknowingly, a feeling of terror couldn't help but gradually form from the bottom of their hearts.

Although Han Shuo hadn't been present in the Valley of Sunshine, stories of him were always spreading around the Valley. The people in the mountain cave, including Asa and Trulla, were all experts of the three powers. Not only did they know of Han Shuo, some of them had once witnessed with their own eyes Han Shuo's actions.

Presently in this narrow belly of the mountain, Han Shuo had noiselessly appeared like a ghost, only silently removing Trunks' shackles. The invisible suppression was as heavy as a mountain, causing palpitations as they grew flustered.

Asa's lips were dry. He once had his hand chopped off by Han Shuo. At that time in the mountain valley, he had witnessed Han Shuo's every blow as he struck Ferguson to death. When Han Shuo left, the stories of him didn't disappear and were instead spread throughout the Valley of Sunshine by the mercenaries who traveled extensively. In particular, the deed of Han Shuo beheading the dragon knight Celt was even more rapidly exaggerated.

Asa knew full well the relationship between Han Shuo and Trunks. He watched as Han Shuo worked on removing the bindings of the dying Trunks with a somber countenance, an icy cold chill abruptly spreading through his entire body. Asa's mind spun rapidly and he suddenly came to a very wise decision after watching Han Shuo for only a dozen seconds.

Whoosh! Asa was the first to rush into the tunnel to leave the cave, fleeing without a fight!

"Damned bastard!" Trulla turned to take a quick look, lowly cursing at Asa's shameless cowardice. Shortly after, he also felt a bit terrified, tightly gripping the long sword in his hand as he put on a strong front and looked coldly at Han Shuo, “Count Bryan, this has nothing to do with you. You can’t dictate the matters in our Valley of Sunshine. If you leave now, we won’t stop you. Otherwise...”

“Ah? Asa, why do you already returned?” Not waiting for Trulla to finish, the fire archmage next to him suddenly cried out in surprise.

Trulla was stunned. He didn’t rebuke the underling for cutting off on the threat that he’d summoned his courage to say. Trulla promptly turned around to see Asa having a bitter expression as he really returned step by step. Tap, tap... The footsteps in the cave still echoed within everyone’s hearts and actually became heavier!

Chapter 402: Cutting off the tongue

A 2.5 meters tall creature who was made of white bones that swayed in disorder from the skeleton slowly made its way forward.

This creature was formed purely from bones that were as sharp as lances. The bones fanned out like blooming flower petals, completely obstructing the narrow passage. With each step, a dense aura of death assaulted their senses, as though warning everyone that it didn't belong to this world.

As a high ranked undead creature, the bone demon had to bear the restrictions of the contract to enter this world. It brought along the netherworld's deathly aura, desolation and loathing toward the creatures in this world. As it possessed high intelligence, it could sense the fear of the creatures in front of itself.

When it reached the entrance of the passage, the power of contract ordered it to halt. Its original intention to kill the creatures in front was abruptly forced to an end. When it had arrived, it had already furiously struggled against the caster's contract and understood that the caster was capable of ruining its strength, so it hadn't resisted.

When everybody inside the cave looked towards Asa, they naturally saw this huge bone demon coming and completely blocking the exit. Behind the swaying sharp spears of the bone demon came the constantly echoing sound of heavy footsteps, like drum beats pounding on their panicking hearts.

In the span of a few breaths, a few balls of ghostly fires lit up behind the bone demon, appearing like mini lanterns that slowly drew nearer along with the footsteps. When the ghostly fires reached the bone demon, everyone could see the shadows of a few huge knights under the light from the ghostly fires as they tightly blocked the exit.

At this point, everybody in the mountain cave knew that the only way out was sealed. If they wanted to leave, the only method was to kill the bone demon and evil knights. However, who knew whether there'd be countless undead creatures in addition to the bone demon and the evil knights?

Within the narrow mountain cave, If there really were a large number of undead creatures, as they didn't have a light mage, it'd simply be harder to get out alive than to reach the sky. As these people's brains quickly spun and they saw that these undead creatures had no intention of entering the cave, their anxious hearts temporarily calmed down. Their eyes couldn't help but turn towards Han Shuo again.

At this moment, Han Shuo had cut all the chains off Trunks and had applied several colorful medicines on his body. Even the rotting wounds full of pus were cleaned up. During this process, Han Shuo's darkened face looked terrifying.

"Count Bryan, this is none of your business. By saving Trunks, you'll become the enemy of our three powers in the Valley of Sunshine. You should consider carefully!" Trulla stammered for a while, before summoning his courage to speak out toward Han Shuo under everyone's intense gaze.

Han Shuo didn't reply, not even turning his head to glance at Trulla!

As he placed his right hand on Trunks' back, black rays of light entered Trunks' body from the hidden angle. The unconscious Trunks could only sense that his fading vitality once again returned little by little.

Trunks gradually even felt a thread of strength. Harboring a bone-deep hatred, he abruptly shouted in his weakened condition, "Asa, I will kill you! I won't let you off even if I die!"

Lightning archmage Asa clearly heard Trunks' subconscious, weak shout. His face was immediately paled as white as paper, his fingers tightly gripping the magic staff. His eyes flickered as he turned to look behind. However, when he saw the bone demon's blazing eyes and the evil knights riding their fire-spitting warhorses, he hastily turned his head back.

After the light shout, Trunks slowly regained his consciousness. As his strength and vitality gradually recovered, he opened his eyes with difficulty. The first thing that entered his eyes was Han Shuo's frightfully somber face.

However, when he saw Han Shuo's terrifying, gloomy face, Trunks was extremely excited. His mouth pulled up into a silent, wry smile, his dry lips slowly moved, "Bryan, you came?"

Nodding his head, Han Shuo softly sighed and said, "I came a little late, you are already this heavily wounded."

"I'm not dead, so it's not too late! As long as I'm not dead, I still have hope for revenge. Even if my arms and legs are cut off, at least I still have teeth, I want to devour these beasts!!" Trunks' voice wasn't loud, but the enmity in it caused everyone to feel an endless chill.

To the side, Asa felt a chill from the bottom of his heart. His eyes quickly looked around and glanced toward Trulla shortly after. By another side, Trulla was silently communicating with the people from the Cairo mercenary band. The gap between the three powers unknowingly narrowed, as they clearly knew what should be done when facing a common enemy.

Han Shuo was indifferent to their actions, only having his eyes on Trunks. Only after Trunks finished speaking did Han Shuo reply, "Don't worry, you've eaten a Rebirth Pill, even if your tendons are cut off, I can still heal you till your previous state!"

"Gilbert, come over here and help me take good care of Trunks!" Han Shuo shouted towards the area behind Trunks. A rumbling sound could be heard from underground and a moment later, dark dragon Gilbert burrowed out.

When the mystical demon had spotted Trunks suffering such inhuman torture, Han Shuo had immediately ordered Gilbert to approach from underground at the fastest speed possible, while he summoned the undead creatures to seal the only way out of the cave. When Han Shuo had made his way to Trunks' location, dark dragon Gilbert was still in the underground passage hence he was a few minutes slower.

After Gilbert appeared, he took a look at Trunks and his eyes became bloodshot. He instantly roared in rage, "I want to eat all of you!"

This period of time, Gilbert had always stayed with Trunks, unknowingly giving rise their friendship. Trunks was a person of good character, treating Gilbert with extraordinary generosity. As for dark dragon Gilbert, apart from a few bad points, he was very upright. When he saw Trunks being tortured to the point of being unrecognizable, he couldn't suppress the rage in his heart.

Stopping Gilbert with one hand, Han Shuo instructed coldly, "Look after Trunks. As for these people in the mountain cave, just leave them to me."

"Master, I want to kill them, I want to avenge Trunks too!" Dark dragon Gilbert simply couldn't bear to see Trunks' miserable state. There was even a trace of sobbing in his voice. This was the result of Gilbert's excessive wrath and grief.

"Rest assured, there'll be an opportunity, you and Trunks will have that opportunity!" Han Shuo solemnly vowed and once again instructed, "Look after Trunks well, don't let him suffer any more harm!"

Holding back the tears that had almost flowed out, Gilbert's voice was choked with emotions as he nodded in assent. Holding a bucket of clean water, he helped Trunks clean up the stench off his wounds. Gilbert couldn't help shouting out in sobs, "Damn it, how could you be so careless, you fool..."

To Trunks, the pain had already numbed his senses. However, when he saw the dark dragon expressing his feelings of anger to the point of crying and Han Shuo forcefully repressing his anger which caused him to appear sinister and terrifying, something warm slowly merged with the demonic yuan energy that Han Shuo had transferred into his body, nourishing his injured body.

"You, what do you want? We, we are not afraid of you. It's best if you consider it clearly!" Seeing Han Shuo approach steadily with a gloomy expression after Trunks' injury had stabilized, Asa shouted, appearing fierce while being cowardly at heart.

Not wasting any words, Han Shuo suddenly transformed into a blood-colored streak, charging into the center of these people like lightning and casting out punches and kicks. The sounds of bones breaking echoed through the mountain cave, making one's scalp tingle.

In such a narrow area, Han Shuo's demonic arts fully displayed its advantages. As the frenzied, violent attacks fell down, there was simply no one who was capable of withstanding his assault. The strongest people here were swordmaster Trulla and lightning archmage Asa, who were simply no threat to the current Han Shuo.

In just a few minutes, the fifteen experts of the three great powers inside the mountain cave that held Trunks captive not only had their bones broken but also their tendons cut. Such an injury to the swordsmen and knights who cultivated fighting aura meant that they had thoroughly become useless. To the mages like Asa, Han Shuo cut off their tongues in addition to those injuries, hence they'd never be able to cast any magic ever again.

"I won't kill you. When Trunks recovers, he will slowly skin you alive. Only in this way can the damage he'd suffered be compensated." Looking at the mass of meat laying paralyzed on the ground, as well as Asa constantly spitting out blood due to his tongue being cut off, Han Shuo calmly pronounced their fate.

With his tendons snapped and bones broken, Asa couldn't even let out a tragic howl, his eyes filled with despair and regret. He regretted not having killed Trunks earlier, regretted not throwing everything to the wind to kill Han Shuo the first time Han Shuo had come to the Valley of Sunshine.

Dark dragon Gilbert's choked voice gradually returned to normal in light of the perpetrators suffering. Trunks' weakened body also slowly recovered some strength. With the support of the dark dragon and Han Shuo's demonic yuan energy, he could even stand up with some difficulty.

Trunks looked at Asa's miserable state, suddenly letting out a crazy laughter. His owl-like laughter was filled with endless resentment and unspeakable satisfaction.

As Trunks madly laughed like a devil, the pain and pressure from the last few days seemed to be released along with his laughter. He stared steadfastly at Asa as he laughed to his heart's content, his eyes filled with a bone-deep resentment which enveloped Asa like an ice cold prison, causing him to feel a chill that penetrated to his bones.

Asa understood that this time in Trunks' hands, the suffering he'd have to bear would be much more extreme. Asa who had released his anger as much as he liked on Trunks' body had no doubts that once Trunks recovered his strength, Trunks would torture him to his death. With his completely handicapped body and cut off tongue, Asa's heart was filled with only despair. Unfortunately for him, he couldn't even beg for death in his current situation and could only wait for the incoming, endless suffering.

After a long time, Trunks' wild laughter eventually subsided. He'd laughed to the point that tears were flowing. After his emotions calmed, Trunks remained silent for a little before speaking in a much lower tone, "Bryan, this time it was Laureton, Florida and Adam Menlo allying, otherwise I would have definitely escaped!"

Having reached the ranks of great swordmaster, within the Valley of Sunshine, only the three times berserk Laureton was able to fight evenly with him. It was due to this confidence that Trunks dared to act without fear. Unfortunately, he had underestimated the despicableness and shamelessness of others and had been captured alive in an ambush.

"Say no more, I already know. None of them shall escape your revenge, I promise!" Han Shuo took in a deep breath and calmly promised Trunks.

"Bryan, I could never have expected Laureton to make a move so quickly! Just the night before, Laureton was still drinking and chatting with me. Ha, I was truly too naïve to actually overlook him!" Trunks' smile was self-mocking, but his voice was filled with hatred towards Laureton.

"Laureton... Laureton..." Han Shuo mumbled twice, his eyes gradually becoming cold.

"Master, Trunks' body is still very bad, he shouldn't stay too long in this place, we should leave immediately!" Dark dragon Gilbert wiped the tear stains from the corners of his eyes. Not caring for the filthiness and foul stench from Trunks' body, he supported Trunks onto his body, Han Shuo calmly nodded in agreement. The bone demon blocking the cave entrance suddenly walked out, with a few zombie warriors following close behind. At Han Shuo's order, they picked up all of the bodies from the ground.

During this process, Han Shuo commanded the bone demon to provide a dozen bones. Each zombie warrior made use of the bones' sharpness to pierce these people's legs like piercing grilled fish, heightening their pain. "Let's go!" Han Shuo exclaimed, following up with an incantation. The undead creatures in the depths of the passage disappeared, causing the passage to appear wider.

Chapter 403: Gargoyle Swarm

At the same time when the Rebirth Pill helped Trunks reach the level of great swordmaster, it also helped him reform his body, causing his meridians to be more durable than a normal person's. It was precisely because of this that Han Shuo was able to use the demonic yuan energy to help him recover after they returned to the Soul Destroyer mercenary band's base.

As expected, when Han Shuo brought the severely injured Trunks back to the Soul Destroyer mercenary band's base, the mercenaries had the urge to almost immediately fight to the death against the three powers when they understood the situation. Some mercenaries even charged out in their fury and were only hauled back by Gilbert under Han Shuo's instructions.

Gilbert clearly had some standing within the Soul Destroyer mercenary band. Although the mercenaries were unwilling when they were unyieldingly hauled back by Gilbert, they still yielded to Gilbert's might.

This is to be expected. A mercenary band is also a place where the strong are worshipped. The person with the harder fist would have more persuasiveness. Within the Soul Destroyer mercenary band, even the strength of Trunks was below dark dragon Gilbert. As Gilbert has been in the Soul Destroyer mercenary band for so long, the other mercenaries have long since understood his fearfulness and difficulty to work with. At times, there was no difference between his orders and Trunks'.

While Gilbert was suppressing the impulsive mercenaries, Han Shuo immediately headed toward the inner dwelling without hesitation. He instructed Gilbert without lifting his head, "Use cruel methods to torture those people for me. However, do keep them alive. When Trunks recovers, Trunks will end them himself."

After speaking, Han Shuo already brought Trunks to the interior of the dwelling, leaving behind Asa and the rest whose legs have been pierced like skewers by the bone spears.

As Grant and the rest looked at Asa and the rest who had their tendons cut, their bones broken from head to toe, they still felt unresolved hatred in their hearts. Once Han Shuo left, they followed Gilbert to each choose a victim, bringing them to the dark and damp prison area. There was an entire set of torture tools there!

Bringing Trunks into a bright stone room, Han Shuo sat cross-legged behind Trunks. His palms were placed on Trunks' back, slowly sending strands of demonic yuan energy into Trunks' body, gradually mending Trunks' damaged body.

The reason why demonic yuan energy was more mystical than fighting aura was that apart from possessing enormous killing power, it could also possess more wonderful uses through practiced manipulation. Aiding the injured in recovering was one of these uses of demonic yuan energy.

Trunks' current situation was that the tendons on his limbs were all snapped. However, Trunks' fighting aura still existed and once Trunks' tendons healed, it wouldn't affect his strength. To a swordsman, tendons snapping signified that a person had become a cripple. Even stronger swordsmen would not be of any threat, hence Asa and the rest didn't do more than was required.

Regardless of priests or alchemists in the Profound Continent, their attainments in the treatment of the body and meridians would still be beneath Han Shuo. Hence, Han Shuo had a solution to an unsolvable problem to most people. Trunks' body which had been reformed by the Rebirth pill was easily cleansed of disorder by the circulation of Han Shuo's demonic yuan energy.

As it treated the injuries, the demonic yuan energy became like gentle flowing water, wrapping around all the broken meridians. Han Shuo's consciousness pried into Trunks' body, slowly reattaching the broken meridians and then activated the surplus energy from the Rebirth pill to gather around the broken meridians.

Trunks' body was much stronger than an ordinary person's, but it was still far from Han Shuo's. Hence, when Han Shuo treated Trunks' injuries, he didn't use up much demonic yuan energy. He only needed to get familiar with the precision of meridians and to proficiently set things right.

As time passed silently, Han Shuo who was seated behind Trunks didn't need to focus that attentively as Trunks' condition became better. The meridians only needed to be slowly nourished by Han Shuo's demonic yuan energy. Hence, Han Shuo was able to divert his demonic yuan energy to other matters.

The disappearance of Trunks and the experts of the three powers from the cave in the mountain was discovered by the next wave of people. The three powers were all flustered, not knowing what had happened. Laureton, Florida and Adam Menlo had once again got together anxiously to investigate deeper.

However, no matter how they guessed, they couldn't figure out how the extremely hidden cave was exposed. In the end, the three powers inevitably believed after deliberating that there was a spy within their men, inwardly thinking who among their men could be the culprit.

Without a doubt, the three experts understood that Trunks was rescued and it should be related to the Soul Destroyer mercenary band. The three powers who originally hesitated in taking action due to self-interest and all kinds of scruples now knew that there was no turning back. Laureton and the two others were experienced people, deciding together to immediately attack the Soul Destroyer mercenary band.

As matters stand, wanting to destroy the Soul Destroyer mercenary band while not incurring any losses by capturing Trunks clearly wouldn't work. Although the three powers who have fought which each other for so long knew that this time around they would again incur more losses, they couldn't care too much about it anymore.

At their orders, the Cairo mercenary band, Rainbow Sickle mercenary band, House of Menlo and another five or six smaller mercenary bands driven by profits rapidly gathered more than six thousand people who brazenly departed for the Soul Destroyer mercenary band.

They had no choice but to stop when they reached the location of the Soul Destroyer mercenary band. The various leaders gathered together and started to discuss how to attack the Soul Destroyer mercenary band.

The terrain of the Soul Destroyer mercenary band was extremely special. It was on a protruding wall under a precipice, like a piece of rock hanging halfway up the mountain. This location was just a sheet of whiteness when seen from below, totally concealed by fog. There was only one route that led from the precipice above.

However, if one tries to enter from above, people from the Soul Destroyer mercenary band would naturally discover it. Hence, attacking from above was an incredibly painful affair. It was certain that the losses of the few powers would far exceed their expectations.

As the proverb goes, it was easier to ascend a mountain then descend from it. This saying similarly applied to battling on such a terrain. Sieging a location was always extremely difficult. That was because the process of climbing up the city walls was truly too painful.

However, while climbing up a city's walls, although it was extremely disadvantageous when facing the attacks from above, it was still possible to raise your head and clearly face the sky and use your weapon to block incoming attacks. However, in this location, when descending from the precipice, it would be tough to deal with attacks from below and might even be impossible to see the situation underneath.

Firstly it was because of the fog, secondly, they had to be more cautious while descending as a slip would cause them to fall to their deaths. For Trunks to find such a place to be the Soul Destroyer mercenary band's base, it was an extremely wise decision. This location was hard to attack and if anyone tried to enter, they had to pay an unimaginable price.

Right at this moment, although Laureton and the rest had captured Trunks alive, they didn't dare to rashly attack the Soul Destroyer mercenary band. However, after Trunks had been rescued, they had no other choice but to face this special terrain. Even the method of entering had caused them to debate for a long time.

The three of them were all the astute type and understood that the one who descended first would definitely suffer the most losses. They naturally didn't want to be the first to descend. However, the others also weren't fools. None of the powers were willing to lead such a suicidal attack. Hence when they really had to attack, the delegation suddenly halted.

As they discussed, none of them were willing to let their subordinates be the first to descend. When he recalled that the Soul Destroyer mercenary band were not in the least inferior to them and that this was an easily guarded terrain, Laureton had a headache, not knowing what to do.

"How about we would just keep watch over this precipice. They can't always stay within their base. Otherwise, food and water would definitely become a problem. Once they emerge from their base, we can easily kill them with our strength. We would face cruel attacks if we descend. However, it would similarly be difficult for them to ascend. We can hound them to death by blocking up this position." Florida had a darkened expression as he proposed this malicious plan.

Everyone knew that this plan was useful. However, this would cause the battle to become a long war of attrition. No one could guess how much provision the Soul Destroyer mercenary band had and if they truly wasted their time here, they were unsure if there would be problems at their own bases.

"All of you also know that that fellow Gilbert is a dark dragon. Furthermore, the Soul Destroyer mercenary band also has many mages that can use floating magic. If they depart and use spatial rings to transport provisions, there's no knowing how much time we would waste. I don't think this plan would work." Adam Menlo thought for a while, before suddenly voicing his opposition.

"In that case, what do you think we should do?" When Florida saw that his idea was overruled, his expression became more unsightly as he asked Adam Menlo.

Staying silent for a while, Adam Menlo seemed to be making up his mind. He raised his head to look at Laureton and Florida, saying, "Our House still has a batch of tamed flying creatures. Adding them to the current flying creatures present, they are able to carry three hundred people at one time. If these three hundred men are the experts from our three powers, if they utilize large-scale killing spells when they reach, they should definitely be able to hold for a short while. After that, the flying creatures will repeatedly shuttle our men down. In this way, I feel that we wouldn't need to undergo the process of slowly descending."

Hearing his words, everyone was overjoyed. Florida was equally excited as he smiled and said, "Old thing, you obviously have such a good method, why didn't you mention it earlier?"

Adam Menlo's expression darkened as his eyes twitched, thinking inwardly. Those are what is guarding my base and I originally intended to use them to deal with you all in the end. If not for us really no having other means, why would I bring them out? Of course, Adam Menlo naturally didn't say these words aloud, only appearing calm and silent.

"Hey, with this method, every issue can be solved. If we are able to annihilate the Soul Destroyer mercenary band, the contribution of your House of Menlo is the biggest. Come, come, let us carefully discuss how many experts each power would send." Laureton laughed refreshingly as he shouted at the leaders of the various powers.

—

After a whole day and night, Han Shuo who had brought Trunks into the interior of the mountain finally exited the cave. Gilbert, Grant and the rest quickly hurried over when they heard the news. Once Gilbert saw Han Shuo, he hurriedly inquired, "Master, how is Trunks?"

"Don't worry, after resting for a month, Trunks would be able to be as before!" Han Shuo consoled Gilbert. His expression darkened soon after as he said, "The three powers and other small mercenary bands are already in the vicinity and are currently discussing how to attack us. They have six thousand people, we must deal with them cautiously."

"We have a thousand and seven hundred people here. Rely on the terrain advantage, they can forget about easily attacking us. Hmph, Leader had been tormented by them till such a state. We must make them pay the price. Whoever dares to descend will die by our hands.” Grant and Trunks were friends for many years and had even worked together in the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band. He was unable to restrain his anger and shouted loudly.

Han Shuo could totally understand Grant’s anger. However, he still shared what he heard, “The House of Menlo is dispatching their secret flying creatures. These creatures can carry three hundred men down each time. If there are tens of mages within this three hundred, large-scale killing spells would cause an enormous obstruction to us.

During that time, these flying creatures can bring another three hundred people down. At that time, the advantages of this location would no longer exist. Hence, we absolutely cannot lower our guard and must have the proper preparation. Otherwise, we would definitely lose this battle.”

Hearing what Han Shuo said, Grant was shocked and suddenly calmed down. He knew that if it was truly as Han Shuo described, the one thousand and seven hundred people in the Soul Destroyer mercenary band simply had no way of resisting the attack of six thousand people.

“What should we do then?” Grant somewhat anxiously inquired.

“Master, Lania and I will transform into our true forms and exterminate them from the sky.” dark dragon Gilbert shouted viciously, prepared for a massacre.

“If it was only three hundred ordinary swordsmen, Lania and yourself transforming into your true forms would be enough. However, there are many mages within these three hundred experts. The two of you definitely wouldn’t be able to resist the attacks of so many experts. Furthermore, their goal is only to descend here. How many people can you and Lania prevent from coming down? Although this is an idea, it doesn’t cover all grounds!” Han Shuo looked at the eager dark dragon Gilbert, calming stating the facts.

“What should we do then?” This time it was the hydra Lania who asked, the coquettish Lania and the wanton Gilbert were truly a match made in heaven. When the two lascivious races bonded, their turbulent feelings caused even Han Shuo to be stupefied.

“Yea. Master, what do you think we should do?” Gilbert had a puzzled expression as he bitterly asked Han Shuo.

“We’ll follow your suggestion, with Lania and yourself intercepting them in the air. In addition, I will summon many gargoyles to help you. When they are about to land, the archers below will fire constantly. As long as the first wave of the strongest experts is killed, it would be hard for them to win this battle.” Han Shuo sneered as he replied Gilbert.

Part 2

Laureton, Florida and Adam Menlo simply had no idea that their every move was under Han Shuo’s surveillance. They were still under the impression that their attack would be extremely unexpected and at least the first wave of flying magical creatures would be able to easily descend and cause huge problems for the Soul Destroyer mercenary band. They would then be able to unceasingly transport experts down, settling the battle in one go.

Unfortunately, they would never have guessed that Han Shuo was able to know their every intention and was able to calmly put in place preventive measures to attack their “hidden” descend head-on. With a large number of gargoyles, Han Shuo had confidence in dealing a disastrous setback to the first wave of experts.

Once most of the experts in the first wave were killed, not only would it have a great impact on their morale, the next wave of experts would also be afraid to descend on the flying magical creatures. With the advantageous terrain, Han Shuo believed that the three powers wouldn’t achieve what they wanted this time around.

The twelve mystical demons scrutinized every action of the three powers. Han Shuo methodically instructed Grant and the rest to gather the mercenaries that were good at shooting, distributing all the various bows and arrows. Even the spears and javelins were all brought out, in preparation to face the first wave of experts on the flying magical creatures.

As time passed silently, Laureton and the rest had discussed for a long time. Finally, they finally determined the three hundred experts in the first wave and they would be protecting tens of valuable mages. The first wave could be described as the concentration of the strongest experts in the few powers, with the weakest swordsmen which were included in the first wave also reaching the rank of senior swordsmen.

The dead of night was able to conceal their movements. At night, the fog would also become denser, hence the operation was expectedly arranged to be a night mission.

As the full moon slowly rose into the sky and shined gentle moonlight, the lofty precipice was shrouded in white mist. More than two hundred harpies, frost eagles, griffins, pegasus and various flying magical creatures were formed into teams. They were gathered from the House of Menlo under Adam Menlo's orders.

The three hundred experts picked out from the various powers were ready and waiting for these flying magical beasts to appear. At the instructions of the heads of the three powers, all of them mounted the tamed magical creatures. The leaders Adam Menlo and Florida were also among them.

Florida himself was a mage and didn't require any flying magical creature mount. Adam Menlo rode his super rank golden-winged roc, which had finally recovered after he had spent a huge amount of resources on it. However, the feathers on the golden-winged roc were very sparse, making it look a little miserable.

The golden-winged roc was in such miserable circumstances due to protecting Adam Menlo. It was also because of Adam Menlo's endless hatred toward Han Shuo that he made a move on Trunks.

Although Laureton could reach thrice berserk and his strength was higher than both Adam Menlo and Florida, he still was unable to fly.

Furthermore, they needed someone to control and arrange matters for the majority left behind. Hence Laureton rationally stayed behind to take charge, instead of joining the first wave of attack.

Under the hazy moonlight, the flying magical creatures spread their wings, forming a screen in the sky which obstructed the moonlight. Lifting his head as he gazed at the ascending magical creatures, Laureton was actually somewhat uneasy.

Actually, ever since Trunks had suddenly be miraculously rescued, Laureton had an uneasy feeling. This was because, no matter how he saw it, the Soul Destroyer mercenary band should have sunk into frenetic circumstances after they lost their leader Trunks. He was clear about dark dragon Gilbert's strength, but as he had been in contact with Gilbert before, Laureton knew that Gilbert was purely a subordinate and definitely wouldn't be able to come up with any meticulous plans!

The reason why Laureton waited for so long was that he firmly believed that the Soul Destroyer mercenary band would leave their natural stronghold and attack. At that time, they would be able to easily annihilate the Soul Destroyer mercenary band's experts. However, the Soul Destroyer mercenary band's ability to stay calm surpassed his expectations. Not only did they not exit their natural stronghold, they even recalled all their experts in the surroundings.

When the news of Trunks' disappearance had spread, Laureton was truly surprised. After much contemplation, he gradually felt that there was another hidden hand within the Soul Destroyer mercenary band controlling the ground. It was precisely because of this hidden existence that the Soul Destroyer mercenary band were able to stabilize and slowly start to organize their resistance.

"I must be thinking too much. Currently, it has reached an important period of time within Ossen City. That fellow shouldn't have come." Laureton rubbed his head as he muttered to himself.

"Leader, it would be absolutely safe this time around. The person you are worried about wouldn't appear. I've received news yesterday that he is definitely still within Ossen City. It is impossible that he would show up in the Valley of Sunshine. Don't worry, we will definitely be able to eradicate the Soul Destroyer mercenary band." Harris understood what Laureton was worried about. The reason why Laureton had chosen to act this time around was precisely because he was sure that Han Shuo was too busy to worry about the matters of the Valley of Sunshine. Otherwise, Laureton might still be hesitating!

"I hope that is the case. Although Trunks was frightening, he still isn't my primary concern. Only that fellow would be the most troublesome opponent. Ah, it's a pity. Trunks and that fellow are true men. If not for Trunks' Soul Destroyer mercenary band becoming the biggest threat to our mercenary band, perhaps I could still be friends with them." Laureton sighed as he said to Harris.

"This is their choice. When they first arrived in the Valley of Sunshine, Leader had already tossed them an olive branch, only for them to reject it. Now that things have reached this point, Leader can't be blamed to have acted ruthlessly. This is all due to their ambition to seize the power in our hands." Harris knitted his brows as he reassured Laureton.

"Forget it, let's drop the conversation. However, I feel that something's not right. I hope that Florida and Adam Menlo wouldn't disappoint me this time." Laureton's bald head was illuminated by the moonlight. This meant that Adam Menlo's flying magical creatures no longer concealed the moonlight and had already entered the foggy area.

"Everyone be careful. Although they are unable to notice us, we still need to be attentive and be cautious of any changes!" Adam Menlo said to the surrounding people while on his super rank golden-winged roc.

"Leader, be at ease. We know what needs to be done." The people from the House of Menlo smiled as they responded, grasping the magical staffs in their hands tightly, prepared to deal with any possible changes.

A short distance away from Adam Menlo's flying troop, Florida's eyes sparkled as he carefully watched for any potential anomalies. He then softly whispered to his trusted aides, as though discussing details of the operation later.

As the wave of people passed through the dense fog, they reached an area where the fog was thinner. In a few hundred meters, they would have entered the territory of the Soul Destroyer mercenary band. A huge indistinct shadow gradually appeared from within the thin fog. Transforming into a dark dragon, Gilbert's lantern-like eyes stared at the three hundred intruders. Without saying a word, a dragon breath which was mixed with a fishy smell was shot out.

Having evolved into a rank two magical creature, the toxins in Gilbert's breath was even more frightening. In such a humid environment, the strength of the toxins was enhanced substantially. More than ten swordsmen and mages who rode on harpies were the first to be sprayed head-on by Gilbert's breath.

An extremely stifling feeling was suddenly felt on their chests as if they were suddenly being crushed by a mountain. Apart from the harpies who were also poisonous magical creatures, the humans were all dizzy with blood flowing from their nose and mouth. Besides the toxins, the force of the dragon breath was also equally terrifying. The harpies shrilled loudly as they swayed, throwing off more than ten people in the process.

"Dark dragon! It's that dark dragon!" Terrified shouts could suddenly be heard. Some people have clearly spotted Gilbert.

"Hey, all of you dare to come to my territory, die for me!" Gilbert's imposing voice resounded through the sky. With a swing of his neck, a raging fireball was shot out, burning down more than ten magical creatures and humans who had scattered.

"Attack, it's just a dark dragon, there's nothing to be afraid of!" Adam Menlo who had just arrived suddenly shouted aloud, the wings of the golden-winged roc underneath him suddenly set off a hurricane, covering an area of ten meters, directing Gilbert's fireball to the side.

Riding the golden-winged roc, Adam Menlo who held a pike which sparkled in silver radiance charged toward Gilbert like lightning. On the other side, a few mages who had steadied themselves interweaved magic spells and continuously shooting them toward Gilbert.

If it was only Adam Menlo, Gilbert wasn't afraid. However, just as Han Shuo described, the first wave of attack which gathered the strongest experts from the three powers was definitely not something Gilbert could deal with himself. Several magic spells of different types suddenly flew over and Gilbert had no choice but to dodge the attacks and hide within the dense fog.

"Hmph, with just a dark dragon, what can you achieve!" Adam Menlo loudly ridiculed, waving his hand and said, "Our whereabouts are exposed, we need to quickly head to that place. We must not delay and give them the chance to prepare."

"Charge. After tonight, the Soul Destroyer mercenary band would forever disappear from the Valley of Sunshine!" Florida similarly shouted coldly, utilizing floating magic to take the lead toward Adam Menlo's location. "Huhu... Huhu..." strange noises suddenly appeared from all directions.

"That's weird, what's that sound!" A mercenary said what was on everyone's mind as everyone looked around puzzledly, not knowing what was that queer sound.

Out of a sudden, a dense crowd of creatures enveloped them like a dark cloud as dense as a swarm of locusts. They saw thousands upon thousands of gargoyles that were arranged in orderly lines rapidly approaching the area.

Gargoyles aren't formidable undead creatures, their individual fighting strength was lower than any flying magical creature from the House of Menlo.

However, gargoyles usually appeared in groups!

There would definitely not be just one or two gargoyles appearing. This time around, with his greatly improved mental energy, Han Shuo had summoned more than four thousand gargoyles at once, which seriously seemed like a dense dark cloud.

Any living creature at scale would be extremely terrifying. Even for mosquitoes and ants, once they were at scale, they would also be the nightmare of stronger creatures. For gargoyles who individually had an extraordinary attack, once they were at scale, they would naturally be more terrifying. When the surrounding gargoyles seemed to fill up the entire space, the first wave of experts who had thought that their sneak attack wouldn't be detected were all momentarily stunned.

“Light mages, purify these filthy existences for me!” Florida was only distracted for two seconds and was the first to shout out orders when the gargoyles were getting closer.

After he shouted, Florida himself started to act, rapidly retrieving his magic staff and reciting a magic spell. A ring condensed from light elements suddenly flew toward the gargoyle swarm. The ring immediately turned thirty gargoyles into asses when it charged into the gargoyle swarm.

There were another seven light mages within this group of experts. They were unwilling to fall behind, all of them unleashing the light magic they were proficient at when they saw Florida making his move. As each light magic spell entered the gargoyle swarm, they really caused huge damage to the group of gargoyles.

However, the strongest Florida was only a light archmage. The stronger of the rest were only adept mages while the weaker ones were only novice mages. There was a limit to the strength of the light magic they could unleash and a loss of two hundred gargoyles was simply negligible when compared to their total number of four thousand.

“Idiots! Undead creatures do fear light magic, but other elements of magic were also useful. Why are all of you staring blankly over there, act quickly!” When Adam Menlo saw that the remaining mages merely watched when the light mages acted, he cursed them exasperatedly.

Being scolded by Adam Menlo, these people suddenly reacted, the mages started chanting different spells one after another. Wind blades, lightning and fire serpents whistled as they flew from every direction toward the gargoyles, suddenly causing the deaths of another four to five hundred.

However, at this moment, the gargoyles had finally charged into their ranks. Groups of gargoyles scattered, clawing and biting specifically at these mages. The magical creatures under them also spared no effort in battling the gargoyle swarm.

Suddenly, magnificent rays of light radiated in the whole sky as a dark shadow flew about, accompanied by mournful cries from time to time as one person after another fell from the towering height, their bodies torn and their bones crushed.

“Wakaka, I’m here again. I want to see how do you all beat me this time around!” dark dragon Gilbert shouted arrogantly once again, his enormous body extending out.

By dark dragon Gilbert’s side, hydra Lania was like an enormous octopus, charging together with dark dragon Gilbert towards the experts who were attacked by the gargoyle swarm.

“Florida, we meet again!” Han Shuo’s voice suddenly sounded. Within another wave of gargoyles, Han Shuo had a dark expression as he walked on the air toward Florida.

Behind Han Shuo, the numerous gargoyles whistled and danced violently, as an enormous undead flying creature slowly appeared from within the gargoyle swarm. The majestic little skeleton raised his three-meter long bone spear as he rode on the bone demon, closely following behind Han Shuo.

Chapter 404: I learned it from you

When the first gargoyle appeared, Florida already knew that the fiend had arrived. However, this battle had no turning back. Hence, Florida attacked without regard, attempting to first decrease the number of undead creatures as much as possible and forcefully charging to the Soul Destroyer mercenary band's base and fight them to the death.

Countless gargoyles surrounded Han Shuo, accompanying Han Shuo as he headed toward Florida. At this moment, Florida was frightened but the ire in his heart also couldn't be contained, unwaveringly staring at Han Shuo with a hostile gaze.

Florida had no reason not to hate him!

From the day Han Shuo arrived at the Valley of Sunshine, it seemed to have cemented Florida's ill fortune. Firstly, Han Shuo snatched away Phoebe who Florida fancied. Soon after, he had grouped together with Florida's arch-enemy Trunks. He also embarrassed Florida time and time again, even seriously injuring him in public.

Besides that, Han Shuo had even wrecked their meticulously planned ambush, violently killing his beloved grandfather, causing his relationship with the Church of Light to unprecedentedly worsen.

Before Han Shuo came to the Valley of Sunshine, everything within the Valley of Sunshine operated as Florida fancied. Drawing support from the Church of Light, Florida had complete confidence in replacing the Cairo mercenary band and become the true master of the Valley of Sunshine and control the enormous resources of the Valley of Sunshine.

Based on his plan, the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band would have the rights to control the Valley of Sunshine, while Butcher Gustav assisted in the shadows. He would be able to nibble away at the various powers within the Valley of Sunshine and possess everything in the Valley of Sunshine at that time.

Unfortunately, Han Shuo's appearance caused the situation to keep regressing, developing in a completely different trajectory from what he imagined. When Han Shuo left, he still left behind the cancerous Soul Destroyer mercenary band, nibbling at his hopes and expectations little by little.

“My greatest mistake is precisely that I didn’t risk everything to kill you in the beginning!” Giving Han Shuo a death stare, Florida gnashed his teeth as he spoke, his voice filled with bitter resentment and hatred.

Han Shuo suddenly laughed, his laughter extremely bright and clear, as if his laughter became a huge winding dragon that soared into the skies. Not just the immediate area, even Laureton and the rest below were able to hear it clearly.

“Florida, I truly feel pity for you. You naively believed that with your grandfather’s support, you would be able to act as you wished in the Valley of Sunshine. On one hand, you despicably seized the Rainbow Sickie mercenary band, and on another, you collaborated with the most merciless bandit in the shadows. You really think that you are above the law!

Heh, what a pity, what a pity. There’s not only you who is smart and it’s not your turn to call the shots. Your grandfather wasn’t able to protect you your whole life. Now that that old bastard Ferguson is dead, you no longer have any cards to play. Ha, why am I saying so much nonsense to you? In any case, you will die soon!” Han Shuo smiled as he mocked Florida.

When he heard Han Shuo’s mocking, Florida’s expression became extremely downcast as if someone had stepped on him with a filthy shoe. He glared hatefully at the gradually approaching Han Shuo, taking a deep breath and said, “Today, only one of us will survive!”

“Of course it is you who will die!” Han Shuo shouted coldly, suddenly speeding up his steps toward Florida. He was like a streak of lightning that cut across the sky, charging towards Florida at great speed.

At the same time, the other thousands of gargoyles behind Han Shuo suddenly scattered into different troops, swarming like locusts toward the experts that were being attacked by the previous group of gargoyles.

The little skeleton who rode on the flying bone demon stood majestically on a flat portion of the bone demon's back. With his Purple Demon Eye sparkling, he sized up the battlefield. Pointing his three-meter long bone spear toward Adam Menlo, the wings of the bone demon flapped once, directly gliding toward Adam Menlo.

The harpies, frost eagles, pegasus, griffins, wyverns and various types of magical creatures had all been tamed by the House of Menlo at high costs. These flying magical beasts were each able to face a few gargoyles at once. Furthermore, they were either carrying a high ranked swordsman or a mage. In theory, they shouldn't be at much of a disadvantage.

Unfortunately, the reality wasn't as such. Although a magical creature and the expert riding it should be able to handle tens of gargoyles, when a swarm of gargoyles suddenly charged over, the dense aura was able to shake their confidence. The strong rotting stench was hard to bear, causing more trouble than they expected.

There were simply too many gargoyles. When tens of gargoyles attacked a magical creature together, even creatures like harpies and griffins were unable to withstand it. Furthermore, there were also Gilbert and hydra Lania, two tyrannical super rank magical creatures stirring up trouble. In just a few moments, many experts had either been killed by the gargoyles or the magical creature they rode had been beat to death, causing them to also fall into the endless abyss.

Within the layers of gargoyles, the little skeleton held its three-meter long bone spear. The little skeleton and the bone demon were both immune to ordinary spells. As it rode the bone demon, it was incomparably awe-inspiring. While flying toward Adam Menlo, a harpy brandished its sharp claw toward the little skeleton. Before it could even near the little skeleton, it was pierced through by the little skeleton's three-meter long bone spear.

After the petite little skeleton had pierced through the several meter long harpy, the powerful spear didn't pause and instead followed through to kill the fire mage as well. The little skeleton used the bone spear easily lift up the huge and heavy harpy. With a mysterious tremble of his finger bone, an enormous amount of death qi violently flowed through the bone spear into the harpy's body. The harpy suddenly exploded wildly above his head.

Chunks of the harpy's flesh mixed with rich death qi scattered like heavy rocks. Whoever was hit by the flesh of the harpy and was infected by even the tiniest amount of death qi would ice cold and uncomfortable from head to toe, causing their movements to become stiff.

As the little skeleton headed toward Adam Menlo, it had merely got rid of a harpy effortlessly along the way. Suddenly, everyone understood the terror of this undead creature. As they dealt with the countless gargoyles that covered the sky, they were still extremely well coordinated, opening a path for the little skeleton directly toward Adam Menlo.

As Adam Menlo closely watched dark dragon Gilbert, the super rank golden-winged roc under him was able to proficiently manipulate wind magic, sending out waves of wind blades in all directions without much movement from its wings. All the gargoyles that were attempting to approach Adam Menlo were killed one after another by the golden-winged roc's wind blades.

Facing a golden-winged roc which was a super rank magical creature of the highest level, the swarms of gargoyles were clearly unable to achieve much. Even with most of its feathers missing. The defensive ability of the golden-winged roc body was still much stronger than ordinary magical creatures.

It was exactly because of this that Han Shuo didn't waste many gargoyles in attacking Adam Menlo, merely asking Gilbert to impede him. Having evolved and becoming a rank two magical creature, Gilbert could be said to be evenly matched with the golden-winged roc that Han Shuo had previously severely injured.

All kinds of toxins and raging flames were shot out, mixing with Lania's reckless attacks. These created a large hindrance to Adam Menlo and the golden-winged roc, causing Adam Menlo to be pestered beyond his endurance.

However, the golden-winged roc was a super rank magical creature and Adam Menlo himself was a sky rider. With the two of them combined together, their strengths were amplified. Hence, Gilbert and Lania were unable to get an advantage.

Just as Gilbert was shouting arrogantly at Adam Menlo as he annoyed him, the little skeleton appeared on its bone demon. When the little skeleton reached the area, his Purple Demon Eye shone as it made peculiar gestures toward Gilbert.

The little skeleton first used the bone spear to point at Gilbert before pointing toward the others who were desperately resisting the gargoyles. Soon after, at Gilbert's amazement, the little skeleton then pointed his bone spear at Adam Menlo, before using his other hand to point toward himself.

After he finished gesturing, the little skeleton's Purple Demon Eye sparkled as he looked straight at Gilbert. Gilbert's lantern-like eyes stared foolishly at the little skeleton. While Lania was still obstructing Adam Menlo and the golden-winged roc, Gilbert finally asked cautiously, "Are you saying that you want me to attack the others and leave this fellow to you?"

The little skeleton's Purple Demon Eye brightened, casually nodding toward Gilbert, implying, "That's right. Get a move on, don't obstruct me anymore!"

Dark dragon Gilbert was extremely flabbergasted, attentively watching the little skeleton and the undead creature he rode, somewhat stunned for a moment.

"Dammit, you heartless creature, you still aren't coming to help me?" By the side, Lania was desperately fending off Adam Menlo's attacks. When she suddenly saw that Gilbert who was originally fighting side by side with her actually staring blankly at the side, she couldn't help but scold him hastily.

Dark dragon Gilbert quickly came to his senses, looking at the little skeleton once again, he saw the little skeleton raising the three-meter-long bone spear and arrogantly charged toward Adam Menlo. When the threemeter-long bone spear pointed at Adam Menlo, an incomparably huge amount of death qi rippled in all directions.

It was only at this moment that Gilbert truly felt that the seemingly small body of the little skeleton contained such a frightening mystical power! Gilbert suddenly understood that although he had evolved into a rank two magical creature, the little skeleton was actually more terrifying than him, so much so that the little skeleton possessed enough strength to kill Gilbert himself.

“Lania, let’s go. We’ll go and kill others rather than torment this old thing!” Having understood the little skeleton’s message, Gilbert suddenly shouted loudly toward Lania.

“You idiot! Are you crazy? Didn’t master instruct the two of us to impede this old thing. Are you seeking to be punished? Why aren’t you coming over to help me!” As Lania spoke, her body gradually became hidden and soon after an enormous column of water charged toward Adam Menlo.

“There is someone who offered to deal with him, let’s not stay and hinder him any longer, let’s leave!” dark dragon Gilbert replied loudly, “You coquettish lady, hurry up and come with me!” Lania who had used the column of water to conceal her body gradually revealed herself. When she saw the little skeleton who was riding the flying bone demon over, Lania suddenly felt a feeling of being between laughter and tears rise within her heart. She then mocked Gilbert, saying, “Stupid dragon, this little skeleton is the volunteer you mentioned?”

Just as Lania finished her sentence, the little skeleton’s Purple Demon Eye suddenly lit up with glaring purple light. The three meter long bone spear suddenly transmitted a surge of death qi, causing a feeling of desolation to spread in all directions.

Lania naturally felt the tremendous aura and was incomparably surprised as she watched the little skeleton fly over. She immediately became silent, and with Gilbert’s repeated urging, Lania no longer hesitated, her heart filled with countless doubts as she hurriedly avoided the approaching little skeleton and bone demon, flying to Gilbert’s side.

“What, what is with this little skeleton? Why do I feel a terrifying strength from him?” When Lania reached Gilbert’s side, she could no longer suppress the puzzlement in her heart, frantically asking Gilbert.

Part 2

“Don’t ask me, I don’t know either. I only know that he is Master’s first undead creature. However, what I would never be able to understand is, how does a little skeleton have the same frightening aura as a bone dragon!” Gilbert blinked his lantern-sized eyes as he explained to Lania.

Hearing Gilbert’s explanation, Lania was dumbfounded. She couldn’t help but cast her line of sight toward Gilbert’s master.

In an area fifty meters away, Han Shuo had a ruthless and gloomy expression as he manipulated the Demonslayer Edge which was dripping fresh blood, setting out to massacre all the enemies around him.

Florida was holed up within layers of protection by his Rainbow Sickle mercenary band, unceasingly casting various light magic spells to purify the surrounding frantically charging gargoyles. The gargoyles were annihilated one after another by his light magic.

As a light mage, Florida was the largest threat to these undead creatures within the group. As he was also the leader of the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band, his subordinates all surrounded him, doing their utmost to protect him.

Florida, who was being protected by the crowd, consumed all his energy to cast light magic spells in succession, purifying all the gargoyles in their immediate area into dust. The low-rank gargoyles were as frail as zombie warriors, being eliminated one after another by the light archmage’s light magic.

As the battle raged on in the air, it was only Florida’s area that didn’t have many gargoyles breaking through. Based on the situation, this area ought to be the area where the elites of the three powers felt the most comfortable.

However, the reality was that the area Florida was in suffered the most casualties. The number of magical creatures and elites killed far exceeded the number that was besieged by gargoyles in other areas.

Simply because Han Shuo was here!

As he wielded the Demonslayer Edge, Han Shuo stared at Florida like a blood-soaked demon god. Han Shuo's current strength far exceeded Florida's. If not for the valiant mercenaries from the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band who sacrificed their lives to resist Han Shuo, Florida would have long since died by Han Shuo's hand.

Despite the sacrifices of the mercenaries and the layers of protection, Florida's leg was still pierced through, resulting in a bloody hole. If not for a swordmaster by his side reacting in time, Florida might have suffered even heavier injuries.

In just a moment of effort, the Demonslayer Edge had killed five harpies, three griffins, two frost eagles and thirteen experts of the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band. The drops of scarlet blood that rolled off the Demonslayer Edge symbolized the experts Florida depended on to still be alive until now.

"Heh, how long more can you hide for!" Han Shuo smiled ruthlessly, tossing a pegasus' corpse downwards as he ridiculed Florida.

"Le, leader, what should we do, should we retreat?" by Florida's side, the swordmaster who had saved Florida's life looked at the fiend-like Han Shuo, his lips trembling as he asked Florida.

"We still have a chance. Don't you see that the number of gargoyles in the sky decreasing? Gargoyles are after all just low ranked undead creatures. Under the attack of so many spells, they are simply unable to obstruct our progress!" Florida who was hidden in the crowd inspected the surroundings and replied encouragingly. "But we are only left with a hundred people!" The swordmaster clearly feared Florida but still stated the facts.

"We must obtain victory. Otherwise, the three powers would no longer have the chance to hold the greatest power in the Valley of Sunshine!" Florida was flustered and exasperated as he bellowed in rage.

How could he not know that two-thirds of the experts from the three powers have already died? However, he understood that at this moment, they could only persist and fight on. Otherwise, the huge number of casualties would have been in vain.

Swish, swish, swish!

A large amount of arrows suddenly shot out from the Soul Destroyer mercenary band in the distance. The arrow rain was locked onto the invading magical creatures and in just a moment, more than ten magical creatures who were nearing the area were suddenly riddled with holes like a hornet's nest.

"Everyone retreat!" A roar that resounded across the whole area suddenly sounded from a remote place, the sound originating from Cairo mercenary band's Laureton.

Laureton's bald head was incomparably shiny and his expression extremely unsightly. A mage stood by his side, casting Sky's Eye and describing the battle in the sky to Laureton.

Although Laureton had yet to participate in the battle, there were already other experts from the Cairo mercenary band that had entered the battle in the skies. Seeing many of his trusted brothers dying tragically, Laureton knew that the so-called sneak-attack had completely failed. Laureton had no choice but to berserk and call for a retreat so as to prevent the losses from increasing.

As Laureton's roar resounded through the sky, Florida and Adam Menlo who were above naturally heard it. Without waiting for them to move, the surviving experts of the Cairo mercenary band immediately descended without saying a single word.

While Adam Menlo was forced to repeatedly fall back by the three-meter-long bone spear wielding little skeleton, the sullen and depressed feeling in his heart was the strongest in his entire life. He was unable to understand how the little skeleton before him would have such a rich and strong aura of death.

The little skeleton's bone spear carried a terrifying corrosive death qi, every attack causing incomparable suffering to Adam Menlo. If not for the golden-winged roc helping him to fend off the attacks and receiving many wounds in the process, the little skeleton might have already pierced through Adam Menlo's body.

"Wh, what exactly are you?" Adam Menlo asked repeated. He could sense that the little skeleton possessed intelligence. Unfortunately, the little skeleton was unable to answer him and instead wielded his bone spear repeatedly, causing Adam Menlo to retreat little by little.

"Ma, master, I can't hold on!" After the golden-winged roc helped Adam Menlo withstand a few strikes, it had eventually reached its limits and gently called to Adam Menlo.

At the very same moment, Laureton's loud shouts could be heard from below. Adam Menlo could only stare blankly for a moment. When he realized that the people from the Cairo mercenary band retreating in an attempt to break away from the battlefield, he suddenly felt a powerless feeling of despair rise in his heart. "Let's go. We'll, we'll retreat too!" When Adam Menlo gave the order, he truly felt like crying. Having brought out the hidden cards of the House of Menlo, Adam Menlo originally thought that they would be able to effortlessly eliminate the Soul Destroyer mercenary band. Who would have known that the jinx would appear once again, simply using a swarm of gargoyles that filled the sky to turn around the situation and even causing huge losses?

Although this wave of attackers only had three hundred people, these were the true elites of the three powers, the foundation they depended on. Each one of them was an expert that could face ten people alone. But who would have thought that in the end, they would suffer such a fate.

A shrill cry could suddenly be heard from the golden-winged roc. The golden-winged roc rolled in pain while saying, "Master, master, there's something happening within my body. I can't, I can't take it anymore!"

A clear popping sound could suddenly be heard from within the golden-winged roc's body. The golden-winged roc's huge body could be seen withering slowly as fresh blood sprayed out like fine rain.

Intense corrosive death qi which converged within the rich killing intent suddenly exploded violently within the golden-winged roc, causing the interior of the golden-winged roc to rapidly shatter and the aura of life to gradually leave the golden-winged roc.

In the distance, Han Shuo who was preparing to finish Florida off suddenly detected an extremely familiar aura. Turning toward the aura, he suddenly discovered the changes within the golden-winged roc's body, sensing the familiar sinister killing intent within. Han Shuo was shocked as he looked at the little skeleton whose Purple Demon Eye sparkled in bright light as he closely watched the golden-winged roc. Only Han Shuo knew that the intense death qi within the golden-winged roc was bound into a ball by the demonic magic's Hidden Explosion Technique. He had inserted the concealed explosive death qi when the bone spear pierced through the golden-winged roc's body, suddenly detonating it when it was unprepared, causing the golden-winged roc's innards to suddenly explode!

Han Shuo had already known previously that the little skeleton knew some demonic magic. However, he had never expected that the little skeleton had become so sinister. For an undead creature to use such malicious methods, this made Han Shuo to truly feel extremely stunned, causing him to sigh.

"This fellow is truly becoming more and more vicious, able to control such a vicious method. I truly don't know how he does it!" Han Shuo repeatedly lamented in his heart.

"Father, I learned all of these from you. I've inherited part of your intelligence!" The little skeleton suddenly transmitted a message, as though he knew of Han Shuo's puzzlement and wanted to give Han Shuo an explanation.

Han Shuo was stunned, staring blankly on the spot. Am I that sinister and malicious? Han Shuo laughed bitterly as he thought to himself.

"Strike him hard while he's down! I learned this from Father as well!" The little skeleton transmitted another message over. As Han Shuo watched in astonishment, the little skeleton rode the bone skeleton and suddenly flew toward Adam Menlo.

Adam Menlo who was sent rolling repeatedly due to the inner explosion of the golden-winged roc wasn't able to even stand still at this moment, simply unable to construct an effective defense.

Right at this moment, the little skeleton's bone spear shot over once again. This time around, there was no longer the golden-winged roc helping him to withstand it. By the time Adam Menlo could react, the sharp pain from the bone spear had already spread through his whole body. He lowered his head, discovering a huge hole in his chest.

The three meter long bone spear which had seized his life flew in a loop after it pierced through his body, returning to the little skeleton's hand once again. The little skeleton's sparkling Purple Demon Eye looked on as Adam Menlo gradually lost consciousness before turning around to leave.

"Father, did I do the right thing?" After the little skeleton killed Adam Menlo, he sent a message to Han Shuo once again to seek confirmation.

At this point, Han Shuo was thoroughly speechless!

Chapter 405: Unable to escape

Not only did the little skeleton have intelligence, it was also a little sinister and ruthless. This really caused Han Shuo to feel conflicted.

However, what Han Shuo could be sure of was that the current the little skeleton would be able to survive better in the netherworld. In that realm full of slaughter and invasion, the little skeleton was strong enough to let him feel reassured.

With the head of the House of Menlo dead, the willpower that Florida had just barely maintained finally collapsed. Florida no longer dared to continue staying in the air, desperately yelling for his men to retreat and flew towards Laureton.

“Hehe, you are still thinking of escaping!” Han Shuo’s cold laugh suddenly arose. Issuing an order, dark dragon Gilbert, hydra Lania and the little skeleton all abruptly gathered by Han Shuo’s side and fought their way toward Florida.

There were still around twenty experts of the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band surrounding Florida. Once Florida met up with Laureton, killing him would become extremely difficult. This time, Han Shuo was resolute in killing Florida, so as to avoid leaving endless trouble for Trunks.

Before, when Han Shuo alone headed towards Florida with murderous intent, the experts that surrounded Florida disregarded everything to attack Han Shuo. Although Han Shuo had killed a number of experts along the way, he was still unable to finish off Florida like he’d wanted to.

However, with the addition of two super rank magical creatures and the little skeleton, the experts surrounding Florida were unable to threaten them. Han Shuo only needed to keep his eyes on Florida. The rest were naturally disposed of by the little skeleton and the others.

Rain of fire, ice cones, wind blades, lightning and other spells were recklessly aimed at Han Shuo and the others. Because of this shower of magic, the dim sky suddenly became colorful, as though a group of beautiful fireworks was glamorously blooming open.

Han Shuo's demonic yuan energy circulated, a thin cicada wing-like protective layer surrounded his body. On the outer surface, a large bone shield with bone thorns savagely poking out formed. Most of the spells were blocked by the bone shield. Gilbert and Lania made use of this opportunity to release attacks of toxins and torrential rain.

Bearing the murky protective layer, Han Shuo flashed through the crowd. After continuously shifting a few times, he had already arrived in front of Florida.

A dense burst of bone spears suddenly shot out explosively from Han Shuo. The group of people who were defending against Gilbert and Lania's attacks became even more flustered. At this time, the Demonslayer Edge in Han Shuo's hands soundlessly disappeared again and gradually closing in from a hidden angle.

The little skeleton, who was riding the bone demon, had unexpectedly arrived behind Florida's group. It imposingly raised up its three-meter-long bone lance and thrusting it toward Florida and the others who have just reacted. The rich death qi carried a coldness and desolation that did not exist in this world.

"Be-behind!" Florida's group of people reacted relatively swiftly. Once they felt the violent wind from behind, they realized the danger behind them.

When the little skeleton killed Adam Menlo earlier, as Han Shuo did not fiercely attack Florida's group as he was watching attentively in surprise, they also had the time to see the whole process. The little skeleton who was able to kill Adam Menlo who was riding the golden-winged roc was definitely as dangerous to Florida as Han Shuo himself. Hence he immediately shouted loudly once he saw the little skeleton attacking from behind them.

With the current state of the situation, it was clear that the number of people assisting Florida wasn't enough. With Gilbert and Lania attacking from the sides, the overbearing Han Shuo attacked from the front and suddenly there was an otherworldly powerhouse appearing behind them.

If they were focused on one side, they wouldn't be able to resist another. Facing the waves of simultaneous attacks, Florida suddenly felt an intense unease within his heart. He looked at Han Shuo who was sneering as he killed his way over, suddenly realizing that Han Shuo's weapon had disappeared. Florida was immediately terror-stricken when he came to this realization.

Unfortunately, his realization was still too late. The group of experts that had been distributing their efforts to deal with the three creatures was momentarily too busy to attend to Florida. When they heard a sharp cry, they realized that there was a bad turn of events.

Florida, who was exerting himself to support his defensive the light and lightning spells to their peaks, was still unable to stop the Demonslayer Edge. His lightning and light magic barrier shattered into tiny glass-like specks. The Demonslayer Edge blasted through Florida's barrier and pierced through his neck, leaving behind a bloody hole.

The hatred in Florida's eyes gradually rescinded. Without the support of mental energy, Florida's body fell sharply. A leader of the four big powers in the Valley of Sunshine had eventually died by Han Shuo's hand.

When the experts from the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band who had been tightly surrounding Florida saw Han Shuo seizing the chance to kill Florida, a feeling of despair and helplessness arose in their hearts. At this moment, the attacks of the little skeleton, Gilbert and the others fell like torrential rain, immediately taking another ten lives.

After Florida died, the first wave of experts no longer had a leader. The remaining tens of experts desperately started to retreat but continued to be killed by Han Shuo's group. Before they could reach Laureton, another twenty odd people had died.

Of the three hundred experts and the many flying magical creatures that had participated in the battle, only nineteen people and eleven magical beasts had returned to Laureton's area alive. Adam Menlo and Florida of the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band would both disappear forever from the power struggle within the Valley of Sunshine.

“Ha. Laureton, it’s been a while!” Chasing after the enemy mercenaries, Han Shuo arrogantly stood in the sky, as he mockingly greeted Laureton.

On both sides of Han Shuo were the two super rank magical creatures and the little skeleton. Several hundred gargoyles were like guards as they quietly flapped their wings behind Han Shuo. Having calculated their altitude, Han Shuo wasn’t afraid of arrows being shot from below.

Laureton raised his head to stare at the sky. Seeing Han Shuo looking at him derisively, all sorts of feelings suddenly appeared in his heart. The corpses of Florida and Adam Menlo were laid out by Laureton’s side. With the other two leaders of the three powers dead, Laureton ought to be happy. But as he looked at Han Shuo, Laureton only felt increasingly flustered.

“Yes, we have not seen each other for a while. I should have expected that you had arrived long ago. Apart from you, Trunks simply didn’t have any other cards!” Laureton sighed before taking a deep breath. He then looked at Han Shuo and said, “As matters stand, I don’t have any other things to say. That’s right. It was indeed me that kidnapped Trunks, but I don’t regret it!”

With the current situation within the Valley of Sunshine, if Laureton didn’t act to deal with Trunks, the Soul Destroyer mercenary band would replace the Cairo mercenary band’s position in the Valley of Sunshine sooner or later. Naturally, he had to think of his subordinates, thus what he did was understandable.

“Indeed, there is nothing much to say. From today onwards, Cairo Mercenary band will be my mortal enemy. Laureton, try your best.” Han Shuo smiled as he looked at Laureton. He took one last glance at Florida and Adam Menlo’s corpses and then headed back towards the Soul Destroyer mercenary band.

The first wave of attacks from these powers had resulted in a devastating price. Not only did this lose their most capable elites, even Florida and Adam Menlo were killed. In such a situation, the group that had formed out of benefits would be powerless against the Soul Destroyer mercenary band.

Humans were always selfish. With Florida and Adam Menlo dead, Han Shuo was almost certain that the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band and the House of Menlo would immediately break out into chaos, especially Florida's Rainbow Sickle mercenary band which would definitely fall into a period of civil strife or break apart.

In that case, the group's threat to the Soul Destroyer mercenary band will decrease substantially. Han Shuo only needed to observe as they collapsed. Hence, he left carefreely.

Things indeed developed as Han Shuo had predicted. After Han Shuo left, the people from the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band and the House of Menlo immediately sank into strife.

In particular, the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band had immediately split into a few smaller groups. Only a small portion strived for revenge. The remaining majority advocated leaving this place as soon as possible. The House of Menlo was slightly better off since Adam Menlo was after all, their senior. As the majority of the authority within the House of Menlo were in the hands of relatives, most were yelling sorrowfully about first taking revenge for Adam Menlo before deciding on other matters.

The sudden quarrels disrupted Laureton's thoughts. Looking at the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band, which was already prepared to leave, and the frightened leaders of the small powers, Laureton suddenly had a helpless feeling.

So many flying magical creatures had been killed. Wanting to rely on flying magical creatures to enter the Soul Destroyer mercenary band was completely impossible. With the existence of spatial rings, trying to starve the Soul Destroyer mercenary band to death with a siege was also impossible. The only way was to attack head-on. However, this method would come at a large cost which they simply couldn't afford.

At this moment, Laureton had no confidence in victory. As he looked at the people of the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band and the House of Menlo arguing endlessly, he suddenly felt somewhat helpless.

“Chief, should we make use of this opportunity to eliminate the two groups?” While Laureton was feeling vexed, Harris suddenly approached and lowered his voice as he made a vicious suggestion.

Glancing at Harris before looking in the direction that Han Shuo had left, he smiled bitterly and said, “That fellow definitely wishes for us to do so. If we were to fight with those other two parties, it would be following his wishes. Once all three groups depleted their power and energy, the master of the Valley of Sunshine would really be the Soul Destroyer mercenary band.

Harris was stunned for a moment. He processed Laureton’s words for a while before nodding and saying, “Chief is still more far-sighted. In any case, with Florida and Adam Menlo’s deaths, we have two fewer enemies. The current Rainbow Sickle mercenary band and House of Menlo are no longer enemies to fear.”

“That is also true. However, if we are unable to eliminate the Soul Destroyer mercenary band now, their reputation will increase greatly. In the future, other than our Cairo mercenary band, there will no longer be any powers that can shake their position. I’m unsure if this is fortune or misfortune!” Laureton replied painfully.

Just as Laureton and Harris were discussing quietly, some of the leaders of the smaller mercenary bands had walked over together. One of them gloomily looked at Laureton and said, “Chief Laureton, now that the situation has become like this, I think we no longer have the opportunity to destroy the Soul Destroyer mercenary band.

If the Cairo mercenary band wants us to spearhead the attack and essentially throw our lives away, I apologize. We are unwilling to exchange the price of our brothers’ lives for the benefits that you are giving us. Based on the current situation, I feel that we should just disperse!”

“I agree. That place is too hard to attack. Without the assistance of flying magical creatures, we simply have no chance of winning at all.” a leader of another small mercenary band shouted.

It seemed that there weren’t just one or two of them who had such thoughts. All of them who had walked over together probably already planned to leave.

A bunch of short-sighted fellows! Laureton cursed them inwardly. After being silent for a moment, he said, "Consider this carefully. If we are unable to eliminate the Soul Destroyer mercenary band now, everyone that participated in this attack will all suffer a calamity. Our Cairo mercenary band has sufficient strength and aren't afraid of Trunks' revenge. As for you guys, it might become a troublesome matter."

"Chief Laureton need not to remind us of that. We've naturally also thought of it." That person replied.

"Then do as you'd like. In any case, I've already reminded you guys. When the time comes where Trunks seeks you all out for revenge, don't come and find me!" Laureton coldly snorted and disdained upon continuing to talk to them. These people looked at each other, simultaneously bidding their farewells before leading their members to leave. The majority of the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band had lost their faith in Laureton once Florida died. They had already left without even notifying him.

Of the six thousand people that had come to attack the Soul Destroyer mercenary band, only around three thousand were still alive. If they wanted to attack the base of the Soul Destroyer mercenary band without flying magical creatures, it wouldn't be just a problem of the number of casualties. Instead, the question would be if they would be able to eliminate the Soul Destroyer mercenary band after suffering heavy casualties!

Chapter 406: Three Great Enchantments

When Han Shuo returned to the Soul Destroyer Mercenary Band, he discovered that with the support of Grant, Trunks was sitting in the middle of the practice arena and was currently raising his head and staring into the vast white sky.

Trunks was still very weak. Although his wounds had been treated, it would be impossible for him to recover without ten to fifteen days of rest. The most severe injuries were his severed hand and feet tendons. Roughly a month would be needed for them to reattach and regain their original durability.

It was very clear that Trunks was worried about the Soul Destroyer mercenary band. However, as his tendons were severed, he could only sit here weakly, similar to a disabled person, unable to move his hands and feet.

Luckily his eyes had gradually recovered its light. As he gazed into the sky, he had a thoughtful expression, indicating that although he suffered heavy injuries, he still had a strong mentality.

“Why have you come out here. It is best if you sincerely stay indoors and recuperate for this period of time. Don’t worry, the invaders have already retreated in heavy defeat. In the short term, Laureton would definitely be powerless to deal with us.” Han Shuo descended by Trunks’ side and berated.

“It’s ok, I’m feeling better now. Hehe. I’m not willing to hide inside and bitterly wait for others to bring me information during the Soul Destroyer mercenary band’s most dangerous period of time.” Trunks smiled as he replied. Pausing for a moment, he knitted his brows and asked, “Bryan, is Florida dead?”

Han Shuo replied while nodding, “That’s right. I know you wanted to personally kill him, but there are immense benefits for us in killing him now. With his death, the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band would fall into disunity. The number of our enemies would also decrease greatly. Hence, I didn't let him get away.”

Trunks sighed and said ruefully, “Hai, not killing personally can be considered regretfully but his early demise is indeed beneficial to us. If I had got rid of him previously, all these disorderly matters wouldn't have happened. It seems that I am to blame for all of these matters.”

“Besides Florida, Adam Menlo died as well. The two of them were the pillars of the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band and the House of Menlo respectively. Their deaths have caused great repercussions for the two powers. Currently, there are still three thousand people in the surroundings, including the people under Laureton. However, I believe they would be departing shortly.” Han Shuo narrated the details of the battle to Trunks.

“Don't need to worry about the remaining matters here. I know you have many matters to deal with. Leave Laureton to me. I'll send Laureton packing.” Trunks replied.

“It's just one Laureton, I can remove him in passing. It wouldn't take up too much of my time.” Han Shuo looked at Trunks in astonishment. “Based on his current injuries, he definitely won't fight with you in the near future.” Han Shuo was somewhat worried.

“Bryan, the Valley of Sunshine has its own rules. If I want to convince others, I should not completely rely on your strength. Only if I openly get rid of Laureton and the Cairo mercenary band would I be able to successfully hold power in the Valley of Sunshine and win the respect of others.” Trunks who still had a weak complexion said resolutely.

Han Shuo was stunned, hesitating a moment before saying, “But, your injuries...”

“Hehe, don't need to worry. It's not like I would immediately deal with Laureton. As you said, based on Laureton's personality, he definitely won't dare to attack this place without absolute certainty. Now that the flying magical creatures of the House of Menlo have also been killed by you, they definitely wouldn't dare to attack in the near future.

We still have Gilbert here. As time passes, they would surely give up. Be rest assured. After experiencing the pain previously, I would no longer be complacent. I have the confidence in eradicating Laureton and the Cairo mercenary band!" Trunks looked extremely confident. Having experienced the ruthless torture previously, there seemed to be a change in Trunks' body.

When Han Shuo heard what Trunks said, he looked at Trunks deeply and hesitated for a while before smiling and said, "Since you are so insistent about it, I would no longer interfere with the matters of the Valley of Sunshine. However, if you face any difficulties, you must inform me as quickly as possible!"

"Don't worry. The Soul Destroyer mercenary band isn't solely mine. I know what needs to be done!" Trunks smiled as he replied.

"Gilbert, you stay here. Before Trunks recovers, look after him properly for me!" Han Shuo looked at Gilbert and instructed.

"Understood, honorable master." Gilbert acknowledged Han Shuo's instructions.

Trunks actually wanted to rely on his own strength. To firmly wield power within the Valley of Sunshine, he indeed couldn't rely on others for everything and could only utilize the strength he had to get rid of the strongest power in the Valley of Sunshine, the Cairo mercenary band. Only then can Trunks truly obtain everyone's respect.

For him to have such a realization and train of thought, Han Shuo was surprised and at the same time, full of admiration. This proved that Trunks was truly a talent. Furthermore, Han Shuo could see the changes in Trunks ever since he had rescued Trunks. He realized that Trunks had become stronger and more ruthless, no longer as careless and benevolent.

The previous lesson was really too cruel. Trunks had to go through torment more painful than death. There would no longer be any situations too difficult for him from now on. Han Shuo precisely noticed this and suddenly understood why Trunks asked Han Shuo to leave Laureton to him. Apart from using Laureton to test his methods, he also wanted to use Laureton to polish his martial technique.

Currently, only Laureton was able to deal with Trunks within the entire Valley of Sunshine. If Han Shuo killed Laureton now, Trunks would lose the most suitable opponent. Not only would he lose much pleasure, he would also lose a turning point in making a breakthrough. It was also only through Laureton that Trunks would be able to improve once again.

Having understood Trunks' intention, Han Shuo didn't insist on his own thoughts and truly let go of matters within the Valley of Sunshine. He then said his goodbyes to Trunks and Gilbert within the same day, returning to the Cemetery of Death from the Valley of Sunshine.

Returning to the Cemetery of Death, Han Shuo followed his original purpose and headed down to explore.

The reason why he returned to Cemetery of Death was due to Wolf's information. Were it not for Gilbert suddenly requesting for emergency assistance, Han Shuo would have already long since explored the third layer of the Cemetery of Death. Now that he had returned, Han Shuo immediately headed below the Cemetery of Death.

Having had the previous experiences, Han Shuo's exploration seemed to be a walk in the park. Han Shuo instilled his mental energy into the first two layers, easily breaking through the enchantments and headed for the passageway that led to the third layer. Han Shuo only stopped when he sensed the existence of an enchantment.

Taking a deep breath, Han Shuo slowly condensed his mental energy to probe the area where the enchantment was.

Bang...

Han Shuo's mental energy had just touched the area when his mind was suddenly jolted as a large force suddenly rushed forward, like countless small snakes forcing their way into Han Shuo's mind. This caused Han Shuo to feel an endless tingling pain.

Fortunately, Han Shuo had prior experience, hastily holding his breath in rapt attention, directing stronger mental energy into the enchantment, attempting to break through the enchantment like the previous two occasions. The skeletal staff in his hand shone brightly in tri-colored light.

Peng!

Han Shuo had suddenly struck out, yet the enchantment had not been broken and Han Shuo himself was repelled. Right when Han Shuo was becoming extremely frightened, the countless snake-like energy that barged into Han Shuo's mind suddenly became orderly from its original chaos, forming lines of bright magic symbols.

As Han Shuo had delved into necromancy magic for a long time, when those magic symbols appeared in his mind, he was extremely surprised. Soon after, the tri-colored light from the skeletal staff in his hand suddenly became brighter as three strands of demonic light climbed along Han Shuo's arm and slowly entered his body.

The tri-colored light from the skeletal staff traveled up Han Shuo's arm, directly flowing into Han Shuo's mind, coming together with the countless magical symbols and arranging into paragraphs of incantations that Han Shuo could understand, as well as paragraphs of information.

Han Shuo stared blankly for a moment before quickly coming to himself, hastily memorizing the information that had appeared in his mind. The paragraphs of incantations and information were rapidly imprinted into his mind. The entire process didn't persist for too long. With the degree of development of his brain, Han Shuo very quickly remembered the information within his mind.

"Before becoming a sacred magus necromancer, the next enchantment cannot be opened. It contains the secret for a necromancer to become God..."

"The skeletal staff possesses three basic abilities. Apart from the first ability of doubling the might of spells, the other two abilities require additional incantations. The incantations specifically are..."

"Enchantment of Fear, Enchantment of Weakness and Enchantment of Age. The incantations and way of applying these enchantments are..."

The magic symbols swiveled around Han Shuo's mind, finally forming three pieces of information. The first was that only a sacred magus can enter the next layer. Secondly, the incantations for rejuvenation and entering the netherworld and lastly, the three long lost enchantments of necromancers.

The next layer actually had the secret for a necromancer to become God!

Han Shuo was extremely surprised as he looked ahead toward the pathway blocked by a single enchantment. He was shocked by the information within his mind and was lost in thought for a long time. There were too many thoughts appearing in his mind.

Han Shuo only slowly suppressed his chaotic state of mind after a long time. The first piece of information still didn't mean much to him, but the second and third piece of information was of great use at the present time.

Of the three mysterious abilities of the skeletal staff, the ability to double the power of spells didn't need a supporting incantation, but the rejuvenation ability and the ability for the soul to freely enter the netherworld were not as simple to bring about. For example, for the soul to travel back and forth from the netherworld, it required the support of many complicated incantations as well as a precise understanding of your own soul.

For the rejuvenation ability to succeed, it needed to utilize the energy contained within the skeletal staff. This energy wasn't something everyone could endure and only those that have been approved by the skeletal staff would be able to transform themselves through the energy contained within the skeletal staff.

Previously, Wolf obviously fulfilled this condition. According to Wolf, all the disciples of the Calamity Church seemed to fulfill the condition to be reformed by the skeletal staff. All the old fellows within the Calamity Church who had lived for countless years could make use of this energy to return to their youth.

Enchantment of Fear, Enchantment of Weakness and Enchantment of Age are three of the ancient necromancers' large-scale magic enchantments. Enemies who were shrouded by the Enchantment of Fear would have dread forming in their hearts, their ability to judge and their willpower would be influenced by the Enchantment of Fear and drop substantially. The Enchantment of Weakness, on the other hand, would cause enemies to lose the strength of their bodies, causing their fighting strength to decrease greatly.

The most fearsome was definitely the Enchantment of Age. However, the Enchantment of Age could only be used by a sacred magus necromancer. Necromancers who reach the rank of sacred magus would already have an extremely exquisite understanding of the soul. By utilizing an enormous amount of mental energy to deploy the Enchantment of Age, any living creature that enters the enchantment would age faster.

If the living creature stayed within the Enchantment of Age for over a fixed amount of time, the living creature would die of old age immediately. This was an extremely malicious spell which reduced the origin vitality of a living creature's soul. No matter how strong an opponent was, if they were not as accomplished in understanding the soul, they would be helpless within the Enchantment of Age.

Han Shuo was able to immediately practice the Enchantment of Fear and Enchantment of Weakness. Using these two enchantments in tandem would also create a layering effect. Using these enchantments together with a necromancer's undead army would simply be a nightmare to any enemy.

Perhaps it was precisely because combining these two enchantments with the undead army was really too formidable that during the glorious era of necromancers, they would be eliminated from all the magician associations within the continent. From that moment on, the three enchantments disappeared forever from the world.

The reason why the Enchantment of Age could only be practiced by a sacred magus necromancer was perhaps due to the frightening power of the Enchantment of Age which caused it to be unable to overlay with the other two enchantments.

No matter how strong a living creature was, once it entered the Enchantment of Age and didn't exit immediately, its body would rapidly age. Even if it immediately left the Enchantment of Age, a part of its body would still be affected and would never recover.

However, Han Shuo's skeletal staff was able to let victims of the Enchantment of Age rejuvenate. Combining both the Enchantment of Age and the skeletal staff, everything could be considered to be in control. He would be able to send his own men into the enchantment to intercept the enemy. And when the enemy has retreated or died, Han Shuo can use the skeletal staff to rejuvenate the youth lost by his own people within the Enchantment of Age.

The practice method as well as the full incantations of the three great enchantments that were the secret behind necromancers ruling the continent were completely engraved into Han Shuo's mind at this moment.

TL note: I'm still not very satisfied with the names of the 3 enchantments. Will probably change them when I come up with a better name. Do leave comments with your suggestions!

Chapter 407: Bigwigs

When Han Shuo obtained the information that he couldn't enter the next level before becoming a sacred magus necromancer, he didn't force matters and withdrew along his original path.

Numerous magical spells and practice methods had been imprinted on Han Shuo's mind. However, if he wanted to succeed in practicing all of them, it wasn't an easy thing to do. Hence, Han Shuo didn't stay in the Cemetery of Death any longer and instead returned to his mansion in Ossen City through the teleportation array.

Having left Ossen City for a few days, Han Shuo sought out Steward Kallas once he returned to find out what has been happening in Ossen City.

King Uhtred has already made known his stance in the last few days. He had steeled his heart to help Lawrence ascend the throne. The entire Lancelot Empire was momentarily in shock, unable to understand why Uhtred made this decision.

When the Dark Mantle Organization, King Uhtred's hand in the shadows, suddenly having closer relations with Lawrence, many already guessed that they were also leaning toward Lawrence. The Empire's legendary figure sacred swordmaster Karel also no longer sat on the fence, finally announcing officially that he supported Lawrence to be the next king.

With King Uhtred's help, Lawrence's trusted aides gradually started to grasp power within the empire. His foster father and uncle Boris received important positions, becoming influential ministers within the empire. Everyone could make out Uhtred's intentions.

In this period of time, the other princes and the powers under them visited the palace more often. Duke Ashburn and Prince Charles even visited the palace a few times a day, attempting to rely on their own abilities to change His Majesty's decision.

There were also some stubborn conservative ministers who allied and petitioned Uhtred to change his mind. They believed that as an illegitimate child, Lawrence simply wasn't fit for the honor of being at the apex of power in the Lancelot Empire. These people were old officials and their old-fashioned noble traditions caused them to be unable to accept the matter. They felt that this was blasphemy towards the royal family of the Lancelot Empire.

King Uther's queen and his favored concubines had also joined the opposing side one after another in order to get an answer from him. In a short time, Ossen City descended into chaos. Yet at this time, Uhtred's illness suddenly relapsed and he fell into a coma, even showing signs of being able to hold on.

When the princes saw such a situation happen, they followed King Uhtred orders overtly, but secretly started to assemble their forces in preparation for purging the incoming powers. Within the seemingly tranquil Ossen City, many unfamiliar faces started to appear as a storm was slowly brewing.

Once King Uhtred died, the long-anticipated storm would inevitably break out with a bang. At that time, it would be difficult to say if it would engulf the entire Lancelot Empire. At this moment, the commander of the Southern border, Firenze suddenly returned to Ossen City. This baleful star would cause the already chaotic Ossen City to be filled with even more variables.

As he listened to Steward Kallas's description, Han Shuo was stunned. He really didn't anticipate that in just a few days, Ossen City would actually experience such drastic changes. It seems that ever since King Uhtred knew that his days were numbered, his swift and decisive actions played a huge role.

In the few days where Han Shuo was away, Phoebe had come to look for him three times while Lawrence came twice. Emily and some of the nobles in Ossen City had also come to visit him. When Kallas finished his report, Han Shuo thought for a moment before immediately heading for Lawrence's residence.

Lawrence was currently the focus of all of Ossen City. In the cruel contest for the throne, Lawrence could not fail. Only with Lawrence's ascension could Han Shuo's interests be maintained and even progress to the next level.

After hurrying into Lawrence's residence, he was informed by the steward that Lawrence was currently in a secret discussion with others. However, the steward clearly knew of the unusual relationship between Han Shuo and Lawrence. When he saw Han Shuo arrive, he immediately went to report. After a while, the steward returned and respectfully led Han Shuo to Lawrence's secret meeting.

Han Shuo saw many acquaintances within Lawrence's secret room, including Lawrence's adoptive father, Eevee, Uncle Boris, Phoebe, Emily, Betteridge Family's Old Hahn and ten other unfamiliar nobles who seemed to also be supporting Lawrence.

When Han Shuo arrived, Lawrence immediately stood up and smiled as he went up to him and said "Where did you run off to. Why have you only arrived now?"

Lawrence had also gone to the palace many times in recent days. When Uhtred met with him alone, he repeatedly urged Lawrence to keep Han Shuo firmly by his side and that Han Shuo was the key to his future.

Although Uhtred did not divulge astrologer Grace's evaluation of Han Shuo, Lawrence was an extremely smart person. He already figured out what was going on from the attitudes of the people around him and understood that Han Shuo would be his life's benefactor.

It was precisely because of this that as soon as Han Shuo walked inside, Lawrence was still the first to stand up and personally welcomed Han Shuo inside in an extremely amiable manner. This came as a slight surprise to some of his supporters who weren't familiar with Han Shuo.

"Nothing much. I had some stuff to settle so I went out for a while. Wow! There are so many people!" Han Shuo casually fobbed Lawrence off. He couldn't help but exclaim when he saw the surrounding people.

"Ha. Bryan, you are really amazing. In such a short period of time, you have become a Marquis. I indeed didn't evaluate you wrongly." Lawrence's uncle Boris laughed as he greeted Han Shuo.

Originally, Lawrence had arranged for Han Shuo to hold a post within Boris's Northern Army in order to let Han Shuo gain military merit. Boris himself was only just a Count. Who would have thought that Han Shuo had risen up the ranks in such a short time? Based on their current authority, Han Shuo had clearly surpassed him.

However, while in the Northern Army, Boris was extremely friendly toward Han Shuo as he knew of Han Shuo's prospective growth. Their relationship in private was also pretty good. Hence when he saw Han Shuo coming in, he immediately greeted him amicably.

"Hehe. Lord Boris over-praises me!" Han Shuo smiled as he bowed to Boris.

Sitting next to Boris were Emily and Phoebe. The two of them were extremely close to each other, constantly whispering softly. Only after Han Shuo came in did their bright eyes stay fixed on him. Seated beside Emily was old Hahn, hence she turned her head after glancing at Han Shuo so as to avoid arousing suspicion.

However, Phoebe seemed to still harbor some residual anger as she couldn't resist glaring at Han Shuo a few more times. Her beautiful big eyes revealed an angry overtone, seeming to rebuke him for his mysterious disappearance.

"Young man, not bad. I still haven't had the time to thank you for saving me previously! Haha. I've told you that when you have time, come over and have some fun. I will definitely entertain you well. I didn't expect that till now you still haven't visited. What's the matter? Could it be that you look down on my Betteridge family?" Old Hahn smiled as he greeted Han Shuo before pretending to be angry as he spoke.

I've already gone to the Betteridge Family and even snatched your daughter-in-law. Han Shuo said inwardly as he kept a wronged expression on his face. He innocently spread his arms and explained, "You are also aware that I have always been at Brettel City and only got back recently.

There are too many matters to handle. Ha, I will definitely visit the next time I have time!”

“Okay then. I was just joking with you. I know that you are now a very busy person. Looking at you, I truly feel somewhat amazed. You saved my life the last time we met, but at that time, you were still an unknown. Who would have thought that in just a few years you have already become a formidable figure within the Empire? Awesome!” Old Hahn smiled with emotion.

As Old Hahn was talking, Lawrence had already brought Han Shuo to his side and pointed at the chair next to him, indicating for Han Shuo to sit. Only then did he introduce the strangers around him to Han Shuo. “Hehe, I won’t introduce these people as you already know them anyway. However, you are perhaps unfamiliar with these people, but in the future, we will all be on the same side. This is the current Lord of Valen City...”

Each time Lawrence introduced someone, Han Shuo would nod in respect. These people were either lord of their cities or either a Count or a Marquis. They all are top characters among the nobles. With Lawrence’s introduction, Han Shuo slowly understood the powers under his control.

Three Counts and two Marquis. They were all powerful figures within Ossen City and were all middle-aged. They were either in charge of a big Family, held key positions under King Uhtred or had military power. It seemed like only the people of their age would not stubbornly hold onto the idea that an illegitimate child could not obtain the throne.

As Lawrence introduced them, the nobles would nod amicably toward Han Shuo. Currently, Han Shuo had the authority over Brettel City and was favored by the king. His status as a Marquis was similar to their own status. In addition, they were now in the same faction. It would be odd if they were unfriendly toward Han Shuo!

When Lawrence finished the introductions, Han Shuo was more or less familiar with Lawrence’s current strength. These Marquises and Counts were people that held true power. In addition, he had the support of the Betteridge Family and the Dark Mantle. Furthermore, there were still a few experts that surpassed worldly powers that supported him. In this case, Lawrence truly possessed the means to oppose Eldest Prince Charles.

It seemed like that Uhtred's swift and decisive actions had indeed brought about the greatest benefit to Lawrence. It caused Lawrence's power to rise greatly while also convincing more nobles to support him, allowing Lawrence to possess the qualifications to go against Charles and vie for the throne.

After Lawrence introduced the nobles that Han Shuo were not familiar with, he paused for a while before continuing, "We were just discussing a few matters. Let me summarize them for you. Currently, we should use our forces to their maximum potential and let the talents under us acquire power while my father is still alive.

On the other hand, based on our current foundation, we still need to obtain stronger support in preparation for Charles and others' desperate actions. The empire's authority is basically in the hands of the nobles. Even though my royal father clearly supports me, if those nobles support Charles, they would still collaborate with Charles to resist me when my royal father dies. This matter is extremely hard to solve.

Ah. The most important issue is my identity. Those stubborn fellows clearly would not choose me but they hold too much power in their hands that without them making mistakes, my father has no means whatsoever to reduce the authority in their hands. This really is a headache-inducing problem."

Han Shuo didn't say a word after he sat down, only listening to Lawrence's descriptions. When Lawrence finished talking, Han Shuo understood that the situation was not as ideal as he had imagined. It seemed like even though they had Uhtred's support, Charles' prior advantage was too huge. Lawrence would never be able to peacefully ascend the throne

"Your Highness, Duke Ashburn has an enormous influence within the empire. The bigwigs he has made friends with include the majority of nobles. With him supporting the eldest Prince, they would be extremely hard to deal with. Currently, His Majesty is able to suppress him but if he dies, Duke Ashburn would surely oppose with all his strength. The power in his hands is enough to alter the entire situation. This is really difficult to manage!" A Count named Talric said to Lawrence.

"That's right. Once His Majesty meets his demise, no one can control Duke Ashburn. This is truly hard to handle!" Lawrence's foster father, Eevee said while frowning.

"Hehe, you all neglected the person that just got to Ossen City. If Lawrence can obtain this person's support, I think the situation would be totally different!" Old Hahn suddenly chuckled and said.

When they heard those words, everyone was moved but they sighed soon after. Boris replied, "That unreasonable madman is indeed no ordinary person but he doesn't even listen to His Majesty's orders. Who would be able to convince him?"

Lawrence was distracted for a moment, before looking fervently at Han Shuo. However, when he saw Emily and Phoebe, he hurriedly retracted his gaze.

Han Shuo realized simply from Lawrence's expression that he knew of the relationship between Fanny and the madman Firenze. He cannot help but sigh inwardly. He knew that Lawrence definitely had a goal when Lawrence painstakingly made friends with himself. Lawrence had actually started to rope him in so long ago. It seems that of all the princes, Lawrence had planned the furthest ahead.

Chapter 408: Fanny's deep emotions

Han Shuo did not express his opinion on what they discussed next, merely thinking about the madman Firenze's arrival in Ossen City and the effect it would cause on him.

Based on what Han Shuo had promised Fanny, he knew that since Firenze had reached Ossen City, he would definitely meet Firenze in the near future. The matter of Han Shuo already having Phoebe and Emily by his side would be exposed sooner or later. He wasn't sure what great reaction Fanny would have once she found out!

It was the same for Phoebe, who had just accepted Emily yet still had residual anger. If she found out about Fanny as well, she might insist on bringing out a cage. Unfortunately, since things have reached such a situation, there was no way he could conceal it any longer.

"Bryan, Bryan!" Lawrence suddenly shouted twice.

Han Shuo suddenly came to his senses. He looked astonished at Lawrence and asked, "What's up?"

"What do you think we should do next, Charles is our main opponent. Do you have any ideas?" Lawrence looked brightly at Han Shuo as he sought Han Shuo's opinion.

Han Shuo was currently feeling troubled and simply did not seriously listen to their discussion. He shook his head in response and said, "I don't have any good ideas."

When Lawrence heard Han Shuo's reply and saw that he had a vexed expression, he understood that Han Shuo was perhaps occupied by some other thoughts. He nodded without asking further, continuing to discuss with the other nobles instead.

After a short while, they finished their discussion. The nobles left in succession, including Emily and Old Hahn, only leaving Phoebe, Lawrence and Han Shuo in the room.

"Bryan, thank you for introducing Mister Crowley to me, allowing me to have such a strong grand magus by my side!” After the rest had left, Lawrence thanked Han Shuo sincerely.

Han Shuo was stunned for a moment before responding and said, “That Crowley has joined you?”

“Yes, Mister Crowley said that he followed your advice and decided to join me.” Lawrence smiled as he explained.

“That’s good. Lawrence, I have some matters to speak with Phoebe, we’ll be leaving first!” Han Shuo pondered for a moment before saying to Lawrence.

“Alright then, you two can leave first.” Lawrence smiled as he got up to send them off.

Phoebe pouted, appearing to still be angry at Han Shuo. Under Lawrence’s gaze, she got into her own carriage. Han Shuo hesitated for a moment but on second thought, since many people knew of his relationship with Phoebe, he got on soon after.

Based on the current situation, his relationship with the three women would perhaps no longer able to be concealed. Han Shuo seriously considered for a moment, deciding to just confess to the three women. Of the three women, Emily was the only one who wouldn’t mind it too much. Besides, Emily faintly knew of some information through the Dark Mantle, hence Han Shuo wasn’t worried about her.

However, both Phoebe and Fanny were huge problems. He was unable to conceal it further even if he wanted to and it would be worse if they found out by themselves. Reaching this situation, Han Shuo really had no other ideas and resigned to his fate and tell them the truth.

Within the elegant horse carriage, Han Shuo had a reserved expression as he remained silent. Phoebe’s anger toward Han Shuo had yet to diminish, pouting and also not saying a word. In a moment, the atmosphere within the carriage was somewhat tense.

After a short while, Han Shuo took a deep breath, turning his head to look at Phoebe and said in a low voice, “Phoebe, apart from you and Emily,

I still have another woman!”

Phoebe’s eyebrows raised, her eyes overflowing with disbelief. There were signs of rage coming from her delicate body as she clenched her teeth and unwaveringly stared at Han Shuo before saying sharply, “You, what did you say?!”

“Apart from Emily and yourself, I still have another woman. Her name is Fanny, she was previously my teacher. She’s also the first woman I liked.” Han Shuo sounded downcast, sighing when he finished.

“What, what is the meaning of this? Why are you telling me this?” Phoebe couldn’t contain her rage. She already found it hard to accept Emily. Now, Han Shuo suddenly said that there is another woman. Phoebe’s mind buzzed as she felt a sharp pain penetrating her heart.

“She is a teacher at my academy and took care of me from the start...” Han Shuo described his relationship with Fanny. He then sighed as he gazed at Phoebe and said, “Sorry, I shouldn’t have deceived you. That was because I didn’t want you to be happy. That was what had happened. I’m saying so much to you not because I want you to forgive me but to let you know that as a matter of fact, I’m truly a bad person like you said and am even the extremely bad kind.”

“Leave, leave immediately, I don’t want to ever see you again!” Phoebe cried incessantly, suddenly crying out sharply to the point of losing her voice.

When Han Shuo saw Phoebe losing control of her emotions, he suddenly felt an extremely strong grievance. He knew that it would be useless to say anything at this moment and thus simply nodded before opening the carriage’s window and flew out.

Han Shuo knew since a long time ago that Phoebe was a headstrong person. Such an independent woman would not easily forgive him for deceiving her. Perhaps it was precisely because Phoebe had strong feelings for him, hence she was so hurt by what Han Shuo said today.

Han Shuo suddenly understood the pain of the woman he loved dearly. The anguish he felt didn’t seem any less than what Phoebe was feeling.

Han Shuo himself had an extreme pain in his heart. Carrying that intense pain in his heart, Han Shuo made his way toward Babylon Academy of Magic and Force.

When Han Shuo reached Fanny's laboratory, it just happened to be after lunchtime. Ever since Han Shuo visited a few days ago, Fanny felt extremely content and was very cheerful the past few days.

When she opened the laboratory' door intending to first rest for a while, she suddenly saw Han Shuo who was seated on a chair within the room. The current Han Shuo seemed absent-minded and looked somewhat pale. He sat gloomily without saying a word, as though he had an extremely heavy load on his mind.

With a glance, Fanny suddenly realized that the current Han Shuo was completely different from the past. Previously, Han Shuo always had a strong fighting spirit or was frivolous and improper. He had never been as downcast and absent-minded as he was today.

"Bryan, what happened to you? Are you ill?" Fanny was flustered, hurrying to Han Shuo's side, raising a hand to feel his forehead.

Hearing Fanny's voice, Han Shuo was startled. When he saw Fanny filled with concern for himself, the pain in his heart increased. He stared blankly for a while, perhaps wanting to feel more of Fanny's gentle feelings as he simply stared deeply at Fanny as he carefully appreciated the temperature of Fanny's warm hand.

"What's wrong, why are you saying anything. What's going on?" When Fanny saw Han Shuo not saying a word and simply staring blankly at herself, she felt more frenetic, impatiently questioning Han Shuo as her worry was displayed on her face.

"Fanny, I've let you down!" Han Shuo who was staring blankly at Fanny didn't know if this tenderness would still exist after he spoke. However, he knew that he was unable to hide, finally sighed and said to Fanny.

"You aren't ill right? What nonsense are you saying?" Fanny beamed as she pulled back her hand from Han Shuo's forehead, looking tenderly at Han Shuo's eyes as she replied.

Han Shuo didn't dare to look straight at Fanny's eyes and guiltily lowered his head. He suddenly remembered that he had not had physical relations with Fanny. In that case, as long as he told Fanny the truth, it wouldn't cause much harm to Fanny.

Toward his loved ones, Han Shuo had never been a heartless person. The reason why Han Shuo had concealed this matter for such a long time, apart from enjoying the wonderful feeling of having multiple women, it was because he didn't want to heartlessly cause them pain.

However, Han Shuo only suddenly realized at this moment that his actions of hiding the truth would indeed not cause them pain in the short term, but such actions would cause them a lifetime of anguish.

This was precisely why Han Shuo decided to sincerely explain the truth to both parties. However, the guilty Han Shuo didn't dare face Fanny's gentle feelings. Under Fanny's impatient inquiry, Han Shuo used the same downcast voice to explain, "Apart from you, I still have two other women. I've let you down!"

Fanny's hand which was tenderly caressing Han Shuo's hair suddenly stopped. Han Shuo instinctively raised his head to look, suddenly realizing that Fanny had frozen in position, her tender eyes filled with helplessness and pain. Her rosy lips paled, constantly squirmed as if she wanted to say something yet was unable to make up any sound.

Two streams of tears flowed down her smooth cheeks, sliding down her neck. After a very long time, Fanny's dimmed eyes focused on Han Shuo. She had a bleak expression, sounding forlorn as she said softly, "Bryan, are you telling me this because you want to break off our relationship?"

Han Shuo froze, unable to understand Fanny's response. He had thought that Fanny should be furious like Phoebe was, chasing him away regardless of everything. He did not think that in this moment, Fanny actually had such a grim and frightened expression like a helpless blossoming flower bud.

An intense feeling of self-blame suddenly rushed into Han Shuo's heart. Han Shuo's eyes reddened as he pulled Fanny into his embrace, choking with emotion as he said, "Sorry, it's all my fault. Sorry..."

"Bryan, I, I've already known long ago regarding the matters between Miss Phoebe and yourself." Fanny faintly spoke, before exerting all her strength to embrace Han Shuo tightly, as though afraid that Han Shuo would depart from her side.

Han Shuo had a lifeless expression, subconsciously hugging Fanny tightly without knowing the reason why. His mind was filled with questions. She actually knew. How did she find out?

"You are the dazzling new star of the Empire. Information about you is spread everywhere. Among them naturally includes matters regarding Miss Phoebe and yourself. It's funny that you still deceive yourself and assume that I'm unaware. The first time I heard that information, I didn't believe it. However, slowly through my own understanding, I finally believed the information. I'm truly a weak woman. I should have always maintained a distance from you from the start and not fall for your enticement. However, in the days where you aren't around, my mind is completely filled with your image, forever impossible to get rid of.

Sorry, I'm unable to do it!

Even though I'm fully aware that you already have Miss Phoebe, I'm still unable to leave you. Once I imagine that we would no longer interact, I would feel suffocated. You would never be able to understand this feeling. I'm useless. I'm unable to walk away from your vortex of emotions and instead can't help but sink deeper..." Fanny muttered as she mocked herself while in Han Shuo's bosom, her voice full of helplessness and misery.

Her narration from the bottom of her heart ruthlessly tore apart Han Shuo's opinionated guise. Han Shuo felt dizzy from an incomparably intense happiness. Even though this happiness contained a hint of extreme agony, even though this happiness made Han Shuo's lips dry up and his eyes redden, causing his firm heart to weaken...

"I know, Phoebe is a good woman. Have you come here after deciding to leave me?" Fanny murmured in sorrow, her tone filled with agony and desolation. Her tears were like a pearl necklace that had snapped, pearl after pearl dripping on Han Shuo's shoulder.

"No!" Han Shuo bellowed, before continuing to say, "I will never leave you. Never! I said so much just to request your forgiveness. I have never thought of leaving you! Sorry, it's all my fault, it's all my fault..."

Fanny's delicate body trembled slightly as she suddenly stood up, teardrops still hanging from her eyes that indescribably anticipated, gazing toward Han Shuo's face. Her voice trembled and was filled with disbelief as she said softly, "Bryan, are, are you saying the truth?"

Repeatedly nodding his head, Han Shuo had never been as serious as he was now, his voice choking with emotion as he guaranteed, "So long as you don't leave me, I will never be the one to let go and leave you. I promise!" "But I only recognized the fact that I can never leave you after two years of torment and suffering. I don't mind that you are with Miss Phoebe and other women. However, would Miss Phoebe care about my existence?" Fanny said bitterly.

"I don't know. However, I would give her and myself some time. Perhaps, she would finally make a good decision. However, regardless of her decision, it would not change my feelings for you. It definitely won't!" Han Shuo said resolutely.

Fanny's eyes were filled with surprise and happiness that couldn't be contained. She took the initiative to hug Han Shuo tightly again, standing on tiptoe to ardently kiss Han Shuo. Her hands had brazenly slipped into Han Shuo's clothes, caressing Han Shuo's strong body while trying to help Han Shuo undress.

Chapter 409: Refusal

It was unclear what Fanny's thoughts were as for the first time, she was so spontaneous and so passionate. Both her kisses and actions were incomparably bold and unrestrained.

At this moment, Han Shuo was unexpectedly the passive receiver. Fanny's previous words contained a sea of deep emotions, brought about an enormous shock to Han Shuo, causing him to feel extremely guilty toward Fanny.

When the two of them kissed, Han Shuo who had always been the aggressor in the past instead wasn't that overbearing.

"Oh... Bryan..." Fanny's loveable appearance was bright red and contained shyness as she moaned softly. Han Shuo's outer clothing had unconsciously been taken off by Fanny.

Han Shuo's naked upper body was extremely robust, each inch of muscle seemed to be brimming with explosive force. When Fanny became out of breath, her fragrant lips left Han Shuo's as she took deep breaths. As she gazed at Han Shuo's chiseled body, her eyes were brimming with dense amorous feelings.

"Do... Do me now..." There was a mouse-like squeak. Fanny blushed as she buried her head in Han Shuo's chest, inhaling the rich manly scent from Han Shuo's body. She simply felt that her heart was in a mess and was able to clearly hear her own heart beating.

"We can't!" Han Shuo smiled bitterly as he refused.

Fanny lost her head out of fear, suddenly lifting her head to stare at Han Shuo. Her blushing expression was clearly filled with sorrow and puzzlement, her eyes brimming with doubt and panic.

"Umm... Teacher Gene is coming over and it's presently daytime. You still need to go teach a class later! How about, at night?" Han Shuo smiled bitterly, scratching his head as he spoke softly to Fanny.

Hearing Han Shuo's explanation, Fanny suddenly came to her senses, her face still red as she hurriedly dressed Han Shuo and said anxiously, "That's right, that's right. In that case, you should leave first, we'll talk about it another day."

Right at this moment, Gene's footsteps had already neared till the point that Fanny herself could hear them.

Fanny became even more hurried as she had harbored ulterior motives, desperately urging Han Shuo to make haste and leave. Han Shuo smiled bitterly and nodded while draping his shirt over his shoulders, departing Fanny's laboratory before Gene had reached.

As he headed back to his residence, Han Shuo felt ineffably moved by Fanny's deep emotions. He had never expected that Fanny had actually been struggling bitterly for so long because of him. Also, even though Fanny knew about his matters, she still didn't want to leave him. Her strong feelings caused Han Shuo to feel that he was unable to return the favor to her.

Just as Han Shuo reached his residence, Steward Kallas hurriedly rushed over, having a grave expression as he said, "Lord Marquis, Grand Duke Ashburn and Eldest Prince Charles request a meeting. They have already been waiting for some time."

"What are they here for?" Han Shuo was startled and knitted his brows in puzzlement.

"I don't know," Kallas replied respectfully.

With his heart filled with suspicion, Han Shuo walked toward the hall used for receiving esteemed guests. With a glance, he saw Eldest Prince Charles who he last saw in the Northern Rose Garden. It was actually the first time he was meeting Duke Ashburn who was by Charles's side. When he looked at Duke Ashburn, Han Shuo immediately knew that he was a crafty old fox and definitely not a person easy to deal with.

The two of them had a relaxed expression as they sipped tea within the hall, actually not bringing a single attendant with them. Once Han Shuo heard Steward Kallas' report, he immediately sent out a mystic demon to observe the surroundings of the mansion. Only then did he notice that there were two luxurious horse carriages stopped by the front gate and a squadron of knights keeping watch by their side.

Han Shuo who was vexed due to Fanny and Phoebe's matters had been deep in thought on the journey back and had neglected the surrounding situation. Only after he instructed the mystic demon to circle around the estate did he realize the different situations within the mansion.

As this was the capital, Ossen City, Ashburn and Eldest Prince Charles who had openly come to visit Han Shuo were naturally unafraid that Han Shuo would suddenly rise in revolt. Hence they boldly left the squadron of knights outside, not bringing a single expert along for protection. On the surface, the two of them still seemed to have quite the presence.

When he saw Han Shuo enter, Ashburn glanced at Charles before standing. He smiled and nodded toward Han Shuo before saying, "Marquis Bryan has such a well-known reputation. Seeing you today, it is indeed well-deserved. An outstanding male like Marquis Bryan is truly rare within our Lancelot Empire. Haha."

Han Shuo wasn't in a good mood. Having heard many occasions where old fox Ashburn and Charles threw their weight around, he didn't have a good impression of the two of them. He replied while faking a smile, "Lord Duke is over-praising me. In front of Lord Duke, no one else is fit to be famed for a well-known reputation.

"Greetings Eldest Prince." Han Shuo then bowed toward Eldest Prince Charles in accordance to etiquette.

"Hehe, be at ease. Previously there were some misunderstandings with Marquis Bryan. I've come this time precisely because I wish to our prior misunderstandings." Eldest Prince Charles looked at Han Shuo amiably, his friendly manner as different as night and day from the previous time at the Rose Garden.

"Your Highness is too courteous. We never had any misunderstandings. The way you say it makes me worry about what had happened." Han Shuo was stunned, before replying Charles while having an expression that he was unable to make head or tail of the situation.

Coughing softly, Duke Ashburn smiled and said, "Previously we had Cameron to assist with some matters. I didn't expect that Mister Cameron actually became a competitor to Miss Phoebe's business. Cameron truly deserves to die, actually using Charles' title to intimidate people, audaciously finding trouble with Miss Phoebe.

Hehe, at the start, we didn't know of this matter. However, I suppose that Marquis Bryan would perhaps misunderstand that we had prompted Cameron to act that way. Hence, we have specially come to clarify the matter with Marquis Bryan. We hope that Marquis Bryan wouldn't misunderstand us due to that matter. Honestly speaking, Charles and I have always extremely admired you and wish to be friends with you."

Misunderstanding? There was simply no misunderstanding. Without your instructions, why would Cameron dare to use his connection with you to intimidate Phoebe?

Han Shuo sneered inwardly. He already understood their goal from Ashburn and Charles' tone. He was certain that this was because of his status in Uhtred's heart. This caused the two of them to realize his importance. This was why they would deign and deliberately want to make friends with him.

"Hehe, that must be a misunderstanding. That matter had happened so long ago that I almost forgot about it. There's nothing much to discuss." Han Shuo squinted his eyes, playing down the issue. Shortly after, he smiled as he looked at Ashburn and Charles while asking, "May I know, are there any other matters causing Lord Duke and His Highness to visit?"

"The development of Brettel City has been the most inspirational news in recent days. The city lord of Seamist City which neighbors Brettel City, Kairov, has extremely close relations with me. Hehe, if Brettel City and Seamist City are able to work closely together, the development in all areas would be even faster.

My visit today is precisely to discuss with Marquis Bryan the aid that Seamist City can provide Brettel City, such as manpower and resources that Brettel City needs urgently." Eldest Prince Charles smiled as he looked at Han Shuo, slowly explaining his proposal.

Seamist City City Lord Kairov was a member of the Haug Family, his sister Kalina was Eldest Prince Charles' wife. His relationship with Charles was naturally extremely intimate. The distance between Seamist City and Brettel City isn't very far. If Seamist City was able to provide some effective help, it would naturally be extremely beneficial to Brettel City's development. This was something Han Shuo was aware of.

"In that case, what does Brettel City have to invest on their part?" Han Shuo remained calm and collected as he inquired.

"There's no need for any investment. As long as I'm able to gain Marquis Bryan's friendship, I would be satisfied." Charles's scorching gaze was fixed on Han Shuo as he replied.

Grand Duke Ashburn smiled as he looked at Han Shuo. He pondered for a moment before saying, "Marquis Bryan, to be frank, I admire you greatly. If you don't mind, we can discuss in depth on the possibility of many collaborations. The power and benefit we are able to provide you far surpasses what others can give you. As long as you work together with us, power, wealth, women are all easily obtained."

Han Shuo chuckled as he looked at the two of them, firmly shaking his head under their expectant gazes and said, "I'm sorry, I'm a person who cherishes old friendships and also know to return the favor of others. Both of you should understand what I mean!"

Hearing Han Shuo's response, Eldest Prince Charles' expression sank. Just as he wanted to speak out, Ashburn glared at him. Soon after, Ashburn smiled and said, "So that is the case. I understand. Since that is the case, we'll take our leave. We apologize for brazenly disturbing. Hope you can forgive us."

After he was stared at by Ashburn, Charles did not suddenly forget himself. Merely, his calm gaze toward Han Shuo had an added resentment, as if angry at Han Shuo's rejection and failing to appreciate his kindness.

"In that case, I won't see you out." Han Shuo looked astonishedly at Grand Duke Ashburn. He didn't expect that Ashburn would actually be that direct, not dragging on the situation the slightest once he understood that there was no hope.

“Marquis Bryan, do take care of yourself!” Before Charles left, he suddenly turned back to look at Han Shuo, implying a hidden intention within his words.

“I thank Eldest Prince for his reminder, I will be careful.” Han Shuo expression suddenly turned cold, replying sarcastically.

Han Shuo could clearly hear the threat within Charles’ tone. He knew that after today, there was no chance of being friends with Charles and Ashburn and could only be enemies till one side is dead.

Chapter 410: Sudden changes within Ossen City

Han Shuo knew that Charles definitely wouldn't let him off. However, Han Shuo didn't expect that Charles's retaliation would come so quickly and that violently.

That same night, Han Shuo who was studying the method of connecting to the netherworld suddenly felt through his consciousness several formidable auras that were gradually heading for his mansion from afar.

Han Shuo was suddenly roused from his contemplation, immediately sending out twelve mystic demons, spreading out in twelve directions with the mansion as the center, like a spider web.

A five hundred strong knight troop, including two hundred Temple knights from the Church of Light headed for Han Shuo's mansion from four directions. The Church of Light's light grand magus Kosse, a few other unfamiliar experts from the Church of Light as well as formidable deathsworn under Ashburn were separately leading troops as they encircled the mansion.

There was no moonlight that night. In the pitch-black curtain of night, they did not conceal themselves, simply heading openly toward Han Shuo's mansion. Han Shuo was able to see the killing intent within the eyes of these knights.

Han Shuo was alarmed, hurriedly exiting his hidden room. The scene he saw through the twelve mystic demons simply exceeded Han Shuo's imagination. No matter how large the influence Ashburn and Charles had, how would they dare to be so unbridled in the capital of Lancelot Empire, Ossen City?

The area Han Shuo was living in was surrounded by wealthy and respectable people and were all influential characters within the Empire. Even though it was a moonless night, such a large movement would definitely be unable to be concealed. Furthermore, Ossen City was the Dark Mantle's headquarters. Ashburn was after all not King Uhtred. On what basis is he so unbridled?

A series of misgivings rushed into Han Shuo's mind. He only felt that Ashburn must be insane. Such a crazy movement definitely shouldn't be something that old fox dares to do. Unfortunately, with the appearance of Kosse and the presence of other members of his dukedom already proved that this operation is indeed incited by Ashburn.

While Han Shuo was still at a loss, a nearby mansion suddenly ignited in flames which reached the sky. A mystic demon just happened to see the situation in that direction and observed a group of knights charge in and kill everyone they see. In the blink of an eye, blood dyed the ground red and not even one servant was let off.

Han Shuo vaguely recalled that the mansion should be Count Talric's. Talric was inclined toward Lawrence. Han Shuo even saw him in the morning and found out through Lawrence's introduction that his mansion wasn't far from his own. He didn't expect that Talric's mansion would already be in its current state.

A thought flashed in Han Shuo's mind, in sudden realization. Since Ashburn dared to act so brazenly and disregard King Uhtred's authority, there are only two possibilities. Either Ashburn knew that the situation was far from good and preemptively revolted.

The other possibility was that King Uhtred had already died. In that case, Ashburn would no longer be restricted by anyone. Hence he would dare to freely act, eradicating the people who were detrimental to him at the fastest speed and swiftly take Ossen City under his control.

However, if Ashburn wanted to revolt, he should have acted from the day King Uhtred made known that he would support Lawrence and definitely wouldn't look on unfeelingly as Uhtred delegated power bit by bit toward Lawrence. It seems that the first possibility was much smaller and that King Uhtred's sudden demise was instead the most plausible.

With this suspicion, he only kept two mystic demons within his mansion, spreading the other ten mystic demons further away. Among them, one mystic demon directly headed in the direction of the royal palace.

Through the mystic demons, Han Shuo discovered even more troops being mobilized in the pitch-black night. There were other regions who were similarly engaged in cruel slaughter. These included nobles who supported Lawrence as well as powers under the Second and Third Prince.

All of a sudden, huge clouds of smoke rose from the entire inner Ossen City. Ashburn and Eldest Prince Charles had without a doubt already launched their operation of massacring the influences that opposed them to officially start on this moonless night. Any powers that opposed Ashburn and Charles were fated to meet with death or injuries tonight.

Coming to this realization, Han Shuo rapidly headed for Steward Kallas' room. Steward Kallas was quite old and hence didn't sleep deeply. Furthermore, Han Shuo deliberately made louder footsteps when he headed over. Hence, Kallas immediately woke up.

"Lord Marquis, what's going on?" Kallas had never seen Han Shuo that impatient. He nimbly sat up and immediately inquired. "Don't bring anything along, immediately wake up all the servants. All of you are to leave the mansion and flee for your lives. Duke Ashburn has revolted. A regiment of knights is currently heading for this location. Once they arrive, everyone here will be killed. Hurry, leave this place immediately!" Han Shuo rapidly explained the situation. Once he finished explaining, he didn't wait for a response and hurriedly left the mansion, immediately heading for the Boozt Merchant Guild where Phoebe was.

This mansion was bestowed to Han Shuo by Uhtred. However, Han Shuo clearly didn't take it as a real home. There wasn't anyone here that Han Shuo truly cared about. Han Shuo also had a habit of keeping valuables within his spatial ring. At this moment, there weren't any person or item that was worth. Hence, he immediately left after warning Kallas.

There weren't many people who knew of Han Shuo and Fanny's relationship. Furthermore, Fanny and Lawrence didn't have any interactions. On top of that, Fanny's father was Firenze. As the Lord of the Southern border, Firenze was one of the few people that Ashburn worried about. Han Shuo simply didn't need to worry about Fanny's safety.

Emily was within the Dark Mantle Headquarters. Within the entire Ossen City, the defenses of the Dark Mantle Headquarters was the most secure. There were countless teleportation arrays within that linked to every major city within the empire. Even if Ashburn had overwhelming methods, he also wouldn't be able to breach the Dark Mantle Headquarters in a short period of time. Wanting to capture the higher ranking people of the Dark Mantle was even more impossible.

Hence, Han Shuo was similarly not worried about Emily.

However, Phoebe was close to Lawrence and the Boozt Merchant Guild had repeatedly foiled Grand Duke Ashburn's matters. Hence, they were the most likely to be attacked.

As the Grand Duke of the empire, the power Ashburn wielded was second to King Uhtred. Even Phoebe's master sacred swordmaster Karel would similarly not be taken seriously by Ashburn. With the full support of the Church of Light, the number of experts Ashburn controlled was surely even greater. It was almost impossible for sacred swordmaster Karel to depend on his own strength to kill Ashburn.

Han Shuo traveled as fast as lightning, directly heading for the Boozt Merchant Guild. Along the way, he discovered through his mystic demons, even more, changes happening within Ossen City. Many mansions were reduced to ruins in an extremely short period of time. A few small mansions were subjected to a number of large-scale killing spells and were razed to the ground within a few breaths.

Ashburn's vicious actions were extremely resolute. As long as it was a hostile power, regardless of whether they were servants or guests, he didn't let a single person off. Many of the nobles' mansions were involved in the cruel massacre. During this course of events, the army he controlled headed for the city gates, probably intending to seize control of all the city gates.

The teleportation arrays within Ossen City had been seized by Ashburn a long time ago. Layers upon layers of troops firmly surrounded the magic arrays. No one would be able to leave Ossen City through the magic arrays. It seems that Ashburn and Charles had planned to thoroughly seize control of the entire Ossen City, disposing of all their enemies within.

The mystic demon that headed for the royal palace heard wails even before it neared. Troops that were under Eldest Prince Charles had already seized control of the royal palace. The mystic demon simply made a pass around the palace and discovered that King Uhtred had indeed died and some rebels were already killed on the spot.

From these signs, Han Shuo suddenly realized that King Uhtred's sudden demise was perhaps related to Eldest Prince Charles. Otherwise, the royal palace wouldn't be sealed off, not allowing any news to be spread. The other princes were unfortunately kept in the dark, simply unaware of the king's passing.

Within Ashburn's mansion, Ashburn and Eldest Prince Charles were seated together with many supporting nobles who had darkened expressions. As they directed officers to seize important positions, they read out names of nobles one after another, sending their subordinates to go and eradicate them.

A mystic demon stayed in the vicinity and was able to clearly listen to the conversation between Ashburn, Charles and the others. Han Shuo finally understood that tonight's incidents were indeed Ashburn and Charles fiercely striking back.

Out of a sudden, a mystic demon who had reached Boozt Merchant Guild ahead of time saw from afar a squadron of soldiers currently killing people unfeelingly. The merchants and guards of the Boozt Merchant Guild died tragically one after another under the arrows of these soldiers. However, it was fortunate that these people had just begun at the front of the building and clearly haven't penetrated into the interior. Han Shuo reckoned that Phoebe was still fine for the time being.

However, Han Shuo was still extremely worried, activating the Art of Demonic Ninth Heavens to its peak, heading for the Boozt Merchant Guild with the speed of a meteor. He constantly prayed inwardly that nothing would happen to Phoebe. If anything happened to Phoebe, even though Han Shuo had previously promised Uhtred, he would ignore that promise and skin Charles alive.

Chapter 411: Chopping their hands off

Smoke rose everywhere from within the Boozt Merchant Guild. The soldiers under Ashburn's command charged in, killing everyone they see. The guards within the guild simply didn't have the chance to retaliate with most of them being killed or injured in an instant.

Phoebe who was distraught from Han Shuo's words held divine weapon Starry Sky and led the guards within the guild to do their utmost in resisting. However, the situation was clearly far from good.

The soldiers that attacked Boozt Merchant Guild included some experts that supported Charles. There was also a Temple Knight from the Church of Light who held a silver spear and did not put anyone in his eyes. Every strike of his spear would inevitably lead to the death of a guard.

There were also a few mages that continuously released spells. The Boozt Merchant Guild's buildings caught fire in succession. The stocked up grains and goods burned within the large fire. Some servants were burning all over as they exited their rooms, only to face a rain of arrows that was shot over. Those innocent servants were all shot dead.

In an extremely short time, Boozt Merchant Guild fell into the enemy's hands under the unyielding attack. Only Phoebe and a group of loyal guards were hurriedly retreating toward the back gate. During the time, the guards by Phoebe's side were being killed in succession.

"Miss Phoebe, you won't be able to escape today!" Space archmage Aubrey smiled deviously as he gazed at Phoebe and said unhurriedly.

Previously, it was precisely space archmage Aubrey and Cameron that had come to Boozt Merchant Guild to coerce Phoebe. Unfortunately, they just so happen to run into Han Shuo. In the end, Aubrey and Cameron were both inflicted by Han Shuo's poison of fire and ice, causing him to suffer from icy cold and scorching heat for the next few days.

Aubrey naturally realized that it was Han Shuo's doing. However, he knew that Han Shuo wasn't someone he could provoke. Hence, he could only swallow this suffering and hide the thought of revenge in his heart.

Having come to the Boozt Merchant Guild again today, Aubrey had a Temple Knight from the Church of Light as well as many other mage experts with him. He was completely confident that in successfully accomplishing what he didn't complete previously, to capture Phoebe and use her to threaten sacred swordmaster Karel, causing Karel to not dare to act recklessly.

Behind Aubrey was a squadron of hundred soldiers as well as the Temple Knight who had the pattern of an olive branch on his chest. The fleeing Phoebe only had thirty guards with her. Even though Phoebe herself was a great swordmaster, there was no way she could prevail over these opponents.

As Aubrey spoke, he had already released a Spatial Rend, sending a shining sharp blade over. The guards beside Phoebe suddenly lost large chunks of flesh as the Spatial Rend took away a part of their body into a different space.

"Bang!" Phoebe who was withdrawing suddenly felt an invisible wall striking her back, her whole body actually shot forward a few steps.

"Aubrey, you still dare to appear at my Boozt Merchant Guild? Are you all crazy? You actually dare to disregard everything and kill so many servants and guards?" Phoebe clearly didn't know that King Uhtred had died and just like Han Shuo at the beginning, her heart filled with extreme appall. She had never imagined that Ashburn would dare to be so brazen.

"Haha, we aren't insane. After tonight, Ossen City and Lancelot Empire would both belong to His Highness Charles. Tonight, every hostile power would be eliminated." Aubrey laughed savagely before replying.

"Less superfluous words. Capture this woman as quickly as possible. We still have other matters to handle." the Temple Knight suddenly spoke.

Hearing the Temple Knight speak, Aubrey embarrassedly stopped laughing, nodding as he replied, "Lord Crespo, this woman is a great swordmaster. We will need to work together to capture her alive."

"Make your move then!" The Temple Knight named Crespo didn't say any useless words, raising his silver spear and headed toward Phoebe.

As he brandished the silver spear, a milky-white brilliance burst out from the spear point. A holy aura gradually spread from Crespo's body. His silver armor suddenly burst into bright light, causing Crespo's aura to rise tremendously.

Phoebe was startled, slightly retreating even before Crespo approached. Soon after, she brandished the divine weapon "Starry Sky", suddenly launching a huge Cross Slash which reached Crespo in a flash.

Crespo snorted softly, lifting up his spear toward the middle of the arriving huge Cross Slash. The Cross Slash suddenly rose into the sky, slashing a tree branch the thickness of a bowl into two.

"Merely a recently advanced great swordmaster, you should just wait obediently to be captured." Crespo said coldly, his body turning into a string of afterimages due to his high speed. The spear in his hand suddenly appeared to become several hundred as they stabbed toward Phoebe.

A ring of starry radiance suddenly burst out from the divine weapon "Starry Sky". The specks of starlight proliferated outward, forming many Cross Slashes. They carried a terrifying force as they exploded all of a sudden. As the several hundred blurry silver spears were suddenly broken into dust, the explosive force spread out, causing Crespo to groan and hastily fall back a few steps.

"Good, very good. You are actually able to borrow the power of the divine weapon to unleash Karel's Cross Slash to attack. No wonder that old fellow Karel thinks so highly of you!" Crespo retreated a few steps, seven to eight small holes appearing at the shoulder area of his silver armor, his expression cold as he spoke.

"Who would have expected that the Church of Light's Temple Knight would actually become the dog of the Eldest Prince. Is this something your religious organization that transcended worldly power should be doing?" Phoebe similarly mocked him, her face filled with disdain.

"Miss, hurry up and leave, we'll bring up the rear." the head guard of Boozt Merchant Guild impatiently begged Phoebe.

Phoebe shook her head and said helplessly, "There's no way to escape!"

Phoebe's side didn't have any formidable mages. Facing troops who possessed warhorses and were coordinating with mages and archers, escape wasn't a sensible choice because the speed of mages who could fly greatly surpassed them.

"Aubrey, ask your men to act together. After we take down this woman, we still have to handle other matters. Don't waste too much time." Crespo shot a glance at Aubrey, frowning as he said coldly.

Aubrey nodded his head in agreement as he replied, "Alright then, we'll act together."

After nodding toward Aubrey, Crespo raised his spear once again and headed toward Phoebe. With a simple swivel of his spear, a burst of silver light suddenly shot out. At the same moment, Aubrey starting chanting an incantation, a space type magic shackles caused the surrounding space to fluctuate as it shot toward Phoebe.

The magi beside Aubrey chanted incantations one after another. Magic barriers of every major descended toward Phoebe. The archers from a distance away had also arrived, all of them drawing their bows and aiming toward Phoebe.

Bang...

As Phoebe's strike obstructed Crespo's silver light, she suddenly felt a strong force and couldn't help but fall back a couple of steps. These two steps caused Phoebe to fall into the path of the space magic shackles. All kinds of formless energy suddenly rushed forth, causing Phoebe to feel like she was being entangled within a myriad of ropes, unable to move the slightest.

"Bring her away. With Phoebe in our hands, that old bastard Karel will definitely know his place!" Aubrey laughed heartily in pride as he instructed a few knights behind him.

"Heh heh, this woman is really beautiful. Tsk tsk, her skin is extremely smooth. I have never seen a woman with such delicate skin." A knight who came over had a lecherous smile, attempting to stroke Phoebe's face as he used a rope to tie her up.

As Phoebe who couldn't move and could speak saw the rough hand approaching her face, her eyes were filled with intense panic and ire. She uncontrollably thought of Han Shuo in this vulnerable moment, thinking, "How good will it be if you scoundrel is able to come and rescue me. As long as you appear, I might even forgive you. I don't want anyone apart from you to touch me..."

When a woman was frightened, vulnerable and helpless, the first person she would think of would definitely be her man. Phoebe was no exception. When she saw the knight's hand about to caress her face, as she lost her head out of fear, Phoebe called out for Han Shuo in her heart.

Swish!

Just as the rough hand was about to touch Phoebe's face, a noise suddenly sounded. Soon after, the knight was suddenly howling miserably. That coarse hand was chopped off at the wrist, dripping with blood as it fell by Phoebe's feet.

"Who is that!" Crespo suddenly shouted loudly, on guard as he looked around in all directions. The silver spear in his hand flashed intermittently with silver light.

Swish!

In the moonless night, a strand of black light flashed past, The knight who had his hand chopped off howled mournfully once again. Everyone took a look, realizing that the knight's other hand had also been chopped off.

"Capture Phoebe, hurry!" Aubrey suddenly came to his senses, hastily instructed the knights who were still distracted.

The few of them immediately started to move, planning to first tie Phoebe up with the thick rope in their hands.

Swish, swish, swish!

The strand of black light appeared repeatedly, resembling black thread that weaved the curtain of night. The knights that attempted to approach Phoebe had their extended hands chopped off one after another. In a flash, more hands actually appeared by Phoebe's feet.

Phoebe was shackled by magic and couldn't move, but her eyes didn't miss anything that occurred around her. She suddenly felt an intense happiness fill her heart. Without even needing to think, Phoebe knew that Han Shuo had arrived. With the current crisis resolved, Phoebe momentarily forgot Han Shuo's bad points, only remembering that Han Shuo had assisted her time and time again.

"Bryan... Damn it, why have you only arrived now..." Phoebe shouted loudly in her heart. Her eyes were brimming with happiness and serenity. She was no longer worried about the surrounding danger as if with the existence of that strand of black light, there would no longer be any danger to her.

"Come out, you cowardly sneak attacker!" Crespo suddenly shouted loudly as he charged toward Phoebe.

"That person, that person has arrived!" Aubrey suddenly recovered from his shock and shouted to Crespo.

Crespo was distracted momentarily, before quickly coming to his senses and shouting at once, "That's impossible. That fellow is powerless to defend himself, he shouldn't be able to appear here that quickly!"

"According to who?" A chilling voice suddenly came from afar. As the voice sounded, a shadow already stood by Phoebe's side.

Han Shuo glanced at Crespo, his left hand gently pressing on Phoebe's back and suddenly erupted in violent energy. A string of crackling sounds rang in Phoebe's surroundings. Several barriers and Aubrey's shackles suddenly broke into many pieces.

Phoebe who was previously shackled and unable to move suddenly felt that she was able to move her whole body. Prior to Han Shuo's arrival, Phoebe was continuously calling out for him in her heart, even thinking to herself that if Han Shuo saved her once again, she would forgive his fickleness. However, when Han Shuo really appeared and Phoebe's danger was removed, she once again brooded over the previous matter, feeling that she shouldn't forgive him that easily. Hence, she snorted softly but didn't say anything.

"Heh heh, you even dare to touch my woman. Courting death!" After Han Shuo broke Phoebe's shackles with a strike, he menacingly gazed at the people in front of him and said coldly.

"Bah! Who is your woman? You fickle scoundrel!" Phoebe was happy yet ashamed and couldn't help but hatefully glare at Han Shuo, panting in rage as she said, "I still haven't forgiven you for that matter. Please refrain from talking rubbish!"

"Of course Miss Phoebe is my woman. If you aren't my woman, why would I travel all the way to the north of the city to save you?" Han Shuo grinned as he replied Phoebe.

"It's really you. How is that possible, how did you manage to escape from Lord Kosse's grasp?" Crespo's expression changed, looking at Han Shuo in shock as he spoke.

"Kosse? Ha, in several fights, it seemed that the one who is always fleeing is that fellow?" Han Shuo said calmly to Crespo. As he spoke, Han Shuo had already taken out the skeletal staff, his expression gradually became colder.

"It is different this time. Apart from Lord Kosse, there's also Lord Blount. How did you manage to escape?" Crespo was at a loss, retreating in fear.

Han Shuo's evil reputation was currently extremely well-known in the Church of Light. Red Archbishop Kosse was repeatedly defeated by him. Han Shuo's strength was also gradually acknowledged by the people within the Church of Light. Crespo still had self-awareness, knowing that with his strength, he definitely wasn't Han Shuo's match. The notion of retreating had appeared in his heart.

"Every single one of you will not leave here alive!" Han Shuo pronounced their fate, the skeletal staff beginning to summon undead creatures.

Red Archbishop Kosse who wielded the 'Revelation' divine artifact wasn't here and there weren't any light mages who could quickly purify undead creatures present. Han Shuo had complete confidence in swiftly killing all of them.

Chapter 412: Sacred Knight

Under the summons of the skeletal staff, waves of undead creatures densely filled Han Shuo's surroundings. Han Shuo held Phoebe in one hand and the skeletal staff in the other, rapidly reciting incantations.

"Retreat!" Crespo decisively gave the order, taking the lead in withdrawing.

When Aubrey who was in charge of the current operation saw Han Shuo suddenly appearing by Phoebe's side, he immediately knew that they had failed once again. When groups of undead creatures gradually appeared, Aubrey had also thought of withdrawing. Crespo's call for retreat matched his intentions and he similarly started to escape toward the rear.

"Want to run? It's too late!" Han Shuo released Phoebe's hand which he had been holding firmly and suddenly flew toward Aubrey. He held the skeletal staff in his left hand as before, while the Demonslayer Edge shot out from his right palm.

Aubrey had already suffered great losses to Han Shuo previously. Once he saw Han Shuo directly charging toward him, his expression changed at once. He hastily shouted at the archers on the surrounding roofs, "Shoot him to death!"

A rain of arrows shot toward Han Shuo, the power and speed of the arrows indicating that the strength of these archers was out of the ordinary. However, even before the arrow rain could reach Han Shuo, Han Shuo's skeletal staff shook, causing several towering bone shields to appear in all directions, blocking off the entire arrow rain.

Han Shuo's speed exceeded Aubrey's imagination. When Aubrey turned his head to take a look, the cold and vicious Han Shuo was actually only a short distance away from him.

"Be careful!" Crespo suddenly shouted loudly, the silver spear in his hand thrust like a drill at high speed toward Han Shuo. Han Shuo turned his head to glance at Crespo before raising his right hand. The Demonslayer Edge turned into a flash of black light and stabbed toward the spear point with a swish.

“Clang!”

A magnificent radiance blossomed. Crespo only felt an enormous force rush into his body through the spear, rushing from his arm into his five viscera and six bowels, causing severe wounds to his divine body in a flash. He couldn't help but spit out a mouthful of blood, his complexion pale as he continued to retreat.

“Dong!” Crespo's silver spear had actually been split into two as it fell on the stone floor.

The excessive might of the Demonslayer Edge didn't decrease as it continued like a shadow toward Crespo's chest. Even before Crespo could stand firmly, there was merely a “puu” sound as the Demonslayer Edge penetrated Crespo's silver armor and cut open a large hole in his chest.

As a piercing pain spread from his chest, Crespo's pale face was filled with despair as he looked in a daze at the hole in his chest. With a last “How is that possible”, he collapsed loudly soon after.

Aubrey was terror-stricken, reckless escaping into the distance, no longer caring about the lives of the others.

Crespo was the main assistance for this operation. He was a sky rider and after joining the Church of Light's Temple Knights, because of his pious belief toward the God of Light, he had received additional divine protection and was much stronger than an ordinary sky rider.

The silver spear and his bright silver armor were both items that only high-ranking Temple Knights possessed. They were both extremely high-quality items in the eyes of all blacksmiths within the continent. The spear and armor both contained divine energy. Who would have thought that under the attack of that weapon, they were broken apart like paper mache, causing Aubrey to tremble in fear.

Aubrey who was fleeing with all his might clearly didn't realize that Han Shuo's speed far exceeded his own. Even before Aubrey could leave Boozt Merchant Guild's area of influence, a cold shout was heard behind him.

Aubrey was overwhelmed with shock, disregarding everything to start using the teleportation spell which he was yet to be proficient in.

As a space archmage, Aubrey's comprehension of space magic could only be considered a drop in the ocean. He was unable to freely teleport short distances unlike space grand magi like Emma.

However, Aubrey had no other choice as matters stand. He knew in his heart that he absolutely wasn't a match for Han Shuo. Since he had no hope of escaping through speed, he could only brave death and use that yet to be mastered spatial magic.

When people are in dire straits they would always burst forth with some latent potential. Aubrey who usually needed two seconds to cast a magic spell only used one second to cast the unmastered spell. Before Han Shuo neared Aubrey, he suddenly felt violent spatial fluctuations from Aubrey's surroundings.

The space suddenly shattered like a mirror. Aubrey was aghast and howled miserably. His body seemed to be within the broken space, split into several fragments. When the space returned to normal, Aubrey had disappeared without a trace. Han Shuo stood unmoving, apprehensive about the space magic. The effect of recklessly using unfamiliar magic would sometimes be much more powerful than standard space magic. Aubrey was clearly in such a situation. When Han Shuo saw Aubrey's body split in tandem with the space around him, he assumed that there must have been a problem with the spell and hence Aubrey had thrown away his life with it.

If Han Shuo had suddenly entered that region before it returned to normal, he would very possibly be affected by the spell and unable to escape. On the off chance that he ends up in an alternate space, Han Shuo would really feel like crying.

Aubrey's status was unknown, but Han Shuo felt that most likely he was dead. Without wasting any more time, Han Shuo immediately headed to Phoebe's side, holding onto Phoebe again and said hastily, "We should leave first. I reckon that Lawrence's location would be the most dangerous!”

Phoebe was startled yet happy, startled when she heard Han Shuo describe Lawrence’s danger. She knew that Lawrence was the most crucial person. For Ashburn to dare to attack her so brazenly, Lawrence was probably in deep trouble as well.

If Lawrence was killed, Eldest Prince Charles and Duke Ashburn would truly be able to control the situation. If that happens, the only remaining option for Han Shuo and herself would be to escape.

Her happiness stemmed from the fact that Han Shuo clearly knew that Lawrence was in greater danger, but he still prioritized her rescue. This clearly proved that her importance to Han Shuo was above all else. Even though Lawrence’s survival would bring Han Shuo greater power and benefits, Han Shuo had still come to save her first in such an important situation. Phoebe was truly touched by this.

“What about them?” Phoebe immediately agreed but inquired about the guards and the few merchants from the Boozt Merchant Guild beside her.

“Let them flee by themselves. Don’t worry, the remaining enemies are confronting my undead creatures. They simply have no chance to attack them again.” Han Shuo hastily instructed.

“Miss, you two should leave first. We know what to do.” The guard leader hurried said to Phoebe.

Phoebe hesitated for a moment before nodding and saying, “Alright then. All of you take care too. Quickly leave this place.”

Han Shuo no longer said any superfluous words, holding Phoebe by the waist and directly flying toward Lawrence’s mansion.

“Bastard, how could you do that in public?” As Phoebe was grabbed by the waist, she smelt Han Shuo’s familiar smell. Her tender and beautiful face was red from blushing as she resentfully chided him.

“What’s your concern? In any case, all of them know that you are my woman.” Han Shuo casually replied, clearly not at all embarrassed.

“You, you still dare to say that. I haven’t forgiven you!” Phoebe hatefully rolled her eyes at Han Shuo, her residual anger yet to fade.

“We’ll talk about this later. Don’t talk anymore, we need to quickly find Lawrence. If Lawrence has indeed died, I will immediately bring you away from Ossen City and return at the fastest speed to my Brettel City.” Han Shuo replied.

“Bryan, it seems like you don’t care about Lawrence’s life or death. Is that true?” Phoebe looked astonishedly at Han Shuo with some uncertainty.

“No. I’m merely being realistic and stating the facts. If I didn’t care about Lawrence’s fate, I wouldn’t be going to save him now. Alright, no more talking!” Han Shuo casually replied before suddenly increasing his speed, heading toward Lawrence’s mansion like a streak of lightning.

Ever since Han Shuo knew that Lawrence had purposely made friends with him with ulterior motives, he had no longer treated Lawrence as a true friend. Lawrence who thought deeply and planned everything carefully had only been acting for his own interests. Han Shuo understood this and didn’t feel any resentment toward Lawrence’s actions.

However, it was also impossible for Han Shuo to not have any ill-feelings! Merely, Han Shuo’s interests were firmly tied to Lawrence. Only if Lawrence ascended the throne would Han Shuo be able to obtain the most benefits. Although this relationship which was purely based on benefits was firm, it wouldn’t involve too much personal feelings.

It can only be said that Han Shuo going to Lawrence’s aid was entirely for his own interests and not because of personal relations between them. Hence, Han Shuo didn’t have much feelings regarding Lawrence’s life or death. That was why he had an apathetic expression when talking about Lawrence’s situation.

Soaring flames could be seen from afar even before they reached Lawrence’s mansion, illuminating the moonless night. The fire from Lawrence’s mansion was really too conspicuous.

There were also mansions of other nobles in the surroundings of Lawrence's mansion. However, these mansions were untouched, the gates firmly shut without a single person emerging to take a look, as though they had suddenly become blind and deaf, ignoring the sound of activity coming from Lawrence's mansion. All of them seemed to have sunk into the deepest sleep.

As Han Shuo glanced at the strangely silent mansions, the mystic demons had made a loop at a high altitude, suddenly realizing that the people within these seemingly silent mansions were similarly losing their head out of fear. However, at the strict orders of their owners, no one dared to make a sound and no one was curious enough to exit the mansion to take a look.

This was the best example of the hypocrisy of the world. The nobles within these mansions were not Lawrence's closest allies. Most of them had yet to indicate which side they supported and hence luckily escaped a calamity. The older nobles all knew what they were doing, realizing that the only people within the entire Lancelot Empire who dared to attack Lawrence's residence were Ashburn and Eldest Prince Charles. They were not people these nobles could contend against and thus, being a bystander was the most sensible decision.

"Rumble..."

A huge bang could be heard from within Lawrence's mansion. From afar, Han Shuo saw many tall buildings collapse loudly. Within the dark sky, two gold figures were extremely gaudy as they soared uninhibitedly over several buildings. Gold light would frequently flash out and would result in the collapse of another building.

Slender gorges would appear after the flashes of gold light. The magic barriers surrounding Lawrence's entire residence was constantly being destroyed and many servants were killed in succession, their corpses lying in disarray.

Several knights dressed in brown, silver and grey armors, as well as several white, red and black robed magi, surrounded Lawrence's mansion from all directions. These people included experts under Ashburn, experts under Eldest Prince Charles as well as experts dispatched by the Church of Light.

When Han Shuo and Phoebe almost reached that area, a mystic demon had finally approached in advance, suddenly detecting the two figures that were constantly soaring uninhibitedly. One of them was actually sacred swordmaster Karel, while the other was a golden-haired elder who donned gold knight armor.

The golden-haired elder held a gold pike and there was a symbol of an angel on the chest plate of his gold armor. The angel design was extremely lifelike, its wings appearing to be continuously flapping.

The angel engraved on the Temple Knight's chest was a symbol that he had been blessed by the God of Light. Every Temple Knight that possesses the angel engravement had frightening strength comparable to sacred knights. If the Temple Knight was also personally a sacred knight, his strength would be even more terrifying.

However, these kind of Temple Knights were extremely rare within the Church of Light. They would definitely not leave the Temple of Light under normal situations. It is said that only when evil heretics that blaspheme the God of Light appear would these rarely seen Temple Knights leave the Temple of Light, delivering punishment on these heretics on behalf of the God of Light.

Han Shuo had never expected to actually see one within the Lancelot Empire and was thoroughly shocked. As strands of gold light flowed from the gold pike in the Temple Knight's hand, a matchless sacred aura proliferated, giving Han Shuo an extremely indisposed feeling.

Only sacred knights and sacred swordmasters possessed gold fighting aura. For this Temple Knight to be able to unleash gold fighting aura, it proved that he was a sacred knight. In the event such a formidable existence obtains the blessing of the God of Light, his frightful personal strength will become shocking. Han Shuo merely took a look and already secretly started worrying for sacred swordmaster Karel.

With so many experts besieging Lawrence's mansion, Han Shuo naturally wouldn't charge in stupidly. He hurriedly summoned the earth zombie to create a tunnel leading to the center of Lawrence's mansion before bringing Phoebe along and entered the tunnel.

Chapter 413: Hiding underground

Seeing a large hole appearing from the earth, Phoebe was filled with questions, her eyes gleaming as she looked at the earth zombie that had created the passageway.

As the earth zombie headed forward, even the most exquisite pangolins didn't have his remarkable ability to split the earth. The earth in front of him automatically pulled back and scattered, splitting open a continuously extending passage at a speed visible to the naked eye, allowing him to travel effortlessly.

"What, what kind of earth magic is this?" Phoebe who followed behind Han Shuo closely had watched for a while and was unable to suppress her curiosity, her astonishment written all over her face as she looked at Han Shuo.

"It's not related to magic." Han Shuo replied. He knitted his brows to consider for a moment before reluctantly explaining, "As a matter of fact, this is somewhat similar to the martial technique I practice. It's an existence that is neither within the realm of fighting aura nor magic."

Phoebe's jaw dropped, her lips opened wide in surprise. She stared blankly at Han Shuo as she said, "Apart from those two women, it seems like there are many other things that you are hiding from me!"

"There isn't! It is just that this matter is hard to explain. The martial technique I practice is totally different from the schools of magic and fighting aura and there are also some complexities. Hence, you might not understand even if I explained it to you." Han Shuo smiled bitterly as he replied, tightly grasping Phoebe's hand.

Phoebe rolled her eyes in anger at Han Shuo, thinking inwardly that she definitely had to watch him closely in the future. This fellow has been extremely lecherous all along and simply can't resist enticement. Once he comes across gorgeous women he would always be unable to resist and have devious thoughts. If things continued this way, there's no knowing how much emotional debt he would cause!

“Alright, we have reached. Be more focused, don’t let your thoughts wander!” While Phoebe was pondering silently, Han Shuo suddenly said seriously as he looked toward the slope.

The earth zombie stood in place without moving as it waited for Han Shuo and Phoebe to approach. He then turned around to send Han Shuo a message, “Father, should I immediately create an opening to the surface?”

Unknowingly, the little skeleton, earth, wood, fire and water zombies have all gotten used to addressing Han Shuo as their father. Han Shuo was extremely uncomfortable at the start but had unexpectedly slowly gotten used to it. As the calls of “Father” entered his heart, it actually gave Han Shuo a feeling of novelty.

It was as if these five undead creatures that Han Shuo had refined had truly become his flesh and blood, actually causing Han Shuo to feel unwilling to part with them. If Han Shuo didn’t communicate with the five zombies for a period of time, he would have a faint longing and worry for them, afraid that they would encounter an accident in the netherworld.

“Let’s wait awhile.” Han Shuo replied before turning to Phoebe and said, “The exit is right above us. We are currently right below Lawrence and the rest. We shouldn’t hastily head up immediately, so as to avoid Lawrence and the rest attacking us recklessly without understanding the situation. You should stay here temporarily, I’ll see if I can give your master a hand.”

“My master, how is my master?” Although Han Shuo was able to observe the situation outside through the mystical demons, Phoebe naturally didn’t have such an ability. Upon hearing Han Shuo’s comment, she was puzzled and questioned further.

“He met with some trouble.” Han Shuo explained.

“How is that possible? My master is a sacred swordmaster. How could he encounter any trouble?” Phoebe had a blind confidence in Karel, smiling lightly as she asked Han Shuo, her expression not showing any nervousness.

“Your master is currently battling with a Temple Knight from the Church of Light. He is a sacred knight from the Church of Light, apart from the fighting aura he has, the sacred knight has also obtained the blessing of God.” Han Shuo had an imposing expression as he explained to Phoebe.

Phoebe’s expression suddenly changed. She clearly knew some information of the Church of Light and hastily cried out, “How is that possible, my master once mentioned that the number of such strong Temple Knights could be counted with one hand. Why has he left the Temple of Light?”

“I don’t know either!” Han Shuo replied, creasing his brows as he thought in his heart. Could it be because of me?

“Act quickly then, I don’t want my master to be harmed. Although I know my master’s strength, there have always been stories about these formidable Temple Knights from the Church of Light spreading through the continent. These stories all describe the power of such a character, hence I can’t help but feel worried about my master.” Phoebe’s expression was filled with impatience due to her worry for her master.

Han Shuo nodded and withdrew with the earth zombie.

Above them, sacred swordmaster Karel and the Church of Light’s sacred knight were battling nonstop, causing buildings to collapse one after another. There were many deep gorges in the earth where sword light had passed by. Enormous power proliferated from both of them, causing everyone in the surroundings to frantically keep their distance so as to avoid being affected by the shockwaves.

Han Shuo was able to observe the battle above him clearly through two mystical demons. Han Shuo who remained underground wandered through the passages that the earth zombie constantly established, constantly lingering at the sacred knight’s landing areas in preparation of mounting a sneak attack when the opportunity presents itself.

The golden-haired elder who wielded the golden pike looked like a moving block of gold from afar. The golden armor on his body was incomparably firm while brilliant golden light shone as he brandished his pike, extremely dazzling in the dark night. Karel’s expression was heavy as his white hair fluttered, launching a Cross Slash everytime he extended his longsword.

Karel was clearly going all out in this battle, with every Cross Slash larger and containing much more power than when he was sparring with Han Shuo. These Cross Slashes were like revolving sickles, bursting apart rocks and collapsing buildings in their paths, destroying every single obstruction.

The sacred knight was serene, singing a song of faith toward the God of Light. Under the blessing of God, his armor was as hard as diamonds. Every thrust also glittered in golden light, interweaved with a bizarre sacred aura as it exploded every approaching Cross Slash into specks.

The battle between two peak experts caused Lawrence's mansion to appear as if it encountered landslides and cracks on the earth. None of the numerous experts in the surroundings dared to approach, afraid that they would be suddenly torn apart by fighting aura.

During this process, even more soldiers and knights had headed here from afar, surrounding Lawrence's mansion with layers of encirclement. The circumstances for Lawrence's side was becoming more and more unfavorable.

The terrifying battle between the two experts above caused Han Shuo to be extremely mind-blown. Han Shuo could clearly see every movement made through two mystical demons. At this moment, he suddenly realized that Karel had indeed not used his full strength previously. Otherwise, he would definitely have been defeated.

While the two experts were battling, Han Shuo borrowed the earth zombie's powers to rapidly shuttle through the earth, attempting to suddenly launch a fatal attack toward the sacred knight. Han Shuo faintly felt that the sacred knight's target was perhaps himself. Although taking advantage of someone else's attack to mount a sneak attack was somewhat contemptible, Han Shuo wasn't able to care so much about that.

Under the actions of the earth zombie, there were already criss-crossed tunnels underground. While Han Shuo observed the battle with the help of the mystical demon, he also constantly traveled around, ready at any moment for a lapse in concentration from the sacred knight to suddenly appear from underground to give him a painful lesson.

“Karel, I feel you should bravely withdraw. You simply won’t be able to control the current situation by yourself. As your friend for many years, I truly cannot bear to see you have such an ending.

As long as you abandon Lawrence, I, Dempus, can promise that you will be able to peacefully enjoy your later years and all your disciples apart from Lawrence will be safe and sound.” A grey-haired old magus past his prime suddenly sighed from afar. His voice didn’t seem very loud but still resonated through every corner of Lawrence’s mansion.

Han Shuo who had been constantly staring at the sacred knight’s steps naturally also heard the old magus Dempus’ words and couldn’t resist sending one of the mystical demons to watch this old magus.

Clang!

A lump of dazzling golden light blossomed from the location of the voice, standing out like glaring sunlight in the pitch-black night sky. However, the light disappeared in a flash.

“Dempus you old bastard, you clearly know of astrologer Grace’s prophecy. Yet you actually dare to disregard the future of Lancelot Empire. You will be a sinner of the Lancelot Empire for all eternity, do you know that?” Karel who landed after an exchange with the sacred knight glowered at Dempus and berated furiously.

“To the God of Light, the insignificant astrologer is merely unorthodox sorcery. Karel, you are an amazing opponent. It is a pity that you have been led astray yet obstinately unwilling to change your ways. Those who go against the God of Light will definitely not have a good ending!” The sacred knight landed on a dilapidated roof and sighed.

Han Shuo was currently right underneath the sacred knight. However, the sacred knight wasn’t locked in battle with Karel at this moment. If Han Shuo was to mount a sneak attack at this moment, he would definitely not obtain the desired result and would very likely be wounded by the sacred knight. Hence Han Shuo didn't act rashly.

"Karel, I know that Lawrence is your disciple. However, he is just an illegitimate child. Such a person definitely can't be Lancelot Empire's new king, it's better if you renounce him. I'm feeling somewhat impatient. If you still don't come to your senses, I'll have no choice but to act personally." The old magus said grudgingly.

In the distance, Lawrence's expression was extremely unsightly, his eyes having an ominous glint as he looked at the old magus who addressed him as a bastard as if itching to charge forward and rip that old magus into pieces.

"You dare?" Karel shouted indignantly, raising his longsword and charged toward the old magus.

"You won't be able to make it!" The sacred knight who stood on another roof smiled as he exclaimed, brandishing his gold pike and obstructed Karel once again. Brilliant golden light started to shoot out once again.

"Since you insist on defending that bastard, in that case, I have to regretfully tell you, old friend, I won't delay any longer." The old magus in the distance grudgingly said, taking out an earthen yellow magic staff that was embedded with many gems from his spatial ring.

Rich earth element suddenly erupted from deep within the earth, rushing from all directions toward the old magus. He had yet to chant any incantations, yet had such a strong absorption of magic elements. This caused Han Shuo's expression to change abruptly.

Dempus? Earth sacred magus Dempus Geier? Han Shuo suddenly came to his senses as he hesitated for a moment. He then immediately gave an order to the earth zombie, rapidly heading in the direction of earth sacred magus Dempus.

Although the sacred knight was similarly extremely threatening, if the sacred magus Dempus could casually release earth magic, perhaps a large-scale killing magic would be enough to completely decimate Lawrence's group of people.

Earth magic in the hands of a sacred magus would perhaps cause several mysterious restrictions to the earth. Han Shuo was worried that this person's presence would affect the earth zombie's power underground and hence hastily abandoned the constantly watched sacred knight and rushed toward the direction of Dempus Geier.

"The boundless power of the earth..." Dempus Geier chanted solemnly as he held his magic staff.

As the rich earth element erupted underground, it gradually caused slight tremors to form. Han Shuo who was currently underground was able to clearly feel the sudden increase of energy within the earth. Han Shuo cautiously concealed his aura completely and continued flying toward Dempus without coming into contact with any soil.

As the earth element was everywhere underground, Han Shuo was afraid that coming into contact with the earth will cause Dempus who was focusing his attention on releasing earth magic to notice. As the darling of the earth, the earth zombie was identical to the power of the earth. He could be seen as the vast earth and thus Han Shuo wasn't the slightest worried that the earth zombie would be discovered.

"Father, there's a change happening to the earth. My current strength is unable to prevent this change, but I'm able to change its direction. Should I change its direction?" As Han Shuo was charging toward Dempus, the earth zombie suddenly sent a message.

Han Shuo was stunned for a moment before hastily inquiring, "What do you mean?"

"The power contained within the earth will form an enormous earthquake. There will be many tears in the earth. I can't prevent that situation from happening, but I am able to change the location of the earthquake, altering where it appears!" The earth zombie earnestly replied.

Han Shuo only stared blankly for a few seconds but soon after replied estastically, "Very good, alter the location of this earthquake and place it at that old fellow's surroundings. Precisely where the most people have gathered!”

Han Shuo was overjoyed at the unexpected good news as he instructed the earth zombie. He held onto the Demonslayer Edge, already reaching the area under earth sacred magus Dempus. He then unfeelingly condensed demonic yuan energy as he stabbed upwards with his entire body.

Chapter 414: Hatred

“... With my willpower as a guide, Shatter Earth!” Earth sacred magus Dempus finally completed the long and tedious incantation.

Sacred magus Dempus' grey eyebrows suddenly creased. He sensed that the direction of the flow of the earth element underground seemed to be somewhat uncontrollable. This was a situation that had never appeared in ten years, causing him to be under the impression that due to his age, did he recite a syllable of the incantation wrongly?

Just as Dempus was somewhat muddle-headed, he suddenly felt a soaring killing intent from underneath his feet. The killing intent was not concealed the slightest. When he had just sensed it, the killing intent had already torn through the solid ground, piercing toward him like an all-conquering sharp sword.

Earth sacred magus Dempus was terrified and no longer had the time to set the out of control 'Shatter Earth' right. All his attention was on the danger that suddenly arrived. The soaring killing intent that tore apart the solid ground appeared blood red in color as it stabbed toward his sole.

Warning bells sounded in Dempus' head, suddenly jumping off the ground in panic and utilizing the levitation skill to fly into the sky. He hastily cast the 'Earth Armor' spell at the same time, causing rich earth element to frantically converge from all directions onto his body.

A greyish-brown armor was condensed from the dense earth element, covering earth sacred magus Dempus' body in a flash. He also released a tenfold gravity magic, only enveloping the area under his feet. Han Shuo who was charging upwards at lightning speed suddenly felt the pressure increase tenfold just as the Demonslayer Edge was about to stab into the sole of Dempus. His rocketing speed was unknowingly delayed. Han Shuo made a prompt decision, frantically pouring demonic yuan energy into the Demonslayer Edge while his body suddenly fell.

The Demonslayer Edge infused with demonic yuan energy suddenly burst out in a myriad of blood-colored light, no longer being affected by gravity after hovering in the air for a moment. With the blood-colored light chopping upward, the Demonslayer Edge exploded toward earth sacred magus Dempus.

Dempus was dumbstruck. He no longer had the time to cast another spell, using his entire strength to smash downward with his magic staff without the slightest hesitation. The interior of his magic staff had similarly rich in earth element, becoming as hard as diamond.

There was a sharp screech as the two weapons collided. Dempus's magic staff was shattered into pieces by the Demonslayer Edge. The Demonslayer Edge which was like an arrow at the end of its flight, but still persisted in bombarding Dempus, enveloping Dempus who was covered in earth armor, discharging the last of its energy into Dempus' body.

Dempus' earth armor didn't have any marks but strands of cold aura from the Demonslayer Edge had penetrated the physical defenses of the earth armor and directly enter Dempus' frail body. Earth sacred magus Dempus shivered, his eyebrows suddenly freezing.

It was only at this moment that some experts that were by Dempus' side had come to their senses. Many spells and weapons shot toward the Demonslayer Edge in a flash. The Demonslayer Edge snaked around like a python, avoid a majority of the attacks before suddenly entering the ground and disappearing.

Rumble...

At the same moment, the rumbling sounds of an earthquake could suddenly be heard from under their feet. These knights and soldiers started losing their balance and swaying around. Out of a sudden, numerous earth spikes appeared from the ground, killing some soldiers and knights who were unable to dodge in time.

Accompanying the fierce rumbling sound, the earth suddenly split open with many gorges, with the bottomless gorges swallowing tens of lives.

Momentarily, the area with Dempus at the center had become the main area affected by the 'Shatter Earth' spell. As the rumbling continued, people were constantly killed by the astonishing might of the earth magic.

Dempus could sense the scattered cold aura within his body, feeling his body turn cold like winter. His limbs suddenly became somewhat stiff and numb. He was so cold that he emitted cold air all over, with signs of freezing already appearing on his hair and eyebrows.

Dempus clearly realized the abnormal movement under his feet but at this moment, his limbs were frozen from the cold aura and he was unable to suppress the anomaly under his feet. He could only shiver as he watched the huge number of casualties caused by his earth magic.

“Lord Magus, what-what is going on?” a Temple Knight from the Church of Light who was being pulled up from a gorge by a White Priest looked furiously at Dempus who floating in the air and reproached. “Kaka, kaka...” Dempus panicked, attempting to explain that all these weren’t his fault, but he was only able to let out some trembling sounds.

“Is Lord Magus too old, to have actually made a mistake with such a crucial spell. Do you know how many experts we lost because of your error?” Another White Priest of the Church of Light said, similarly looking furious.

Sacred swordmaster Karel who was charging over hurriedly from afar suddenly sensed something odd from Dempus’ location. Karel was filled with doubts. He sent a few Cross Slashes to force the sacred knight to retreat before looking into the distance at Dempus’ location. He suddenly came to a realization, abandoning the sacred knight to turn around and fly toward Lawrence’s location.

The survivors by Dempus’ side were in a flurry to pick up the pieces, not having the time to care about Han Shuo who had gone underground once again. They rescued their comrades who were still hanging onto the gorges as well as help those who were only injured by the earth spikes to treat their wounds.

Han Shuo rapidly distanced himself from Dempus’ area after he attacked as the Demonslayer Edge returned to his hand. Han Shuo had unknowingly arrived underneath the Church of Light’s sacred knight. He calmly observed the sacred knight through a mystical demon. Han Shuo realized that the sacred knight was looking at Dempus in puzzlement, his brows wrinkled as though he was contemplating something.

Han Shuo held his breath in rapt attention, not in a hurry to act. He merely paid attention to the change in the sacred knight's expression through the mystical demons, looking for the most opportune moment to strike a fatal blow to the sacred knight. The sacred knight was looking at Dempus in puzzlement when he suddenly seemed to have understood something. His expression changed from puzzlement to anxiety, vibrating the golden pike in his hand and hurried toward Dempus, appearing to want to help Dempus disperse the cold aura within his body.

Han Shuo, who had been waiting for the opportune moment, suddenly unleashing the same skill, once again using the Demonslayer Edge's all-conquering sharpness to split apart the ground and stab toward the sole of the sacred knight's left leg that had not moved.

A tremendous killing intent that couldn't be masked caused the sacred knight's expression to change drastically. Soon after, he suddenly retracted his right foot that had taken a step forward. A mixture of divine energy and fighting aura suddenly shot out from his right sole. Han Shuo's Demonslayer Edge had just pierced the ground when the torrent of energy rushed violently toward him.

Rumble...

The sacred knight stamped his right foot. A large ball of golden light suddenly entered the ground with his foot at its center, suddenly creating a round hole.

Han Shuo totally didn't foresee that the sacred knight would react so quickly. The Demonslayer Edge had yet to pierce his left foot when the terrifying force that erupted from his right foot arrived. The soft ground suddenly became as heavy as a mountain under the strength of his stamp, becoming so firm that it stopped Han Shuo's sneak attack while underground.

"Hehe, Marquis Bryan, I knew it was you!" The sacred knight laughed heartily, suddenly piercing his golden pike which was trembling with golden light into the hole under his foot. In a moment, needle-like fighting aura punctured the ground, violently shooting toward Han Shuo at high speed. The strands of golden fighting aura contained divine energy which Han Shuo loathed and were so quick that Han Shuo was unable to dodge, appearing in front of Han Shuo in a flash.

As he cursed in his heart, Han Shuo's Demonslayer Edge condensed a black screen from demonic yuan energy, resisting the penetration of the strands of fighting aura. His body hurriedly formed a protective shield, forming a second layer of defense against the attack of the golden strands.

The black screen condensed in a hurry broke like an eggshell when encountering the fifty-seventh strand of golden light. The remaining strands of golden light struck Han Shuo like golden lightning. Han Shuo only felt like his body was being pierced continuously by steel needles. His tenacious body was unable to withstand it, suddenly spitting out a mouthful of blood.

As the protective shield dulled, Han Shuo appeared as if he was struck by tens of arrows, his body suddenly having many additional finger sized holes. Even his forehead had three wounds, causing Han Shuo's handsome face to be ruined and to look extremely terrifying.

"Brat, I knew long ago that you harbor malicious intentions and have been waiting for your sneak attack. Hehe, you are still too inexperienced!" The sacred knight's laughter could be heard from above. He raised his pike, intending to attack Han Shuo again.

This was the greatest defeat Han Shuo had suffered since he started cultivating. He cursed the ancestors of the sacred knight in his heart, realizing that his plan to mount a sneak attack had been seen through long ago and had instead ended up worse off. He resisted the urge to charge out and go all out against the sacred knight. Han Shuo didn't wait for the sacred knight's next wave of attacks, making a prompt decision to return along his original path.

Having trained till his current level, as long as Han Shuo's consciousness didn't scatter and the demonic infant wasn't destroyed, he would still be able to recover no matter the degree of injury to his physical body. Hence, Han Shuo wasn't worried about his disfigured face. As there were too many opposing experts, Han Shuo knew that forcing his way out was useless. Even though he felt extremely unwilling in his heart, he had no choice but to retreat.

The earth zombie who had just wrecked earth sacred magus Dempus' 'Shatter Earth' spell suddenly felt the boundless wrath and resentment in Han Shuo's heart. The earth zombie disobeyed Han Shuo's instructions for the first time and actually stubbornly emerging from within the ground. All of a sudden, thousands of earth spikes rose from the ground.

The ground became like a continuous sea of trees rising indefinitely. When the sacred knight was looking unstable, the naive earth zombie had already disregarded everything and charged toward the sacred knight. As he charged, lumps of earth flew up and adhered to the earth zombie's body.

In an extremely short time, the earth zombie was covered in numerous clumps of soil, forming a ten-meter tall clay man. His original naive look could no longer be seen, as though he had merged with the earth as he ferociously walked toward the sacred knight who was somewhat in a daze.

"No!" Han Shuo who was deep underground suddenly screamed his lungs out, flying into the sky once again in spite of his body being drenched in blood from his injuries and charging anxiously toward the sacred knight.

However, even before Han Shuo could reach the sacred knight, his golden pike had suddenly shot out a glaring golden light, with the pike stabbing into the middle of the sole of the ten meter tall clay man the earth zombie had transformed into, causing a torrent of energy to suddenly erupt and charge into the earth zombie's body.

The earth zombie's body that was formed from soil suddenly shot out gold light after the golden light from the sacred knight entered its body. Soon after, the earth on his body started falling piece by piece. The earth zombie who had returned to its original size was struck by a beam of golden light, suddenly flying backward. A large chunk of his naturally formed armor had sunk in at the chest.

Han Shuo's eyes turned red. He had never been as angry as he was at this moment. The little skeleton and the other zombies in the other plane all transmitted strong messages of wanting to come to this plane and join strengths with Han Shuo to savagely retaliate against the enemy who dared to harm Han Shuo and the earth zombie.

Han Shuo didn't lose his rationality, forcefully obstructing the strong desire of the little skeleton and the rest. When he saw the earth zombie actually struggling in an attempt to charge toward that sacred knight once again for revenge once he landed on the ground, Han Shuo choked with emotion as he shouted, "Idiot!"

Soon after, Han Shuo ignored the earth zombie's stubborn desire, chanting at the fastest speed in his life and forcefully sent this naive earth zombie back to the netherworld.

"Stupid undead creature, truly courting death!" The sacred knight laughed as he looked at Han Shuo, pointing his pike toward Han Shuo and said, "My target this time is you. Your strength is pretty good, no wonder you are able to force Kosse to retreat twice! However, your good luck ends here!"

Han Shuo had never hated someone the way he did now. Until now, Han Shuo's attitude toward the Church of Light had always been to ignore them, only adopting measures to counterattack. It was only when the earth zombie was injured because of him that Han Shuo was truly determined to oppose the Church of Light till one party is eliminated.

Staring at the sacred knight who had a relaxed expression, Han Shuo breathed violently, ignoring the blood flowing from his wounds. Blood flowed out from the wounds on the bridge of his nose and his left cheek due to his stirred up emotions, causing him to look like a demon that had walked out from the depths of hell.

"I'll remember you. For every day I live, the Church of Light will never have another day of peace!" Han Shuo unhurriedly declared word by word before turning around and flying toward Karel with the Art of the Demonic Ninth Heavens.

Lancelot Empire's space sacred magus Sabakas had unknowingly appeared and was currently drawing a teleportation array under Lawrence's feet. Apart from Sabakas who was concentrating on drawing the magic array, everyone else had their eyes fixed on Han Shuo.

Tears constantly fell from Phoebe's eyes, but she was forcefully restrained by Karel, preventing her from attempting to fly to Han Shuo's side.

Chapter 415: Miraculous speed of recovery

When the sacred knight who had injured Han Shuo saw Han Shuo turn around to fly toward Lawrence, he hesitated for a moment but did not pursue and attack.

Apart from sacred swordmaster Karel, there was also space sacred magus in the direction Han Shuo flew in. With two sacred ranked experts there and earth sacred magus Dempus yet to recover, the sacred knight clearly felt some apprehension.

With the sacred knight not daring to act blindly, the experts from the Church of Light as well as under Ashburn and Prince Charles naturally wouldn't foolishly charge forward to their deaths. Hence, they all looked on helplessly as Han Shuo shouted vicious words before flying rapidly toward Lawrence's side.

As of now, Lawrence's residence had been thoroughly wrecked by the fight between the two sacred ranked experts and the 'Shatter Earth' spell. All that could be seen were collapsed buildings and desolation.

The servants, workers and maids in Lawrence's residence had long since been massacred. Currently there were merely less than ten trusted aides by Lawrence's side. In contrast, even after the losses to the 'Shatter Earth' spell, the enemy still had almost four hundred experts with astonishing strength from various professions. The sounds of iron hoofs could be heard gradually approaching, seeming that there were still reinforcement troops heading over.

Earth sacred magus Dempus lightly exhaled as strands of purple specks floated out of his body. The cold aura that penetrated the bones was diffused out with the purple specks.

Dempus was after all a sacred magus and was extremely proficient in manipulating mental energy. Although the invasion of the cold aura was able to chill and even freeze his body, once he came to his senses and used his mental energy to dispel the chilliness, the cold aura was clearly unable to threaten his life.

Furthermore, when the cold aura from the Demonslayer Edge entered his body, it was after he had resisted it twice with magic. Only a few strands of the dense cold poison was able to enter his body. A magus at his level naturally wouldn't be killed that easily by a few strands of cold poison.

After Dempus dispelled the cold aura within his body, he still had some lingering fears. Fortunately, he had reacted promptly and there were many experts guarding by his side. Otherwise, if Han Shuo had the opportunity to attack after Dempus was affected by the cold poison, his life might truly have been lost.

Such a frightening martial technique! Dempus felt aghast, gazing toward the faraway Han Shuo who was wounded from head to toe but still appearing malevolent as he headed toward Lawrence. He thought in his heart about astrologer Grace's prophecy that this person would bring prosperity to Lancelot Empire. Could it really be true?

"Bryan, are-you ok?" Phoebe struggled with all her might to escape from Karel's grasp, tearfully rushing toward Han Shuo, her delicate hands trembling as she caressed the terrible wounds on Han Shuo's face.

"It's nothing, don't need to worry!" Han Shuo gave an unsightly grin as he consoled Phoebe who was crying uncontrollably. He reached out to grab Phoebe's hand which was caressing the wounds on his face and walked toward Lawrence.

Lawrence's expression was filled with concern as he asked hurriedly, "Healer, where's the healer?"

"Dead, dead a long time ago!" dark grand magus Crowley who had pledged allegiance to Lawrence sighed softly and then took out a medicine bottle, passing it over to Han Shuo as he said, "Quickly apply this on your wounds!"

"Senior!" Old assassin Bollands who had watching Han Shuo all along called out softly.

Bollands was no longer young and had seen all sorts of situations as an assassin. He didn't deliberately express his concern in front of Han Shuo, but the killing intent on his body become even stronger, obviously not directed at the people by Han Shuo's side.

"I'm ok!" Han Shuo smiled as he declined. However, when his smile was displayed on that frightening face, it didn't cause people to feel reassured. To say the least, Phoebe started crying bitterly once again.

"I'm really fine, I am already no longer bleeding from my wounds. The martial technique I practice is special. These injuries may look extremely serious, but they don't have a substantial effect on me." When Han Shuo saw everyone anxiously trying to apply medicine to his body, he couldn't help but explain again.

Hearing Han Shuo's statement, everyone couldn't help but be filled with doubts as they earnestly sized up Han Shuo. Everyone's expression suddenly changed.

The wounds that had covered Han Shuo's entire body were previously still finger-sized and dripping with blood. All the blood had since congealed like ice. The scarlet injured muscle fibers started wiggling like worms and the originally finger-sized wounds actually shrunk by a fold.

Sacred swordmaster Karel who had been calm doubted his eyes, subconsciously closing his eyes before opening them again, his eyes shining as he fixed his eyes on the wounds on Han Shuo's body.

Really shrunk by a fold!

Karel was moved, his torch-like eyes clearly saw that Han Shuo's wounds were about the size of a little finger and was oozing with scarlet blood. However, not only did the bleeding stop, even the wounds were only the size of chopsticks.

Han Shuo had charged out from within the ground, sent that peculiar undead creature back to the netherworld and then flew toward them. All these only took at most two minutes!

Two minutes was roughly equivalent to the duration where one is entranced. Such an outrageous change in such a short time, Karel couldn't help but be indescribably shocked!

Bollands' expression was burning hot, his eyes shining as he stared at the changes of a wound on Han Shuo's belly. This wound which was near to Han Shuo's demon infant was currently just the width of a toothpick and was far from the terrifying sight at the beginning.

Demonic arts! This is precisely the might of demonic arts! Bollands shouted in his heart. He who was on the verge of cultivating secret demonic arts felt his heartbeat suddenly increasing at this moment. The excitement in his heart became somewhat unable to be contained.

"Alright, you all need not take care of me, I'll be able to recover very soon. Currently, we should rather be thinking of how to obstruct the attack of those people and fight for sufficient time for Mister Sabakas!" Han Shuo turned his head to look at the restless enemies and said calmly.

With Han Shuo's reminder, everyone discovered the anomalies in his body. When they heard him speaking with his usual calm expression, they suddenly realized the unfavorability of their situation and looked at the enemy. They suddenly realized that the sacred knight and earth sacred magus Dempus were recklessly charging over.

Space sacred magus Sabakas was the only one who didn't turn to look at Han Shuo. At this moment, he was holding a pointed magic staff, carving a complicated space magic array on the smooth rock ground.

The three-meter long magic array was in an irregular rhombus shape. With every stroke of Sabakas' magic staff, a slender line will appear and strands of elemental energy would flow through the sharp tip of the magic staff and enter each line of the magic array.

The focused Sabakas had totally immersed himself. In his eyes, there was nothing else except the magic array under his feet. He had simply ignored all other activity, as though he wouldn't even crease his brows if the heaven fell and earth rendered.

As a space sacred magus, no one could stop him if Sabakas wanted to leave by himself. If Sabakas wished, he could even bring a few people along. Unfortunately, there were too many important people here. Even Sabakas was unable to act without a care for the lives of others and hence could only utilize a magic transportation array.

The sacred knight and earth sacred magus who were charging over were clearly aiming to prevent Sabakas from completing his magic array. Having the superiority in numbers, they planned to get rid of everyone here once and for all, so as to avoid leaving behind endless trouble.

While Dempus was flying over, another magic staff actually appeared in his hand as he started chanting a long magic spell once again. His eyes were fixed on Han Shuo, as if Han Shuo was his greatest enemy.

“Pay attention, we definitely can’t let anyone disturb Sabakas!” sacred swordmaster Karel drew back his astonishment toward Han Shuo and instructed hastily.

The strongest person in a team was usually the leader. Karel’s words caused everyone by Lawrence to focus their attention, immediately going to a square-shaped formation with Sabakas in the middle, intending to obtain enough time for Sabakas.

“Let’s go!” When everyone had prepared to fight for time for Sabakas, Sabakas who had been fully focused on deploying the space magic array suddenly called out.

Everyone’s expression relaxed as, under Sabakas’s directions, Lawrence and those who were the weakest took the lead to stand in the magic transportation array.

“Don’t let them get away!” the sacred knight shouted loudly while charging over.

“Meteor Shower!” Dempus who had been constantly chanting earth magic completed his current incantation. Rumbling sounds suddenly appeared above everyone as several hundred meteorites suddenly smashed downward.

It was obvious that such a concentrated Meteor Shower could cause when it fell on such a small area.

The skeletal staff suddenly appeared in Han Shuo’s hand as numerous bone spears flew into the sky like an arrow rain. A pretty white bone shield blossomed in malevolent beauty as it covered above everyone's heads.

Several magi simultaneously cast defensive spells. Sacred swordmaster Karel held his longsword as he looked coolly above him, prepared to obstruct the descending attack at any time.

Zhi, zhi... As the meteorites rumbled downward, a peculiar sound could be heard in the sky.

Han Shuo looked up, realizing that the sky had suddenly split open and formed a black hole, like a demon opening its giant mouth, similar to tearing a black burlap in the sky. As the mighty Meteor Shower was swallowed bit by bit by the huge black hole, Han Shuo's defensive measures were simply untouched.

"Alright, it's your turn!" space sacred magus Sabakas pointed at the magic array in front of him and said to the remaining Han Shuo, Karel, Crowley and Phoebe. He had a calm expression, devoid of the slightest nervous from confronting danger, which was truly surprising!

Han Shuo stared blankly as he looked at space sacred magus Sabakas in amazement. The current Sabakas didn't have his usual amiable smile, his focused expression giving off a feeling of solemnness. The previous black hole which had swallowed the Meteor Shower was indeed cast by this old man.

However, Han Shuo didn't hear Sabakas chanting any incantations. This caused Han Shuo to be amazed as well as realize that Sabakas was already able to silently cast magic. It seems that even though they were both sacred magus, Sabakas' comprehension of the essence of magic ought to be higher than Dempus.

"Let's go!" While Han Shuo was in a daze, Phoebe grabbed onto him, forcefully pulling him into Sabakas' transportation array.

Even before Han Shuo could react, Sabakas had already activated the magic array. A beam of white light suddenly shone as Han Shuo and the rest disappeared.

There was only space sacred magus Sabakas remaining in the whole area. The sharp end of his magic staff pierced downward, causing the magic array that he had painstakingly deployed to suddenly shatter and no longer resemble its original appearance.

“Dempus, I didn’t expect someone at your realm would actually act in a way against Lancelot Empire’s future. As your friend for many years, I feel grief for you!” After Sabakas destroyed the space magic array, he sighed as he looked at Dempus before him.

“I don’t believe in vague prophecies. Letting that illegitimate child become the king of Lancelot Empire is simply a preposterous blasphemy. Apart from myself, many nobles within the empire would not allow such a thing to happen.

I’ve no choice but to act this way precisely for the Empire’s future. You are the ones that are obstinately persistent. You shouldn’t believe the words of a muddleheaded astrologer and bet the kingdom’s future on a heresy. He is a vicious disciple of the Calamity Church. Why would he bring prosperity to the Lancelot Empire in the future?” Dempus righteously rebuked Sabakas, clearly wasn’t one who believed in fate.

“Mister Sabakas, I respect your character greatly and have also heard many stories about you. However, I still have to say that even if you save Lawrence and the rest, you would still be unable to change their fate. Currently, the entire Ossen City is under the control of Duke Ashburn and eldest prince Charles. Lawrence and the others will ultimately not be able to escape.” the sacred knight laughed loudly as said to Sabakas.

“That is not necessarily the case!” Sabakas calmly looked at the sacred knight and said, “There is at least one region that you wouldn’t be able to control easily!”

The Dark Mantle Headquarters had a tighter defense than the royal palace. Even though they had seized the royal palace, the Dark Mantle Headquarters would not be easily conquered. As the chief elder of the Dark Mantle, Sabakas is the one who arranged the defensive measures on Mt. Ordas. He clearly understood Mt. Ordas’ formidable defenses.

“It’s undeniable that the Dark Mantle Headquarters is indeed hard to be attacked from the outside!” the sacred knight had a serious expression as he spoke. He once again revealed a smile soon after as he said, “However if there starts to be disorder internally, the situation would be totally different!”

Space sacred magus Sabakas’ expression changed when he heard the sacred knight’s words. He no longer spoke superfluous words with them, hurriedly brandishing his magic staff and disappeared with a beam of light.

Chapter 416: Everything was under control

Mt. Ordas, Dark Mantle Headquarters.

Sabakas's space magic array led directly to the Dark Mantle's headquarters. However, when Han Shuo and the rest arrived, they discovered that the situation within the headquarters wasn't as stable as they had thought.

Mt. Ordas, which had the best defenses within Ossen City, was having a civil strife. All kinds of tight defenses measures had been damaged. A small group of high-ranking personnel who sided with eldest Prince Charles harbored ulterior motives as they destroyed the Dark Mantle's defenses from within.

Out of the eleven high-ranking officials at their previous meeting, apart from the three heads who firmly believed in the two chief elders' judgment, five of them had secretly defected to eldest prince Charles and had revolted at the most crucial moment. Not only did they destroyed the defenses within the headquarters, they even allied with the empire's troops to attack the Dark Mantle.

The sudden internal revolt caused the heavily guarded Mt. Ordas to similarly become a battlefield. When Han Shuo and the rest had arrived at the Dark Mantle's headquarters through the transportation array, they could hear numerous shouts, which indicated that the situation here was equally not optimistic.

The space seemed to be ripped open by a sharp blade as an opening appeared in front of Han Shuo and the others. "There are people who defected! Perhaps they think that Amyes and the other two have held their position for too long and feel that they themselves should replace them." space sacred magus Sabakas said with a vexed expression as he appeared.

Under the effects of his demonic yuan energy, Han Shuo's wounds were still slowly shrinking and closing. Mystical demons cruised through the various passageways within the Dark Mantle headquarters, slowly projecting the situation here within his mind.

There was a five thousand-strong army at the foot of the Mt. Ordas which thoroughly surrounded the Dark Mantle headquarters. The five high ranking members had joined hands with forces of Charles and Duke Ashburn and were currently attacking the Dark Mantle Headquarters. This gang of five had destroyed all the defenses of the Dark Mantle at the beginning and were very familiar with the layout of the headquarters.

Under their command, the battle advanced orderly. As the Lancelot Empire's king's hand in the darkness, even with the appearance of five traitors, the Dark Mantle was still able to withstand the attack by leveraging their geographical advantage over the enemy. It was clear that the members who had remained within the Dark Mantle headquarters were all genuine experts.

Faced with the betrayal of former allies, the hatred in their hearts couldn't be suppressed. If not for the overwhelming number of enemies, they would have perhaps rushed out of Mt. Ordas and sliced the five traitors into a thousand pieces.

"There are only five thousand troops at the foot of the mountain and it isn't a very large number. With our arrival, we should be able to eliminate them easily!" Having surveyed the situation through his mystical demons, Han Shuo knitted his brows as he said to Sabakas.

Sabakas was stunned and astonished by Han Shuo's ability to assess the general situation. As a master of space magic, Sabakas had gone to the surroundings to observe the situation while heading over so as to understand the forces surrounding Mt. Ordas. He didn't expect that Han Shuo who had just arrived to actually also work out the situation in the surroundings. Sabakas has heard much of Han Shuo's miracles from others but he was clearly skeptical without witnessing it himself. Currently, when he heard Han Shuo's statement and took a closer look at Han Shuo, he noticed that the bleeding wounds on his face had completely healed without a trace.

"Grace's prophecy was right! The emergence of such an amazing person in the empire would definitely bring a new dawn to Lancelot Empire's future. It looks like we should have a way out from this nasty situation."

Sabakas thought.

“These men are soldiers of the Lancelot Empire and they have no choice to attack Mt. Ordas due to the orders of Charles and Ashburn. As soldiers who only know to obey a superior’s orders, they are not to blame. The fault lies with those who give them those orders.” sacred swordmaster Karel said before looking at Han Shuo and continued, “Therefore, these men, who are the backbone of the Lancelot Empire’s strength, cannot be sacrificed innocently!”

As the mystical demons surveyed the surroundings, Han Shuo realized that there were no light magi who could threaten his undead army within the forces surrounding Mt. Ordas. He planned to summon his undead army and combine with Sabakas’s space magic to resolve the threat in one go, but he didn’t expect this idea to be rejected by Karel.

Although Han Shuo’s soul had descended to the Lancelot Empire, he didn’t think of himself as a citizen of the empire. He made such a proposal because he didn’t place much importance on the lives of those people. On the other hand, sacred swordmaster Karel who had taken responsibility for Lancelot Empire’s future all along obviously wouldn’t agree to let those innocent soldiers die tragically from terrifying magic.

“Let’s first look for Candide and the rest before thinking of other plans,” Sabakas said calmly.

“There’s no need for that. They are heading over!” Han Shuo replied.

Not long after Han Shuo completed his sentence, the three heads of the Dark Mantle and the remaining high-ranking members that supported Sabakas’ decision had all arrived in this area.

“Grandpa, we sensed a disturbance in the transportation array and saw your arrival using the magic mirror” Cecilia had a solemn expression as she spoke.

Emily was also among the people who had just arrived. It was clear that her attention was on Han Shuo’s body from the start. The bloodstains on Han Shuo’s body were still sticky and there were two tiny wounds on his chest that had not completely healed.

Without having to think further, Emily knew that Han Shuo was injured. Her eyes suddenly reddened, wanting to disregard everything and lean on Han Shuo like Phoebe did, personally treat his wounds and ask him about his injuries.

Unfortunately, she was well aware of her status and understood that doing so will only cause more trouble for Han Shuo. In such circumstances, all Emily could do was to hold back to the worry in her heart and only secretly express her concern and worry through her gaze.

In this group, the person that Han Shuo cared most about was Emily. When Han Shuo arrived at the Dark Mantle headquarters and discovered that the Dark Mantle was surrounded by enemies, Han Shuo immediately started to use his mystical demons to look for her. He only truly calmed down when he found out that Emily was safe and sound.

Han Shuo had noticed her concern through her reddened eyes and he couldn't help but feel warmth in his heart. Right at this moment, Phoebe wrote the word 'quiet' on Han Shuo's hand before struggling free of his tight grip and walked towards Emily.

Candide and Amyes greeted Sabakas respectfully before Amyes immediately described the situation at hand and said, "It was because of our negligence that caused this internal revolt. Fortunately, the real power in the Dark Mantle had always been in the hands of the three of us. Therefore, although there was heavy damage to the headquarters from the start, the three of us was able to stabilize the situation."

As matters have reached such an extent, Amyes, Candide, and the others clearly new the actual situation. Candide had a gloomy face as he continued after Amyes, "These traitors were primarily responsible for gathering and sending news from His Majesty's palace. The news of His Majesty's demise was not leaked at all and it is precisely because we didn't make any prior preparations that we are in such a passive situation."

"They must all die!" Lawrence shouted word by word.

Lawrence, who was already grieving, currently had an ice-cold expression on his face. Uhtred's devoted encouragement and support during this period of time had caused Lawrence to have deep feelings toward Uhtred. As a stubborn person himself, Lawrence clearly knew that Uhtred's sudden death had an undeniable connection with Charles and Ashburn.

"Of Ossen City's four city gates, the northern gate is under the supervision of Count Boris. I reckon that currently, only the northern wall is slightly safer." Amyes said with a heavy expression.

Lawrence nodded and said calmly, "It is best that resolve the rebellion within Ossen City. I'm afraid that once we leave Ossen City, Charles and Ashburn will be able to distort the truth. I definitely don't want to see this rebellion resulting in large-scale war. In that situation, even if we were to win the war, the Lancelot Empire will be greatly weakened!"

"That's right. It's best to resolve matters within Ossen City. However, I'm afraid that this is also what Ashburn and Charles want. Currently, there are powerful enemies outside Lancelot Empire. If Lancelot Empire sinks into civil strife due to the princes fighting over the throne, I reckon that Lancelot Empire will surely be heading toward its destruction." Karel strongly agreed with Lawrence's suggestion and immediately stated his stand on the matter.

"In that case, the fastest way to end the rebellion is by eliminating Charles and Ashburn. The enemy will be like a headless snake once they are killed. However, this matter won't be easy to carry out, as they surely would have considered this and take precautions. I reckon that there must be numerous experts protecting them." Lawrence continued.

"Let's temporarily not discuss this. Old Hahn and the rest are at the northern wall. Apart from him, there are also a few Marquises under your father that are still alive. They are all within the castle by the northern wall. Ashburn and his men have yet to truly attack the northern wall for the time being. We can make that location our base camp. We can discuss in detail after we reach." Han Shuo suddenly spoke.

Lawrence was shocked when he heard Han Shuo's words and asked, "They are all over there?"

Han Shuo nodded affirmatively and said, "That's right. Besides them, the second prince, the youngest prince, and their men who had survived are all at the northern wall. Currently, apart from the northern wall, the entire Ossen City is filled with soldiers and knights under Duke Ashburn and eldest prince Charles. Only that location is temporarily safe."

The twelve mystical demons scattered to every corner of Ossen City, constantly patrolling and surveying the entire Ossen City. Nobody knew the situation within the city better than Han Shuo. He was calm and collected, as though everything was under his control.

Chapter 417: I can

In such a crucial time, the role of a person who is able to accurately view the overall situation goes without saying. Hence, when everyone realized Han Shuo could expertly explain the situation in each district of Ossen City, they were so shocked by Han Shuo's calm and natural expression that they were momentarily absent-minded.

"Bryan, your body is here, so how are you able to know the situation in each district of Ossen City? After the five traitors appeared within the Dark Mantle, many branches were met with destruction. The five of them know the location of several main branches of the Dark Mantle. Even the Dark Mantle is unable to easily grasp the situation of Ossen City at the moment, don't tell me that you are able to?" Sabakas stared blankly at Han Shuo, asking in amazement after a long while.

Han Shuo nodded his head as he calmly admitted, "I can!"

Hearing his reply, everyone's expression was a mix of surprise and delight, but clearly more delighted than surprised.

If what Han Shuo said is true, Han Shuo would be able to achieve the intelligence gathering and monitoring that each branch of the Dark Mantle was originally responsible for by himself. In the current extremely chaotic Ossen City, if Han Shuo was truly able to understand clearly the situation in every area of Ossen City, everyone would be able to make the proper decision and seize an opportunity to turn around the current unfavorable situation.

When the Dark Mantle's three heavyweights and the two sacred rank characters heard Han Shuo reply "I can" so confidently, they were expressionless for a moment, so much so that they forgot about the many experts surrounding them on the outside.

While the rest of them were ineffably shocked, Han Shuo seemed to think that they weren't surprised enough, continuing to say, "I am not only able to observe the situation in the four districts of Ossen City, even Ashburn and Charles' conversation, as well as the implementation and details of their every move, I am able to observe without missing out anything.

As long as I want to, apart from a few areas that have deployed layers of barriers, as long as I'm given a bit of time, I am able to clearly observe any area in Ossen City and be aware of what they are doing or saying. I'm speaking the truth. For example, currently, Ashburn and Charles are gathered together, discussing how to capture the northern city district. Oh, they say that among Count Boris' men, there's an officer named Bishop who is actually one of their men..."

"Oh, what's wrong?" While Han Shuo was speaking, he suddenly discovered that everyone by his side was looking dull as they stared blankly at himself, hence he couldn't help but ask in bafflement.

"Are, are you God?" dark grand magus Crowley who had previously lost to Han Shuo stared blankly for a while before speaking out everyone's thoughts in a revering tone.

Are you God? The three heavyweights of the Dark Mantle and the two sacred magus as well as Bollands, Emily and Phoebe suddenly realized that what they wanted to say was actually mentioned by that fellow first.

The ability to observe any area in a city clearly, finding out any information he wanted to know without overlooking anything. Such an existence, apart from "God", even a half-God realm expert had no way of achieving it. Could this fellow before them be a "Hidden God" that was banished to the mortal world?

Harboring this sort of doubt, everyone's vision was uniformly fixed on Han Shuo as they waited anxiously for Han Shuo to explain.

Han Shuo naturally wasn't stupid. His temporary puzzlement was swept aside by Crowley's "Are you God?", immediately understanding what his omnipresent twelve mystical demons meant to the people of this world!

"No, this is a special use that supplements the martial technique I train in. It's nothing amazing. Oh, that's right. Bollands, I will impart this martial technique to you after some time. At that time, you will understand what is going on!" Han Shuo explained hastily.

When Bolland who had a blank expression heard Han Shuo's sentence, he almost fainted in happiness. Luckily, Bolland had not lived for so long in vain. He hastily stabilized his disturbed mood, trembling as he said, "Thank you senior, thank you senior!"

Everyone's envious expression was fixed on the excited Bolland in a split second. Even the calm sacred swordmaster Karel had the slightest of envy toward Bolland. He felt that Bolland's foresight was so vicious, actually finding such a mystical senior.

"I want to learn too!" Phoebe's eyes were fixed on Han Shuo as she said bluntly.

Han Shuo was slightly distracted, shooting a glance at Phoebe. He sighed and said in feigned seriousness, "Our sect's secrets cannot be passed to outsiders, not even to our wives!"

However, Han Shuo was actually thinking inwardly that since she had a request from him, he had to seize it properly and not agree rashly. At the very least, he had to let her know her place.

"Phoebe, don't cause a scene!" sacred swordmaster Karel frowned as he berated Phoebe.

Phoebe dreaded her master the most. She stared at Han Shuo resentfully when she heard Karel's words, thinking inwardly that when they were alone, she must obtain this martial technique from Han Shuo be it through harassing or emotional attacks.

"I am familiar with Bishop. I didn't expect that he is actually a traitor. We need to immediately head to the northern city district and stabilize the situation there." Lawrence was feeling extremely impatient, planning to first head for Boris at the northern district. This was because as of now, only the northern city guard was still under their control.

"All of you leave first, I'll seal off Mt. Ordas!" Candide's expression was unchangingly gloomily as he hesitated for a while before saying to everyone.

Space sacred magus Sabakas hesitated for a moment when he heard

Candide before nodding his head soon after and said, "Alright, it's a good idea to temporarily seal off Mt. Ordas. At least we will still be able to temporarily hide in Mt. Ordas if we fail to defend the northern city district or leave Ossen City from the magic array in Mt. Ordas. Thankfully, the power of Dark Mantle has always been in the hands of the three of you. Otherwise if those fellows happened to know more secrets of the Dark Mantle, I fear that it would truly be very problematic this time around."

From the conversation between Candide and Sabakas, Han Shuo realized that the Dark Mantle was still hiding many secrets. Even the idea of sealing the mountain was new to Han Shuo. However, it seems like the entire Mt. Ordas should be able to be sealed off. The two of them mentioned that the Dark Mantle Headquarters could still be the last stronghold after sealing off the mountain, indicating that the safety of Mt. Ordas after sealing it off need not be doubted.

"Candide, we'll temporarily leave this area to you, this is my token." Amyes held the token that represented his status and passed it to Candide.

"Be careful!" Cecilia was solemn as she also passed the token that represented her status over to Candide.

"To seal Mt. Ordas, the identity tokens of all three heavyweights are needed. Once Mt. Ordas is sealed, every entrance and all magical arrays would be sealed. Apart from the few of us, anyone else who doesn't know the method would be unable to freely enter and exit Mt. Ordas." Amyes explained to Han Shuo, Lawrence and the others.

This secret was something even Han Shuo didn't know. When Han Shuo looked toward Emily, he realized that Emily was similarly puzzled. After observing everyone else, Han Shuo realized that even though there were many high ranked personnel of the Dark Mantle here, he reckoned that the only people who actually knew this secret were the three heavyweights and chief elder Sabakas.

It seems that as the empire's largest and most formidable organization, the secrets hidden by the Dark Mantle ought to not only be as sporadic as it appeared to everyone. The sealing of the entire Mt. Ordas was most likely just the tip of the iceberg.

After Amyes finished explaining, everyone made the prompt decision to utilize the existing magic array here to directly reach the Dark Mantle branch at the northern city district before Candide sealed off Mt. Ordas.

The northern district had similarly suffered from attacks. Han Shuo's mansion was in this area. However, as compared to the other districts, the northern district was still considered safe. Those that had attacked Han Shuo's mansion, regardless of whether they ultimately succeeded, had left the northern city district before the northern city army's knight regiment were able to arrive.

When they reached Count Boris' castle, the people who supported Lawrence had all gathered. As Han Shuo was able to clearly observe the layout of Ashburn and Charles' troops and also know the details of their next actions, Han Shuo had become the most important person here.

With Han Shuo's description, the distribution of Ashburn and the eldest prince's troops, the secret operations of every noble, the current situation within the imperial palace, the movements of the other two princes were known without omission by everyone.

With all the chaos within Ossen City, the extent of benefits of having Han Shuo who was able to observe the entire situation clearly was reflected very quickly.

Under Han Shuo's directions for two days in a row, twelve traitors headed by Bishop within the northern city guard were all executed. Some lucky surviving nobles who opposed Ashburn were sent by sacred magus Sabakas one after another into the castle. Two attacks by Ashburn and the rest were ambushed by traps that were deployed in advance, with their head being killed on the spot.

Leveraging on Han Shuo's existence, Lawrence, Old Hahn and other military strategists skillfully utilized the power they held to firmly defend the northern city district in such disadvantageous circumstances. Furthermore, they slowly accumulated their strength, forming the only force that was able to threaten Ashburn and Charles' power within Ossen City. However, the superiority of Ashburn, Charles and the others were too great. Currently, four out of the five districts of Ossen City were under their control. The forces under them was also four times that of Lawrence and the others. The small victories by the northern city guard appeared to be insufficient in reversing the overall situation.

On the third day of everyone worriedly pondering how to solve this problem, Han Shuo suddenly saw through a mystical demon that a fifty thousand strong Ironblood troop was staying by Ossen City's northern city gate.

It was also during the night of that same day that a thin middle-aged man pulled along Fanny as he abused Han Shuo while bursting into the castle at the northern city district, bring about a new problem for Han Shuo!

Chapter 418: Tripartite talks

“Get that brat Bryan out here!” A thin middle-aged man swore and shouted, dragging along a reluctant Fanny as they burst into the castle.

The guards stationed along the heavily-guarded pathway seemed to recognize this thin middle-aged man. Everyone frowned and was worried but surprisingly none of them dared to stop him.

Due to Han Shuo’s stunning ability during the last three days, he had gained an exquisitely high status. Even in Ossen City, it was exceedingly rare to find someone who dared to abuse a noble so unbridled. A few soldiers who couldn’t identify this man were extremely furious but suddenly quietened down after the veterans succinctly explained, their expression filled with hints of reverence when they looked at this man again.

The loud curses were clearly audible from the assembly room at the third-floor of the castle where Han Shuo and his party were gathered. Old Hahn, Boris, Eevee, sacred swordmaster Karel, sacred magus Sabakas as well as Amyes and the others from the Dark Mantle smiled bitterly when they heard that voice.

Lawrence, Amyes and those who knew what was going on, suddenly glanced at Han Shuo with glinting eyes. Emily was even more uncomfortable. No one knew what unpredictable outcome this madman’s arrival would bring.

“Why has this guy come over?” Old Hahn’s expression suddenly changed, and soon after looked flabbergasted at Han Shuo who was smiling wryly and asked probingly, “Why would you have animosity with him?”

Han Shuo awkwardly scratched his head, his face bitter as he explained, “I don’t have any animosity with him. Forget it, let’s deal with things as they happen. I’ll go take a look.”

“Bryan, this madman cannot be provoked, you must treat him with caution!” Just as Han Shuo stood up from his seat and was heading out, Lawrence suddenly spoke while having a queer expression.

“I’ll take note of that!” Han Shuo replied and directly headed towards the exit.

Lawrence was familiar with Han Shuo’s temperament, but he still didn’t feel completely assured, so he got up and followed him out. Those who sat around the table were all people of status. Some of them were somewhat well acquainted with Firenze. When they saw Lawrence getting up and leaving, they hesitated for a moment before following suit, leaving just space sacred magus Sabakas and sacred swordmaster Karel in the room.

In the whole Lancelot Empire, it could be said that the only person that Duke Ashburn and eldest Prince Charles was apprehensive about was the southern border’s war god, Firenze. In the entire Lancelot Empire, the one person who could defend the southern border from the bloodthirsty orcs was none other than this man.

The citizens within the dozens of cities at the southern border were extremely valiant. In the many years of battle with the Orc Empire, every soldier and knight have been tempered to become exceedingly strong and powerful. The strongest knight regiment and legion within the Lancelot Empire were all at the southern border. But without this man’s leadership, the vast southern border would have turned into the orc’s land and Lancelot Empire would also be invaded by the bestial Orcs.

It could be said that no matter who ultimately won the civil war, Firenze’s status at the southern border will not be affected. This was because, other than this madman, no one else could stabilize the situation at the southern border. Based on this, he had become the one who had the most freedom to act as he wanted.

While such a civil strife was going on, If this man wanted to, he could declare independence from the Lancelot Empire, and become the true monarch of the southern border.

“Where’s that little bastard, come out now!” Firenze shouted as he walked. Although there were numerous densely packed soldiers in the surroundings, no one dared to obstruct him and instead took the initiative to open a path for him.

“Father!” Fanny, who was being held by Firenze, was blushing as if she was embarrassed to have such a father.

“You stay out of this. This little bastard is a womanizer at such young age. I must definitely teach him a lesson today. I don’t care that he’s the city lord of Brettel City. If he pisses me off, I’ll declare war on him. Lancelot Empire is already in disorder anyways, it wouldn’t matter if I add some oil to the fire!” Firenze shouted in rage as he dragged Fanny to the second floor.

At the beginning, Firenze was quite pleased when Fanny was talked about Bryan’s status. He had also heard of some of Bryan’s achievements. He felt that Bryan met his expectations and was suitable. Fanny marrying him would also not disgrace himself.

However, Firenze was unhappy that Bryan stood him up multiple times. This time he had obviously come to Ossen City, but Bryan still did not take the initiative to pay his respects. This cause Firenze to feel angry. However, he was still able to accept it reluctantly as he understood that Ossen City wasn’t in a good situation. However, when he started using his own power to find out more about Han Shuo, he suddenly realized that Han Shuo was actually a couple with Boozt Merchant Alliance’s Phoebe.

This news was shocking to Firenze who was far away from Ossen City. When he was aware of this matter, Firenze immediately thought that Han Shuo had cheated his daughter’s feelings. He had nearly charged to Han Shuo’s mansion and cause a scene. However, he managed to resist the urge and instead went to interrogate Fanny.

He discovered that not only did Fanny know about Han Shuo’s sinful acts, she had actually still coyly say that she was fine with it. Fanny’s conformist thoughts almost caused Firenze to faint in anger. When Fanny courageously said that apart from Phoebe, Han Shuo still had another woman named Emily, Firenze truly exploded! Without saying a word, he immediately dragged Fanny along to find Han Shuo and make things clear.

“Uh, I’m Bryan.” An anxious but helpless Han Shuo stood on the stone steps that connected the second floor with the third floor as he looked at Firenze, whose complexion was red with anger.

“You still have the guts to come out, Not bad, not bad” Firenze gnashed his teeth, casually snatching a pike from a guard standing beside him and threw it toward Han Shuo.

The dazzling pike was like silver lightning and was in front of Han Shuo in the blink of an eye.

Firenze was an outstanding commander and was personally a Sky Rider. His strike was filled with fighting aura and it was not to be belittled.

Han Shuo knew Firenze will not let things go easily. He lifted his left hand and the Demonslayer Edge emerged from his palm and struck the tip of the pike with a clang, causing the pike to shatter into pieces. “Father! You said you’ll talk about it!” Fanny shouted as she tried to pull back Firenze with both her hands while looking helplessly at Han Shuo.

“Aren’t we talking now? Otherwise, why would I come here alone?! This guy can kill Leah Cain by himself and there are so many old farts here protecting him. If this is not called talking, I don’t know what is!” Firenze glared at Fanny and lightly scolded, “Lass, let go of me, I still have more things to talk with him!”

Old Hahn, Amyes and the rest had just reached Han Shuo’s side when they heard Firenze’s “so many old farts”. Old Hahn was furious, pointing at Firenze as he shouted angrily, “You lunatic, who are you calling old farts?”

“I didn’t say it was you!” Firenze snorted coldly.

Old Hahn face relaxed. Just when he decided not to pursue this further, he was driven mad by what Firenze said next.

“I’m addressing all of you! Including old fart Karel that’s still inside! Don’t think that I wouldn’t know you’re here just because you stay inside!” Firenze sneered when he saw Old Hahn’s expression relax before resolutely continuing his sentence.

Han Shuo was stunned and stared blankly at Firenze. He thought in his heart that this man really had a unique personality. It seems that the person who dared to beat up Grand Duke Ashburn within the main hall was indeed not an ordinary person.

“Damn it, you mad dog, when did I ever offend you?” Old Hahn rarely became angry in his recent years. However, he was so angered as soon as he met with Firenze that he threw a vulgar remark.

“Your daughter-in-law seduced my daughter’s man! And Karel’s apprentice also snatched my daughter’s man! Damn it, are you all bully me because I’m far away at the southern border?!” Firenze was indeed a madman as Old Hahn described, cursing anyone he got his hands on.

When he said that, Emily’s pretty face turned deathly white. Han Shuo also trembled inwardly, thinking to himself that the situation was going downhill.

Sure enough, Old Hahn’s expression suddenly sank. He gave Firenze a cold, frosty gaze and asked, “What do you mean? Please make yourself clear! If you dare to randomly slander my family’s name and reputation, I’ll pursue this with my entire life”

Sacred swordmaster Karel and Sabakas had walked out at an unknown time and heard the conversation too. Karel glowered at Firenze and shouted loudly, “What the hell do you want? The empire is in chaos and we have no time for your nonsense!”

“This brat is in a relationship with Phoebe and Emily, but still dared to go after my daughter. Don’t you all know about it?” Firenze didn’t fear the rage of Old Hahn and Karel. He sneered as he paused, as though he had not cause enough chaos. He then added coldly, “I will definitely pursue this matter till the end. As long as it’s not settled, the civil strife within the empire has nothing to do with me. Do whatever you guys want, whoever lives or dies is none of my business. Hmph, even if Lancelot Empire was finished, I will not let anyone bully my daughter. If the few of you want to play, I’ll accompany you until the end!”

When he finished, everyone’s gaze was on Han Shuo, Fanny, Emily, and Phoebe. Old Hahn and Karel’s expressions turned ashen. On one hand, they were dumbfounded by the sudden revelation, and the other, they were shocked by Firenze's reckless words.

To Old Hahn and Karel, their whole life had been dedicated to the Lancelot Empire. To them, the only thing they truly cared about was the future of Lancelot Empire. They could never be like the lunatic Firenze and disregard Lancelot Empire's survival.

"Emily, is what he said true?" Old Hahn was somewhat embarrassed as he asked a pitiful looking Emily, who looked as though she was going to cry.

Chapter 419: I'm willing.

As matters stand, it simply could no longer be concealed. Han Shuo didn't expect that at such a crucial time, they were actually placed in such a situation.

Emily's eyes watered. Being exposed in front of so many people was completely out of her expectations. At this moment, the feeling of bitterness, misery, helplessness, fear and many other feelings swarmed her, causing Emily's inferior heart to be severely hurt. Tears uncontrollably flowed down her tender face.

"It's true!" Unexpectedly, Han Shuo replied coldly before Emily could respond.

When everyone's gaze turned toward Han Shuo, he released the hand of Phoebe whose face was pale as she looked at him, directly walking toward the crying Emily and holding Emily's hand tightly in front of everyone. His face was gloomy as he slowly observed everyone and said, "What he said is the truth, Emily is my woman. However, I was the one who pursued her bitterly, there's nothing to do with anyone else!"

Old Hahn's face became ashen, glaring at Han Shuo and Emily in anger as he said, "Good, very good, I never would have thought that our Betteridge Family would actually produce such a scandal!"

"I apologize on behalf of my sister! However, if anyone wants to bully my sister, they would have to see if I'm agreeable!" After a brief shock, Amyes resisted the urge of questioning Emily and instead sneered as he looked at everyone.

As Emily's blood brother, the amount of love Amyes showed Emily was something only they knew. At such a crucial time, Amyes stood by Emily's side without the slightest hesitation. Seeing Emily trying to conceal her tears, Amyes who was the God of Death in the eyes of the empire's nobles was similarly angered.

"Bryan, look at the good you have done!" sacred swordmaster Karel stared coldly at Han Shuo as he shouted in anger.

In a flash, everyone's gaze gathered again on Han Shuo. Everyone only came to their senses at this moment. The main culprit should be Han Shuo. All kinds of criticizing and angry gazes landed on Han Shuo.

Facing everyone's ire, Han Shuo had a gloomy expression as he looked at everyone and said, "This is our matter and doesn't seem to be related to you. Whoever feels that they can use the power in their hands to exert pressure on me, we shall wait and see what happens."

"Brat, you have guts!" Firenze was so angry that he laughed, pointing at Han Shuo as he said, "As long as you immediately leave that two women and only concentrate on my daughter, I can treat the matters before as bygones. So long as you follow me back to the southern border, no matter how chaotic Lancelot Empire is, I can guarantee that you will be free of worries."

Firenze paused for a moment before continuing, "If not, we shall struggle to our deaths. Let's see who will still be laughing at the end!"

"Father!" At this moment, Fanny also had a distressed expression as she couldn't help but shout loudly. Fanny didn't expect that things would develop in such a way. However, she was also unable to control Firenze's temper and simply unable to tell when he would go crazy. Currently, Emily, Phoebe, herself, as well as Han Shuo, were extremely embarrassed.

What was originally Han Shuo's personal matters was now like a tripartite talk. Fanny had expectedly blamed herself, thinking inwardly, "Bryan would definitely hate me. Ah, what should I do now?"

"Bryan, since things have reached this stage, shouldn't you give us an explanation?" Old Hahn's face was ashen as he glowered at Han Shuo.

Looking at the crying Emily, gazing at the distressed Fanny and taking a look at the terrified Phoebe, Han Shuo took a deep breath. As everyone watched attentively, Han Shuo said, "I have already described the sequence of events to the three of you. The three of you should already be clear about what had happened. As matters stand, I don't have anything else to say, all of you are aware of how I feel about each of you.

Right now, I'll give all of you a choice. You should also give yourself this choice. If you are willing to be with me, you just need to nod in agreement. I will face any difficulty that arises with you. As long as you are willing to be with me, I promise that I will treat you well in the future, and definitely not let anyone bully you.

If you are unable to accept this, you can take it as something I owe you in this lifetime. Our relationship in this life will end here and from today onward, we will no longer have any emotional connection!”

“Brat, what nonsense are you spouting! Could it be that till now you still want to have all of them?” Firenze raged, lifting his sleeves with the intention of punishing Han Shuo.

Han Shuo’s expression darkened as he glared at Firenze and said in anger, “What does this have to do with you! The person I want to marry isn’t you, why do you have so much to say?”

“Damn it, You stinky brat has such a temper. There’s no one else within Lancelot Empire that dares to talk to me like that. You should take a look at your...” Firenze shouted loudly as he prepared to charge toward Han Shuo.

“Father, you don’t need to bother about my matters!” Fanny held onto Firenze and shouted loudly.

“I’m willing. I don’t care about anything else. As long as you want me, I will follow you!” Emily who had tears rolling down her face was the first to declare her stand while she sobbed. She was already willing to give up everything.

Emily gripped Han Shuo’s hand tightly. Because she was using strength, her fingertips had even entered his skin. Emily seemed to want to gain strength and courage through this method.

“Brother, I’m sorry. I love him. I’m sorry to cause trouble for you, but I’m unable to leave him!” Emily’s tears rolled down her face as she spoke while looking at Amyes.

Amyes trembled, suddenly recalling their misery when they were younger and how they relied on each other for many years...

“Fool, what are you saying all these for. No matter what, I will always be on your side!” Amyes had a doting expression as he smiled and replied Emily gently.

It is said that an elder brother is like a father. Amyes had always treated Emily this way. When they were younger, their parents had died and it was Amyes who had worked hard to raise Emily. Everything the two of them had today had been the result of them risking their lives and their efforts. In Amyes’ heart, the most important person in this world was his sister. He had married Emily off to the Betteridge Family yet Emily’s husband had suddenly died on the battlefield even before they had consummated their marriage. All these years, Emily had become a widow that was difficult to accept.

Amyes clearly understood the pain Emily endured all these years. He placed all the blame on himself and had always wished for Emily to strive for happiness once again. However, Emily simply didn’t have anyone that she fancied. Amyes didn’t think that the current situation was ideal, but it wasn’t bad either. Without thinking, he naturally placed the most importance on his sister’s happiness.

“Thank you, brother!” Emily cried as she expressed her thanks. Soon after, she looked toward Old Hahn who had a queer expression and said, “Father, all these years, I have been very happy living in the Betteridge family. I have truly looked upon you as my father. I also know that you love me dearly. I am extremely grateful toward you and I know that my actions would possibly smear the Betteridge family’s name. I’m sorry, really sorry, please forgive me. Father, you will always be my father.”

Old Hahn was startled and stared blankly at Emily. After quite a while, Old Hahn sighed. He didn’t say anything, his expression desolate as he walked back to the assembly room on the third floor.

“I’m also willing. I don’t wish for anything much. Father, I beg you to not bother about my affairs!” Fanny had a death grip on Firenze as if she feared that Firenze would be so furious that he disregarded everything. She continued sharply, “If you don’t promise me, I will leave home once again and you will never be able to see me again!”

Firenze who was shouting loudly that he wanted to kill Han Shuo was suddenly stunned, his expression reddened as he pointed at Han Shuo and sworn while saying, "What's so good about this brat. There are so many good men within Lancelot Empire. Why must you insist on being with a half-hearted fellow? Because of him, you are actually thinking of abandoning your family?"

"Father, you are incredible at war but you would never understand what is true love. My mother had waited for you her entire life, always worried that something would happen to you on the battlefield. When she was sick, you were still fighting more than a thousand miles away. Even when Mother died unhappily from her illness, you weren't present by her side.

You already ruined her life's happiness. Don't tell me that you want to also destroy my happiness?" Fanny was somewhat hysterical when she saw Firenze throwing off her hand and charge toward Han Shuo and suddenly screamed.

Firenze who had struggled free of Fanny with great difficulty suddenly stopped in his tracks. His face was distorted and his breath uneven, showing signs of a beast wanting to run away.

Everyone was startled. Some of them looked at Firenze nervously, afraid that he would act recklessly. This person's reputation had always been that he didn't behave like an ordinary person. Therefore, everyone had reason to believe that he would go crazy.

Even Han Shuo was somewhat fearful, secretly increasing his vigilance. He felt that if Firenze dared to recklessly attack himself, he would preemptively knock Firenze unconscious and tie him up, so as to avoid his fluctuating exuberant energy. He would then explain to Fanny afterward.

Under everyone's watchful gaze, Firenze's distorted face actually calmed down gradually. However, his expression was still dark and frightening. After a long while, Firenze turned around to look at Fanny and spoke in a tranquil tone for the first time since he came and asked, "Lass, are you truly certain?"

Fanny immediately nodded her head, her expression firm as she replied,

“Father, I am certain.”

“Brat, are you able to give Fanny happiness?” Firenze suddenly stared at Han Shuo and inquired word by word.

“As long as I am alive, no one can bully her!” Han Shuo raised his hand and pledged while having a serene expression.

Chapter 420: I'm unwilling to part with you

"Father!" Fanny silently walked to Firenze's side, her eyes filled with expectation as she gazed at him and spoke softly.

Firenze stared blankly at Han Shuo for a long time before suddenly shaking his head as he sighed and said, "Forget it, since you insist, I wouldn't obstruct you."

"Thank you, Father!" Fanny had a delighted expression as she then gazed at Han Shuo lovingly.

Han Shuo also sighed in relief as he nodded toward Fanny. He then bowed in salute to Firenze and said, "I will give her happiness, I promise!"

"Hmph! You have so many women yet still dare to say you will give her happiness. If you bully my daughter, I don't care who you are, I'll definitely go all out to settle the debt!" Firenze didn't give any face to Han Shuo as he shouted coldly in response.

Han Shuo smiled bitterly without responding. He hesitated for a while before casting his gaze toward Phoebe. Of the three women, Phoebe had the most unyielding personality and was the most independent. Currently, Fanny and Emily had already stated their stand, and only the pale-faced Phoebe was left.

Phoebe looked as if she had suffered a large stimulus. Her originally delicate face had become exceedingly white, as she stared in a daze at Han Shuo without saying a word as if she had suddenly become a fool.

By Phoebe's side, Lawrence suddenly coughed and pulled Phoebe's sleeve in passing, reminding the distracted Phoebe to not hesitate any longer.

Phoebe suddenly came to her senses, struggling repeatedly in her heart. She recalled many past events which she had gone through with Han Shuo, the uncertainty when they assassinated her rival together in the Boozt Merchant Guild, the sweetness when they were escaping together, thinking of Han Shuo's care for her, even presenting the divine weapon ‘Starry Sky’ as a gift without hesitation...

These warm scenes were like snares of love. When Phoebe thought of these moments, they bound her even more tightly, causing her to feel stifled.

However, as a strong independent woman, Phoebe never had the intention of sharing a man with others. She had shown great determination to understand the details of the situation for Emily’s matter previously before she finally forgave Han Shuo for running amok.

However, Fanny’s situation was somewhat different from Emily’s. The way Han Shuo’s treated Fanny also caused her to realize how strong the love was between the two of them. Furthermore, Fanny had a superior upbringing and family background. All of these added together clearly caused Phoebe to somewhat be unable to accept the situation.

Han Shuo silently watched Phoebe. When he saw Phoebe look like she was struggling indeterminately, the guilt in his heart grew exponentially. He endured the pain in his heart as he said bitterly, “Let’s forget it. Phoebe, I’ve let you down in this lifetime!”

When she heard Han Shuo’s words, Phoebe’s eyes were suddenly occupied by endless pain, her face suddenly becoming as white as a sheet. Phoebe looked at Han Shuo in disbelief, her heart akin to have been stabbed and shattered. With a sway, Phoebe actually fell backward.

When Han Shuo who had been keeping a close watch on Phoebe saw her body sway and fall backward, he was terrified. He was by Phoebe’s side without a second thought, supporting her before she could fall on the ground and shout worriedly, “Phoebe, are you ok?”

There was a flash of white light. Karel had also moved to Phoebe’s side. As Han Shuo had rushed over first, Karel who was initially prepared to support Phoebe could only anxiously extend two fingers and place them on Phoebe’s nose. After pausing for three seconds, he clearly loosened his breath. He held back the anger in his heart as he said, “She has fainted, it’s all because of you!”

At this moment, Han Shuo didn’t have the energy to argue with Karel. When he heard Karel say that Phoebe had simply fainted, his heart calmed. He then placed his right hand on Phoebe's back and circulate demonic yuán energy into her body.

The sorrowful and heartbroken Phoebe felt a comfortable warmth in the middle of her back and slowly came to soon after. When she saw Han Shuo's worried expression immediately as she opened her eyes, she only felt a myriad of emotions entering her heart at the same time. She could no longer pretend to be strong and her tears suddenly flowed like a fountain as she cried bitterly at the top of her voice.

As two fists bombarded Han Shuo's chest like raindrops, Phoebe scolded as she hit him, "You heartless scoundrel, you actually dare to say those words to me. You've swindled away my life's happiness and now you still want to stand aside and do nothing. Do you actually have a conscience..."

There were constant pounding sounds as Phoebe hit Han Shuo's chest, his expression filled with pain. As he looked at Phoebe who was bawling in his embrace, Han Shuo similarly felt extremely distressed. However, Han Shuo really didn't know what to say to console Phoebe at this moment and could only repeatedly say "I'm sorry."

Phoebe had never lost control of herself like she did today. No matter what difficulties she came across, she would never be as weak as she was today. Furthermore, there were so many elders and officials present here. With Phoebe's character, it was even more unlikely that she would reveal signs of weakness.

However, when Han Shuo said the words "Let's forget it", Phoebe felt as though the sky had collapsed. The world seemed to turn grey in a split second, no longer having any color. That piercing pain destroyed all of Phoebe's pretense, causing her to feel as though she was beaten black and blue.

Emly and Fanny's line of sight had never left Han Shuo from the beginning. When they saw Phoebe pounding her fists repeatedly on Han Shuo's chest, they both felt incessantly distressed, fearing that Phoebe would not know what's important and injure Han Shuo.

Everyone observing by the side had different expressions as they looked at Han Shuo and the three women, not knowing what they should say. They actually wanted to interfere in this matter, but unfortunately, they weren't able to make the decision in this situation and could only look on helplessly as the unorthodox situation developed in a way they totally couldn't explain.

"That's great, that's great. Bryan truly has his ways!" The happiest person in the crowd was definitely Lawrence, who felt ecstatic by the way things turned out.

Han Shuo and the three women represented four different powers. If they become hostile toward each other, Lawrence would definitely not have any hope of ascending the throne. During this period of time, Lawrence felt as though he was sitting on pins and needles and was more nervous than anyone else. He was truly afraid that the four parties would recklessly cause enormous disturbances, destroying all of his hopes.

Even now, Phoebe was still crying loudly as she leaned into Han Shuo's embrace. Lawrence was finally able to truly relax. He knew in his heart that although none of the three parties were pleased with this outcome, due to the three women's insistence, none of them were able to change this favorable situation.

"I'm sorry!" Han Shuo embraced Phoebe, repeating the same words as before.

Weary from both hitting and scolding Han Shuo, Phoebe gradually suppressed the pain in her heart, wiping the neverending tears from her eyes and fiercely glared at Han Shuo and said, "In this lifetime, you can forget about trying to abandon me. If you dare to do such a thing, I'll kill you and then commit suicide!"

"So long as you are willing to be with me, why would I be willing to part with you!" Han Shuo looked at Phoebe and said with deep emotion.

"We are already like this, how can I not be with you. You scoundrel, you heartless creature!" Phoebe felt indignant, once again sending a fist toward Han Shuo's chest.

When he heard what Phoebe said, Karel's expression changed, clearly understanding the hidden meaning within Phoebe's words. The people around them were all cunning fellows and when they heard Phoebe divulge such information, they were able to grasp the crucial point in a flash. Their eyes flickered as they shifted their gaze between Han Shuo and the three women.

When Han Shuo saw the gazes of these people, he immediately understood. Surprisingly, Han Shuo's thick-skinned face turned red as he coughed dryly.

Phoebe, Emily, and Fanny gradually understood somewhat. Under the strange gazes from everyone, all of them started to blush. Phoebe inwardly scolded herself for blabbing. Unfortunately, this wasn't the time to try and explain herself and she momentarily became shy and embarrassed, not knowing what she should do.

As the three women had all taken a Rebirth Pill, their skin was all fair and glossy, delicate like water. Among them, as Emily and Phoebe had received Han Shuo's nourishment, their bodies faintly had a hint of charm and maturity. If one looked seriously, they were indeed somewhat different from Fanny.

Forget it, let's forget about it. She had been disappointing too, having given her body to this brat. What else can I say? Sacred swordmaster Karel sighed in his heart, staring distractedly at Phoebe for a while before finally saying, "Let's let it be. You have grown up, I'm unable to control you anyways."

"Master!" Phoebe cried out softly, continuing to say, "Master, I'm sorry. I've caused you to be disappointed."

"Hai!" space sacred magus Sabakas sighed. When he saw everyone look at him in puzzlement, he smiled and said, "It is most appropriate that the youngsters handle their own matters. Hehe, we have all grown older. How can we restrict them on every matter? Presently, Lancelot Empire is suffering from internal trouble and outside aggression and is precisely in its most challenging situation. Everyone here is the backbone of the empire. What we should be doing now should be resolving the empire's problems!"

As Sabakas was a senior with good moral standing and reputation within the empire, even that madman Firenze somewhat respected him. Now that he had spoken, everyone was resentful but didn't say anything else.

As the protector of Lancelot Empire, Karel naturally wouldn't be like Firenze and disregard the survival of the empire. When he heard what Sabakas said, he gradually calmed down and was in deep thought, not saying a word.

Sabakas paused for a moment. Seeing that everyone still seemed to show him respect, he loosened a breath. Just as he was about to seize the opportunity and let all parties reconcile, Han Shuo suddenly creased his eyebrows and said, "Ashburn and eldest prince Charles have personally led their troops and are headed for the northern city district. It looks like they intend to settle the situation of the entire Lancelot Empire in one battle!"

Chapter 421: We want to become even stronger

The sudden changes caused everyone to rapidly free themselves from the matter between Han Shuo and the three women. Everyone had a heavy expression as they started to worry about the attack from Ashburn, Charles, and their forces.

“Brat, how do you know that that old fox Ashburn is coming over?” Firenze looked at Han Shuo suspiciously, as if he didn’t really believe what Han Shuo was saying.

Among the people present, Firenze was the most unfamiliar with Han Shuo, unlike Karel, Sabakas and the rest who knew that Han Shuo possessed a mysterious martial technique that was able to clearly observe the entire area. Hence when he saw that Han Shuo had said those words so confidently, he naturally didn’t believe him.

“He indeed knows.” Sabakas explained to Firenze, “It is precisely due to his mystical observational ability that we are still able to hold the fort here.”

Firenze was stunned, his eyes filled with amazement as he looked at Han Shuo, not comprehending how Han Shuo was able to do it. Firenze knew that Sabakas wasn’t someone who spoke lightly. Since he said that Han Shuo had such an ability, that meant that Han Shuo was definitely able to do it.

“This time around, those that are heading over include the city guards from the other city gates. With our current forces, we shouldn’t be able to ward them off. Furthermore, that sacred knight and Temple Knights from the Church of Light, as well as earth sacred magus Dempus are within this group of people...” Han Shuo shut his eyes, describing the composition and strength of Ashburn’s forces as observed through his mystical demons, no details able to escape his sights.

These days, everyone was already familiar with Han Shuo’s mystical observation ability and they earnestly listened to Han Shuo's detailed explanation of Ashburn's troops. As Han Shuo's low voice continued, numerous images were revealed in front of everyone's eyes. The movements of Ashburn and the rest were laid bare.

When Han Shuo finished speaking, Firenze was calm as he said, "It seems like Ashburn intends to seize the northern city district in one go."

"Firenze, what do you think we should do?" Old Hahn had unknowingly walked over and asked Firenze seriously.

"Give the order to open Ossen City. I'll bring my troops over. Hmph, Ashburn has become insane. It looks like what His Highness expected is indeed happening!" Firenze said, his voice filled with murderous spirit.

"You, you will lead your troops over?" Old Hahn was clearly startled, staring stupefied at Firenze as he replied.

"Obviously. Otherwise, in this time of great chaos, why would I come unaccompanied to Ossen City? Do you think I'm just here to watch a show?" Firenze unhappily glared at Old Hahn, casually pointing toward the head of the northern city guards, Boris, and said, "How about you and me head over to the northern gate together?"

"Sure, I'll immediately make a trip with you!" Boris didn't express any annoyance toward Firenze's gestures, immediately agreeing to Firenze's suggestion.

In front of Firenze, regardless of experience or seniority, Boris was far inferior to him. Firenze had always been arrogant and haughty. However, he had a basis for being this arrogant. This was something everyone in the Lancelot Empire was clear about. Furthermore, seeing that Firenze's intention was clearly to assist Lawrence, the unusual situation beforehand seemed to be forgotten. Emily was extremely pleased with the current outcome, seeing her brother's unconditional support and Old Hahn having no choice but to take an indifferent attitude as he didn't want to sink into further disorder. All these caused the miserable Emily to feel reborn.

"My two sisters, what are your thoughts?" After speaking to Han Shuo, Emily smiled as she glanced at Fanny and Phoebe.

Fanny and Phoebe ignored the glance, somewhat uncomfortably nodding their heads. As she was nodding her head, Phoebe suddenly thought of something, glaring at Han Shuo as she said, “You are not allowed to use your martial technique to eavesdrop. You are too vile. Hmph, based on what you said, your martial technique is able to spy on the entire city. Doesn’t that mean that you are able to watch any woman bathing? You repulsive fellow, how could you practice such an obscene and vulgar martial technique!”

When they heard what Phoebe said, Fanny and Emily’s eyebrows suddenly creased, as if suddenly realizing such a possibility. As they thought about Han Shuo’s actions all along, the three women were worried about Han Shuo’s character. Their gazes toward Han Shuo suddenly became much sharper.

Han Shuo felt a headache incoming and hurriedly said, “There’s another anomaly, I need to tell them immediately!”

After he spoke, Han Shuo didn’t care about the three women’s clamor, hurriedly leaving the side of the three women and headed for an area of rubble at the back of the castle.

Han Shuo didn’t head for the assembly room where Sabakas and the rest were. After the matter that had just happened, Amyes, Karel, Old Hahn and the others would probably not be pleased with him. Han Shuo knew that they felt anger in their hearts and naturally wouldn’t bring trouble upon himself.

Using the Demonslayer Edge to carve out a large, hidden cave, Han Shuo arranged a transporting array and teleported to the Cemetery of Death.

Within the dusky Cemetery of Death, the earth zombie lied quietly in the place of extreme earth, looking as if he was in a coma. Faint strands of earthen yellow earth essence energy from the surroundings slowly flowed into the earth zombie’s body, gradually restoring the wounded earth zombie.

A greater part of the earth essence energy within the Cemetery of Death's place of extreme earth had been consumed when refining the earth elite zombie and there was only very little remaining currently. Han Shuo had placed the earth zombie here three days ago, taking advantage of the remaining earth essence energy within the place of extreme earth to restore the earth zombie's wounds.

As Han Shuo's heart ached as he looked at the silent earth zombie deep underground, Han Shuo sensed the little skeleton's call. He hesitated for a moment before summoning the little skeleton before him.

"Father, we want to seek revenge for him!" the little skeleton transmitted immediately after he arrived.

"I know, I'm currently awaiting the opportunity, waiting for a chance to send that knight to his death!" Han Shuo replied.

"We want to become stronger!" The little skeleton transmitted another message. Soon after, there was a walnut-like black fruit in his hand. The little skeleton handed over the fruit to Han Shuo and said, "Father, this fruit is for you. It's extremely useful!"

The black fruit looked like a walnut. There was nothing unusual about its ordinary appearance. However, when Han Shuo examined with his consciousness, he immediately felt that the fruit contained a bizarre energy and was stunned.

"What is this, what's its use?" Han Shuo extended his hand as he spoke, taking the fruit that the little skeleton handed over.

Tens of thousands of brilliance suddenly exploded out of the fruit, binding around Han Shuo momentarily like ribbons. Han Shuo immediately became like a cocoon.

Chapter 422: Radiant Translations

The ribbon-like brilliance wrapped tightly around Han Shuo's entire body, but Han Shuo didn't have the feeling of being restricted.

Strands of light slowly entered Han Shuo's skin, causing a refreshing feeling to flow through his whole body, as though he had entered a cool and refreshing lake.

When the little skeleton saw Han Shuo being wrapped up by the black fruit after receiving the black fruit from him, he extended his snowy white hands which were holding a few thumb-sized ores in his palms. The little skeleton's Purple Demon Eye shined brightly, as though he was pondering about something.

After staring blankly for a while, he put his palms together and started to grind them against each other. As an ear-piercing creaking sound emitted from his palms, a dense deathly aura suddenly emanated from his palms, and the creaking sound stopped abruptly.

Grains of greyish-white sand-like particles slowly flowed out from between the little skeleton's palms. He quickly rushed to Han Shuo's side, sprinkling the sand-like particles on Han Shuo's body.

As the fine grains were falling Han Shuo's body, they suddenly sparkled like stars in the night, giving off a bizarre yet beautiful sight. However, when the fine particles landed on his body, they disappeared without a trace, like water that flowed into the sea and no more sparkles could be seen.

The little skeleton's Purple Demon Eye actually exuded a serene dense color which moved non-stop as it winded around Han Shuo who was encased by the black fruit. It sprinkled the particles from the little skeleton's hands even throughout Han Shuo's body, making sure not miss a spot.

At first, Han Shuo had a snug and lazy feeling, as though he was soaking in a refreshing pool of water, causing him to be languid and somewhat drowsy.

However, when the fine particles landed on his body, the areas where the particles landed had a sudden fiery, stinging pain. The thread-like particles seemed to have spirituality as they slowly assimilated into Han Shuo's bones.

Han Shuo who was originally feeling languid and comfortable, suddenly felt his body become incredibly heavy. Wherever the fine grains landed on, the surrounding bones would felt as though they were cast with lead. Han Shuo realized that the heavy sensation wasn't an illusion, but was actually happening.

Han Shuo did an internal inspection using his consciousness, and distinctly saw specks of starlight-like radiance slowly fusing into his skeleton, gradually reinforcing his bones and causing them to strengthen. This felt similar to the first time Han Shuo felt that he was reborn.

Gradually, the numerous strands of light from the fruit completely entered Han Shuo's body. The little skeleton had already stopped moving around Han Shuo. The fine sand-like particles from his hands had flowed into Han Shuo's skeleton like water, fusing with the fruit's radiance, enhancing every inch of Han Shuo's bones.

Throughout the process, Han Shuo's bones ached as though they were pierced by many fine needles. However, having practiced his demonic arts till this level, Han Shuo had endured all kinds of pain. When compared to the time when his skull was cut open, where he had felt terrifying pain as though his brain was sliced into many pieces, the current pain was easily endured by Han Shuo.

Therefore, Han Shuo did not reveal any signs of being unable to endure throughout the process, nor did he even groan. He was quiet as though he had fallen asleep.

The little skeleton who was beside Han Shuo, looked at him in a daze, as though Han Shuo's expression was extremely strange.

After an indefinite amount of time, Han Shuo felt the pain throughout his body subsiding, allowing Han Shuo to be able to ignore it. Right at this moment, he exhaled and opened his eyes. When he looked down, Han Shuo realized that he had already completely recovered, and there wasn't anything abnormal with his body anymore.

He cracked his neck, swung his arms, flexing his muscles and bones. Han Shuo suddenly had an odd expression. This was because Han Shuo suddenly felt that his body weight had increased tenfold. This was truly inconceivable!

That ordinary-looking fruit had strengthened Han Shuo's bones and increased their density, causing their durability to become extremely astonishing. As his bones were strengthened, his weight had increased along with it. Although Han Shuo was mentally prepared and understood that there would be changes to his body, when the changes were way beyond his expectations, Han Shuo was also extremely amazed.

"What kind of fruit is this? What are its uses?" A shocked Han Shuo stared blankly for a while before he asked the little skeleton.

"We call it 'black resolute crystal'. Just like the serene luster gem you had taken previously, they are extremely miraculous items from my world. The serene luster gem can strengthen one's soul, causing the soul to be purer; the black resolute crystal strengthens one's bones and can make our bones much harder.

A black resolute crystal like this can strengthen an evil knight's body several times. I had previously consumed a black resolute crystal and had suffered terribly. However, after absorbing the black resolute crystal's energy, I could detect that my bones became much more solid." The little skeleton explained to Han Shuo, pausing for a moment before sighing in admiration, "Father, you are truly amazing! You actually didn't have the slightest dreading of the pain!"

It turns out that the fruit was something as precious as the serene luster gem. No wonder it had such a miraculous effect! During Han Shuo's previous visit to the netherworld, he had seen with his own eyes how the undead creatures fought desperately over a serene luster gem. Therefore, he knew that this black resolute crystal was definitely also a highly sought-after item that all undead creatures will scramble for.

The little skeleton had actually not kept such a valuable treasure to improve his own strength and instead gifted it to Han Shuo without the slightest hesitation. This caused Han Shuo to be extremely moved. As Han Shuo looked at the ordinary-looking little skeleton and was just about to praise him, he suddenly thought of another matter.

In the past, whenever changes happened to Han Shuo's body, time would pass unwittingly. He didn't know if a long time had passed this time around when he used the black resolute crystal to strengthen his bones. As Ossen City was currently at its most chaotic moments, time was the most precious thing. As someone who could observe the whole situation remotely, Han Shuo was someone who could not be missing at this critical moment.

"How much time has passed?" Han Shuo's eyebrows creased as he hurriedly asked the little skeleton.

"I have no idea!" the little skeleton calmly replied.

Han Shuo came to his senses soon after. The Cemetery of Death was the same as the netherworld where there was no concept of time. The Cemetery of Death was encapsulated by a strong barrier. Neither sunlight nor moonlight could penetrate it, and therefore it was naturally impossible to derive time from the rise and setting of the sun and moon.

Thinking about the impending major battle, Han Shuo immediately panicked. He didn't dare to continue staying in the Cemetery of Death. After sending the little skeleton back to the netherworld, he hurriedly stood in the center of the Cemetery of Death's magical transportation array.

All of a sudden, the sounds of horses trampling, magic exploding and the wretched howls of warriors' at death's door all rushed into Han Shuo's ears. The source of these sounds wasn't that far away.

Sure enough, the battle had already begun! Han Shuo immediately came to his senses, tidying up the magic array. All kinds of images were being projected into his brain, allowing him to clearly observe everything that was happening.

So long as Han Shuo was within Ossen City, the mystical demons would be able to transmit every scene of Ossen City into his brain. However, if Han Shuo is too far away from Ossen City, the connection between Han Shuo and the mystical demons will be too weak to support the transfer of information. Moreover, the Cemetery of Death has a peculiar barrier, and therefore Han Shuo naturally wasn't able to know the happenings within Ossen City while in the Cemetery of Death.

However, once Han Shuo returned Ossen City via the transportation array, his connection with the twelve mystical demons was immediately re-established, allowing him to possess the ability to control the whole situation again.

Through the mystical demons' point of view, Han Shuo saw that fierce battles were ongoing on several wide spaces around the castle. The powers headed by Firenze, Karel, and Lawrence were fighting relentlessly with Ashburn and eldest prince Charles' troops, with deaths occurring at every moment.

This castle was originally used for storage of military supplies and it just so happened that there were no residents in the surroundings. The surroundings were simply vast open land, allowing the two sides to have the perfect location for battle.

TL note: So, the black resolute crystal is supposed to be an item similar to the previous serene luster gem. The raws for this is 黑坚晶. Wanted it to have a similar style of naming with the serene luster gem. Do give your thoughts on what you feel about the name and any suggestions on what else it could be caught that might fit better!

Everywhere he looked was involved in a vigorous battle. Every plot of land within a few kilometers radius of the castle was densely packed with troops fighting. Apart from the northern city district, mystical demons placed in the different districts observed that the other districts including the imperial palace were also shrouded in the flames of battle.

However, compared to the great battle ongoing at the northern city district, the battles at the other districts were clearly smaller in scale. This was because, headed by Lawrence, those high-ranking figures that could threaten Charles were currently all gathered in the northern city district.

It was unknown if there was a tacit agreement, none of the sacred rank experts participated in the battle. Karel and Sabakas on Lawrence's side, Dempus and the sacred knight on Charles' side, all watched by the sidelines as their troops went all out in battle.

Both Lawrence and Charles knew the incredible lethality of sacred rank experts, especially that of sacred magi. A single forbidden magic spell was enough to turn the tide of battle. However, every kingdom within the Profound Continent had a tacit agreement, that sacred magi would not use forbidden magic in an ordinary battle.

With forbidden magic not permitted against foreign enemies, it was naturally must not be used during internal conflict. Even though Ossen City was rather huge, if it was really bombarded by a few forbidden magic spells, Lancelot Empire's capital, Ossen City would disappear from the continent, with countless casualties among the residents.

This was precisely why both space sacred magus Sabakas and earth sacred magus Dempus have been looking on without lifting a finger during this war. Neither of them dared to use forbidden magic on the opposing army which was from the same empire.

Firenze was the commander of the war. At a high vantage point at the middle of the castle, Firenze roared unendingly as several armored officers under his command arranged their troops methodically in accordance to Firenze's orders and attacked Ashburn and Charles' troops from all directions.

Han Shuo observed the overall situation through his mystical demons. He suddenly realized that under Firenze's never-ending roar, the troops from his Howling Legion looked as though they were randomly dispersed, but indistinctly formed various peculiar formations that divided Ashburn and Charles' army into several large chunks, and quietly surrounded every one of them.

Only Han Shuo who could see the view the overall situation through his mystical demons could clearly see this strange transformation. The participating soldiers and generals would never be able to notice the quiet changes in battle without overlooking anything.

The Howling Legion, which Firenze had brought, had the same design painted on their armor. These soldiers came from the southern border and they had many years of experience fighting against the brutal Orcs. All their weapons have been doused in too much blood. Each and every one of them looked valiant and had a cold expression. Their fighting strength was more fearsome than the Redbud Knights that Han Shuo had seen previously.

The fighting strength of the city guards of Ossen City was also ranked among the best. However, when facing against Firenze's Howling Legion, they were clearly being suppressed. Apart from being slightly better equipped, their battle experience, troop coordination, and individual strength were all greatly inferior to the Howling Legion.

Han Shuo suddenly noticed that Firenze's Howling Legion and the northern city guards were actually gradually gaining the upper hand under Firenze's seemingly crazy commands. Unknowingly, they were slowly withering away Ashburn and Charles' troops.

This madman who was able to stand tall at the southern border for so many years, preventing the barbaric Orcs from penetrating the southern border defense line, definitely had a well-deserved reputation! Han Shuo was in awe and deeply convinced with Firenze's remarkable commanding skills.

"Firenze! These men are soldiers of the Lancelot Empire. They are innocent and have no choice but to fight simply because of the orders of Charles and Ashburn. If they were all killed, it would be Lancelot Empire's loss!" sacred swordmaster Karel was enraged as he glared at Firenze.

Karel placed the utmost priority on the future of the Lancelot Empire. When he saw that under Firenze's commands, the northern city district had completely turned into a war zone, with corpses lying everywhere in the northern city district, corpses which belonged to soldiers who were loyal and faithful to the Lancelot Empire. However, because they were under a different commander, they had no choice but to kill each other mercilessly. The loss of the empire's own people was clearly what Karel didn't want to see and hence he continuously made a racket.

Even Dark Mantle's chief elder Sabakas felt endless grief as he saw the ever increasing losses. He hesitated for a moment before shouting, "Firenze! At the rate you're going, even if we win the war, the empire's strength will be greatly weakened! "

Firenze was unmoved and continued to howl out commands to his officers. When he saw that Sabakas and Karel were still clamoring, he suddenly glared at Karel and said, "During the civil strife of any country within the continent, which of them did not end in rivers of blood? Other than defeating their army, do you think you can make Ashburn yield just by mere words?

Hmph, with the sacred knight and earth sacred magus Dempus over there, not to mention all kinds of experts around them, even a semi-divine expert might not be enough to kill them! I don't think that you have a better plan?

Both of you listen up! This matter can only be resolved quickly by shedding blood. The longer a civil strife drags on, the worse off it is for the empire. Dammit, my men are also getting killed but am I complaining? What's the use of being so emotional? Well if you don't like my methods, I can stand aside and do nothing. Let's see if you guys can convince the two foxes on the other side to give up the throne with words. Are you willing to take control of the whole battle?"

Firenze spoke unrestrainedly, bombarding the two sacred rank experts like artillery and leaving them speechless and unable to find any grounds to retort.

Firenze had always been arrogant and conceited. At other times, he might perhaps still show some respect to Sabakas. However, during a state of war, Firenze would immediately turn into a real madman. In order to achieve victory, he would even dare to violate His Majesty's orders without hesitation. So it's needless to say that Firenze wouldn't bat an eye at the advice of the two sacred rank experts.

After his vulgarity-filled tongue-lashing, Firenze no longer paid attention to them and continued to howl commands at his officers, conveying information of the battlefield to his troops. His Howling Legion slowly and quietly took control of the battlefield, covertly surrounding Ashburn's troops without anyone noticing.

The two sacred rank masters bitterly turned a blind eye and could only sigh. Although they felt aggrieved, there was no other way. They weren't good at commanding large-scale warfare. Furthermore, without Firenze and his Howling Legion, this battle would simply be impossible to win.

Besides, what Firenze said made sense. He who hesitates loses. Unfortunately, the current Lancelot Empire would only be able to swiftly settle its turmoil through blood-filled battle. Otherwise, if either side escaped Ossen City and occupies other cities, the battle would continue to spill out into other cities, which would be a destructive blow to the Lancelot Empire.

Hence, even though the two sacred rank experts were berated and cursed by Firenze, they could only swallow their grievances and no longer dared to contradict Firenze, so as to avoid that fellow having any further crazy behavior.

Having received images of every location, Han Shuo couldn't help but let out a breath of relief. He didn't stay in the cave that he dug any longer, immediately flying out and headed for the castle.

"Whoosh whoosh!" several long-range arrows streaked across the sky as they pierced toward Han Shuo.

Han Shuo was shocked. He looked downwards and saw a few soldiers from the Howling Legion, their expressions cold as they gave him deadly stares. They had unexpectedly sighted Han Shuo from far away and shot arrows at him.

Han Shuo's evaluation of the Howling Legion rose even higher. He cast a spell and a snow white flower bud appeared in mid-air. The bone shield blocked all the arrows and Han Shuo was unharmed. By now, he had already reached the middle of the castle where Firenze was.

Chapter 423: Instructing a disciple

“Brat, we’ve already fought for two days. Where the hell have you been?” When Firenze saw Han Shuo, he couldn’t help but scold loudly.

Han Shuo was considered the key person during this battle. When he suddenly disappeared for two days, everyone was frightened, especially Phoebe, Fanny, and Emily. They even thought that Han Shuo dreaded punishment and had hidden himself, causing them to be so impatient they didn’t know what they should do.

Fortunately, the Dark Mantle displayed its astonishing abilities. In the two days that Han Shuo was missing, members of Dark Mantle that were concealed within Ossen City unceasingly transmitted all sorts of information, helping Firenze, Old Hahn and the rest to make an accurate decision in deploying their troops, allowing them to have the advantage in this battle with Ashburn and the rest.

“Um, I had some personal matters to handle.” Han Shuo also didn’t anticipate that a black resolute gem would actually cause him to stay in the Cemetery of Death for two days. Han Shuo had originally only wanted to take a look at the earth zombie’s condition and return immediately. He wouldn’t have known that he would stay for so long. Hence, he had nothing to say as Firenze continued his scolding.

“Alright then, let’s not talk about useless matters. Since you are here, describe to me the situation in the other districts. This time around, we have to resolve the situation in one battle, so as to not let Ashburn and the rest be able to escape. Otherwise, once Ashburn and the others leave Ossen City, there would be even more battles within the Lancelot Empire.” Firenze was extremely blunt with Han Shuo, hastily urging Han Shuo to supply him with information of the bigger picture.

In such a crucial time, Han Shuo didn’t say much else, immediately describing the situation in every district of Ossen City to Firenze as observed through the twelve mystical demons, even including details of what Ashburn, Charles and the rest were saying.

Firenze listened calmly to Han Shuo's description, constantly shouting out orders. Firenze not only had his officers by his side, he also had one of Dark Mantle's three heavyweights, Amyes. In such a crucial period, Amyes had impressively also become Firenze's subordinate. At his orders, Amyes conveyed information through the enormous Dark Mantle organization to every corner of Ossen City.

It was during this course of events that Han Shuo realized that the battle had gone on endlessly within Ossen City during these two days. Due to Charles giving orders mercilessly without caring about past feelings, apart from Lawrence's side, the powers under the other two princes suffered heavy casualties. Charles clearly intended to exterminate them, constantly pressuring the other two princes.

The two princes who react immediately suffered disastrous losses over the past two days and were pressured till the point that they had no alternative but to head for the northern city district and form an alliance with Lawrence so as to combine their forces and face Charles together.

With the addition of the powers of the two princes and Firenze's Howling Legion, the strength of Lawrence's camp was no longer inferior to Charles'. In the past two days, Ossen City's northern city district had become the main battlefield. However, under Firenze's arrangements, the powers under the other two princes were also put to use, starting to gradually nibble away at the other districts being controlled by Ashburn and the others.

As of now, they seemed to have obtained decent achievements. The powers under Ashburn were constantly being hiddenly consumed and they no longer had the strength to take control over Ossen City on their own.

Space sacred magus Sabakas had also roamed everywhere within this two days, sealing all the space transportation arrays within Ossen City, putting an end to anyone's plans of using the transportation arrays to send reinforcements from other cities.

Every large-scale transportation array within Ossen City had been deployed by space sacred magus Sabakas. Although Ashburn and Charles had suddenly guarded them with massive numbers of troops, as the person who deployed the transportation arrays, although Sabakas was unable to seize them back, he was able to seal the arrays.

Therefore, no one would be able to transfer troops from other cities over through the transportation arrays. In the short term, the battle within Ossen City wouldn't expand. Whoever was able to rapidly achieve victory within Ossen City in the next few days would most likely obtain the position of Lancelot Empire's King.

"Alright, there's nothing else for you. Do whatever you should be doing!" After Han Shuo described the situation in every district of Ossen City to Firenze once and Firenze passed down numerous orders based on Han Shuo's narration, Firenze impatiently urged Han Shuo to leave.

Han Shuo stared blankly for a moment before nodding silently and headed for the location of the three women.

Fanny and the others were currently staying in a lounge on the second floor of the castle. Han Shuo had already spotted the three women through his mystical demons. Han Shuo was unclear about what the three women had discussed in secret but it seemed like they no longer had the same enormous estrangement from each other that was present two days ago. Although they weren't exactly on great terms with each other, it wasn't till the extent where they were quarreling with one another.

Even now, Han Shuo was honestly still feeling apprehensive and somewhat didn't dare to face the three women. However, Han Shuo knew that some matters could not be avoided. Since he had appeared after disappearing for two days, if he didn't go over to see the three women, he would not be able to justify his actions. Hence, he could only summon his courage and head for the lounge where the three women were at.

When Han Shuo purposely caused his footsteps to echo outside the lounge, the gaze of the three women who were conversing indifferently suddenly converged on Han Shuo who had already appeared by the door. Their gazes were like piercing arrows as they landed on Han Shuo's body, causing Han Shuo to feel uncomfortable all over.

Forcing a cough, Han Shuo exclaimed, "Oh, you are all here!"

Phoebe glared at Han Shuo unhappily and said, "That's right, we are all waiting for you, this bigshot. We certainly wouldn't dare to be like you, hiding yourself during wartime. If we didn't know of your past behavior, someone might have already left the castle in search of you!"

When she spoke, Phoebe's eyes wandered between Emily and Fanny, clearly hinting at something.

Emily was calm and composed, her lips curling up into an amused smile as she looked at Han Shuo, not at all affected by Phoebe's words. However, Fanny's expression had clearly relaxed, or perhaps because she still wasn't very familiar with Phoebe and Emily, her face unconsciously turned red as she blushed.

"I didn't know that I would leave for two days. However, it seems like without me within the castle, everything seemed to operate better. Ha, isn't our side already gradually holding the advantage?" Han Shuo mocked himself and chuckled as he spoke to the three women casually.

"When you weren't within the castle, everything depended on the Dark Mantle to acquire information. These two days, the members were as busy as bees while being extremely careful, afraid of being caught and becoming the catalyst for the shift in power. However, Fanny's father is truly extraordinary. With him at the helm, the situation of our side gradually became better." Emily smiled as she said to Han Shuo.

Of the three women, Emily knew the most of Han Shuo's secrets, including the knowledge that Han Shuo controlled the Cemetery of Death. She roughly guessed that Han Shuo had perhaps gone to the Cemetery of Death through a transportation array. Hence, she wasn't too concerned about Han Shuo's sudden disappearance and instead constantly consoled the other two women.

"Hmph, he only knows how to wage war." When Fanny heard Emily praise her father, she didn't reveal any happiness and instead grumbled somewhat resentfully.

Han Shuo found out previously from Fanny that Firenze continued campaigning on the battle while Fanny's mother was severely ill. Even when her mother had passed away from her illness, Firenze was still not present. This caused Fanny to always be troubled. It seems like even now, she still hasn't forgiven him.

"He was also acting in the interests of the empire and the southern border. If your father didn't fight as hard as he did, countless families at the southern border would be destitute and homeless! Sister Fanny, actually it also isn't easy for your father." Emily sighed softly as she tactfully consoled Fanny.

"I know that too. However, when I saw my mother constantly talking about him before she died from her illness, without even having the chance to see him one last time..." Fanny's volume gradually dropped, as though recalling unhappy memories as a strand of hesitation helplessly emerged.

"Alright, alright. Let's talk about happier things and not lose oneself in grief from the past." Phoebe also consoled Fanny. It looks as if the relationship between the three women could still be regarded as harmonious and not as prickly as Han Shuo had guessed.

Just as he was contemplating what to say, Han Shuo suddenly felt the Demonslayer Edge within his body begin to stir. This caused him to be startled. After he shut his eyes and pondered for a while, Han Shuo suddenly realized something, immediately exclaiming happily, "It seems like I need to train for a while!"

The battle for Ossen City had been ongoing unceasing for the past two days, with the fiercest battles in the northern city district. Within this extremely short duration, more than ten thousands soldiers had already died in battle. Every one of Ossen City's city guards was part of Lancelot Empire's elites while Firenze's Howling Legion was even more formidable. In these two days, the soldiers that died on the battlefield had left behind soaring killing intent and their spirits filled with hate and ire.

This type of energy caused ordinary people to feel constrained, as if there was a large mountain pressing down on their chest, giving people a feeling of suppression. Some experts were able to sense this energy even more clearly. However, of this boundless killing intent and negative energy from the deceased, only powerful necromancers within the Profound Continent were able to utilize this energy to obtain a few powerful souls and refine special undead creatures. No one was able to directly absorb this energy.

However, Han Shuo who trained in demonic arts was able to condense the killing intent and directly absorb it. The boundless resentment and fear left behind by the souls of the dead that had yet to dissipate were also easily absorbed by the Demonslayer Edge. It was precisely because the Demonslayer Edge had sensed this familiar energy enveloping the world that it transmitted a signal to Han Shuo in its thirst for this energy.

“What’s going on, why do you suddenly need to train?” Phoebe looked at Han Shuo and asked in puzzlement.

“This is hard to explain. It’s related to the special martial technique that I train in. Just like how Bollands has dense killing intent because he had killed too many people when he was an assassin and it unwittingly attached to his body, hence he’s able to utilize killing intent to intimidate others, I’m able to do so as well.

Oh, that’s right. This energy is similarly useful to Bollands. As long as I give him a hand, he will also be able to seize the opportunity to assimilate a little of the killing intent that’s present everywhere. Alright, I won’t speak any longer to all of you. I’ll first go and look for Bollands.” Han Shuo casually explained and soon after suddenly thought of Bollands and left hurriedly.

“That bastard!” When Phoebe realized that Han Shuo had already disappeared while she was distracted for a moment, she couldn’t help but curse loudly.

During this two days, Bollands’ tranquil and unfeeling heart had become somewhat unstable. Han Shuo’s mystical martial technique was like an unbelievable revelation to Bollands. Bollands who was about to learn the martial technique from Han Shuo would become excited every time he thought of it.

At Bolland's age and rank, what he pursued wasn't as varied and random as youngsters. Only some considerable benefits would make people of their level excited. Bolland who had been an assassin for many years always considered himself to be extremely cool-headed. However, his mind had been overwhelmed repeatedly these few days by Han Shuo's mystical martial technique, causing his tranquil heart to finally become excited again.

"It's been two days. I hope Senior is fine. In this world, I fear that only Senior would be able to guide me in the correct direction." Bolland thought inwardly. He was truly worried about Han Shuo, afraid that his only beacon in this world would die out.

As a swishing sound entered his ears, Bolland was suddenly startled, contracting his killing intent as he asked coldly, "Who is it?"

"Hehe, it's me!" Han Shuo chuckled as he replied and soon after landed by Bolland's side.

Bolland had uncontrollable happiness in his heart, however, his expression didn't have the slightest difference. He bowed toward Han Shuo and said respectfully, "Senior!"

During the war, Bolland who wasn't proficient in commanding the battle had been staying alone in a remote room on the third floor.

There were too many experts on Ashburn and Charles' side. No matter how strong he was, Bolland was unable to carry out an assassination on any of them. There were currently also many experts within the castle and Lawrence simply wasn't worried about his safety. Hence, Bolland had suddenly become idle and thus stayed alone in the remote room.

"I'm looking for you for important matters. Come, let's go to the highest roof of the castle!" Han Shuo didn't say any superfluous words, immediately smiling and instructing Bolland to follow.

Without saying anything, Bolland immediately nodded and flew with Han Shuo toward the tallest tower of the castle.

Before Bolland became his disciple, Han Shuo had already laid down some ground rules and Bolland had remembered them by heart. One of the rules of not violating the orders of seniors had been repeatedly stressed by Han Shuo. As the senior student who would impart the martial technique to Bolland, Han Shuo naturally became his senior. Bolland had not lived his life in vain, clearly understanding that currently, Han Shuo's orders were the most important.

As the battle blazed on like wildfire, Han Shuo directly brought Bolland to the clock tower. After they arrived, Han Shuo smiled at Bolland and said, "Originally you would have to enter the sect before I'm able to impart you with our martial technique. However as the war is ongoing unceasingly, the entire Ossen City has been filled with a lot of extraordinary energy. Perhaps you are also able to sense this energy. If I impart the martial technique to you now, it would just so happen to be able to assist you in assimilating this energy before it dissipates. In that way, your strength would be able to advance by leaps and bounds."

Even before Han Shuo finished speaking, Bolland was already brimming with ecstasy. He had been longing for this day and night. When he heard that Han Shuo would impart this martial technique to him, the excitement in his heart simply couldn't be repressed. His body actually even trembled uncontrollably.

When Han Shuo mentioned that the martial technique was able to absorb this kind of energy, Bolland was so excited he was about to faint. His voice trembled as he asked, "Sen, senior, you mean that, the energy lingering within Ossen City which is causing people to feel suppressed can be absorbed by this martial technique?"

Han Shuo nodded his head, smiling as he replied, "Of course. In this world, all forms of energy can be absorbed. Death qi, killing intent and even spiritual strength can be absorbed. Hehe, I believe you have also felt it. The soaring killing intent from those soldiers has yet to dissipate. As long as you grasp the God Slaying Devil Path, you will be able to directly absorb this type of energy."

"That's right. I am able to sense the omnipresent killing intent within the battlefield. However, that energy doesn't belong to me. I'm unable to even control the killing intent in my body proficiently and naturally wouldn't be able to utilize the killing intent of others." Bollands said honestly.

"Control your breath and pay attention, I'll help you familiarize with the new energy!" Han Shuo said softly before moving behind Bollands and suddenly send a strand of demonic yuan energy into Bollands' body.

After many years of random practice, Bollands had some vague understanding of how to utilize killing intent. The meridians within his body were full of killing intent. Through the transformation from the God Slaying Devil Path, this killing intent can directly form his own unique energy. It was just that all along, he didn't know how to make use of this killing intent.

Han Shuo's demonic yuan energy suddenly entered Bollands' body so as to start assisting the relaxed Bollands in setting things right. Han Shuo made use of the demonic yuan energy to first slowly absorb the impure killing intent that was circulating through Bollands' meridians.

The chart of the meridian flow for the God Slaying Devil Path had already appeared clearly within Han Shuo's mind. Han Shuo revolved the killing intent within Bollands' body in accordance with his memory and slowly guided them along a peculiar path.

"Remember this circulation method. It can help you increase your strength." Han Shuo said softly, as he transferred another strand of demonic yuan energy into Bollands' body.

While he was doing all these things, Han Shuo's Demonslayer Edge had already flew up into the sky and constantly revolve in accordance to Han Shuo's will, forming a layer of thick blood clouds and slowly absorbed all the various kinds of negative energy that lingered within Ossen City and caused the ordinary citizens to be distraught with anxiety.

Chapter 424: Spectacle in the sky

When Bollands heard that this circulation method could allow him to become stronger, he immediately focused his attention, not daring to relax the slightest.

Bollands' body was filled with a great amount of killing intent. When it was pulled along by the demonic yuan energy to slowly circulate through his meridians, it gradually formed a perfect orbit. With the completion of every round of circulation, Bollands could feel as though there was something additional within his body. However, Bollands could only go all out in remembering the circulation method of this killing intent and couldn't manipulate the circulation of the killing intent on his own.

"Pay attention, this is a section of mnemonic chant. As long as you remember this mnemonic chant and are able to understand how it's used, you would be able to circulate the killing intent within your body without relying on the guidance of my demonic yuan energy!" Han Shuo said seriously to Bollands.

Bollands was startled and not daring to move as he waited for Han Shuo to narrate the mnemonic chant. Everything that Han Shuo did for him seemed so novel to Bollands and every word he said was profound and mysterious. Bollands knew nothing at all of this unknown martial technique but he had already witnessed the miracles produced by this martial technique from Han Shuo. Now that the opportunity to learn this martial technique was right in front of him, he didn't dare to relax no matter what happened.

Han Shuo's deep voice rang in Bollands' ear. Bollands no longer indulged in flights of fancy. When Han Shuo started speaking again, he discarded all distracting thoughts and conscientiously listened to Han Shuo's narration. Regardless of whether he could understand immediately, first of all, he had to commit the mnemonic chant to his memory.

Han Shuo repeated the mnemonic chant three times, and then slowly explained the basics of demonic arts. After all, as the demonic arts originated from another world and was different from all the martial techniques and magic within the Profound Continent, it definitely wouldn't be easy for Bolland, as a native who had never been exposed to demonic arts, to fathom the true meaning behind the mnemonic chant.

Han Shuo took great pains in clarifying some of the general questions regarding demonic arts, and then explained in detail again on how to remember the mnemonic chant. He imparted everything he knew about God Slaying Devil Path to Bolland, regardless of whether Bolland could understand.

"Alright, I will leave a small portion of my demonic yuan energy within your body, so as to assist you in forming a vortex to absorb killing intent. You'll have to figure out the rest on your own. If you encounter anything you don't understand, note them down for now. When my matters are completed, I'll clarify your doubts." When Han Shuo felt that his explanations were good enough, he gave Bolland further instructions.

The few strands of demonic yuan energy that were in Bolland's body suddenly changed their direction and converged at Bolland's chest. The strands of demonic yuan energy slowly started to revolve in an arc, spurring the immense killing intent in his body, and gradually forming a vortex that others couldn't see.

After this vortex took shape, a substantial-looking killing intent appeared from Bolland's chest. The dense killing intent was like an unsheathed sharp sword which carried the desire for massacre and destruction. At this moment, the killing intent which was lingering everywhere suddenly converged towards Bolland's chest, as though they were being attracted by the energy of common origin within Bolland.

Bolland was indescribably ecstatic. If it wasn't that he couldn't move his body, he would probably have knelt in excitement and kowtowed to thank Han Shuo!

As the person who directly benefited from the killing intent, Bolland had never felt the circulation of killing intent as clearly as he did now. The vortex formed within his body was like an extremely mysterious force, slowly absorbing the killing intent that lingered around the northern city district. It gathered the killing intent within his chest before transforming it with the vortex into strands of ice-cold energy which disseminated through his body.

Bollands have yet to comprehend how to use this energy, but he clearly knew the fearsome destructive power contained within this energy. Once strands of this energy, which an ordinary person could never be able to absorb, entered his body, not only did it not damage his body, it instead gradually turned into an energy that was compatible with the killing intent within his body.

This feeling could not be sufficiently expressed with just the word “AWESOME”!

“Alright. You just stay over here. It would suffice if you simply comprehend what I just told you. Currently, your body has not been properly tempered. Your bones are not durable enough and many meridian channels are still not cleared. Therefore, the amount of killing intent you can absorb isn’t that much. When you feel that you can’t bear it anymore, you can exert some strength to slap your chest to disperse the vortex. That will stop the absorption.” Han Shuo silently let go of Bollands and instructed him. Without waiting for Bollands to reply, Han Shuo flew toward a roof which was at another remote part of the castle.

Brave, courageous soldiers were still constantly fighting, causing a large volume of energy that was useful to Han Shuo to linger in the sky above Ossen City. Bollands was able to absorb a small portion with Han Shuo help. Han Shuo, whose strength was advancing by leaps and bounds, was naturally able to absorb much more of this energy together with his Demonslayer Edge.

If Han Shuo stayed beside Bollands, once he started absorbing the lingering energy, all the energy would directly enter Han Shuo’s body, greatly affecting the killing intent Bollands would absorb. Not only would his absorption rate decrease, the quality of energy would also weaken greatly. Therefore, Han Shuo chose to stay away from Bollands.

As the demonic yuan energy within his body revolved frantically, an enormous vortex formed in the sky above Han Shuo. Compared to the vortex within Bolland's body, Han Shuo's vortex was a thousand times bigger. With demonic yuan energy as the foundation, the vortex slowly started to revolve.

All the various energy lingering within the northern city district were suddenly like rivers converging into the sea, rushing forth at high speed toward the vortex formed above Han Shuo. In an instant, the color of the sky above the castle changed. The ordinary citizens felt the pressure on their bodies slowly decreasing while the experts were terrified, their expressions grotesque as they raised their head to look at the sky.

Two spectacles appeared above the castle. One was the blood clouds formed by Demonslayer Edge, while the other was a monstrous black vortex. The Demonslayer Edge was in the center of the blood clouds, rapidly absorbing the mix of fear and hatred lingering within the northern city district. On the other hand, the huge bizarre black vortex was madly swallowing the soaring killing intent.

The sudden appearance of the two spectacles on the northern city sky, and the impact they had on the negative energy that enveloped the northern city district caused many experts to be flabbergasted!

"Lord Blount, can you sense that?" Earth sacred magus Dempus asked the sacred knight gravely.

The sacred knight Blount creased his brows as he gazed at the two spectacles above the northern city district and said with a deep voice, "I can sense that a sinister energy is present there. I'm unfamiliar with that energy, which is filled with chaos, slaughter, and madness. This energy is vastly different from the energy of the Calamity Church. What the hell is going on!"

Dempus was somewhat appalled to learn that experienced sacred knight Blount didn't know what was happening. He muttered to himself, "I can sense through my mental energy that this energy comes from the dead soldiers. However, doesn't the energy from the soldiers rest between heaven and earth? How could they be drawn together by any forces? This, this is unbelievable!”

“Damnit. If Karel and Sabakas weren’t here, we could actually go over and investigate. However, all we could do now is watch from afar without knowing what’s going on!” Blount said resentfully but was also helpless to change the situation.

The spectacle in the sky appeared above the castle where the northern city guards were garrisoned. This clearly meant that it had something to do with someone within the castle. However, that area was currently heavily guarded, even having two sacred rank experts guarding it. Even Blount and Dempus didn’t dare to risk entering that area to investigate.

While Blount and Dempus were inexplicably horrified, the experts within the castle had similarly turned pale in fright. All of them looked upwards and stared blankly at the spectacle that appeared, not knowing what was going on.

The blood clouds emitted by the Demonslayer Edge were a bewitching blood red color under the illumination of the sun. The clouds enveloped the entire area surrounding the castle. With the obstruction of the blood clouds, the sunlight projected on the ground was completely blood red in color. Along with blood that was everywhere, the battlefield had completely become a world drenched with blood.

The glaring, bewitching blood red color seemed to possess the ability to ignite the endless hatred hidden deep within people’s hearts. Both sides of the battlefield became more reckless as if they had all become killing machines as they crazily unleashed savage attacks at the enemy, resulting in the losses on both sides to increase exponentially.

The enormous vortex formed by Han Shuo’s demonic yuan energy was like a crazy black abyss, rapidly devouring the killing intent that filled the sky in the northern city district. Some grand magi and great swordmasters could feel the fluctuation in energy, As sacred rank experts, Sabakas and Karel could sense the fluctuations even more clearly

Both of them had astonished expressions, still frightened by the spectacle in the sky. AS the changes appeared in the sky above the castle, both of them even assumed that it was a devastating strike by the enemy on the castle and were panicking and didn't know what to do.

“You guys must immediately obliterate these two strange phenomenons, those must definitely be actions taken by the enemy against us!” Firenze too was somewhat confused. He had heard about the destructive power of some forbidden magic. If the two spectacles overhead were the prelude to two destructive forbidden magic spells, the people in this district would be in a terrible situation. No matter how good Firenze was at commanding troops, there's no way he could evade from such a large-scale attack.

The two sacred rank experts glanced at Firenze while having a confused expression. Sabakas hesitated for a moment, and remarked suspiciously, “The energy that formed the two spectacles overhead is somewhat queer. I think that neither the Church of Light nor Dempus is capable of creating these spectacles. This energy is brimming with chaos and slaughter, which is poles apart from the energy those two people possess. Something isn't quite right!”

“I feel that it's different too. If Ashburn was assisted by someone from the Calamity Church, I might possibly be convinced that this is a terrifying magic attack against us. However, since this energy clearly contains an evil aura and the Calamity Church will definitely not work together with the Church of Light. Therefore we can eliminate that possibility. This is really somewhat odd.” Karel also had a doubtful expression as he slowly expressed his thoughts.

After listening to both of them, Amyes suddenly had a thought and said, “Could it really be Calamity Church and their target is Ashburn and his men? There is a sacred knight from the Church of Light on their side and the Calamity Church and the Church of Light are mortal enemies. Could it indeed be caused by them?”

There was actually another possibility in Amyes' heart. As one of the three heavyweights of Dark Mantle, Amyes knew Han Shuo better than most people. He knew that Han Shuo seemed to have some connection with the Calamity Church. Generally, the Calamity Church will do their utmost to rope in the Church of Light's mortal enemies. Since the Church of Light was so adamant in treating Han Shuo as a mortal enemy, the Calamity Church will surely strive to win over Han Shuo and to establish a good relationship with him.

However, saying that would damage Han Shuo's reputation. To Amyes, Karel, and Sabakas, both the Calamity Church and the Church of Light were just regarded as just religions. They didn't feel reverence or hatred toward these two organizations like original people and hence wouldn't have any prejudices against Han Shuo due to Amyes' remarks.

However, the ordinary nobles of Lancelot Empire had a somewhat instinctively opposition toward the Calamity Church. As Amyes didn't want them to have a bad impression of Han Shuo, he didn't mention this reason.

Sabakas, Karel and the rest were startled when they heard Amyes' interpretation. Soon after, the two of them glanced at each other and Karel said, "Oh, that's possible too!"

"Hmph. But what if this is actually an impending attack against us? If you don't take action to resolve this and a large-scale killing magic descends upon us, we simply don't need to fight this war any longer and we'll all be done for." Not buying the explanation, Firenze shouted at the two experts.

Firenze's words caused Karel and Sabakas hesitated and become unsure on how they should act. If they make the wrong decision, it will result in an unpredictable situation. That outcome was something even the two of them couldn't bear.

While everyone was still hesitating, Emily had walked over from the second floor. When she overheard their conversation from afar, she hid her mouth as she chuckled and said, "These spectacles are definitely caused by Bryan, all of you don't need to worry!"

Hearing her statement, everyone was stunned. Amyes immediately asked, "How can you be so sure?"

"Hehe, only he is able to manipulate this sort of energy, I have previously witnessed him doing so. There's no need to worry, it's definitely him. Apart from him, I had never met anyone who could manipulate the energy left behind between heaven and earth by the soldiers that died in battle. Relax, there won't be any problems." Emily who knew many of Han Shuo's secrets, smiled as she explained to the crowd.

Seeing Emily being so confident, sacred swordmaster Karel suddenly came to his senses, laughing heartily as he said, "Right, right. It must be Bryan. Previously when I sparred with him, the energy he used is quite similar to the energy gathering in the sky. I only thought of it after you mentioned it. So that's what going on!"

Karel's words clearly had more weight than Emily's. His remarks caused the crowd to suddenly calm down. Soon after, Sabakas suddenly flew up into the sky to observe the two spectacles more clearly. Within the huge black vortex, strands of bizarre energy were filtered and transformed by the vortex and entered Han Shuo who was on the roof of the castle little by little.

Seeing that, Sabakas completely understood what was going on. He calmly landed in front of everyone, smiling as he explained, "It is indeed caused by Bryan!"

"Yes, he mentioned previously that he had to train for a while and hastily left the lounge we were in. It looks like he is practicing his martial technique. There is nothing to worry about." Emily explained.

With Emily's further reassurance, the party turned to look at each other in amazement. They were shocked of the mysterious martial technique Han Shuo uses!

However, the subject of the crowd's discussion currently encountered a thorny problem. He was gradually losing control over the changes of the various kinds of chaotic energy within the Demonslayer Edge.

As there was a massive death toll due to the civil strife, it caused too much energy from fear, hatred, and wrath to be present in Ossen City. The soldiers from both factions left behind their tenacious willpower after death. Due to there being too much chaotic energy which couldn't be rapidly fused together, it caused the energy within the Demonslayer Edge to become extremely chaotic.

However, the Demonslayer Edge was still diligently absorbing the negative energy within Ossen City. The blood cloud became denser and denser, causing Han Shuo to feel that he was somewhat losing control.

When Han Shuo came to his senses, the vast amount of energy absorbed within the Demonslayer Edge was already becoming disorderly. This caused Han Shuo's control over the Demonslayer Edge to become somewhat difficult. As the huge amount of negative energy could not be fused quickly due to the strong enmity, the original energy within the Demonslayer Edge was attempting to neutralize and coalesce them together.

As a result, it was extremely chaotic within the Demonslayer Edge. It was surging like a soaring dragon within the blood cloud. Dense, ruthless, and sinister aura gradually flowed into the blood cloud, affecting the soldiers of both sides who were still fighting the vigorous battle.

Chapter 425: Han Shuo's sudden change

Han Shuo understood that this was because he had been too greedy. However, with things reaching this point, he didn't have a good solution.

As his mind was connected with the Demonslayer Edge, with the chaotic negative negative energy within the Demonslayer Edge scattering everywhere, it gradually affected Han Shuo's calm frame of mind. An intention of slaughter unconsciously leaped into his mind. It was like a toxin enhancer, causing Han Shuo's heartbeat to start increasing.

Not good! Han Shuo was alarmed.

This feeling had not appeared for a long time. Han Shuo knew that this is a sign of entering demonhood. The Demonslayer Edge was unfortunately still wildly absorbing the negative energy within Ossen City, while Han Shuo was absorbing the soaring killing intent through the vortex. Both of these energies required Han Shuo's manipulation and an error on one side will immediately affect the other.

Han Shuo's pupils started to gradually turn red. Blood-coloured light wound around his whole body and violent, sinister energy started emanating from Han Shuo. Sabakas and Karel, who were both inside the castle, immediately felt the changes to Han Shuo.

"What's going on?" Karel was terrified as he looked towards the roof that Han Shuo was on.

Bang, bang bang!

Just as Karel finished speaking, crackling sounds came from the direction he was looking toward. Rays of scarlet light shot out, causing the pile of rocks that used to be houses in that area to shatter and disintegrate.

Sabakas stared blankly for two seconds but soon after teleported to the area where Han Shuo sat cross-legged. He saw that Han Shuo's expression was distorted with malevolence, appearing extremely frightful. Strands of energy within the enormous vortex overhead formed rays of blood-colored light which flowed into Han Shuo's body like electric currents.

The sinister and ruthless energy suddenly erupted from Han Shuo's body. With Han Shuo at the center, the buildings surrounding him collapsed with a loud bang one after another. Some of the soldiers in the castle were caught off guard and were immediately affected by this formidable force. In a flash, almost a hundred soldiers were killed.

Space sacred magus Sabakas' expression changed dramatically. Without saying another word, he hurriedly deployed a defensive barrier and then concentrated his mental strength and shouted loudly at Han Shuo, "Bryan!"

The pupils of Han Shuo, who was on the verge of falling into demonhood, had become a frightful scarlet color. It was as though blood was flowing within his pupils and appeared extremely terrifying.

The loud shout made with Sabakas' condensed mental strength, pierced into Han Shuo's mind like a sharp needle. Han Shuo felt a slight headache and became clear-headed after a brief moment.

Han Shuo's eyes spun rapidly for a while before he suddenly raised his head and roared toward the sky. An enormous killing intent was mixed within the roar. While Sabakas was ineffably horrified, Han Shuo suddenly flew up toward the sky like a lightning bolt, vanished within the blood cloud.

The dreadful roar resounded across the entire northern city district like thunder. Many experts sensed the fearsome energy contained within the roar and looked toward the area where Han Shuo was, momentarily clueless about what had happened.

"What happened?" Sacred swordmaster Karel hastily asked the startled Sabakas as he was late to the scene, only seeing a red flash shooting into the sky.

"I don't know, I have no idea either!" Sabakas came to his senses, immediately shaking his head and answered frantically. He looked at the blood cloud which was amassing and becoming denser and said, "However, I have a bad feeling. A moment ago, Bryan looked somewhat terrifying. There's an extremely formidable energy in his body, so powerful that my heart rate quickened."

Karel was shocked as he knew Sabakas' true strength. When he heard Sabakas say that he felt terrified by the strength Han Shuo just revealed, Karel replied gravely, "I can sense soaring killing intent and evil within Bryan's roar. I think something is amiss."

"I'm also worried about that. Just a moment ago, his gaze looked extremely unfeeling and felt extremely unfamiliar. He was totally different from the Han Shuo we usually see. I'm certain that something we can't understand must have happened to his body." Sabakas was also feeling down as he replied Karel.

Karel suddenly shouted in alarm, "Look! The blood cloud in the sky is moving! Oh? It's actually moving in Ashburn's direction!"

"Guys, what's going on? What happened here?" Firenze had come over and asked calmly.

Amyes, Emily, and a few others had come along with Firenze. They had all heard the frightening roar originating from here, which filled their hearts with doubt and bafflement, and immediately came to investigate.

Fanny and Pheobe who were originally still on the second floor had also stopped their conversation and rushed over in a panic. They had no idea why Han Shuo would let out such a terrifying roar, causing them to be filled with worry and panic.

Sabakas didn't answer Firenze's question and instead creased his brows as he looked toward the sky.

The blood cloud had originally sat quietly in the sky above the castle, continuously absorbing negative energy from the entire northern city district. Although it grew in volume, it didn't move.

But now, the thick blood clouds had started to move!

The blood cloud's migration caused the weather to change drastically. An oppressive pressure carrying the weight of a mountain came crashing down. An enormous wicked aura gradually left the sky above the castle and headed toward the location of Ashburn and his allies.

“Emily, do you know what just happened?” Amyes creased his brows as he sought clarification from Emily.

Of the people present, Emily was the most familiar with Han Shuo. When Amyes completed his question, everyone turned their gazes toward to Emily, all of them curious and puzzled.

“This should be what Han Shuo referred to as entering demonhood. He mentioned that this state would cause him to go crazy and even he himself wouldn’t be able to control his own actions. This terrifying state is extremely dangerous but will cause his strength to rise explosively. I don’t really understand it either and that’s all I have heard from him.” Emily similarly creased her brows as she explained immediately.

As Emily explained, everyone saw the numerous houses that had collapsed and some of the castle guards who had died tragically, immediately acknowledging Emily’s explanation. Even Sabakas and Karel, didn’t dare to forcefully charge toward Ashburn’s location. Yet, Han Shuo had condensed a thick blood cloud and headed over directly. Such a lunatic action was clearly something that he wouldn’t do in normal situations.

“Oh no! This means Bryan is in great danger! That location is filled with powerful experts and he even lost his rationality. What should we do?” Karel said anxiously.

“Ai, we can only take it one step at a time. We have to constantly monitor his movements. If anything really goes wrong, we will have to find a way to save him!” Sabakas sighed and answered grudgingly.

As Sabakas spoke, a blue crystal ball the size of a human head materialized in his hand. He then chanted an incantation and the crystal ball suddenly shot out blue light. This blue light was like ripples created when a rock is thrown into a lake, constantly swaying.

As Sabakas continued to recite his spell, the wavering blue light within the crystal ball gradually calmed down. When Sabakas had completed his incantation, the crystal ball suddenly displayed a clear scene.

Within the crystal ball, Han Shuo's entire body was covered in blood-colored light, his pupils scarlet red. The Demonslayer Edge floated above his head and the surrounding layers of blood clouds churned as they moved toward Ashburn's location.

Sabakas moved his five fingers over the crystal ball, causing the image within to zoom in and change, revealing the appearances of Ashburn, eldest prince Charles, their allies. Among them were the sacred knight and earth sacred magus Dempus, all of them having shocked expressions as they looked nervously at the blood cloud inching toward them.

"This crystal ball was given to me by Madam Grace. Although it can't foresee the future, it can show scenes within a fixed area. We won't be able to hear any sound though." Sabakas explained.

"Hmph. You clearly have something good but have been hiding it all along. What a selfish fellow." Firenze remarked impolitely.

Sabakas cleared his throat, smiling bitterly as he explained, "This crystal ball consumes a lot of mental strength to operate, has a very limited range, and doesn't transmit sound. It's a far cry from Han Shuo's mystical powers. That's why I had kept it hidden, not because I was being selfish."

"Alright, alright, let's see if Bryan will meet with a mishap," Karel said impatiently to Firenze and turned his attention to the changing scenes within Sabakas's crystal ball.

While Sabakas and the others were watching the changes happening within the crystal ball attentively, some of the weaker nobles by Ashburn's side were in misery. The enormous pressure brought by the blood cloud caused them to start gasping for breath.

"Dammit, what the hell is happening? Why did red clouds suddenly float over!" Eldest prince Charles also felt his heart palpating. The pressure was like a mountain pressing onto his body, causing him to feel all over. He can't help but cuss as he looked toward the sky.

"Two esteem sacred rank experts, do you know what is happening?" Even though Ashburn was the Grand Duke of Lancelot Empire, he didn't train in either martial arts or magic. He felt the pressure even more clearly and actually had an urge to engage in crazed slaughter. To Ashburn who had to be calm to deal with all kinds of situations, this impulse was undoubtedly deadly. Thus, he hastily asked the sacred knight and Dempus.

The two sacred rank experts had grave expressions as they stared at the blood cloud in the sky. They could clearly sense the blood cloud accumulating more and more energy. Having absorbed the negative energy which contained the unyielding anger and dread of countless thousands of soldiers killed on the battlefield, the energy within the blood cloud far surpassed their imagination. This caused the two sacred rank experts to feel nervous.

“This is caused by that brat, Bryan. I can sense that he’s inside the blood cloud!” sacred knight Blount said calmly as he looked toward the sky.

“It’s him? Is that brat courting death? To actually dare to appear here!” Eldest prince Charles sneered.

In addition to two sacred rank masters, there were numerous great swordmasters and grand magi stationed along with a few thousand troops. Charles naturally believed that Han Shuo would definitely be killed.

However, both scared knight Blount and Dempus could faintly sense the formidability of the energy accumulated within the blood cloud. However, morale was extremely important at this moment. If Blount and Dempus told the truth, it would definitely cause the soldiers here to be filled with fear.

Blount and Dempus shot a glance at each other and Dempus suddenly began to chant a magic spell to deploy a barrier for Ashburn and the others, so as to avoid them being influenced by the energy within the blood cloud, so as to prevent them from feeling dread before the battle truly began.

“Wind magi, use tornados to sweep away that blood cloud.” Sacred knight Blount ordered the magi beside him to immediately take action.

As the blood cloud grew bigger and denser, Blount could clearly feel that energy came from the negative energy condensed within the blood cloud. As Dempus was an earth magus, he was powerless against the blood cloud in the sky. Only wind magi were able to unleash their strength to the greatest degree.

At Blount's command, the wind magi on Ashburn's side began their incantations one after another. The essence of wind suddenly became denser as tornadoes and hurricanes of various sizes gradually formed and headed straight for the blood cloud that was about to reach them.

However, some things don't go as planned. The layers of dense blood cloud unexpectedly didn't disperse at all under the force of the different wind magic spells and instead continued along its original trajectory toward the location above Ashburn and the others.

While the wind magi were indescribably stunned, a magus with sharp vision suddenly shouted in fear while pointing at the blood cloud, "Look! There's someone's in the middle of the cloud!"

As the magus cried out in fear, others with sharp eyes all paid attention to the center of the blood cloud, spotting an imposing figure that was covered in a blood-colored light that interweaved around his body like lightning and looked as though he had the ability to control the blood cloud. All of a sudden, the figure roared wildly as he pressured downward like the blood cloud.

All of a sudden, terrifying wicked energy the weight of a mountain abruptly enveloped the entire area. An overbearing weapon wound around the thick blood cloud before suddenly striking downward like a meteor with red light trailing behind. The power within the rapidly descending weapon and the friction with the air produced a terrifying sharp screech.

In a split second, the entire sky was covered with red light. Blount and Dempus were both so terrified their faces paled.

"Retreat!" Dempus shouted, his hands grabbing onto Ashburn and eldest prince Charles and immediately using his levitation skills to hastily retreat into the distance.

Chapter 426: Unstoppable

When the numerous experts on Ashburn's side saw that Dempus had actually dragged Ashburn and Charles along and retreated, they couldn't believe their eyes.

"Everyone withdraw!" The Church of Light's sacred knight Blount suddenly shouted and immediately rushed in Dempus' direction.

The Demonslayer Edge was entangled within the dense blood cloud and part of the chaotic negative energy within it rushed forth and interweaved with the energy within the blood cloud, causing an incomparably formidable force to strike downwards.

Dempus and Blount were aghast and couldn't understand what was going on. This was especially true for Blount who had effortlessly inflicted heavy injuries onto Han Shuo just a few days ago. Although he knew that Han Shuo's strength was out of the ordinary, it still wasn't something he paid attention to. He could never have anticipated that within a few days, Han Shuo's strength had unexpectedly reached such a frightening level.

Both of them had precisely felt the frightening energy contained this strike and immediately started to retreat. This was because even Blount and Dempus weren't confident in being able to withstand such a powerful strike.

Seeing Dempus and Blount retreat, the rest of them were naturally alarmed and started fleeing from the area in panic in random directions. The figures of some powerful experts became indistinct as they left the area in the blink of an eye.

The terrifying strike had the force of a collapsing mountain, causing a loud rumble as it struck the the hundred people that had yet to leave the area.

Rumble...

Trembles and rumbles akin to Judgement Day erupted with that area as the epicenter. Dust storms swept wildly across the cracked earth as hurricanes carried the broken fragments in all directions. The various rays of blood-colored light exploded like fireworks as the sounds of ghosts wailing and wolves howling occurred again and again.

The soldiers who had not left were instantaneously turned into dregs by the strike. Flesh was mixed into the debris as they flew into the distance. From afar, a scene of desolation filled the eyes. When the dust settled, the area looked as though it had collapsed or encountered a great earthquake, leaving behind a deep oval crater that was ten meters in diameter.

The deep crater was obviously a result of the strike. Jet-black corpses laid within the crater, flowing with scarlet blood. Some of the clothes were scorched and still emitting black smoke. With the crater at the center, the earth seemed severely ravaged, as though a giant awl had bored a hole into it. The center of the crater was so deep the base couldn't be seen and the area was filled with potholes.

The might of this strike shocked everyone present. Not only Ashburn and the others by his side who had just escaped were dumbstruck, the jaws of Karel, Sabakas, and the others who were observing the area through crystal ball had dropped, their expressions filled with disbelief.

By now, Fanny and Phoebe had also hurried over. "This... Bryan did this?" Fanny stared blankly as she murmured. She had never thought that Han Shuo was actually frightening.

Even sacred swordmaster Karel felt his lips become dry as he remarked, "Truly unbelievable. That strike did not contain any magic, yet a strike purely based on martial arts has caused the deaths of numerous people. He even made a deep crater with that terrifying strike. Even if I went all out, I won't be able to produce such a terrifying strike. I truly have no idea how he achieved it!"

"No wonder Grace said he will bring about a new future to the Lancelot Empire. It seems that she was really far-sighted. If those people didn't escape in time, that strike would cause the deaths of several hundred people. That's absolutely terrifying. What's more peculiar is that the strike didn't contain any sort of magic and was achieved solely by his mystical martial arts. What a mystery-filled fellow. “ Sabakas stated his heartfelt admiration.

“Mas.. Master, that’s not possible. I know Bryan’s strength and it isn’t this terrifying. Are you saying that he’s stronger than you?” Phoebe was dumbfounded, feeling that what she had just seen within the crystal ball wasn’t real.

Phoebe had believed all along that her master, Karel, was the continent’s strongest person. In the years she has been by Karel’s side, she had witnessed Karel being challenged by countless experts, yet all the experts that dared to challenge Karel suffered crushing defeats in the end without exception.

Phoebe had seen many of such battles over the years. It left a strong impression in her heart that Karel was omnipotent. She always thought in her heart that Karel was the world’s most fearsome expert and no one could ever surpass him.

However, when she heard Karel’s current words, Phoebe sensed the hidden meaning within, that the dreadful scene caused by Han Shuo’s strike was something even her master couldn’t accomplish. This totally subverted Phoebe’s understanding and was extremely surreal to her.

“If Bryan can always maintain his strength at such a level, even I would honestly have to flee too!” Karel glanced at Phoebe who had an odd expression, sighing as he said, “I truly didn’t foresee that this brat would be so terrifying. Could it be that he had deliberately concealed his strength during our spar so as to let me save face?”

“This brat is so terrifying that even Dempus and Blount, two sacred-grade experts, have to immediately retreat. I can imagine how powerful that strike must have been. Otherwise, with Dempus and Blount’s arrogance and statures, they would never retreat when facing the younger generation.” Sabakas remarked.

Amyes was amazed, thinking to himself, “After the civil war is over, if Lawrence ascends to the throne, the brat’s standing in the empire will be as high as that of Grand Duke Ashburn. In that case, Emily’s relationship with him wouldn't be considered as a disgrace to her. Hopefully, this man will genuinely treat Emily well.

While Amyes was sighing in his heart, Firenze was astonished, foolishly staring at Fanny as he asked, "Lass, this brat really used to be your student?"

"Yes, that's right. Back when he was still in the academy, he was even bullied regularly." Fanny smiled bitterly as she answered Firenze.

"This world is changing too fast. I've become old, I'm definitely old now, I feel that I'm too outdated!" Firenze had an odd expression, astonished by Han Shuo's shocking performance at such young age.

"Look! He's starting to move again!" The person who cried out this time was Lawrence, his tone brimming with excitement.

No one on this side could be happier than Lawrence. Seeing Ashburn, Charles, and the others cutting a sorry figure as they flee, Lawrence felt unspeakable joy. Ashburn and Charles had tried to act against him in secret multiple times, nearly succeeding in killing him on a few occasions. The hatred he had for the duo had long passed the point where he wouldn't rest till they were dead.

Now that he saw Ashburn and Charles being humiliated, Lawrence naturally felt extremely overjoyed. Moreover, if the duo was killed at such a crucial moment, the whole Lancelot Empire will undoubtedly fall into his control. Lawrence's heart palpitated with excitement as he imagined the scene where everyone pledged their allegiance to him.

When Lawrence cried out in surprise, everyone hastily turned their attention back to the crystal ball in Sabakas' hand.

The scene within the crystal ball was still fixed on the heavily destroyed area. In the sky above the desolate land, a sinister looking Han Shou was roaring wildly. The thick blood clouds behind him emanated a heavy smell of blood, constantly rumbling as he roared.

A bolt of red lighting suddenly appeared from the bottomless crater and rapidly flew in front of Han Shuo. The blood-red eyed Han Shuo caught it at one go. It was precisely the lethal Demonslayer Edge that had caused the frightening attack.

When the vicious Demonslayer Edge entered his hand, a frightening might spread out. His scarlet red eyes scanned the area, and he immediately charged in sacred knight Blount's direction. A hundred-meter long scarlet red sword light was suddenly shot out from the Demonslayer Edge. The scarlet sword light whistled and pulled along a portion of the blood cloud as if it had bizarre powers.

Han Shuo was like a demon that descended from another plane, his expression malevolent as he held the Demonslayer Edge and charged towards Blount. The Demonslayer Edge effortlessly destroyed everything in his path. As he flew onward, terrifying power spread out to the whole area.

Many of Ashburn's troops that were within a hundred meters of Han Shuo were affected, all of them being sliced and diced into pieces in succession by the sword light, causing a bountiful rain of blood to fall. Along the path where Han Shuo flew, sand and stones were sent flying. As the sword light streaked across the area, it left many deep gorges.

"My two esteem sacred rank experts, what, what was going on?" Grand Duke Ashburn asked Blount and earth sacred magus Dempus with a trembling voice as he looked at the fiend-like Han Shuo charging at them imposingly.

Han Shuo's current demeanor was really too terrifying and wild. Nothing could stop him along the way, and anyone who dared to obstruct him was obliterated under the hundred-meter-long sword light. In just a brief moment, five hundred elite soldiers under Ashburn were killed.

These elite soldiers had been protecting Ashburn, and didn't participate in the ongoing battle. All of them were death soldiers that Ashburn had meticulously asked others to train, consuming a tremendous amount of Ashburn's gold coins and manpower. Each of them was much stronger than the average soldier.

However, these elite soldiers that Ashburn relied on were sliced apart like paper when facing the crazed Han Shuo. Not a single one of them could actually survive an attack from Han Shuo.

“For some unknown reason, that wicked fellow’s strength suddenly rose sharply. It’s as though he could borrow the energy from the dead that had not dispersed. Every strike was filled with frightening negative energy. I truly have no idea how he did it!” Sacred knight Blount had a grave expression as he replied Ashburn.

“What should we do, what should we do now that he’s charging over?” Eldest prince Charles voice trembling as he shrieked. He was clearly intimidated by Han Shuo’s sinister appearance and frightening strength.

“There’s no other way, we could only retreat. Currently, no one in the entire Lancelot Empire can stop him!” Earth sacred magus Dempus immediately answered. Although this decision caused him to feel aggrieved, he really didn’t have any other ideas.

“What did the two of you say in the beginning? There’s no need to worry even if there was a sacred expert? But now you can’t even obstruct a young fellow? You guys are useless! Where else can I withdraw to? If I leave Ossen City, all our plans and efforts will be wasted!” Charles was obviously somewhat hysterical and even spoke incoherently as he was truly frightened.

“Charles, shut up! The judgment of the two esteemed sacred rank experts will not be wrong, you better calm down!” When Ashburn saw that the expressions of the two sacred rank experts turned ugly, he hastily berated Charles.

After getting scolded by Ashburn, Charles came to his senses and immediately became silent.

“My dearest esteem sacred rank experts, Charles is still young and momentarily forgot his manners. Please do not take it to heart. We will listen to your advice.” Ashburn chided Charles before immediately apologizing to Blount and Dempus.

Even though Ashburn was the Grand Duke of the Lancelot Empire, he still needed to treat these sacred rank experts with great caution, especially now when they needed to rely on the two sacred rank experts. It would further worsen their plight if they were to offend these two experts. Therefore, Ashburn had no choice but to humbly apologize.

Sacred knight Blount gave a frosty snort and glanced at the now silent Charles, “Next time be more careful when you speak. I came here to help you guys because of my good friend Kosse. Otherwise, I wouldn’t care less about whether you are dead or alive.”

Charles secretly cursed him in his heart, thinking that after he took power, he will teach him a lesson. However, he dared not to reveal any dissatisfaction at this moment, and could only nod and smile.

“Lord Blount, for the sake of spreading the glory and radiance of Church of Light all over Lancelot Empire, please forgive them.” Red Archbishop Kosse said to Blount with a smile.

“Forget it, everything is for the glory of the Church of Light!” Blount exclaimed before saying to Dempus, “Escort them away from this area. I will lead that fellow away. I sense that his primary target is me. It seems like he hates me for injuring him previously.”

“Thank you Mister Blount, take care!” Dempus stared blankly for a moment before he replied respectfully.

Ashburn and Charles glanced at each other. Charles was cursing in his heart again, thinking, “Since you knew that his target was you, why did you still stay together with us? Doesn’t this show that you obviously want to harm us? You old fart is sure enough up to no good!”

“Old friend Kosse, I’d have to trouble you to stay by my side. This fellow is a grand magus necromancer. Only with your divine weapon ‘Revelation’ would be able to nullify his undead army.” Blount said to Kosse.

“Of course.” Kosse nodded in agreement.

Chapter 427: One vs A Hundred

Once Blount finished speaking, Dempus led Grand Duke Ashburn, Charles, and the experts protecting them, withdrawing hurriedly.

Blount and Kosse formed a group with a few Temple Knights and white priests from the Church of Light and headed in the exact opposite direction of Dempus and the others.

Blount's guess was absolutely correct. Currently, Han Shuo had firmly remembered the sacred aura on Blount's body. The earth elite zombie getting injured was a sore point for Han Shuo. Before entering demonhood, he had deemed Blount as his target, not letting Blount out of his sights.

As expected, when Blount, Kosse, and the other members of Church of Light left, the fiend-like Han Shuo who was flying over was indeed targeting Blount and persevered in chasing after him.

Dempus and the others who originally planned to escape quickly suddenly realized that Han Shuo's target was indeed Blount and immediately let out sighs of relief. Under Ashburn's command, they changed directions again and circled back towards the center of the battlefield to continue directing their troops in the ongoing war.

Han Shuo, who had sunk into the state of demonhood, was like a pillar of lightning, spurring a frightening sound as he charged towards Blount, Kosse, and his party. He didn't care about the fates of Ashburn and the others.

Firenze, who had been observing the crystal ball, gave a cold hmph and said, "Ashburn has returned to court death. Till this point, he actually still unable to tell the outcome of the battle."

"It seems that Blount and the members of the Church of Light are in trouble!" Karel's mood had calmed down, smiling as he said to Sabakas.

"Yes, that's right. I was originally prepared to assist Bryan at any moment. I didn't expect this brat to be so miraculous. It seems that we need not be concerned and just need to deal with Ashburn.” Sabakas similarly loosened his breath, his tone relaxed as he replied.

“Do you mean that Bryan shouldn’t be in any trouble?” Fanny was the most concerned about Han Shuo’s safety. She hesitated for a moment but still didn’t feel very reassured.

“Lass, it is those that were being chased by Bryan that should be worried. I think there’s no need for us to worry about that brat. Alright, be at ease, don’t worry about this and that the entire day.” Firenze consoled Fanny.

Emily and Phoebe had normal expressions, only feeling amazed by his extreme performance. Ever since they met Han Shuo, they never had seen him suffer losses. Han Shuo had always given them a powerful strength and hence they had indistinctly formed a blind confidence deep in their hearts.

Fanny was however different from them. Of the three, Fanny was the first to meet Han Shuo. When Han Shuo was still in the necromancy major and yet to become strong, she even had to step forward at times and help him resolve problems. This deeply-rooted impression wasn’t something that could be altered within a short time. Even though Han Shuo was currently so powerful, she would still worry for him.

While the crowd was looking upon Han Shuo with varying emotions, the fiend-like Han Shuo had actually already caught up to Blount and started to attack the followers of the Church of Light.

Standing tall within the blood cloud, Han Shuo lifted the Demonslayer Edge within the writhing blood cloud. It emitted a dragon-like sword light and every strike contained boundless might. The magi from the Church of Light continuously weaved layers of defensive barriers. Even sacred knight Blount dare not withstand the strikes by himself.

A long and narrow red lightning bombarded them from above. It was like the meandering, twisting body of a hundred-meter-long dragon, containing vast amounts of killing intent, directly striking the magic barrier deployed by Kosse and the group of magi.

A revolving screen of wind, sparkling and translucent ice shield, blazing firewall, and a magnificent holy shield of light took shape one after another over their heads, forming a variegated peculiar scene. Blount was in charge of the final layer of defense, as his fighting aura containing divine energy shot out from his golden pike in the form of dazzling light.

These followers of the Church of Light concentrated their attention on the sky above, as though they were in anticipation of a great enemy, exerting all their strength to meet the already unavoidable strike.

Finally, a powerful attack struck down loudly on the combined barriers deployed by the members of the Church of Light.

It shattered into small pieces, like the stars in the Milky Way, causing multi-colored lights to shoot in all directions with an eardrum-bursting loud sound. The enormous energy contained unmatched ruthlessness, easily destroying six barriers of multiple elements in a flash.

The magical barriers made with the full strength of those magi was like paper in the face of the destructive force. They seemed to be instantly demolished, simply causing the destructive strike to pause for a moment.

The relentless strike continued onward, causing another eight magical barriers to shatter into a variety of colored lights. Only when it reached the 'Shield of Light' deployed by Red Archbishop Kosse's divine weapon 'Revelation', was there a frightening explosion and the force of the strike was truly diminished.

"Deng, deng, deng!"

Red Archbishop Kosse who had been strenuously concentrating his mental strength to deploy the Shield of Light, couldn't resist falling backward by three steps before falling on his butt. His brain buzzed and he couldn't help but spit out a mouthful of blood.

"Lord Blount, hurry!" Kosse took a breath and shouted, as his brain suddenly suffered a wave of pain again.

"Crack" With the crisp sound of an egg cracking, the Shield of Light that Kosse deployed ruptured, and the ferocious strike continued on its path downwards.

Sacred knight Blount shouted loudly, raising the shining golden spike towards the sky. Holy aura burst out from Blount's body and fused with the golden spike in his hand, forming a golden lighting that shot out towards Han Shuo's strike.

Rumble...

A series of muffled thunders could suddenly be heard from the clear sky as gold and red interweaved with each other, forming a spectacular sight. However, the terrifying energy transmitted from the two strikes burst out like a torrent, causing multiple spatial tears to appear.

Blount gave off a muffled groan as terrifying energy suddenly surged into his body. The golden armor on his body gave off a sweet-sounding jingling sound as he suddenly felt as though his internal organs were smashed by a huge hammer, causing him to stagger as blood flowed out of his mouth and nose.

"Blount's injured! What a frightening attack!" Karel shouted, his expression filled with inexplicable joy.

Through the crystal ball on Sabakas's hand, Lawrence and the others saw the situation clearly, especially how blood flowed from Blount's mouth and nose. Those with sharp eyes even noticed Blount's brief stagger.

In contrast to the battered and exhausted Blount, Han Shuo, who had just received the Demonslayer Edge in his palm, still carried a malevolent appearance. His scarlet pupils were filled with madness and his unfeeling expression made him appear like a machine sculpted for a massacre.

Apart from continuously breathing heavily, there were no changes to Han Shuo's outward appearance. There were no signs of fatigue, only that the blood cloud had shrunk slightly, as though it was dispersed by the turbulent energy released during the battle.

"Insane, Bryan really is insane. He actually injured the Church of Light's sacred knight!" Cecilia, one of the three heavyweights of Dark Mantle, had been silently monitoring the latest developments, but couldn't resist shouting in excitement.

Cecilia who spent years carrying out missions in enemy countries was more familiar than anyone else about the sacred knight's frightening strength. In the entire Profound Continent, the Church of Light's sacred knight was always the most formidable existence. Cecilia who had roamed around many countries had heard many rumors about sacred knights and she knew just how formidable these experts who had obtained divine blessing were.

However, it was such an existence that disdained the experts of the various countries that was now injured by a young man!

If this matter was to spread, Han Shuo would immediately become a legend in the Profound Continent, easily topping the ranks of the finest experts within the continent.

To Cecilia, Han Shuo's performance today could only be described as outrageous. It was also from that moment on that Cecilia thoroughly abandoned any intention of competing with Han Shuo.

Even though she's Sabakas's granddaughter, even though she's one of the three heavyweights of Dark Mantle, even though she always believed that she's inferior to any youngster.

However, Han Shuo's stunning performance at this moment completely overturned her thoughts and made her realize how powerless she was to compete with Han Shuo.

"Based on this strike, Bryan's name will spread widely throughout the Profound Continent!" Space sacred magus Sabakas had a serene expression as he remarked definitively while looking at the unyielding Han Shuo within the crystal ball.

"Lord Blount, Lord Blount's injured!" Contrary the surprise felt by Sabakas and the others, the followers of the Church of Light beside Blount were all enveloped in fear. These followers continuously repeated that sentence, as though Blount's injury meant that the mission had completely failed.

Their morale, in the wake of those continuously repeated words, sank to its lowest!

“Shut up. Those who are alive continue deploying magical barriers. The next wave of attack is arriving. You fools, if you want to live, start moving immediately!” The usually unruffled Blount suddenly seemed to lose control, unable to restrain himself from shouting angrily.

The fellows of the Church of Light had no time to think about the change in Blount’s tone at this moment as the thick blood cloud above their heads had started to churn wildly again.

It was clear in their hearts that this is the sign that the fiend above was taking action!

“Cough, cough!” Red Archbishop Kosse coughed violently for a short while before he tremblingly stood up, holding the divine weapon ‘Revelation’ as he continued his incantation. He was the first to re-deploy a magical barrier.

Kosse’s heart was filled with bitterness. Even with his outstanding wisdom and knowledge, he couldn’t figure out how Han Shuo’s strength could rise so dramatically in such a short period of time. Just a few days back, Blount was able to seriously injure Han Shuo. Yet, the strength he revealed today could not be simply described as terrifying. Kosse who originally thought that victory over Ossen City was assured now felt that not only was there no longer any certainty of success, his heart was also filled with a frightening sense of dispiritedness.

This fiend, I should have destroyed him when I first met him! Kosse sighed regretfully in his heart.

When Kosse began his incantation, the magi of the Church of Light who still had the strength to spare, similarly continued to chant incantations for the sake of their own survival, continuing to do what they were already doing.

Han Shuo’s terrifying speed when he flew over previously made them realize that if they didn’t work as one, they simply wouldn’t be able to escape from Han Shuo as his speed was faster than their levitation skills.

They didn’t know if their magical barriers would be of use like they did previously but in order to survive for a while longer, they didn’t have much choice but to do as Blount and Kosse ordered.

The facts proved that their actions were correct.

Han Shuo's next strike arrived as expected, but its power was obviously much weaker than the previous strike. However, it still tore through the barriers deployed by these magi, once again knocking out Red Archbishop Kosse. Blount who was defending the same way he did previously was struck directly into the ground in the midst of shimmering golden lights.

Although the magnitude of this strike was much weaker, its lethality was greater than the previous strike.

The previous unparalleled attack didn't kill any followers of the Church of Light as it was blocked by the barriers and Blount.

Yet, although Han Shuo's second attack was weaker, the followers of the Church of Light were heavily injured by the first attack, causing the second set of barriers deployed to not be as sturdy and perfect as the first. This resulted in Red Archbishop Kosse being knocked out and Blount's body being smashed into the ground.

In addition, over twenty Temple Knights and white priests were immediately cut into pieces by the blood-red sword light.

As the second attack was much weaker, the preparation time needed for the following attack was also much shorter. Before they could react, the blood-red sword light no longer gathered together and instead wound around the thick blood cloud, Quickly followed by the weaker hammering and before those men could react, forming a blood rain that rained downward, causing unceasing blood-curdling screams to be heard coming from below.

When everyone was fending for themselves, a blood-red light the thickness of an arm suddenly stabbed into the fainted Red Archbishop Kosse. The divine weapon 'Revelation' on his hand suddenly shone brightly, and a ruthless aura suddenly emanated from his body.

When the members of the Church of Light came to their senses, they suddenly noticed that Kosse was bleeding from his seven apertures and had lost all signs of life. The divine weapon 'Revelation' that he held tightly in his hand had also become dull and lackluster.

Chapter 428: Already a foregone conclusion

“Lord Kosse, Lord Kosse! “ A white priest near Kosse suddenly shrieked.

“He’s dead, Lord Kosse is dead!” Another Temple Knight suddenly cried out involuntarily. His cry was extremely loud and voice traveled very far away.

When sacred knight Blount, whose throat was filled with blood, heard the news, he spurted out the blood he had been suppressing. Blount’s originally shiny golden armor was now filled with cracks like a turtle’s shell, appearing to have been seriously damaged from the last attack.

“Calm down, everybody calm down. Quicky secure the ‘Revelation’!“ Blount shouted from afar.

Beams of blood-red sword light swished as they shot down like a rain of arrows. The remaining blood cloud that enveloped Han Shuo twisted around the descending sword light, enhancing their destructive power. They proved to be a lethal weapon, taking the lives of the followers of the Church of Light below.

Miserable howls could be heard continuously. Under the bombardment of the blood light, more than half of the Church of Light’s followers were killed in a flash. Their bodies were in a horrifying condition where even the sturdy armor of the Temple Knights was simply unable to withstand the blood light, collapsing into pools of blood one after another.

Blount exclaimed loudly as he pulled himself out from the ground. He saw that a white priest had already retrieved the Church of Light’s divine weapon, ‘Revelation’ and swung the golden pike in his hand to block a blood light shooting toward the white priest. His eyes were bloodshot as he stared at Han Shuo who stood imposingly in the sky, his heart filled with boundless hatred. When the rain of blood light finally ceased, there were only slightly more than thirty members that remained around Blount. Their operation against the Lancelot Empire could be considered an utter failure. Even the Church of Light's representative in Lancelot Empire, Red Archbishop Kosse, was killed on the scene. The losses were way beyond Blount's expectations.

The thick blood cloud in the sky had already disappeared. Han Shuo who originally had scarlet eyes and a malevolent expression had actually already returned to normal. At this moment he looked down unfeelingly at the desolation but didn't take any further action.

He held a scarlet weapon shining in scarlet sword light in his hand. The blood red colour came from within the weapon hilt, as though it had soaked in blood for millions of years. Soaring killing intent emanated from the weapon, giving people an apprehensive feeling.

"Blount, you didn't expect this, didn't you? Hehe, this is the price the Church of Light ought to pay! All these while, the Church of Light has been attacking me like a mad dog, and I've simply acted on self-defense." Han Shuo sneered at Blount, continuing, "However, I will not passively wait for your attack. From today onward, I'll actively seek and destroy every power of the Church of Light one by one. Unfortunately, you won't live to see that."

"You wicked heretic, the God of Light would not permit your existence in this world. I guarantee that you will die very soon." Blount clenched his teeth before replying Han Shuo.

Han Shuo smiled mockingly while shaking his head, lifting the Demonslayer Edge and shot toward Blount, as though wanting to behead Blount on the spot.

But before Han Shuo could get near Blount, Blount had already rushed towards the church member who held 'Revelation' at lightning speed. As he grabbed the divine weapon, his golden armor suddenly burst out in brilliant golden light. A divine energy enveloped Blount, rocketing him up to the sky, shooting toward the horizon like a golden ray.

"He escaped! The sacred knight actually fled!" Cecelia, who had been observing the scene through the crystal ball, shouted in disbelief.

"Blount was injured quite heavily. It looks like Bryan must have imprinted an unforgettable impression on him.” Sacred swordmaster Karel said affirmatively.

“Within the Church of Light, a sacred knight of Blount’s level, would not be restrained by ordinary people. This is because the Church of Light would absolutely not allow them to be lost. If Blount wanted to leave, he would have done so long ago. It’s just that he wanted to protect Kosse and the other members, and was confident in holding back Bryan, which was why he had delayed his departure.

Unfortunately, he was still unable to obstruct Bryan and was even badly injured. However, our Lancelot Empire could be considered to have enmity with the Church of Light from today onward. There would be more troublesome matters in the future. The Church of Light has an enormous influence within the Oden Empire, the most powerful kingdom in the Profound Continent. We might face threats from the Oden Empire this time.” Sabakas sighed lightly, appearing to be somewhat worried about the future of the Lancelot Empire.

“Hehe, you can’t say that for sure. Madam Grace prophesied that so long as Bryan remains in the Lancelot Empire, our empire shall enjoy lasting prosperity. Everything that happened today is in line with the prophecy. Look at the empire’s current situation, are these changes all happening because of Bryan’s existence?

Maybe Bryan would be like demigod Ayermike Cotton, and bring hundreds of years of prosperity to the Lancelot Empire. Hehe, even though we can’t say for sure, I actually think highly of him. Furthermore, Oden Empire and Lancelot Empire are separated by a large distance. I don’t believe that they will be able to attack us from so far away.” sacred swordmaster Karel’s mood seemed pretty good, smiling as he replied Sabakas.

“What’s there to be afraid of. So what if the Oden Empire’s army comes over? Hmph, I’d love to meet the continent’s strongest army and see how strong they are!” Firenze the battle maniac was somewhat eager to give it a try, clearly happy to see the whole world be in chaos.

Hearing Karel and Firenze's remarks, Sabakas reflected that Oden Empire and Lancelot Empire were indeed separated by great geographical distances and his heart eased up slightly. Soon after, he moved his fingers, causing the crystal ball on his hand to spin for a moment, and its luster to slowly fade, causing the images within to disappear as well.

At this moment, Han Shuo was astonished as he looked in the direction that Blount had escaped in, but was feeling relieved in his heart.

Contrary to Blount's impression, Han Shuo was currently just strong in appearance but weak in reality. The power he displayed previously was through the energy within the thick blood cloud and the negative energy within the Demonslayer Edge. Currently, the thick blood cloud that had been enveloping Han Shuo had already vanished and even the negative energy in Demonslayer Edge begin to dwindle.

Thus, Han Shuo no longer had a source of power to borrow from and only had the same strength as when he mounted a sneak attack on Blount previously. If Blount didn't flee in panic and was determined to fight to the death, he might not have lost to Han Shuo.

Unfortunately, Han Shuo's prior performance was too overwhelming. Blount's injuries caused a dent in his confidence, causing him to go as far as to disregard the other members and evoke the special ability of his armor with divine energy so as to quickly escape the battlefield.

Han Shuo let out a sigh of relief after Blount left. He couldn't help but turned his eyes towards the remaining members of the Church of Light who were in despair. These men had seen Kosse being killed, Blount escaping and were intimidated by Han Shuo's previous display. Their faces were ashen and no longer had any hope of living under Han Shuo's gaze.

After experiencing his earth elite zombie being injured, Han Shuo has no mercy left for the Church of Light. He understood that the animosity between him and the Church of Light would only end when one of them dies. Only when the Church of Light completely disappears from the continent, would he be able to live a peaceful life. The only way to solve the problem of such fanatical followers is to kill all of them.

After Blount escaped, the remaining people were useless troops, which Han Shuo could handle easily with his original strength. He sneered as he looked at the remaining members of the Church of Light. Just as Han Shuo was about to say something, a white priest suddenly sang a song praising and worshipping the God of Light loudly.

After the white priest finished, he shouted sorrowfully, "The God of Light will definitely purify our souls, and avenge the humiliation we received today."

After that, under Han Shuo's gaze, the white priest took the lead with the remaining members committing suicide one after another.

"Truly a group of people whose minds are corrupted. Religion truly poisons the mind!" Han Shuo couldn't help but sigh when he saw the followers of the Church of Light, who knew that they couldn't escape, kill themselves one after another in front of Han Shuo.

Han Shuo raised his head and looked at the sky. He could still feel the soaring killing intent enveloping the entire Ossen City. Although Han Shuo had already absorbed a portion of it, the undispersed killing intent was still as rich as before. This caused Han Shuo to feel extremely refreshed.

Currently, under the drain from him entering demonhood, the two types of energy within the Demonslayer Edge had miraculously returned to normal. The previous impure energy had been changed into pure negative energy, trickling into the Demonslayer Edge. The Demonslayer Edge had once again returned to its natural state, becoming one with Han Shuo's mind.

The energy which Han Shuo had previously absorbed through the giant vortex had already been stored within the demon infant in his body, but it hasn't been fully assimilated for the time being. But in general, he now felt incredibly relaxed after releasing all the chaotic energy. He was no longer apprehensive of being delirious and need not worry about an upheaval between the Demonslayer Edge and his body for the time being.

Now that Han Shuo was clear-headed, he quickly observed the situation through his mystical demons. The defeat of Ashburn and his men was now extremely obvious, where even Ashburn and eldest prince Charles had already realized it and were planning to retreat.

The other regions further from Ossen City had similarly been won under Firenze's leadership and the cooperation from the other two princes. It seems that Ashburn and Charles' sudden rebellion had failed completely.

When a mystical demon circled around the castle, Han Shuo discovered that the crowd was discussing spiritedly about him. Han Shuo didn't know whether to laugh or cry because from their discussions, Han Shuo discovered that his status had suddenly been raised to astonishing heights.

On top of the clock tower, Bollands was trembling from head to toe, as though he was having a seizure. His face was flushed and he seemed to have lost control over his body. A crazed killing intent could also be seen in his eyes.

Han Shuo dazed for a moment before quickly coming to his senses. He secretly cursed Bollands for his recklessness, as he flew toward Bollands at high-speed.

A blood-red light streaked across the sky with a sharp whistle. Han Shuo arrived in front of Bollands, extending his left hand, pressing it against Bollands' chest, and pushed suddenly. The trembling Bollands suddenly returned to normal. "Cough, cough....."

Bollands was like a drowning person who could suddenly breathe again. His face was flushed as he started to cough violently. The killing intent in his eyes had slowly faded.

Han Shuo pressed his left hand against Bollands' back again, drawing out a portion of the chaotic killing intent before Bollands could even react. He then slapped his hand against Bollands' back.

Bollands gave a muffled groan and fell to the ground. His eyes had completely returned to normal, but his face was pale as he knelt before Han Shuo and said, "Senior, thank you!"

Han Shuo snorted coldly and said in anger, "I told you before I left that your body can't withstand too much killing intent and you should stop the vortex within your body when you felt that you were nearing your limit. Yet, you didn't listen. If I didn't arrive in time, your body would have burst apart at any moment."

"Senior, I'm sorry. I made a mistake!" Bollands apologized in terror and explained hastily, "I was too greedy. I had never thought that I could absorb this kind of killing intent to increase my strength. Now that I had come across this opportunity with great difficulty, I really couldn't suppress the excitement. I kept telling myself that I'll take just absorb a little more before stopping but had always not wanted to stop. By the time I felt that my body was going to explode, I realized that I couldn't control my body anymore."

The temptation to greatly improve one's strength was something Bollands couldn't resist. This was also the first time he could absorb this kind of energy. He simply couldn't extinguish the flames of greed, resulting in such a consequence.

"Forget about it. It's also my fault for not reminding you carefully. I thought that at your age, you should have good self-control. Sigh, you must remember, our martial technique is very different from fighting aura and it requires our body to be extremely strong. Before your body could bear it, never rashly absorb energy your body can't take." Han Shuo sighed as he said.

"Senior, I've learned my lesson. From now on, I will not be so reckless again." Bollands truly acknowledged his own impulsiveness, kneeling before Han Shuo to apologize.

Chapter 429: New status

When Han Shuo was still lecturing Bolland, Sabakas and the others had hurried over after learning of his return.

“Bryan, are you alright?” Fanny looked tenderly at Han Shuo was the first to speak.

Han Shuo smiled, shaking his head as he replied, “Don’t worry, I’m fine.”

Emily and Phoebe’s gazes were also fixed on Han Shuo. They were overjoyed to see the man they love showing his extraordinariness and were even happier than if they were the ones in the spotlight. Such was the deep-rooted nature of a woman, to be proud of their man’s achievements.

“Brat, well done!” Even Firenze praised Han Shuo. However, he immediately added, “No matter how powerful you are, if you dare bully my daughter, I’ll will still never let you off.”

“Father, what are you saying, Bryan would never bully me! Ha, I’m still considered his teacher. Even though he’s powerful now, he’s still my student.” After these days, Fanny had clearly become less reserved, and appeared much more cheerful and lively.

When Firenze saw that Fanny revealed a smile as soon as she saw Han Shuo, he understood that Fanny’s feelings for Han Shuo were indeed extremely deep. As he observed her daughter’s sincere joy, Firenze gave a hollow laugh and did not continue speaking so as to avoid making her unhappy.

“Bryan, I didn’t expect your strength to actually be so frightening. It seems that you didn’t go all out in our previous spar. You little brat, did you feel I was unworthy of your full strength?” Karel’s expression changed as he said with some displeasure.

Bryan smiled bitterly and immediately explained, “Mister Karel, you have misunderstood me. A while ago, I was only able to injure Blount because I borrowed external energy. My actual strength is far weaker than Blount.

All of you had seen it as well. The blood cloud that enveloped the sky previously was the energy I relied on.

The energy within the blood cloud has been fully released by me. My strength has returned to its original level. I didn't hold back during our spar, I'm really not that strong. Please don't misunderstand."

"So that was the case. For you to actually be able to manipulate the chaotic energy within the blood cloud, your martial technique is truly mystical." Karel was amazed. He was just pretending to be unhappy. He actually had some idea of the truth and simply wanted Han Shuo to verify it personally.

Bollands had already stood up, staring blankly while being unable to make head or tail of the conversation as he had no idea of what had happened just now.

When Lawrence saw Bollands' puzzled expression, he took the initiative to approach Bollands, smiling as he described the extent of the strength Han Shuo had displayed. Lawrence was ineffably excited as he described the happenings. Bollands was incomparably shocked when he heard the story. He stared blankly at Han Shuo, feeling as though he was getting to know Han Shuo again. This wasn't the first time Bollands had felt this way.

Only experts at Bollands' level would understand how terrifying sacred knight Blount and earth sacred magus Dempus are. When he heard Lawrence say that two sacred rank experts had to escape from Han Shuo in succession, and Blount was even injured in the end, Bollands was extremely shocked.

However, when the shock faded, his heart was filled with excitement. To Bollands, the stronger Han Shuo was, the more beneficial it was to him. This news implied that Han Shuo's martial technique had matchless, mystical strength. Bollands, who was currently practicing martial arts imparted by Han Shuo, naturally felt even more expectation about the martial technique.

"Everyone, the battle in the northern city district has yet to end. I think we should get back to what we need to do.” Han Shuo smiled as he said to the group who was buzzing with inquiries about his condition.

As Han Shuo’s previous performance was truly excessive and the situation in the northern city district was already determined, they had immediately rushed over when Sabakas said that Han Shuo had returned to the castle, desperate to know what was going on. They were extremely curious, their gazes peculiar as they looked at Han Shuo. Even Sabakas and Karel were kinder when they spoke to him, indicating their approval of Han Shuo’s strength.

Firenze was the first to react when he heard Han Shuo’s statement. He snorted and said, “I was just accompanying my daughter to take a look. Well, I still have to command those idiots to fight, so I won’t accompany you any longer.”

Firenze simply walked away as soon as he finished speaking.

“Lawrence, the situation in the northern city district is under control. It just so happens that I need this time to train. However, there’s something that I want to tell you.” Han Shuo said while looking at Lawrence sternly.

Lawrence currently had an extremely favorable opinion of Han Shuo. Moreover, he understood in his heart that Han Shuo played a big part in helping him secure control over Ossen City, and gained the upper hand in the war. Therefore, when he heard that Han Shuo had something to say, Lawrence immediately smiled cooperatively and said, “Hey, do not hesitate to be direct with me. You know that there’s no need to be so courteous between us.”

Han Shuo felt more comfortable when he heard what Lawrence said. He glanced at the three women, Amyes and the others and said, “I would like to discuss this matter with just you and the two sacred rank experts!”

“Alright, let’s get back to our own matters. Everyone, let’s leave.” Amyes, one of the three heavyweights of Dark Mantle, smiled gracefully as he responded, taking the lead to leave.

With Amyes taking the lead and leave, the others in the area left while harboring suspicions. Even Emily, Phoebe and Fanny left one after another at Han Shuo's request.

In the blink of an eye, the important people within the castle who had come over out of curiosity took Amyes hint and left the area. Only Han Shuo, Lawrence, space sacred magus Sabakas, and sacred swordmaster Karel was left on the clocktower.

After the others had gone a distance away from the clocktower, Lawrence looked at Han Shuo in amazement and asked, "Bryan, what's the matter?"

Space sacred magus Sabakas waved his hand and deployed a space barrier which enveloped the immediate area of the clocktower, preventing their conversation from being leaked. Sabakas faintly understood what Han Shuo was about to say to Lawrence.

"Since the defeat of Ashburn and eldest prince Charles is inevitable unless something unexpected happens, you will definitely be the new king of the Lancelot Empire. His Majesty had previously discussed a few things with me in secret. You have always been curious as to what His Majesty had said to me. I feel that I can reveal it to you now." Han Shuo looked firmly at Lawrence and said seriously.

"Oh?" Lawrence's curiosity was suddenly roused, his eyes glistening as he looked at Han Shuo and asked, "Bryan, what did Father say to you? Why was it that after you left the palace, His Majesty began to fully support me?"

Han Shuo glanced at space sacred magus Sabakas, and said with a smile, "Mister Sabakas, I believe you know of this?"

Sabakas smile and nodded, replying calmly, "That's right. I'm indeed aware of that matter."

When Lawrence's doubt-filled gaze turned towards Sabakas, he explained, "Old astrologer Madam Grace prophesied that the prince Bryan supports will become the next king of the Lancelot Empire, and shall bring a new wave of prosperity to the empire.

Hehe, as expected, with the good relationship you have with Bryan, you would be the fortunate one. Madam Grace has made prophecies for the Lancelot Empire for many years and she has not once let down His Majesty. Therefore, His Majesty believed that you will be his successor, and will bring prosperity to the empire. That was why he went all out in assisting you.”

When Lawrence heard Sabakas’s explanation, he looked at Han Shuo with a startled expression. It was only now that he realized that the reason he, an illegitimate child, had become the center of attention was due to Han Shuo’s assistance, instead of His Majesty suddenly thinking highly of him.

To Lawrence who only paid attention to the results, he was clearly somewhat astonished upon hearing Sabakas’ words. He stared blankly at Han Shuo for a long time before finally taking a deep breath and said wholeheartedly to Han Shuo, “So that’s what happened. Bryan, thank you!”

“Since we are friends, hehe, I will naturally assist you. Furthermore, only with you as the king would Lancelot Empire be more prosperous. I know your capabilities, and I truly believe that you would bring a new future to the Lancelot Empire.” Han Shuo said with a smile.

Lawrence gave a wry smile as he shook his head and said, “It seems that I still need to rely on you. If I were to hear those words from Sabakas before today, I would perhaps not take them seriously. However, after I witnessed your unstoppable demeanor just now, I can’t help but admire Madam Grace’s incredible vision.

Bryan, there truly is boundless potential within you. I still remember your strength when you were still a student in the necromancy major. At that time, you acted as my practice target for just a few gold coins, and I could even defeat you then. But now, how long has it been? In less than five years, you’re already standing on the pinnacle! Oh, and you are just over twenty years old. Your future is something that no one can predict!”

“I have to say that Madam Grace’s prophecy is expectedly accurate. Everything has currently developed according to her predictions. It looks like the Lancelot Empire would really enjoy hundred years of prosperity thanks to Bryan's existence, just as Madam Grace predicted." Sacred swordmaster Karel also sighed as he remarked.

"It's hard to predict what will happen in the future. Hehe, the future won't always be the same, at least that's how I feel." Han Shuo said before he swiftly concealed his smile and said, "However, when His Majesty agreed to fully support us, he made me agree to one condition. I believe I should inform you now."

"Bryan, you're too polite. No matter what happens, we will still be friends! Moreover, there would be more occasions that I would need to rely on you in the future. There's no need to speak in a roundabout way between us." Lawrence replied.

From Sabakas and Karel's accounts, Lawrence also understood how important Han Shuo was to the Lancelot Empire. As someone who could alter the entire Lancelot Empire, his throne would be extremely stable and the Lancelot Empire would grow even more prosperous.

With Grace even sacrificing her life to show the path to the future, he clearly understood how he should treat Han Shuo, the huge support he should tightly cling onto.

"Alright then, I will just say it then. His Majesty made me to promise that no matter what happens, the other three princes must live!" Han Shuo looked at Lawrence and added, "As a father, His Majesty didn't wish to have three sons die horrifically by my hand. I've promised him, but I still want to respect your opinion."

"Your Highness, this was also what His Majesty said to us." Sabakas explained, his gaze fixed on Lawrence.

Lawrence stared blankly and was silent for a while before he creased his brows and said, "Since this is Father's last wish, I know what I should do. But I will still banish or imprison Charles. As for the other two, as long as they don't oppose me, I'll let them be princes and not treat them shabbily."

If it wasn't for Han Shuo, Sabakas, and Karel's words, Lawrence would definitely have ruthlessly exterminated Charles. Afterall, Charles caused the greatest harm to him. Lawrence had actually thought of brutally killing Charles with his own hands, so as to make up for the humiliation he suffered previously.

However, now that Han Shuo and the two sacred rank experts had spoken, and it was also his father's dying wish, he must let Charles live on, regardless of whether he truly willing, he had to let Charles live. However, apart from letting him live, it wasn't clear if Lawrence would also humiliate Charles.

With Lawrence's guarantee, Han Shuo let out a sigh of relief. He then smiled and said, "Since you agreed, I can be at ease. Alright, Ossen City currently contains special energy I need for my training. I think I'll need at least three days to train. With the two sacred rank experts and Lord Firenze within Ossen City, I believe Ashburn and the others have already reached the end of the road and I can train at ease."

"Bryan, train well. Your strength will allow our Lancelot Empire to become stronger!" Lawrence immediately smiled and agreed.

He understood what it meant for an empire to have an expert who is unrestrained. The appearance of demigod Ayermike Cotton at that time had allowed the Lancelot Empire to be established and enjoy a golden age of a hundred years. If Han Shuo could achieve Ayermike Cotton's level, he too could bring Lancelot Empire to new heights.

"Alright, this clocktower will be my training group. You should get going with your own matters. Right, please tell Emily and the other ladies not to bother me as the next few days are very important to me!" Han Shuo smiled as he chased Lawrence and the others away.

After the three of them left, Han Shuo closed his eyes to sense the residual energy from the dead that enveloped the whole of Ossen City. With a pleased expression, he muttered to himself, "Whether I can break through to the next realm will depend on the next few days!"

Chapter 430: Assimilation

The political struggle over Ossen City was still ongoing. Wherever there was war, there would definitely be deaths. Adding the number of casualties over the previous two days, there was perhaps already at least forty thousand soldiers who had died within the Ossen City.

The soaring killing intent enveloped the sky over Ossen City, causing people to feel stifled, as though a huge rock was pressing down on their chest. Some experts even felt that the omnipresent magic essence seemed to be affected by this energy.

Han Shuo stood on the clock tower of the castle, looking up at the blue dome of heaven. A massive vortex took shape once again, swallowing the fiendish energy omnipresent in Ossen City bit by bit. He Demonslayer Edge soared into the sky once more, forming a blood cloud that floated in the sky.

Han Shuo was much more prudent this time. The Demonslayer Edge's adsorption of negative energy was slowed down, causing the rate at which the blood cloud condensing energy to also slow down. The energy transformation within the Demonslayer Edge was more relaxed. Han Shuo was able to manipulate and first combine the hostile energy before transferring it into the sword hilt of the Demonslayer Edge.

Unknown if it was due to previously absorbing the black resolute crystal, the rate at which Han Shuo purified the killing intent had greatly increased. The dense killing intent was first swallowed by the giant vortex overhead, where impurities were removed by the rapidly rotating vortex. The purified enriched energy then flowed into Han Shuo's body through the stem of the vortex where the demonic yuan energy in his body would further refine it, finally forming the origin energy suitable for Han Shuo's demon infant to absorb. Through the two-stage purification process, less than one-tenth of the rich killing intent was absorbed by Han Shuo. However, as the casualties within the Ossen City were enormous, one-tenth of that enormous amount of energy still brought about astonishing benefits to Han Shuo.

Having entered demonhood the previous time, Han Shuo was extremely cautious this time, not anxious for quick success and also not rapacious. He adopted the most cautious method of absorbing a little at a time, to guard against entering the dreadful state of demonhood again.

Time passed by quietly. After a whole day, the sky above the castle had completely turned blood red. When the scorching sun shone, the castle looked as though it was coated with a layer of blood and a strong scent of blood lingered in the air.

An enormous black vortex filled with lightning revolved wildly within the thick blood-red cloud. Vicious killing intent was constantly discharged, causing people to quake in fear.

This scene lasted for three days. Some ordinary people within Ossen City felt the pressure on their chest suddenly disappearing. Experts who could sense magical essence also discovered that the indescribable energy within Ossen City was all flowing frantically towards the northern city district, and then disappearing rapidly.

The experts protecting Lawrence within the castle, suddenly realized that the two spectacles in the sky had gradually reduced in volume. The omnipresent rich smell of blood had become heavier. The blood cloud was no longer as red as blood and was distinctly thinner. After another two days, the blood cloud above the castle seemed to have been blown away, while the vortex above the clock tower had also unknowingly disappeared and the bright clear sky had reappeared above the northern city district. Warm sunlight shone on every corner of the northern city district, causing people to feel warm and comfortable.

Breathing out gently, Han Shuo slowly woke up from his meditative state. He could feel that his body was abundant with surging energy that which covered his meridians, bones, and even his skin and flesh. This caused Han Shuo to feel like he was about to explode. Han Shuo knew that the energy in the sky had all been absorbed into his body, and he had to undergo training in seclusion soon so as to completely control and merge the energy with his original energy, so as to be able to make another breakthrough.

The Demonslayer Edge landed silently on his hand, without any signs of vitality. However, Han Shuo could feel the frantic circulation of energy within it. The Demonslayer Edge had absorbed even more energy than Han Shuo and the energy was also more volatile. If it was to fully absorb the energy, it also needed a long period of time.

Therefore, both Han Shuo or the Demonslayer Edge needed some time to process the energy they absorbed, and the sooner the better.

After walking down from the clocktower, Han Show headed toward the lounge on the second floor where Emily, Fanny, and Phoebe were. Along the way, the twelve mystical demons presented the entire situation of Ossen City to Han Shuo.

As a few days had passed, the battle had ended in the four city districts of Ossen City as well as within the palace. Lawrence and his group of supporters had already moved temporarily into the imperial palace. Ashburn and Lawrence's mansions were in complete disorder, with clear traces of battle. "Bryan!" Fanny immediately shouted in surprise as soon as she saw Han Shuo coming over.

Emily was meditating to enhance her mental energy while Phoebe was practicing her martial arts. When they heard Fanny cry out in surprise, they immediately stopped whatever they were doing and rushed to the room where Fanny was, their eyes immediately focusing on Han Shuo.

"You bastard, I can't believe you took no part in such a critical moment and went to train. You are such an unreasonable fellow." Phoebe pouted as she grumbled.

"What's the current situation of Ossen City?" Han Shuo asked with a faint smile.

"The situation is determined. Grand Duke Ashburn was killed by sacred swordmaster Karel, while prince Charles is imprisoned for the time being. As for the other two princes, they banished any thoughts of vying over the throne when they saw that Lawrence's influence greatly exceeded theirs. Lawrence is currently busy picking up the pieces and trying to win people's hearts. I reckon that it won't be long before he formally succeeds to the throne.” Emily explained to Han Shuo.

“Well, it seems that the civil strife within Lancelot Empire should be already considered over?” Han Shuo said with a smile.

Nodding her head, Emily continued, “There’s indeed nothing much to worried about. Now that the whole of Ossen City is under Lawrence’s control, and he has command over so much military strength; with eldest prince imprisoned, no one within the Lancelot Empire could threaten Lawrence’s throne.”

“Since that was the case, I feel reassured.” Han Shuo remarked with a smile. Shortly after, he smiled bitterly as he looked at the three ladies and said with some difficulty, “However, I reckon that I will need a long period of time to train. It seems that I will have to temporarily part with all of you again.”

“You bastard. You have just returned and are already thinking of leaving? You heartless fellow, don’t you know that we will be concerned about you?” When Phoebe heard that Han Shuo was going to leave again, her expression was filled with grief as she shouted to her unwillingness.

When Emily and Fanny heard that Han Shuo was going to train again and needed a long period of time, they also panicked, their eyes focused on Han Shuo, showing their reluctance to part with him.

“I’ve no other choice. I must immediately seclude myself to refine that energy. Otherwise, it might affect my current state and might even cause me to enter demonhood again.” Han Shuo smiled bitterly as he explained.

“How long would you need for your training this time?” Emily’s brows were creased as she inquired.

“I’m not certain. If it’s fast, it will be about a year. If it’s slow, it might take two to three years. Sigh, training my martial technique in seclusion is really a very time-consuming matter. I also can’t estimate how long I’ll take.” Han Shuo sighed as he replied.

When they heard that the fastest would be about a year, the ladies’ hearts were in disorder. The worry and grief in their gazes became even more prominent.

“Bryan, there’s something that I need to discuss with you alone.” Phoebe pouted her lips and said angrily to Han Shuo. However, after she finished speaking, Phoebe suddenly blushed. At first, Emily also had something to say. But when she heard Phoebe suddenly say the same words she wanted to say, she couldn’t help but look flabbergasted at Phoebe. When she saw Phoebe’s blushing face, she immediately thought of something. She secretly cursed in her heart as her face turned red as well.

Han Shuo stared blankly at first, but when he saw the blush on Phoebe’s face, he suddenly came to a revelation, chuckling as he said, “Alright. I’ll have a chat with you first. After that, I’ll look for Emily to have a chat.”

When she heard Han Shuo chuckling, Phoebe knew that he had realized something. She clenched her teeth resolutely as she glared at Han Shuo before heading directly to her room without saying another word.

“Just a few words with Phoebe!” Han Shuo said hurriedly as he walked swiftly toward Phoebe’s room, leaving behind a blushing Emily and a puzzled Fanny.

“Sister Emily, what do they have to talk about? Why do they need to talk in private?” The puzzled Fanny asked Emily.

“Hehe, they obviously need to talk about some intimate stuff. Hehe, I wonder how long Phoebe the little hussy would last.” Emily smiled licentiously as she replied amusedly while winking at Fanny.

Fanny was startled for a moment, but she suddenly heard Phoebe’s soft gasping noises. She immediately came to her senses, her face flushed red and the flush was rapidly spreading toward her neck.

“Pah!” Fanny cursed lightly.

“Heehee, I think sister Fanny should be aware of what they are talking about now? Hehe, sister Fanny, could it be that Bryan the little lecher had yet to eat you up? Why do you still seem so shy?” Fanny giggled as she teased Fanny, looking exceedingly cheerful.

“Sister Emily, you, you are really...” Fanny was extremely bashful, stamping her foot and walking to her room with her head down without completing her sentence.

The apartment was rather spacious. Apart from the wide living room, there were five to six other rooms. Boris had specially arranged for them to stay here so that it was easy for the three ladies to talk to each other.

When Emily saw Fanny blushing as she retreated to her room, her smile grew even wider. As Emily and Fanny were both magi and the three rooms were extremely close to each other, she would naturally be able to hear certain sounds. With Fanny's departure, only Emily was left in the living room.

As soft moans echoed in Emily's ears, Emily's heartbeat had unknowingly sped up all of a sudden. Her body had heated unexplainably and was hard to tolerate. Emily covertly surveyed her surroundings before blushing as she tiptoed toward the room Phoebe and Han Shuo were in. She then gently stuck her ear on the door to listen to the sounds within the room.

"Ohh..." Phoebe moaned sweetly, her voice trembling, as though she was weeping and sobbing.

Han Shuo had finally stripped Phoebe naked, his large hands wandering over her smooth skin. His every stroke caused Phoebe to moan uncontrollably. Under Han Shuo's caress, Phoebe's fair white skin seemed to gradually become somewhat rosy.

Under the mood of imminent separation, Phoebe's almond eyes were unfocused, her body expressing the joy and excitement in her heart as Han Shuo teased her body. Lost in his fondling, Phoebe gasped as she took off Han Shuo's clothes. Not knowing if she was too excited or her mind was somewhat fuzzy, she was rougher than usual when she took off his clothes, even forcibly ripping apart his shirt.

As Han Shuo had also been holding back for a while, his breathing was rough as he suddenly pressed down on Phoebe, without even thinking of deploying a sound-proofing barrier.

"AH!" Phoebe shrieked, her hands suddenly pushing against Han Shuo's chest, and her eyes became clear again.

Phoebe's scream was really a bit too loud. Even Fanny who was some distance away could hear it clearly. In her room, Fanny lowly scolded Phoebe for having no shame.

Emily who was outside eavesdropping was stunned. She had deliberately concentrated on her ear to eavesdrop and the scream caused her ear to feel somewhat painful. "You little hoof, why did you have to scream so loudly! You almost killed me!" Emily held her left ear as she secretly cursed Phoebe in her heart.

"What's wrong?" Han Shuo, who was about to mount her, looked at Phoebe with a stunned expression as he asked.

"You almost crushed me! Why are you suddenly so heavy. Luckily, I train in fighting aura and am a great swordmaster. If you were to press down on an ordinary woman, she would be immediately crushed to death!" Phoebe's face was extremely red, lowering her voice as she replied resentfully

Han Shuo stared blankly for a moment but came to his senses soon after. After he previously consumed the black resolute crystal, his weight had suddenly increased by ten folds. No wonder Phoebe would cry out in surprise.

Luckily, Phoebe was the first. If it was Emily or Fanny, an accident might have happened. Han Shuo inwardly rejoiced, hurriedly reminding himself to be careful next time. He then grinned wickedly as he pounced on Phoebe again. This time, he used a hand to prop himself up.

Han Shuo, who originally intended to start pounding Phoebe, suddenly had an idea and sat up swiftly. He then forcefully embraced Phoebe's perfect naked body and placed her on his thigh while she screamed.

This way, Han Shuo would be in a seated position while Phoebe's legs would be wrapped around his waist, her butt resting on Han Shuo's thighs.

"Scoundrel, you, you big pervert, I'm so embarrassed! Let go of me!" Phoebe felt Han Shuo's raised appendage on her butt, reproaching him in embarrassment.

“Hehe, we’ll just change our position then!” Han Shuo grinned contently, his big hands caressing Phoebe’s butt while ignoring Phoebe’s struggles.

Chapter 431: My name is Han Hao

As Emily listened to the gasping sounds coming from within the room, her body had unconsciously become hotter and weaker. She had also started to breathe irregularly.

With Han Shuo's stimulation, Phoebe reached the peak of pleasure extremely quickly, her body was weak and she felt as though she was floating. In a despondent state, she was in a shameful position for a long time, her moans gradually growing louder.

Just like Emily, Fanny who was a distance away in her own room could hear the faintest gasp. This caused her heart to be in sixes and sevens, scenes of her intimate moments with Han Shuo constantly appearing in her mind. When Fanny thought of what Phoebe and Han Shuo were currently doing, she felt pained and jealous.

This feeling interwoven with an indescribable feeling of anticipation caused her heart to be in utter chaos. She had no idea what was happening and was unable to calm down, her body and face becoming boiling hot.

The moaning continued for a while, with a loud moan coming to an end together with a grunting sound. Emily, whose legs were weak as she pressed her ear against the door, suddenly bumped into the door as her body relaxed. The door was unexpectedly not tightly locked and the staggering Emily ended up landing on her butt within the room.

Emily's face was very red, her erect twin peaks swayed as she gasped for breath. Her eyes were filled with expectation for amorous feelings. Emily was in a daze as she looked at Han Shuo's naked, imposing and devilish figure.

At that moment, Han Shuo had just laid down a limp and unconscious Phoebe. His lustful eyes landed on Emily who suddenly broke into the room. Han Shuo had detected her movement long ago and knew that Emily had been eavesdropping for a long time.

Han Shuo, who had yet to fully release his pent-up lust, suddenly growled and charged toward Emily like a bolt of lightning, lifting the limp Emily and pressing her against the wall, his hands impatiently ripped apart Emily's clothes. Emily who was already unable to hold back her desires gasped as she cooperated with Han Shuo, hastily taking off her ripped clothes. When Fanny heard Emily's moan, she began to curse all three of them, shocked by their behavior.

After a long while, Han Shuo draped a long robe over his shoulders and walked over to Fanny's room. The blushing Fanny had been secretly listening to the activities from afar. When she heard the heavy footsteps gradually approaching, her heart became extremely flustered, her heart beating so quickly she could even feel it clearly.

When Han Shuo finally reached her room, Fanny suddenly lost her head and stood up hastily. Her face was red as she looked at Han Shuo as she stammered, "What, what, what are you doing?"

"What do you think?" Han Shuo smiled gently as he gazed at Fanny as he walked toward her.

When Fanny saw Han Shuo approaching her, she retreated in fear. When she had no more space to retreat, she pushed Han Shuo away, pinching her nose and said, "You, you bastard. You didn't even clean yourself up before coming to find me. I will not let you have your way today. Who asked you to still have someone else's scent on your body. There's no way I can stand that."

Fanny, who had never experienced such a situation, naturally wouldn't be as open as Emily or Phoebe who had been nourished by Han Shuo for a long time. She clearly couldn't accept Han Shuo being intimate with herself after just making love with other women.

As Han Shuo looked at the somewhat frenetic Fanny, he knew that Fanny really couldn't accept it. After thinking of a while, Han Shuo had no choice but to drop his original intentions. Fanny helped him wash off all the sweat and nasty filth on his body in her bath. He then embraced Fanny tenderly, speaking words of love for a long time. He didn't forcefully violate Fanny in spite of her feelings.

After spending a night, Han Shuo left the castle of the northern city district alone without even bidding the ladies farewell and headed toward the transportation array in Ossen City.

As a long time had passed, the transportation arrays that were sealed by space sacred magus Sabakas had once again operated as per normal.

After the previous civil strife, Han Shuo's status in the Lancelot Empire was raised even further. If not for Han Shuo training and absorbing energy for the last few days, Lawrence would have already bestowed a higher title to Han Shuo.

However, even though Han Shuo had disappeared for a few days, many bigwigs in Ossen City had learned of Han Shuo's astonishing actions during the civil strife through various means. In particular, the news of him single-handedly forcing two sacred rank experts to retreat, and even seriously injured sacred knight Blount, had spread across the entire Lancelot Empire.

Han Shuo's name has unwittingly resonated throughout the Lancelot Empire and had even faintly surpassed that of sacred swordmaster Karel and space sacred magus Sabakas, becoming the number one expert of the Lancelot Empire.

Thus, when Han Shuo arrived at the transportation array, the gazes of the guards were filled with admiration and excited when they saw Han Shuo appear.

"Marquis Bryan! It's Lord Marquis Bryan!"

"Ah! It really is Lord Marquis! Ha, I met Lord Marquis!"

"Lord, are you here to use the transportation array?"

The soldiers that guarded the transportation array were all incredibly passionate as they respectfully asked Han Shuo. When some merchants who had come from afar, heard the guards' surprise, they suddenly became ineffably excited and also began to rush over, wanting to catch a glimpse of Han Shuo.

When he saw the crowd rushing toward him like the tide, Han Shuo hastily replied, "I'd like to use the transportation array to head to Seamist City. Please make the adjustments for me."

"No problem, this way please my lord. I will immediately assist you in operating the array." The head guard replied respectfully, bowing as he earnestly requested for Han Shuo to enter the transportation array.

Han Shuo suddenly realized that since the battle a few days ago, his status within the Lancelot Empire had reached new heights. Just from the gazes of these soldiers and merchants, Han Shuo could tell how much they revered him. He didn't dare to stay a moment longer, hurriedly standing on the transportation array. Under the head guard's activation, the transportation array began to gather the energy within the magic crystals. With a flash of light, Han Shuo had already appeared in Seamist City.

As soon as he entered Seamist City, Han Shuo immediately established a link with an aura. Han Shuo instantly realized that the elite metal zombie has been successfully refined.

Awesome, the five element zombies have finally been assembled! Han Shuo was pleasantly surprised, no longer dallying in Seamist City and instead went to a remote corner and immediately used the Art of the Demonic Ninth Heavens to fly, streaking across the vast sky like a bolt of lightning and flew rapidly toward Brettel City.

It has been a few months since he had visited Mount Silk. Han Shuo discovered that the scale of the armaments workshop was five to six times larger than the previous time he was here. The armaments workshop occupied more than half of Mount Silk, with thousands of weaponsmiths in a frenzy as they forged armors.

The area around Brettel City was rich in ores. Originally, no one was willing to stay here because Brettel City was constantly at war. That was why there weren't any armaments workshops or processing workshops being established. Even the armaments used by the city guard had to be acquired from other cities.

The current Brettel City has experienced a few large and small battles, becoming an iron bastion-like stronghold. Anyone who wanted to attacked Brettel City had to think twice about whether they had the ability. Once safety was ensured, as Brettel City was rich in resources and manpower, the establishments of armament workshops would follow naturally. After landing on Mount Silk, Han Shuo scanned the mountain through his mystical demons, viewing the scale of operations of the armament workshop on Mount Silk. He nodded inwardly, knowing that with this armament workshop, the soldiers in Brettel City no longer had to worry about armor.

Without informing Adleman, Han Shuo entered the mine alone, casually strolling straight into the depths of the mine. When he reached the area where he previously met the stone men, he saw that a few large wooden signs were erected, with the words “No one is allowed to penetrate deeper to mine” written in large font.

It seems like Adleman and the others had remembered Han Shuo’s instructions by heart. They had forbidden anyone to disturb the area surrounding the place of extreme metal and instead send people every once in a while to collect the ore placed by the stone men as Han Shuo instructed. This way, it didn’t harm the harmonious relationship and benefitted both sides.

When Han Shuo entered the place of extreme metal, the first thing that entered his eyes was the golden rays of light from the sparking golden pillar. The elite metal zombie constantly transmitted messages to Han Shuo while some of the spirits which were training within the place of extreme metal fluttered around Han Shuo, narrating the situation during the time he was away.

“Alright, I got it. No one will come here and touch this place. You can still train here in the future but you still got to do some things for me.” Han Shuo said to those spirits.

“We are very willing to serve you!” the spirits replied Han Shuo.

Without replying further, Han Shuo directly went to the area where the elite metal zombie was. Same as the previous occasions, Han Shuo removed the array that was converging the metal essence energy and released the elite metal zombie.

As dazzling golden light filled the area, the elite metal zombie who wore a golden armor appeared. The elite metal zombie who was set free suddenly arrived before the huge golden pillar, pressing both hands onto the golden pillar. Two sources of energy of common origin suddenly converged together.

As Han Shuo watched attentively, the golden pillar that extended to the sky began to shrink bit by bit until it became a short golden rod which the elite metal zombie caught and started to brandish.

Han Shuo was stunned. Only now was he certain that the metal attribute treasure that has been nurtured for countless millions of years was indeed the same as the weapon of a mystical character in his world. It was a golden cudgel that could change size at will and had the weight of a mountain.

The elite metal zombie held the golden cudgel in its hand. As the elite metal zombie was refined with pure metal essence energy, the energy in its body made it compatible to control the golden cudgel. Apart from the elite metal zombie, even the current Han Shuo would find it extremely strenuous to wield the golden cudgel and simply be unable to display the true might of the cudgel.

As the elite metal zombie wielded the metal attribute treasure effortlessly, it was filled with excitement. As it had just evolved into the elite metal zombie, it didn't have a very high intelligence. It could only express his joy of being reborn repetitively to Han Shuo.

"Alright, stop playing around. You can only grow faster if you go to that place!" Han Shuo chuckled as he remarked, chanting an incantation to summon the little skeleton from the netherworld.

When little skeleton appeared from the other dimension and saw the glistening elite metal zombie, his Purple Demon Eye sparkled. He sent Han Shuo a message, "Thank you, father! We now have another brother!"

"Hehe, bring him back with you." Han Shuo said with a smile.

“Father, why does Little Metal and Little Fire both have weapons but Little Earth, Little Wood, and Little Water doesn’t?” The little skeleton didn’t leave immediately as Han Shuo intended, and instead looked at the golden cudgel on the elite metal zombie’s hand and inquired.

Little Earth, Little Wood, Little Water, Little Metal, and Little Fire? Han Shuo stared blankly for a moment but regained his senses shortly after. “It seemed that the little skeleton had given them names. Not bad. Since they possess intelligence, they were no longer simply undead creatures and should have their own names.” Han Shuo thought in his heart.

“The places of extreme fire and extreme metal have existed for way longer than the other three places of extreme elements. After millions of years, they naturally nurtured fire and metal attribute treasures. The other three places of extreme elements have only existed for ten thousand years, hence they have yet to reach the conditions to nurture treasures.” Han Shuo explained to the little skeleton.

“In that case, couldn’t there be other places that could nurture such weapons? I can sense that the weapons Little Fire and Little Metal have seemed as though they were forged specifically for them and their strength is greatly increased by those weapons. I want to find such weapons for Little Water, Little Earth, and Little Wood!” The little skeleton transmitted.

Han Shuo trembled when he heard what the little skeleton said and he immediately came to his senses. That’s right, the Profound Continent is so huge. There might be other places of the five elements. Perhaps those places might be able to nurture earth, water, and wood attribute treasures! Han Shuo thought inwardly, becoming more optimistic after he was reminded by the little skeleton.

“Thanks for the reminder, I will keep that in mind!” Han Shuo smiled as he said to the little skeleton. He then began chanting an incantation, preparing to send the little skeleton and the elite metal zombie back to the netherworld.

Just as the little skeleton and earth elite zombie were about to disappear, the little skeleton transmitted a message, “Father, I chose a name for myself. My name is Han Hao!”

Chapter 432: Gaining another mystical skill

After the elite metal zomple and the little skeleton were sent back to the netherworld, Han Shuo immediately left Mount Silk and returned to Brettel City.

This time when he returned to Brettel City, Han Shuo did not say much nor did he find out more about Brettel City's situation. He only went to look for a few people in charge and talked with them for a while, explaining that he was about to train for a period of time.

While Han Shuo wasn't around, Jack and the others had managed Brettel City excellently. Brettel City grew more prosperous with each passing day and everything was developing smoothly. After the twelve mystical demons surveyed the situation, Han Shuo understood that he simply didn't need to not worry about the situation in Brettel City.

Now that Lawrence was on the verge of gaining authority over Lancelot Empire, Han Shuo believed that given his relationship with Lawrence, Lawrence definitely wouldn't treat Han Shuo's subordinates in Brettel City shabbily. Han Shuo knew his importance to Lawrence from Sabakas and Karel's words. This was precisely why he would feel at ease to train in seclusion.

Once he ensured everything was in place, Han Shuo entered the secret room within his mansion in Brettel City and used the teleportation array to go to the Cemetery of Death.

The Cemetery of Death was filled with dense deathly aura throughout the year and was as dark and dusky as before. Han Shuo headed directly to the location where he had buried the elite earth zombie and discovered that under the nourishment from the place of extreme earth, the concaved chest of the elite earth zombie no longer looked that unsightly. It seemed that the place of extreme earth, which had nurtured the elite earth zombie, was indeed extremely effective in healing its injuries.

As soon as he entered the Cemetery of Death, Han Shuo immediately connected with dark dragon Gilbert. From Gilbert's calm messages, it seemed that there currently shouldn't be any situation within the Valley of Sunshine that Gilbert couldn't handle. Hence, Han Shuo told Gilbert that he would be spending a long time to train.

Han Shuo was currently in the separate demon realm of the nine levels of demonic magic. Whether he could break into the carnal realm would depend on whether he could assimilate the enormous amount of energy within his body and if he could comprehend the frame of mind needed for the carnal realm.

As demonic practitioners paid more attention to forging the physical body, their lifespan was much longer than swordsmen and magi of this world. Even for Han Shuo who was in the separate demon realm, as long as he wasn't killed or suffered from cultivation deviation, he could easily live for a few hundred years.

Perhaps it was precisely because time was of abundance to demonic practitioners, that they would spend a lot of time during each seclusion. The duration of seclusion differed based on one's realm. Demonic practitioners of higher realms would require longer periods of time of training in seclusion.

Han Shuo had planned to stay in seclusion for an extended duration this time. After he had arranged all worldly matters properly, he then truly entered the so-called state of seclusion by demonic practitioners.

He sat cross-legged on the ground covered with white bones within the Cemetery of Death. Han Shuo settled his mind down, dispelling the miscellaneous thoughts from his brain. He could feel the frightening killing intent that filled every part of his body, rapidly revolving the demonic yuan energy within his body and directing the enormous amount of energy within his body toward the demon infant.

This was a process that used quite a lot of time and energy. Fortunately, Han Shuo had an astonishing endurance and would persevere once he set his mind on something. From the moment Han Shuo sat cross-legged on the ground, he no longer moved, simply focused on the thought of completely assimilating the enormous killing intent within his body, entering the deepest layer of meditation.

The Cemetery of Death was indeed a good location for training. With the existence of the barrier, there was simply no one who could discover its existence. As there was no other person within the Cemetery of Death, it was absolutely silent, which was extremely suitable for a demonic practitioner like Han Shuo.

When Han Shuo began to train without any stray thoughts, time already had no meaning to him. Han Shuo's consciousness gradually became empty, without any thoughts. It was to the extent that he even forgot his own existence, as though everything had stilled, including his own consciousness.

A demonic practitioner had two types of entering demonhood, classified as active and passive. The active form of entering demonhood was like what happened a few days ago, where the demonic practitioner would sink into a crazed massacre. During that period, the demonic practitioner's heart would only contain the primal desire to kill ruthlessly, possessing the madness to destroy everything. The demonic practitioner in that state would have absolutely no idea what he or she was doing, and also not be able to feel pain. One's strength would indeed be more frightening than usual.

However, this active form of demonhood was extremely dangerous for a demonic practitioner. With a single slip, the demonic practitioner would permanently fall into demonhood, never regaining his consciousness and becoming the purest killing machine.

Previously when Han Shuo entered that state, he had a brief moment of soberness prior to entering demonhood. Due to the hatred buried deep in his heart, he had identified sacred knight Blount as his target. Furthermore, the previous time Han Shuo entered demonhood was purely due to him being unable to control the energy within the Demonslayer Edge while attending to the killing intent within his body at the same time.

When the energy that caused Han Shuo to enter demonhood was released through Han Shuo's crazed attacks, the energy that didn't originate from Han Shuo's body disappeared permanently, allowing Han Shuo to gradually regain his consciousness.

If the previous time he entered demonhood wasn't caused by external energy, but was instead due to some kind of stimulation which caused his consciousness to enter demonhood and the demon infant to have the intention of slaughter, he wouldn't have been able to recover so easily.

In contrast to the harmful active demonhood, the passive type of demonhood was a state that demonic practitioners were most willing to enter. The self-forgetting state of demonhood would allow a demonic practitioner to not have any stray thoughts and was extremely beneficial to a demonic practitioner's training.

However, this type of demonhood was extremely hard to enter. Some demonic practitioner would never enter such a state in their entire life while other innately talented demonic practitioners would enter it many times at fortuitous moments. These people would usually become formidable characters of the demonic path. They were extremely skillful, had high perseverance and possessed great knowledge.

In Han Shuo's case, this wasn't the first time he entered demonhood. For an unknown reason, he had once again entered this mysterious state. It was as though the whole world including himself had been discarded from his mind, leaving his consciousness totally empty.

Han Shuo no longer had any concept of time. He just sat cross-legged in the Cemetery of Death in a selfless state, while a snake-like strand of black electricity circled across his body as a frightening aura emanated from his body.

Thick blood-red fog flowed out from his pores and curled around Han Shuo. The fog was then inhaled by Han Shuo through his nose into his body, forming a cycle.

After an unknown amount of time, Han Shuo was awakened by a wave of crisp pitter-patter noises. When he came to his senses, he suddenly felt that the demon infant in his body had become a vortex, continuously revolving at high speed, releasing strands of energy into his limbs, bones, and meridians.

The energy filled every corner of Han Shuo's body, further refining his already otherworldly strong body. Strands of energy surged within Han Shuo's body and a familiar tearing pain appeared once again, as though countless daggers had stabbed his body.

As one's demonic arts improved, one's body would be tempered repeatedly by the sudden rise in demonic yuan energy, so as to allow one's body to adapt to the circulation of the qualitatively changed demonic yuan energy, causing one's body to reach the same realm as one's cultivation.

Having experienced this a few times previously, Han Shuo was already used to the pain from strengthening his physical body. When the energy released by the demon infant seeped into Han Shuo's limbs and bones, he could even sense that his bones were the first to react. His bones that have been refined by black resolute crystal and was now tempered by the energy from the demon infant seemed to suddenly change peculiarly. This originally iron-like bones seemed to have incited something strange when the strands of energy from the demon infant had seeped into them. With a thought, Han Shuo suddenly flung out his left hand. In accordance with his thoughts, his left hand unexpectedly lengthened by ten centimeters.

Han Shuo was stunned. Shortly after, he punched and kicked toward the sky. Han Shuo discovered that he could actually lengthen part of the bones in his limbs with his thoughts. His iron-like bones had gained a mystical flexibility.

What was particularly surprising to Han Shuo was that he could actually control the lengthening and shortening of his bones!

In other words, whenever Han Shuo threw a punch, his arms could suddenly stretch if he wanted to. If he was in close combat, such a miraculous ability to stretch his arms and legs would definitely catch his opponent off guard to great effect, causing his opponent to be unable to defend effectively.

Moreover, Han Shuo could faintly feel that ten centimeters weren't the limit. It seems that with practice and a further increase in his strength, it could improve further. Han Shuo was ineffably appalled when he thought about what this meant. Such a mystical ability was simply something no human could possibly achieve.

There didn't seem to be such a mystical ability within Chu Cang Lan's memories. A demonic practitioner's physical body could be very powerful and unnatural. At its most powerful state, even severed arms could be regrown. However, there was no knowledge of an ability where the limbs could be so flexible they could lengthen and shorten.

Han Shuo carefully thought for a moment and understood that this was perhaps because the little skeleton's black resolute crystal and the demonic magic's tempering had caused a mutation. He thought inwardly, every demonic art was created by man and wasn't always the same and instead evolved with training.

Other than his bones becoming flexible, Han Shuo's inner organs, as well as his flesh, was further strengthened. His meridian channels, in particular, had expanded by a shocking amount after being tempered this time around. The circulation speed of his demonic yuan energy was much faster than it used to be.

After examining his body with his consciousness, Han Shuo discovered that although his physical body had been strengthened, he still seemed to be a step away from the next realm and had not reached the carnal realm. However, Han Shuo could feel that he was extremely close to the next realm. As long as he had a moment of enlightenment, Han Shuo would immediately enter the carnal realm.

However, the practice of demonic magic was as such, where each realm was extremely profound. Comprehension could not be forced. The strength of Han Shuo's body was sufficient, and his demonic yuan energy was also enough for him to break through to the next realm. As long as Han Shuo could comprehend the carnal realm, the demon infant will immediately mutate, and his consciousness will advance to the carnal realm.

Han Shuo gently exhaled, smiling bitterly as he sat down cross-legged again. He carefully went through Chu Cang Lan's remnant memories. Unfortunately, even though Chu Cang Lan's memories was complex, it didn't contain definitive information about the comprehending the carnal realm.

Han Shuo realized that he would still have to depend on his own comprehension. Everything was ready and it all depended on his understanding of the next realm of demonic magic.

"Father, I've already recovered completely!" When Han Shuo was pondering silently, he suddenly received a message from the elite earth zombie.

Han Shuo was startled for a moment but came to his senses soon afterward. He turned around and realized that the naive elite earth zombie had left the place of extreme earth and was looking at Han Shuo from a short distance away.

The originally dented area on the elite earth zombie's chest had returned to normal. It looks as if the elite earth zombie had indeed fully recovered.

"Very good, you've finally recovered. Next time, we will kill that bastard. I promise!" Han Shuo looked at the elite earth zombie and said solemnly.

"I know, Father has grown even stronger now." The elite earth zombie transmitted.

"Alright then, I'll send you back first. I'll spend some time to research on a method to freely enter and exit your world. I think that soon after you return, I will be able to meet you all in your world." Han Shuo smiled as he looked at the elite earth zombie and said.

"Ok, I miss my brothers as well. Father, please hurry and enter our world. There are many interesting things in our world too." The elite earth zombie transmitted.

"Yes, I know!" Han Shuo replied and then sent the elite earth zombie back to the netherworld.

After sending the elite earth zombie away, Han Shuo didn't continue pondering the issue of the carnal realm and instead started to examine how to utilize the skeleton staff to freely enter and exit the netherworld.

A serene luster gem and a black resolute crystal had separately been extremely beneficial to Han Shuo's mental strength and physical body. Such beneficial items that only existed in the netherworld had aroused his interest. It also caused Han Shuo to understand that the netherworld filled with undead creatures, there was similarly many unusual treasures.

Most importantly, the little skeleton and the others were in the netherworld. The little skeleton had even named itself Han Hao, indicating that the little skeleton's intelligence was becoming higher. Other than his skeletal figure, he was already the same as other highly intelligent lifeforms, possessing his own consciousness and could think clearly and make his own decisions.

Han Shuo was extremely concerned and also extremely curious about the little skeleton and the others. Only by gaining the ability to freely enter and exit the netherworld with his soul, could Han Shuo gain a greater understanding of them and even help the little skeleton and the others to advance faster.

Chapter 433: Undead Creature in the Dead Sea

Practicing necromancy was similarly quite exhausting. However, Han Shuo was able to grasp the spell pertaining to letting his soul freely travel to and from the netherworld rather quickly.

Perhaps it was because Han Shuo had already experienced entering the netherworld twice and also had detailed descriptions on how to use the skeletal staff to travel to and from the netherworld, Han Shuo took less than half a month to grasp the spell which allowed one's soul to cross into the netherworld.

During this half a month, the little skeleton, elite earth zombie, and the others could often sense Han Shuo's presence in the netherworld. However, as Han Shuo still couldn't master a precise location, he would often find himself extremely far from the little skeleton and the others.

Every time Han Shuo entered the netherworld, he could immediately sense the messages the little skeleton and the others were transmitting to him. As the auras of the little skeleton and the others grew increasingly stronger and clearer, Han Shuo could feel their pressing thoughts to meet him. However, Han Shuo, who was constantly studying the necromancy magic meticulously, wasn't in a hurry to reach the area where the little skeleton and the others were.

It was until a long time had passed that Han Shuo truly mastered the method of shuttling his soul to the netherworld. With necromancy spells and the assistance from the skeletal staff, Han Shuo could descend into the netherworld with a single thought and could rapidly return to the Profound Continent from the lifeless netherworld by sensing his physical body.

After mastering the necromancy spell, Han Shuo spent a few more days to research on how to accurately arrive at their location by utilizing his connection with the little skeleton and the others.

The bodies of the little skeleton and the others were marked not just by Han Shuo's blood essence, they were also marked by dark seals. Whenever Han Shuo entered the netherworld, he could clearly feel the existence of the little skeleton and the others. After numerous adjustments to the skeletal staff and spell based on this connection, Han Shuo was finally able to succeed in arriving beside the little skeleton a few days later.

"Father!" the little skeleton said gently when Han Shuo landed beside him.

The little skeleton, fire elite zombie, and water elite zombie were on top of the bald mountain. And behind the little skeleton stood an army of densely packed undead creatures. These creatures included the three evil knights, the bone demon, and the mummy lord Pharaoh. Even more hate warriors, zombie warriors, and skeletal warriors filled the bald mountain.

Under the dusky grey sky, hundreds and thousands of gargoyles flew around in every direction. It seemed like they too were part of the little skeleton's undead army.

Looking ahead, a vast, black sea could be seen below the bald mountain and it stretched all the way into the horizon. Within this lifeless and pitch-black black sea, there were numerous severed limbs and bones floating on the surface. It was just like another cemetery for the undead creatures and was full of dense deathly aura.

Several enormous auras hid within the vast black sea, as though they were secretly observing everything. Han Shuo could sense just how terrifying those few existences were. When he looked at the little skeleton and the others who were ready and waiting, Han Shuo suddenly realized what was going on.

It seems that the little skeleton had ill intentions when he led his undead army over to this location.

"Father, you can reach us accurately now?" When the little skeleton saw that Han Shuo only glanced around after landing beside the little skeleton, the little skeleton couldn't help but repeated his question again.

Many sounds of breaking and snapping were heard. Under the manipulation of Han Shuo's consciousness, several bones were forcibly removed from the bodies of around ten skeleton warriors. He then manipulated a dense deathly aura to rapidly strengthen these bones, making them tougher. In just a short while, Han Shuo had forged a white skeletal body.

"When I leave, I'll return all the bones I took from their bodies." Han Shuo said to the little skeleton.

"They should be honored to have their bones used by Father. These low-rank skeletal warriors will only obey commands and don't have much intelligence. Their bones are not that tough. If Father wants a good skeleton body, I can help you find some better bones," the little skeleton said to Han Shuo.

"There's no need for that. Once I figure out the mysteries behind the transportation matrix in the Cemetery of Death, my real body will be able to enter this world. By then, my physical body will be in the Netherworld and no other bones will be more suitable for me." Han Shuo explained to the little skeleton.

"That's right. Father's physical body is extremely strong. Even a bone dragon's bone, the strongest bone in this world, is not as durable as Father's bones." The little skeleton nodded in agreement.

Howl... While Han Shuo and the little skeleton were chatting, a terrifying howl suddenly sounded from within the boundless Black Sea before them, as though a terrifying undead creature was issuing a challenge to the little skeleton.

The little skeleton's Purple Demon Eye suddenly shot out a ray of dazzling purple light. The purple ray appeared solid, piercing through space and actually flew directly towards the direction of the howling. It carried an extremely frosty and ruthless aura.

Boom! Boom!

Suddenly, a series of explosions could be heard coming from the origin of the howling. The deathly stillness of the black sea water suddenly looked as though it was boiling, with a few dark pillars abruptly shooting up towards the sky.

A hideous, octopus-like creature with a colossal body and sharp bone spurs grown on its tentacles, floated to the surface, revealing more than half of its body. It looked up and said angrily, "Petty existence, you dare to challenge my might?! Do you think you can defeat me today?"

Following the octopus-like creature's emergence, countless grotesquely shaped creatures slowly appeared. These undead creatures looked very similar to other commonly seen undead creatures. It's just that perhaps because they had been under the black sea for too long, they don't look the same as ordinary undead creatures.

The creatures that appeared included skeletal warriors, zombie warriors, hate warriors, and even powerful high-rank creatures like evil knights. However, these creatures had fins on their body, appearing extremely strange. There were also undead creatures which looked totally different from those which Han Shuo was familiar with. They had obviously evolved from some species of fishes found on the Profound Continent, and also possessed an ugly figure.

"Tumoja, the vast area of the eastern dead sea will also be my territory. If you pledge allegiance to me, I shall let you live!" the little skeleton said loftily to the weird looking undead creature, Tumoja as he rode on his bone demon which had the ability to fly.

"Ha, you shameless skeleton. You have lost to me time and time again. With your strength, are you worthy of my service?" Tumoja sneered, not fearing the little skeleton.

"It seems that you are seeking death!" the little skeleton shouted and guiding the bone demon he was riding to fly toward that area.

The elite water zombie who had been standing still took the lead and dashed towards the Black Sea. Before it was even reached the sea, the elite water zombie began to display its remarkable ability. Under the manipulation of its power, the seawater suddenly split apart before him and miraculously formed a passageway directly to the seafloor.

The undead army brought along by the little skeleton were currently advancing with the elite fire zombie towards the exposed seafloor where the elite water zombie stood. Strands of bizarre energy formed naturally around the elite water zombie as the surging black seawater surged continuously, crushing many creatures within the seawater.

When the enormous army from the bald mountain reached his side, the water elite zombie took the lead and headed straight toward the depths of the black sea. Under the elite water zombie's control, the surging black waves split open voluntarily, forming a path which they could walk through.

"Tumoja, do you see that? My brother can manipulate the water of your Dead Sea. You are no longer able to rule this region. But as long as you pledge your allegiance to me, you will still be the hegemon of this dead sea. Otherwise, if you force me to act, I'll make you pay," the little skeleton rode on his bone demon, flying high above the elite water zombie as he showed disdain for Tumoja, urging it to surrender.

While the little skeleton flew towards the sea, Han Shuo had also got on the little skeleton's bone demon. As he looked at the towering little skeleton, who was advising the undead creature beneath to surrender, he suddenly realized that the little skeleton had indeed evolved to become more and more human-like.

In the past, the little skeleton wouldn't be so talkative, simply using pure strength to subdue the opponent. The act of using words to convince the enemy to surrender would only be done by high-rank creatures which possess intelligence.

However, Tumoja was clearly a formidable existence that was unwilling to be ruled. It paid no heed to the little skeleton's persuasion at all, obviously unconvinced that the little skeleton had the strength to defeat it.

When the little skeleton realized that Tumoja failed to appreciate his kindness, a violent light flashed from within his Purple Demon Eye. His three-meter-long bone spur suddenly moved. The dense deathly aura above the dead sea started to rush toward the bone spur in the little skeleton's hand. An aura of death began to spread from the little skeleton.

“Puny Tumoja, you shall pay the price for your stupidity!” The little skeleton’s thought spread through the whole region as he rode his bone demon and charged toward that undead creature in the Dead Sea.

Chapter 434: Struck Down From Within

In terms of body mass, even with the flight capable Bone Devil available, the Little Skeleton was no match for the creature from Dead Sea, Tumoja. However, when Little Skeleton charged towards Tumoja, his demeanor was incredibly formidable, and that caused Han Shuo to be very much surprised.

When Little Skeleton rode the Bone Devil with Han Shuo and charged towards Tumoja, the army of the undead, led by water elite zombie and fire elite zombie, clashed with those oddly shaped creatures belonging to Tumoja in the Dead Sea. For the water elite zombie who have the ability to manipulate the power of the Dead Sea, fighting in such a location was piece of cake with enhanced lethality. The seawater would constantly surge and roll, therefore, not only was the seawater unable to get close to the army of the undead, it even caused some visible damages to Tumoja.

Followed closely behind the water elite zombie were the fire elite zombie, holding a Fire Lotus. One by one, clouds of fierce blazes blossomed from the Fire Lotus. Those blazing flames seemed out of this world in the netherworld which was gloomy and cold throughout the year. It was also frighteningly destructive against the undeads.

It was especially effective against those undeads which had constantly dwelled in the depths of the Dead Sea, which had grown accustomed to the ice-cold temperatures of the gloomy seawater. Whenever the fierce flames got near, their body would weaken and they would go soft at the knees. And by the time the roasting flame of the Fire Lotus entered they bodies, these undeads were all like ice cubes in a hot pan, rapidly melting and evaporating away.

The reason Little Skeleton brought water elite zombie and fire elite zombie over to the battle this time around, was because the two posed the greatest threat towards the undeads in the Dead Sea. The water elite zombie, being able to manipulate the element of water, and the fire elite zombie, containing astonishing amount of heat, both held superior advantages over these Dead Sea creatures.

With just a little effort of the water elite zombie and fire elite zombie working together, the undeads in the Dead Sea suffered heavy losses and retreated in defeat little by little. With the water elite zombie and fire elite zombie as generals fighting for Little Skeleton's forces, Little Skeleton did not need to worry about the war below him at all. He'd place all of his concentration on the boss of those sea creatures, Tumoja.

The three meter long bone spur on his hand which had contained an enormous amount of the aura of death, shot towards Tumoja in the blink of an eye, something akin to a silver lightning.

The undead creature seemed to be aware of how terrifying the bone spur on Little Skeleton's hand was. When it saw that the bone spur will soon arrive on its body, which was floating on sea more than halfway above the surface, it suddenly vanished into the depths of the Dead Sea without a trace.

The bone spur which Little Skeleton tossed let out a lighting flash at the area where Tumoja was, and shot deep down. Streams of water in the region suddenly shot up into the sky, and series of explosion followed, seemingly that there were explosions under the seawater.

"Auu....."

Tumoja's angry roar could be heard coming from the depths of the Dead Sea. Judging from the extremely resentful voice, Han Shuo could tell that Tumoja were wounded by the Little Skeleton's bone spur. Otherwise, it's scream wouldn't be filled with so much rage.

"This undead creature doesn't belong to our world. Its soul was destroyed in an unusual way, and therefore it appeared in our netherworld. It absorbed large amounts of the aura of death in our world, and then formed its body in this Dead Sea.

I know this fella's presence early on. I had challenged it three times previously, but because my strength was too weak, I had to let it off all three times. But now, I'm confident that I can finish him, all because his improvements are not as quick as mine," Little Skeleton explained slowly for Han Shuo as he turned a deaf ear to Tumoja's roar from the abyss.

“It didn’t came about naturally from this world?” Han Shuo stared blankly but quickly asked afterwards.

“Yep, just like you, Father. Some existence with powerful soul from other planes of existence could come to this world due to some very extraordinary reasons. However, it’s very rare to find any person who could travel freely between two worlds like Father. This fella’s soul couldn’t return to its world after coming here, and so it lived in the Dead Sea.

But its soul should have been very powerful previously. After coming to this world, it formed a new body for itself after fusing the energy found in here. The change not only happened to it alone. Those undead creatures which stayed surrounding the Dead Sea, tempted by its energy, all became some outlandish, weird undead creatures, and lived in the Dead Sea with it,” Little Skeleton explained for Han Shuo.

Powerful beings from other planes of existence, due to some extraordinary reason, its soul arrived at this world. It then adsorbed the energy in netherworld to forge its body, and turned into some undead-like existence. Han Shuo thought for a moment, and soon realized something.

From Little Skeleton’s explanation just then, Han Shuo learned that the netherworld contained not only undead creatures which came about naturally from the aura of death, but turned out to also have some outsiders which mutated here and took their niches. That seemed to be the case. Perhaps if Han Shuo couldn’t freely enter and exit the netherworld, given his powerful soul, there was a possibility for him to have turned into a formidable undead creature in this world .

“Whoosh....”

The undead creature in the Dead Sea named Tumoja, while Han Shuo was still pondering, suddenly emerged from the Dead Sea with its enormous body completely revealed.

Its body indeed looked like the octopus which Han Shuo knows. An oval body, with tentacles all around it. The only difference with an octopus is that this creature named Tumoja was way more hideous and fierce-looking. Sharp bone spurs, a characteristic signature of netherworld creatures, seemed to filled every surface available on its body.

On its oval-shaped body, covers a layer of black-coloured armor which glitters with black light. The armor seemed extremely hard and sturdy. Right in the middle of its oval-shaped body there were two pupils around the size of a few fists. Below the eyes were a huge mouth filled with dense, white teeths like that of a shark. The sharp teeths seemed to be able to chew apart any object no matter how hard it was.

“You wretched thing! Today I will destroy you completely!” Tumoja roared. Its enormous body filled the sky and it’s tentacles began to flutter about. Unexpectedly, it began to float up from the the surface of the Dead Sea bit by bit, charging straight towards Little Skeleton.

“You fool. Leaving the Dead Sea now only ensures your death!” Little Skeleton yelled lowly. But this sentence could only be heard by Han Shuo.

A white lighting suddenly flew out from the depths of the ocean, and landed on Little Skeleton’s hand in the blink of an eye. It was the three meter bone spur Little Skeleton regularly used.

Afterwards, without waiting for Tumoja’s superfluous words, Little Skeleton and Bone Devil charged towards Tumoja. The seven wing-like bone spurs on Little Skeleton’s back suddenly fluttered everywhere in the sky. When the seven bone spurs moved, Tumoja’s pupil rapidly flickered as well. He was seemingly aware of the frightening power of the seven bone spurs, and wanted to return to the depths of the Dead Sea.

“Now that you’ve come out, don’t think of going back!” Little Skeleton’s thought spread through the area.

The seven bone spurs whizzed towards Tumoja. It roared angrily, and disorderly swung about its thorn tentacles, attempting to fend off the seven bone spurs that suddenly flew out from Little Skeleton’s back.

But as for Little Skeleton who had long learned how to steer the seven bone spurs with Law of Activating Magic, was even more fluent and adept in controlling the seven bone spurs by now. Those large tentacles fluttering around constantly, simply couldn’t intercept any of the seven bone spurs shooting towards it.

Bright, black coloured sparks shone on top of the Tumoja's oval body, caused by the seven bone spurs piercing into Tumoja's armor-like body. Riding on the Bone Devil, Little Skeleton brought the Bone Devil underneath the enormous body of Tumoja, and together, Little Skeleton and Bone Devil attacked Tumoja's abdomen right above their heads.

Therefore, if it wanted to enter the Dead Sea again, Tumoja from the Dead Sea, must first eliminate the threats of Little Skeleton and Bone Devil beneath its abdomen, otherwise it's vulnerable belly would be exposed to the enemies.

"Despicable sinister thing, how could there be existence like you in the netherworld!" Tumoja roared loudly. It then extended its humongous tentacles towards Little Skeleton and Bone Devil, wanting to either strangle or stab Little Skeleton and Bone Devil to death.

A series of magical incantations were recited, and bone spears one by one materialized in thin air. They flew from Little Skeleton's side and towards the sky, striking those extended tentacles above him. At the same time, Han Shuo gathered his mental strength, a Soul Shock magical spell was released. The Tumoja roared wildly as if suffering from a heavy strike. After a boring groan, its enormous body began to violently rock.

"Thank you, Father!" Little Skeleton said and gave the Bone Devil a slap. His body shot high up into the sky, and actually reached above Tumoja's heavily armored oval body in the blink of an eye.

Tumoja had its spirit and soul upside down thanks to Han Shuo's Soul Shock spell. Little Skeleton took advantage of its current state by suddenly grabbing a bone spur and stab it into Tumoja's eye. When Tumoja opened its mouth for another thunderous roar, Little Skeleton made a move. During Tumoja's ghastly screams, Little Skeleton shot into its abdomen like electricity, disappeared.

The Bone Devil, who had been given a slap by Little Skeleton, flew downwards while carrying Han Shuo on its back. However Han Shuo could still clearly see Little Skeleton break inside into Tumoja's body, which filled his heart with astonishment. He had no idea why Little Skeleton would go into Tumoja's body.

When Han Shuo was still shocked, something even more peculiar suddenly happened!

The Tumoja which Little Skeleton bored into, suddenly trembled its body violently. Those bone spurs which Little Skeleton left sticking on the surface of Tumoja's oval body, all ruthlessly pierced inwards, and the tearing caused some jet-black, ink-like liquid to leak.

"Damn it! Get out! Get out there!" As Tumoja violently struggles, it incessantly roared like usual.

However, Han Shuo could clearly feel that Tumoja's vigor grew weaker and weaker. Even its enormous body slowly shrunk and withered.

On the contrary, for the Little Skeleton inside Tumoja's body, Han Shuo sensed that its presence grew stronger and stronger. It was as though the energy in Tumoja's body had all taken in by him.

This process continued for a very short duration. Just as Han Shuo got slightly distracted, Tumoja's shrinking body suddenly swell up like a ball being filled with air. Those bone spurs which was pierced on Tumoja's body, sparkled with Purple Demon Light before Han Shuo. Strands of bizarre energy were drawn out from Tumoja's body by the bone spurs.

"Splat..."

Tumoja's rapidly inflating body reached its limits before suddenly exploding. Its thorn-filled tentacles that once flutter about in the sky, four out of five of them fell apart when its body burst. The Little Skeleton inside Tumoja's body was dyed with a later of ink. His spotlessly white skeleton looked like black crystals.

"I surrender. I'm willing to pledge my allegiance to you!" The Tumoja which had its body blown into pieces, finally gave up on resisting. It transmitted its thought of surrender from its disintegrated oval body.

"Your body have shatter into pieces. With your condition now, you have no more use to me!" Little Skeleton replied to Tumoja's message of surrender. He then pierced the seven bone spurs on Tumoja's internal body, and through the connections with the seven bone spurs, like veins and arteries, he sucked away all of the enormous soul energy from Tumoja's body.

Tumoja's humongous body rapidly melted away at speeds invisible to the naked eyes. With just a moment of effort, the energy in body of Tumoja was sucked away by Little Skeleton, leaving nothing behind. Not a trace of its soul was left in the netherworld. It had completely vanished from this world.

After destroying Tumoja, the seven bone spurs returned to the back of Little Skeleton. When the seven bone spurs re-attached to Little Skeleton's back, unexpectedly, a membrane as thin as cicada's wing grew between the bone spurs. Nobody knows why, but perhaps it was when they were used as flow channels to transfer energy, the flow of energy caused mutations to the seven bone spurs. If Han Shuo didn't pay special attention to it, he might have missed the new feature added to Little Skeleton.

With the existence of the thin layer of membrane, and the seven bone spurs stuck out from his back, they now look even more like his wings. The Little Skeleton, who had just killed Tumoja, his pitch-black body began to fall towards the Dead Sea. The seven bone spurs on his back rocked for a moment, and immediately restored his balance. He steadily fell into the seawater of the Dead Sea.

After hanging out in the depths of the Dead Sea for a moment, Little Skeleton suddenly surfaced from the seawater. The black ink on his body was washed away, restoring the pure white appearance of his skeleton. Its texture was extremely dazzling. His demeanor grew even stronger and heavier. Even as Han Shuo who was a great distance away from Little Skeleton, he could sense that within the region, Little Skeleton's strength is above that of every other undead creatures there.

Han Shuo then knew, that in this entire eastern part of the Dead Sea, there was no longer any undead creature stronger than Little Skeleton!

Chapter 435: Tree of Souls

“Father, come with me!” After flying out from the Dead Sea, Little Skeleton transmitted a message to Han Shuo.

Without waiting for Han Shuo to react, the Bone Devil which Han Shuo was riding on moved when it received the message. It made a circle with Han Shuo on top of it before flying towards Little Skeleton’s location.

“Whoosh”

Little Skeleton landed on Bone Devil’s body. After Little Skeleton got onto Bone Devil, it flew straight down towards the sea. Within the blink of an eye, it had fallen into the Dead Sea, continuing its downward path.

The skeletal body which Han Shuo forged by solidifying the aura of death was extremely tough and durable, but Little Skeleton and Bone Devil’s skeletal bodies were even better than that of Han Shuo. They were not afraid of being corroded by the corrosive seawater. It was just that their rate of sinking to the abyss of the Dead Sea was slightly slower due to buoyancy.

Down in the depths of the Dead Sea, It was all dark and pitch-black. Using their eyesight was basically useless down there. Both Han Shuo and Little Skeleton used their senses to feel their way forward. Also, Han Shuo’s consciousness was exceptionally strong. Even though he came to the netherworld from another plane of existence, his consciousness could still clearly map the surrounding scenes.

At this depth under the ocean, there weren’t many undeads that existed. The deathly still Dead Sea also didn’t host many unique plants. Other than the pitch-black seawater, there was nothing that especially caught Han Shuo’s attention.

“Where are we going?” Han Shuo asked Little Skeleton.

“In the depths of the Dead Sea grows a very special plant. The reason I wanted to conquer the eastern Dead Sea, other than dealing with Tumoja, is to get my hands on that plant,” Little Skeleton replied.

When Little Skeleton explained so, Han Shuo's curiosity immediately peaked. He no longer thought of the netherworld as a desolate, cold, and barren world. Ever since he experienced the benefits of consuming the serene luster gem and the black resolute crystal, Han Shuo realized that the netherworld was also a miraculous place.

Under this deadly seawater of the Dead Sea, Han Shuo did not sense the presence of a single plant. Little Skeleton explained that the reason he constantly aimed Tumoja in his crosshair, was actually to obtain a unique plant in the Dead Sea. That itself tells Han Shuo that this plant in the Dead Sea must be extremely rare and precious, otherwise Little Skeleton would never be willing to spend such considerable cost.

"What plant is it? What's so special about it?" Han Shuo immediately questioned.

"Pop! Pop!"

All of a sudden, strange sounds arrived from a distance. Han Shuo's consciousness could clearly sense that many undead creatures were rushing towards them. Although these creatures' presence were much weaker in comparison to Tumoja, it is still higher than those low ranking Dead Sea creatures that fought in the battle just then.

Little Skeleton did not immediately reply Han Shuo's question. Obviously, he too had discovered the rapidly approaching undeads. The originally dim Purple Demon Eye of the Little Skeleton, suddenly exploded with brilliant purple light rays. A kind of sinister and bewitching bizarre energy suddenly emanated from the center of Little Skeleton.

"I have killed Tumoja. You all will acknowledge allegiance to me, or vanish forever like Tumoja. Your choice!" Little Skeleton's powerful message was so commanding, it fused with the current, and it traversed far and wide into the distance.

At that moment, Han Shuo found that the approaching Dead Sea creatures, all looked like creatures which mutated from certain fishes found in the Profound Continent. There were some telltale features of the undeads on these creatures' bodies like bony outgrowths, while having fish scales-like body structure. They looked very peculiar.

It was obvious that the powerful message which Little Skeleton transmitted caused an enormous impact on those strange looking Dead Sea creatures. Those undead creatures which were charging with great momentum, suddenly stopped heading towards Little Skeleton when the message was broadcasted, and they began communicating with each other.

“You all have no choice. Without Tumoja, you don’t pose any threat to me. Immediately surrender, and pledge your allegiance to me. Otherwise your only path will be disappearing forever!” Little Skeleton pressured them.

“We are willing to serve you!” Without letting Little Skeleton wait for too long, those Dead Sea creatures yielded to his might. One by one, they swore to serve and acknowledged allegiance to Little Skeleton. For as long as the soul brands from Little Skeleton exists, they will never betray him.

This was a common phenomenon in the netherworld. Once the boss was eliminated, the victor would usually be able to assimilate the forces of its opponent. It’s proper and to be expected as a matter of course for low level undead creatures serve the high level ones; there’s no such thing as loyalty or betrayal in the netherworld.

“Very good. Take me to the Tree of Souls you are guarding!” Little Skeleton transmitted.

“Master, please come with us!” those Dead Sea creatures respectfully turned around and lead Little Skeleton and Han Shuo to an even deeper area under the sea.

“Father, under this eastern part of the Dead Sea, there’s an unusual plant called Tree of Souls. It produces fruits called Pearl of Souls. Consuming it will make us possess wisdom. For Little Earth, Little Gold, and the others, it can make them evolve faster. However, wisdom will only develop on high level creatures, and only high level creatures could digest those experiences which increases one’s wisdom. For creatures like zombie warrior and hate warrior, the Pearl of Souls would have had no effect on them even if they consumed it," Little Skeleton explained to Han Shuo.

"Plant that could raise one's wisdom. What was going on?" Han Shuo asked immediately as shock rose in his heart.

It seems that Little Skeleton wasn't able to answer this question very clearly. After Han Shuo asked the question, Little Skeleton's Purple Demon Eye flickers for a while before he replied, "I'm not sure either, as I've never seen a Pearl of Souls. I've only learned about them from hearsays. As for the specific details, we'll find out after we go there and take a look."

Han Shuo was extremely curious, but after hearing what was said, he didn't follow up with further questions. He continued to focus on getting a glimpse of the surroundings with his consciousness, while silently guessing how the Pearl of Souls could increase an undead's wisdom.

After a short while, the group of undead creatures leading Little Skeleton and Han Shuo arrived at a region with dense black, ink-like water. All sorts of chaotic energy of souls abruptly shot out everywhere and in all directions. The disorder firmly grasped on Han Shuo's consciousness.

Han Shuo was startled. It was the first time that his consciousness had met with such energy. The restrictive power it has on his consciousness made Han Shuo feel extremely unwell. However, as Han Shuo had trained proficiently in Demonic Magic for many years, he had learned some insights on the use of his consciousness. Suddenly, his consciousness severed all connections with the surrounding like a sharp knife.

Those energies which flooded into Han Shuo's mind were immediately purged or cut off. Not a single bit of soul energy could affect Han Shuo. When he turned his head to the side, he saw that Little Skeleton and Bone Devil too were staring blankly at their place. They seemed to be frozen by the energy of the souls.

By means of his connection with Little Skeleton, a ripple of thought suddenly charged toward Little Skeleton. After the thought from Han Shuo's consciousness entered into the dazing Little Skeleton, he immediately responded, and his Purple Demon Eye shone brightly. That blank state of mind was swept clean. Then, through his connection with the Bone Devil, Little Skeleton too injected his energy into the Bone Devil.

After being woken by Little Skeleton, the Bone Devil's enormous body shook slightly, and it immediately broadcasted its thought.

"Master, these newcomers didn't warn you about the situation here. It seems that they were harboring malicious intents!" while Bone Devil roared with rage, it flew towards a Dead Sea creature not far from it. Before the Dead Sea creature could react, Bone Devil had chewed it into powder.

"Master, please forgive us. We thought that if you could kill Tumoja, it must be very easy for you avoid the energy surrounding the Tree of Souls. We are very sorry that we did not remind you in advance." Those Dead Sea creatures were utterly horrified, and hurriedly apologized to Little Skeleton.

"Fine, pardon them. Humph, I believe you guys wanted to test out my strength huh! I will let it pass this time. If anything like this happen again, I will let none of you continue to exist in this netherworld," Little Skeleton said.

Following Little Skeleton's command, the Bone Devil stopped its vigorous pursue. The Dead Sea creature did not fight back but constantly begged for forgiveness. At that moment, the ink-like black sea water suddenly disappeared. The scene of a big tree made of some brown branches intertwined together appeared, its roots buried deep under a field of rocks, with ten something fist-sized oval-shaped gray fruits hanging on this unique big tree entered their mind.

One could vaguely see that the seawater surrounding the big tree is grey in color. Spirit energy which looked like segments of memories flooded all around the huge tree in an chaotic manner. It looked as if wisps of them floated into the center of the big tree. Perhaps it was one of the nutrients that the tree needed.

"Around the Tree of Souls were some floating energy of memories which the Dead Sea adsorbs. The Tree of Souls condenses those emotions and memories into itself, and then forms the Pearl of Souls. These Pearl of Souls can be directly consumed. It will make some dumb high-ranking undead creatures obtain great wisdom.” The Dead Sea creatures explained to Little Skeleton.

“Father, these are the Pearl of Souls. It is said that it could increase one’s wisdom. You should try it!” Little Skeleton explained to Han Shuo.

With great curiosity, Han Shuo walked towards the Tree of Souls, and plucked a Pearl of Souls and dropped it into his consciousness. He then used the energy of his consciousness to smash and remove the hard shell of the fruit.

All of a sudden, all sorts of messy, chaotic emotions, along with some memories and realizations, suddenly rushed deep into Han Shuo’s mind. The Pearl of Souls was filled with great amounts of experiences. Nobody knows if it came from netherworld creatures. Among these experiences, many were unexplainable by Han Shuo, with some portion of it containing novel ideas Han Shuo never heard before.

While Han Shuo’s mind was still in a big mess, suddenly, a flash of memories about exercising control over one’s desires and unrestrained indulgence jumped into his mind. Han Shuo, who was distressed about the hard to breakthrough Carnal realm, fell into a foolishly paralyzed state, as though he was receiving enlightenment.

Chapter 436: Suddenly Realizing It Had Been Three Years

Under the depths of the Dead Sea in the netherworld, Han Shuo suddenly gone silent, and his body turned still and didn't budge at all. It was as though he had sunk into the deepest sleep, with no signs of life.

Little Skeleton stared at the unmoving Han Shuo who was standing on Bone Devil's body. In that moment, he had no clue what he should do. However, he could sense the strong presence of Han Shuo's consciousness, which he understood that this meant Han Shuo was still alive.

"Master, what's going on?" Bone Devil asked Little Skeleton.

The Bone Devil which was forged by Little Skeleton using tough and durable skeletal remains, had followed alongside Little Skeleton for a very long time. It intrinsically feared of Little Skeleton's formidable strength. It understood that perhaps Little Skeleton had yet to become the most terrifying being in the netherworld, and yet, it also knew that Little Skeleton's strength would constantly increase, and he will grow stronger and stronger. He will surpass more and more powerful creatures.

However, Bone Devil's master, unexpectedly also has a mysterious father. Han Shuo, having originated from another plane of existence, made the Bone Devil felt extremely curious about it. It couldn't understand how could a mighty existence like Little Skeleton would have Han Shuo as its father.

"This is not something you should ask!" Little Skeleton replied. He circled a few rounds around Han Shuo who was on Bone Devil's body, while looking up and down at the motionless Han Shuo. He seemed to be studying what in the world Han Shuo was doing.

After a while, Little Skeleton gave Bone Devil a pat and instructed, "Alright. Just look after him for the time being. There's no need to worry about other things."

"I will, master!"

In the netherworld that has no concept of time, after some unknown amount of time, Han Shuo's consciousness moved, and his soul traversed through a spacetime wormhole, and immediately arrived at the Cemetery of Death in the Profound Continent. But he still sat there upright, motionless.

Although his body was motionless, the consciousness and demonic yuan in his body was churning wildly. The enormous energy stored within his body was being unceasingly condensed where his demon infant was located. While the demonic yuan was being continuously condensed, the demon infant became more and more distinct. It was as though a magical brush was slowly painting a beautiful picture. Even its pores and fine hairs were clearly visible.

After a lengthy period of time, the demonic yuan in Han Shuo's body was condensed by the demon infant. The speed at which it circulates in his body were similar to that of lightning. The minutest details of Han Shuo's baby infant grew even sharper and more pronounced.

As Han Shuo had received enlightenment, the consciousness and demon infant in his body started to transform noiselessly. Breaking to the next realm would mean a dramatic rise in strength for Han Shuo, which'd meant that he'd possess even more remarkable abilities, which implies that Han Shuo could realize even more of his wishes.....

After a really really long time, Han Shuo awakened from his deep meditative state. A pair of abstruse eyes sparkled with glistering lights. Whenever he focused his attention and gazed at something, his eyes would appear to be flowing with electric current. It would make people involuntarily feel a palpitating pressure.

Compared to the last time, Han Shuo's body did not undergo many changes. Only Han Shuo himself understood where those changes came from. Without needing to rely on his mystical demons to survey the surroundings, with just his consciousness, not a thing within a radius of a few li around him could escape from his observation. Han Shuo and Gilbert's connection grew clearer by tenfold. Han Shuo could also clearly feel that Little Skeleton was pleasantly surprised even though he was in another dimension. In an instant, Han Shuo discovered that his consciousness had a completely different sensation than it used to be. He joyously appreciated the extremely novel and odd sensation.

Han Shuo was happy to find that his body was not the same anymore. Now that he has entered the Carnal Realm, all kinds of desires rose from the innermost part of his heart, as though it was urging him to quickly achieve his desires, and let those cravings which were buried deep in his heart for many years to be liberated.

Again, Han Shuo spent some time to adapting to the new state of his body. And only after he succeeded in practicing a few secret demonic cultivation, he finally opened the boundary of the Cemetery of Death, so that the Black Dragon Gilbert could enter.

“Master! My great master, you have not summoned me for three years!” As soon as Black Dragon Gilbert entered the Cemetery of Death, he yelled loudly towards Han Shuo.

“What?! Three years?!!” Han Shuo was greatly shocked and yelled lightly.

“That’s right. In fact, it had been precisely three years and four months. Counting from the day you said you will begin practicing till today, was three whole years and four months. During that period, you did not once make contact with me. I couldn’t even feel your existence. Honorable master, what kind of martial skills were you practicing? How could it be that it felt as though you had vanished from this world, and even I couldn’t sense your presence?” Gilbert asked Han Shuo in astonishment.

Three years and four months! Han Shuo was flabbergasted by the long duration of time. He never thought that he had spent so damn long on this secluded training.

Han Shuo himself felt as though it’s only been a few months time, and never anticipated that time would unwittingly pass so quickly. Entering demonic stupor and the moment of enlightenment while entering Carnal Realm, it was during these two periods which Han Shuo couldn’t feel the tiniest bit of the passage of time.

However, what’s for sure was that, it was exactly those two periods which he had spent the most time on. Three years and four months time was like a snap of the fingers for Han Shuo. He didn't feel that there was anything unusual about it, but he knew what it had meant for a regular person.

"Gilbert, how are you guys getting by during the three years?" Han Shuo hastily asked the Black Dragon.

"Be at ease, we have been very well. At present, the Valley of Sunshine already fell into the control of our Soul Destroyer mercenary band. Laureton of the Cairo mercenary band had been killed by Trunks, and a portion of their members defected to our mercenary band, and a group of berserkers left the Valley of Sunshine for good.

The House of Menlo and Rainbow Sickle mercenary band too were crushed by us. Only the orcs tribe and certain small tribes survived outside the Valley of Sunshine. However, tribal chief Katar of the orcs tribe had also expressed his allegiance to Trunks. At this present time, Trunks is already the one who maintains the order in the valley.

Surrounding the Valley of Sunshine, Janet's bandit group held the greatest influence. Only with the existence of Janet's bandit group, the merchants in the Valley of Sunshine would rely on Trunks even more, and our business grew bigger and bigger too. Nowadays, Trunks and Janet are planning in secret, getting prepared to deal with that Grand Duke from Kasi Empire," Black Dragon Gilbert explained to Han Shuo.

After Black Dragon Gilbert stated his account, Han Shuo was pleasantly surprised at first. But shortly after he thought for a moment, he felt that the development rate of Trunks' Soul Destroyer mercenary band was somewhat inconceivable. He couldn't help but creased his brows and asked, "Originally, just Laureton's Cairo mercenary band alone was at least as rich and powerful as the Soul Destroyer mercenary band. In addition to this, there were House of Menlo and the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band. How could Trunks take control of the Valley of Sunshine so rapidly?"

"Oh, there's lots of reason for this. All I know was that Miss Phoebe invested a lot of gold coins into Soul Destroyer mercenary band. In addition, Brettel City had previously sent people to assist Trunks during crucial moments. Other than that, that Dark Grand Magus from Calamity Church always helped us in the dark without seeking our approval. Furthermore, Emily provided a lot of intelligence. And owing to your triumph over the sacred knight of the Church of Light, countless mercenaries who have non-ordinary abilities all joined us. Regardless of timing or geographical conditions, the Soul Destroyer mercenary band was dealt with a favorable hand. Trunks too, was a leader with brains and courage. He seized control of the Valley of Sunshine in just three years.”

After listening to his explanation, Han Shuo suddenly noticed that Trunks indeed held all the advantageous factors. On top of that, Trunks went through a near death experience, which caused him to become even more ruthless and unflustered. There was indeed a fair explanation for how he could wipe out every enemy factions and power from the Valley of Sunshine in three years time.

“Not bad. Trunks did well. Oh right, how’s the current situation in Lancelot Empire?” Han Shuo immediately asked about the current state of the Lancelot Empire after praising Trunks.

“Lawrence became the new king to the Lancelot Empire. He’s a fantastic king. Under his rule, armed rebellion in Lancelot Empire were quickly resolved. Before any foreign nations could invade the Lancelot Empire, Lawrence stabilized the internal affairs, and intensified the strength of the military.

Oh, right, Lawrence was very attentive of the Brettel City. As the Brettel City nowadays has its own magical transportation matrix, an unending stream of supplies from various cities moves into the city. Numerous residents too willingly live in the city. The war lunatic named Dorcas, was currently the hottest general in the empire. During these three years, Dorcas had been restless, and constantly conduct arson, murder, and looting against the seven grand duchies. He has sought countless riches for the Brettel City.

He’s the same as Firenze, a battle lunatic. There was never a day which he did not infringe on the seven grand duchies. However, this fella was extraordinary in controlling the attack strength. Even till now, the seven grand duchies have no plans to unite and attack Brettel City.....”

After listening to Gilbert’s presentation, Han Shuo understood the current situation of the Lancelot Empire to some extent. From Black Dragon Gilbert’s words, Han Shuo knew that all the people and forces who allied with him, were put into important positions thanks to Lawrence’s wield of political power. Lawrence deeply valued Han Shuo existence. He did not treat Han Shuo’s people unfairly because of his absence, but roped them in with great effort.

Chapter 437: Changes

Three years' time is neither long nor short, but it is enough for a city to transform a lot. The originally poor Brettel City had long turned into a prosperous city residing in the eastern part of the Lancelot Empire.

With Brettel City as their center, the five surrounding mines founded many weaponry and protection gear workshops. Various kinds of civilian and military weapons were forged from those five mines. Not only was the production more than enough to meet the demand for soldiers and civilians in Brettel, they were further exported to the seven grand duchies and every major city in the Lancelot Empire.

While walking along the streets of Brettel City with Gilbert, Han Shuo gazed at the unending flow of people and the dazzling lineup of shops which were packed throughout both sides of street. He found it difficult to imagine that this was the dilapidated city not too long ago.

This time when Han Shuo and Gilbert returned to Brettel City, they did not utilize the transportation matrix in the Cemetery of Death. Instead, they went there through the transportation matrix in Zajoski City. Han Shuo wanted to try out the transportation matrix in Brettel City and check if it were any good. As for the results – Han Shuo was very satisfied.

“Master, the magical transportation matrix just now, space sacred magus Sabakas personally came to Brettel City to deploy that. It can connect to any city within the Lancelot Empire. Rightfully, we could use the transportation matrix in Cemetery of Death to come to Brettel City. But why must you take the longer route?” Black Dragon Gilbert asked Han Shuo.

“Nothing much. It's just, I know how important a large-scale magical transportation matrix is to Brettel City, and so I wanted to personally check out this magical transportation matrix. Hehe, I know Brettel City's rapid growth was inseparable with the existence of this transportation matrix,” Han Shuo replied with a faint smile.

“Master, you are very right in that regard. This transportation matrix really made a huge difference. After His Majesty the King's vigorous assistance and backing from Miss Phoebe's merchant guild, all sorts of talents have been pouring into Brettel City through it. The soldiers within the city are all able-bodied and strong. Whenever any group from the seven grand duchies tried to invade us, they would be defeated by the forces in Brettel every single time. The security here has been guaranteed," Black Dragon Gilbert explained slowly to Han Shuo beside him.

After reaching at the Brettel City, Han Shuo released the twelve Mystical Demons, and had them moved around the whole Brettel City, taking in the whole scene of the current Brettel City at once. He had a completely new understanding of Brettel City three years later.

The four sides of the city wall were erected with magic crystal cannons, along with all kinds of large-scale destructive equipments which were clearly visible everywhere. The moat surrounding the city gates had been deepened, and could defend against a cavalry regiment's assault. Some sharp fences were set up on top of the city wall. It wouldn't be easy for anyone to intrude.

A few pointy magic towers stood tall on the city walls. Dense and thick magical elements constantly lingered around the spire of the tower. This kind of magic tower could be powered directly by a magical creature's core, and can also be operated by a magus' mental strength, taking in the magical element found everywhere in the continent and use it as an attack.

Compared to magic crystal cannons, these magic towers were a class better when it came to flexibility and destructive power. Now that two magic towers were set up for each and every one of the four city's gates, Han Shuo could nearly imagine the expression on the invaders' faces when they saw the magic towers.

On top of the four city gates were soldiers with shining armor and weapons. Han Shuo could tell that they were not ordinary just from the brightness of their weapons and armor. The fully equipped soldiers carried a steady look, obviously warriors with blood of iron that had been nurtured by war. The demeanor they gave told that there must have been many who had died by their hands.

After the mystical creatures made a few rounds, the scenes of a few city districts all fell onto Han Shuo's eyes. He walked shoulder to shoulder with Gilbert all the way to the city lord's mansion. While listening to Gilbert's descriptions, Han Shuo had a tranquil and calm smiling expression on his face as he was very satisfied with the current situation in Brettel.

And finally they arrived at the city's lord mansion. The grand and wonderful mansion was brimming with prestigious grandeur as compared to its previous state. The mansion's walls had been broadened and erected much higher than before. Han Shuo only took one look, and it was clear to him that the present day city lord's mansion had been rebuilt once more. It seems that countless gold coins must have had been consumed.

Although the city lord's mansion had increased in size, the guards keeping watch of the mansion's front door were still the same familiar faces. Two arrogant and energetic looking guards, with their heads high, vigilantly scanned all around with their eyes. By the time Han Shuo walked towards the entrance with a smile, one of the guards suddenly trembled, and he stared blankly at Han Shuo.

The guard stared blankly for a while, and out of nowhere, he kneeled towards Han Shuo with one knee and bowed in salute. With an extremely emotional tone, he shouted, "Lord Marquis, you have completed your training?"

"Lor.....Lord Marquis, oh my! Lord Marquis have returned to the city!" The other guard also recognized Han Shuo. When he heard his colleague's words, he couldn't help but turn his head to take a glance, and discovered Han Shuo had really appeared. He shrieked wildly with joy on the spot.

With a smile on his face, Han Shuo nodded and said, "Yes, Drucker. I'm back."

The guard who was named Drucker was originally from the first batch of soldiers in Brettel City. At that time, he was extremely self-abased and as thin as a bamboo. But now, his body was tall and sturdy, filled with an imposing, solemn quality from head to toe. He was a different person compared to what he used to be, regardless of how you viewed it.

“Lord Marquis, you actually still remember my name! Oh my! I’m too emotional now. My Lord, you truly are a brilliant and awesome Lord!” When Drucker heard that Han Shuo correctly pronounced his name, he got so emotional that he started to talk incoherently.

“Alright alright, I’m going in!” After Han Shuo saw that Drucker’s voice became louder and louder as he felt more emotional, Han Shuo waved his hand and walked into the mansion house.

“Lord Marquis is back!, Lord Marquis is home!” Another guard immediately gave a loud yell as soon as he saw Han Shuo step foot into the mansion.

After this guard’s announcement, the whole city lord’s mansion suddenly turned frantic. All kinds of clamoring sounds could be heard from within the mansion. Outside of the house, a few horses suddenly darted out, heading towards few separate directions in great hurry. Inside the mansion, old butler Kallas hurriedly came out to greet Han Shuo. He seemed rather emotional as well.

Last time during the civil unrest in Ossen City, Han Shuo notified Kallas the butler beforehand, and so he brought a group of servants to escape from the heat. By the time tranquility had been reinstated in Ossen City, Kallas did not continue to stay in Ossen City, but came to Brettel City without hesitation, and began to take care of everything for Han Shuo in the city lord’s mansion.

After a moment, Kallas the old butler arrived in the front of the door. As soon as he got there, he bowed in salute towards Han Shuo and greeted, “Welcome home, Lord Marquis.”

“Hehe. Alright, alright. Let’s talk inside,” Han Shuo replied with a smile.

While on the way inside, Kallas the old butler unceasingly arranged those servants to have them prepare everything needed for a banquet. In passing, he explained to Han Shuo, “My Lord, during the three years you were away for practice, Lord Jack became a Viscount, Lord Dorcas became a Count, and a few others were also bestowed with nobility. The few lords who originally temporarily stayed at the city lord's mansion, were all granted mansion houses by His Majesty as they were all nobles. However the few lords' mansions are not far from the city lord's mansion. I have instructed people to invite them here. I reckon they will all be here in abit."

Three years time can change a lot of things. Lawrence obviously knew how to curry favor from Han Shuo. Thus, Jack, Dorcas, and a few other who have close relations with Han Shuo, each got bestowed with nobility. With that, because of their nobility, they naturally need not continue staying in the city lord's mansion. Besides, these people have parents and families of their own too.

Han Shuo nodded and smiled as he replied, "His Majesty indeed treats us very well."

"Yes. Brettel City could develop so rapidly was all because of His Majesty's utmost support. But with that said, Lord Jack and Lord Dorcas' governance were also inseparable. The two Lords are both great characters. Only with the two in charge of military and administrations, Brettel City could happily enjoy triumphant progress all the way." Kallas did not forget to praise Jack and Dorcas.

Han Shuo had learned all these from Gilbert's mouth, and he had some knowledge of Jack and Dorcas' achievements. With the two wielding the authority in Brettel City, one in literary and another in military, Jack's handing of the government affairs and finances made Brettel City's economy and all sectors grew more and more prosperous. And Dorcas, wielding the military power, not only did he arranged Brettel City to be invulnerable to attacks, he even vigorously went on the offensive against the seven grand duchies, and looted much goods from them.

Of course, before he officially began training, Han Shuo told Dorcas certain things about seven grand duchies through Jack. With regards to Helen Tina of Helon Duchy and Burt Zili of Boulet Duchy, the latter which Calamity Church secretly controls, Dorcas knew what was going on.

It was also because Helen Tina and Burt Zili's assistance in the dark, that Dorcas could so skillfully and easily attack the seven grand duchies. Not forgetting that he could leave so easily after looting.

The existence of the two who harbor malicious intents, made the seven grand duchies unable to truly form an alliance, and they only could look on helplessly as Brettel City grew more and more powerful. The warhorses purchased from two countries made Brettel City possessed a real knight regiment. Outfitted with finely made weapons, armor, and protection gear, the knight regiment lead by Dorcas became the most terrifying troops amongst the seven grand duchies.

The duo, Jack and Dorcas, one in literary and another in military, tightly held together the power over Brettel City. In addition, Dick from the Dark Mantle, with the backing of huge fundings, lead the forces of the Dark Mantle to cover the whole of the seven grand duchies like a web of spiders. He provided accurate and vast intelligence for the duo. With the three working together, not only was Brettel City invulnerable to attacks while constantly expanding, it became a truly secure and formidable mega city.

"Through Brettel City, many goods from the seven grand duchies circulated to the Lancelot Empire, while a certain goods from the Lancelot Empire also made their way into the seven grand duchies. A lot of aristocrats in the seven grand duchies endorsed the culture of our Lancelot Empire.

Hehe, although we are a hostile enemy with the seven grand duchies, the merchants, however, place profit before everything else. Brettel City always treat merchants with open arms, therefore many merchants from the seven grand duchies simply don't care about their Grand Duke's constraints, and keep continuously working together with us to circulate commodities and supplies....." Kallas' explanations and understanding of the situation was different from Gilbert's emphasis on main points, and he further explained about the economics and politics in detail for Han Shuo.

"Haha, Bryan! This damned scoundrel finally returned!" a loud and clear shouting came from the outside. Jack chuckled while carrying a shy young lady as he walked inside with ample vigor.

Three years had passed, and little fatty Jack turned into big fatty Jack. His weight increased in parallel to his grandeur. Owing to his grasping the power over Brettel City and being thought highly of by His Majesty the King, that cowardice and timid Jack had long vanished. The Jack now has an imposing aura on his body, characteristics of people who occupy leading positions.

Han Shuo had been friends with Jack for many years. As soon as he heard the familiar laughing of Jack's voice, a comfortably warm feeling rose in his heart, and welcomingly walked towards Jack. While looking at his suit of well tailored nobility clothing, Han Shuo smilingly yelled at him, "Hehe, little fatty now turned into big fatty! Not bad at all. It seems that you certainly ate well for the last three years!"

"Get lost! You brat, how could you stand aside and do nothing for your own city, and handed over all the things to do to us, and got me so exhausted! Now that you are back, not only did you not console me, you even said that I got fatter. Where's your humanity?!" Jack cursed smilingly after he gave an angry glance at Han Shuo.

"Who's this?" Han Shuo asked with a smile after shooting a glance at the shy, young girl beside Jack.

"This is Jessica. I've mentioned about her to you before!" Jack proudly introduced her and winked at Han Shuo.

"Oh! I remember it now! Hehe, nice to meet you!" Han Shuo recalled that the reason Jack wanted to stay in Brettel City, was because of this girl named Jessica. Now that Han Shuo saw that Jack got the beauty he wanted, he truly felt happy for Jack.

When Jessica faced Han Shuo, she obviously was somewhat reserved. She shyly and respectfully saluted Han Shuo, and in a somewhat dreaded voice said, "Greetings to Lord Marquis!"

"My Lord, you have finally returned!" Dorcas walked towards him from the outside. There wasn't much changes compared to the younger Dorcas, it's just that even more mark of hardships could be seen on his face, and it was obvious that he was more steady and experienced.

Dick, Faulke, and a few leaders from the mountainous region arrived in succession, and everyone assembled together. With butler Kallas taking care of them, they went into the banquet hall and drank as much as they liked. The few characters who were in charge of everything in Brettel City, explained the situation for Han Shuo once again.

Chapter 438: Delia's Hintings

Everyone at the party happily chatted with each other, with Dorcas and Jack presenting the current situation of Brettel City in detail. Naturally, Dorcas and Jack would reveal certain issues which wasn't public knowledge to Han Shuo, hence they told him the whole truth.

Gilbert must have had frequented Brettel City often in these last three years, as he seemed very familiar with the people here. He was talking cheerfully and wittily with Dick and the others, while putting a straightforward smile on his face, which seemed very calm.

From the words of Dorcas and Jack, Han Shuo became even more aware of the difficulties met by Brettel City. He realize that beneath the unbounded grandeur exterior, crisis secretly awaited Brettel City as well.

The Lancelot Empire had achieved stable internal politics. With Lawrence weiding the power, and after some purging, sounds of the rebels could no longer be heard in the Lancelot Empire. Therefore, it wasn't domestic problems that the Lancelot Empire was confronted with, but it was threats from the few surrounding nations.

Brettel City, being the easternmost major city, also faced threats from foreign cities and empires similar to the Lancelot Empire. As Brettel City grew stronger and stronger in their ability to threaten the seven grand duchies, with exception of the two duchies of Helen Tina and Burt Zili, the other five duchies made more and more frequent contacts with each other. Their fighting against each other also quieten down.

Other than the seven grand duchies' menace, the Brut Merchant Alliance, geographically separated from Brettel by the seven grand duchies, was also eying Brettel City covetously. On one hand it was because Han Shuo had killed Celt, the commander of Brut Merchant Alliance's Redbud Knights. On the other hand, Brettel City's existence severely threatened Brut Merchant Alliance's interests.

Prior to Brettel City growing so prosperous, overwhelming majority of supplies which the seven grand duchies needed were bought from the Brut Merchant Alliance. Certain specialties of the seven grand duchies was exclusively traded to the Alliance. The huge profit margin which Brut Merchant Alliance obtained from the seven grand duchies made a lot of merchants become filthy rich.

However, thanks to Brettel City's rapid development, those merchants from the seven grand duchies, who put profit before everything else, began to make frequent contacts with Brettel City. On top of that, most of the goods from Brettel City were far cheaper than those from Brut Merchant Alliance. More and more merchants from the seven grand duchies renounced their collaboration with the Brut Merchant Alliance, and began establishing cooperative connections with merchants within Brettel City.

Hence, Brut Merchant Alliance's interests had surely suffered damage. Brut Merchant Alliance is a country jointly controlled by big merchant guilds, and it goes without saying that the merchants in that country treasure gold coins above all else. Thus, Brut Merchant Alliance viewed Brettel City as an enemy, and started to secretly back those five grand duchies, with the intention to assist them in eradicating the menace that is Brettel City.

Unlike the seven grand duchies, the Brut Merchant Alliance, administered by multiple big merchant guilds, is one of the wealthiest nations on the Profound Continent. Not only that they have a mightily strong army, they also hold plentiful war equipments. Their strength was not in the least inferior to that of the Lancelot Empire. With the backing from this country made of united merchant guilds, Brettel City would obviously be met with a lot of trouble.

"Brut Merchant Alliance, Brut Merchant Alliance, hehe. That filthy rich country. I have yet to have make any moves against them, but unexpectedly, they are getting ready to take care of me. Interesting, very interesting!" Han Shuo laughed coldly after listening to Dorcas and Jack's presentation.

"Bryan, we need to be careful with this Brut Merchant Alliance. They are very much like the Lancelot Empire – a very powerful nation. With merely just our forces in the newly established Brettel City, we are absolutely no match against them,” Jack advised Han Shuo when he saw the exuberant ambition on his face.

“Alright. You big fatty. Just take good care of your administrative tasks. The lord’s ambitions are beyond what you could imagine,” Dorcas gently groaned after shooting a glance at Jack.

“I’m very clear about Brut Merchant Alliance’s real strength. Hehe, but Brut Merchant Alliance too are facing powerful enemies all around them, and so they won’t put all their attention on our side. Now, all we gotta do is figure out how to take care of the seven grand duchies. For the time being, no need to worry about Brut Merchant Alliance,” Han Shuo said with a faint smile.

“Lord Marquis, you’ve grown stronger and stronger!” While Han Shuo was conversing with Jack and Dorcas, Delia praised Han Shuo with a lovable smile while approaching him with a glass of dark red fine wine in her hand. She had an exotic gloss on her beautiful face. This beauty from the mountainous region had become a military officer who is brave and good at fighting.

Delia, who had a long and slender figure, wore a light-purple long skirt tailored to be skin-tight with a girdle. The mermaid-tail-like long skirt made her slender and perfectly straight legs give off a sense of beauty. The moving curves made the chiefs from the mountains linger a little longer in the hall, with their saliva threatening to burst forth out from their mouth.

With a faint smile, Han Shuo held up high the glass in his hand towards Delia, and courteously replied, “You are overpraising me.”

“Haha, Delia oh Delia. There are so many talented and handsome mountainous men pursuing you, but you had been aloof to them all this time. Could it be that you have been waiting for this guy all along?” Jack teasingly said to Delia as he chuckled. It seemed that Jack had grown close to them during the past three years.

Delia pursed up her lips and gently laughed, and only after lingering one round on Han Shuo’s body with her eyes, that she replied Jack, “Lord Jack indeed has great insights, you have found me out. Hehe!”

“Eh? So that’s the case. Haha, but Delia, you’re going to get disappointed. This brat has lots of ladies around him, so perhaps you have no chance for that anymore. You must have heard of those three powerful ladies. Bryan wouldn’t dare to continue his womanizing ways anymore,” Jack said to Delia in all smiles.

“Well, not necessarily. For a man like His Lordship, I believe that as long as he has his mind set, perhaps no women could restraint him. Hee hee, my Lord, am I right?” Delia replied first Jack, and then asked Han Shuo and looked at him with her bright hot eyes.

Last time, during the way down from Mount Silk, Delia had revealed her true feelings to Han Shuo. Mountainous people are always outspoken and straightforward in temperament, and Delia was especially so. As soon as she settled on a target, she will strive to fight for it without a bit of secretiveness. Her work method was very straightforward.

When Han Shuo met with Delia again after three years’ time, he thought the Delia would had long found a sweetheart. But unexpectedly she was single even till now. Han Shuo faintly understood something through Delia’s spicy hot gaze. The sexy and wild Delia, who remained to be the number one beauty of the mountainous people, had some hard-to-describe temptative power on Han Shuo, who had now advanced to the Carnal realm.

“Ahem! I don’t just set my mind on just anyone,” Han Shuo said with a faint smile as he looked Delia, who had her eyes fixed on him.

Jack who was originally joking with Delia, at that moment, he couldn’t help but took a careful look at Delia. The Jack now had been tempering in political circles for three years, and so with one quick look with his vicious eyes, he could see the fire in Delia’s eyes. All of a sudden, Jack realized that the mocking joke he made just then was actually the truth.

While in his heart he was admiring Han Shuo’s luck, Jack couldn’t help it but feel worried for Han Shuo. He was well aware of a certain event that happened in Ossen City last time, and he also understood the backgrounds and capabilities of the three women. And besides, Jack knew that Han Shuo certainly isn't someone who is well-behaved. With Delia's own superior qualifications and her recklessly tempting Han Shuo, Jack need not to think to know what will happen.

As the most beautiful woman amongst the mountainous people, Delia is an influential figure in the hearts of mountainous people in Brettel City. If there comes a day that she had disputes with Han Shuo and/or the three ladies of Han Shuo, that will certainly cause a certain impact to those mountainous people. As to how much of an impact it would be, Jack started to inwardly calculate that in his heart.

"Oh then, my Lord, how do you feel about me? Hehe, if your Lordship does have his mind set on me, I could never resist your Lordship's charm," Delia said to Han Shuo with a gentle smile, but her tone already carried a not-so-subtle hint.

"Ahem..... Ahem....." Dorcas made two light coughs. He then frowned in displeasement and said to Delia, "We are right in the middle of a conversation. If there's nothing else please go stroll somewhere else!"

Even for Dorcas, someone rather sluggish in this aspect, could tell that there was some other flavor in her talk. After getting a cue from Jack's eyes, he immediately came to his senses, and berated Delia.

Dorcas, as Delia's superior, held a supremely frightening power in the army of Brettel City. Even the usually bold and fearless Delia was somewhat afraid of him. When he saw Dorcas berated her in a displeased expression, she thought that they really have something important to discuss, and so she apologized to the three and left. But right before leaving, she turned her head to take another look at Han Shuo. Her eyes were completely filled with seductive provocation and enticement.

"Bryan, you now have a beautiful and tempting trouble. I don't know if I should feel happy or worried for you!" Jack waited until Delia left the three to themselves before he mockingly said to Han Shuo.

"Mind your own business, you don't have to worry about me. I know what's going on!" Han Shuo smilingly toasted to Jack, finished the fine wine that was left in his glass, and he then said to the duo, "I'm going to leave Brettel City for a while to take care of a certain things. But it won't be too long."

"Go ahead, my Lord. Don't worry, we will manage the Brettel City well," Dorcas stated immediately in a respectful voice.

"You left for three years and there wasn't much trouble in Brettel City. The Brettel City now will still function even if you leave it. Just go ahead and do whatever you need to do," Jack said smilingly.

Han Shuo nodded and did not give them any lengthy parting speeches. He knew that with Jack and Dorcas there, Brettel City definitely will not suffer any sort of great calamity. Previously, sacred knight Blount who had heavily injured him and his earth elite zombie, managed to escape death. Now that Han Shuo is in Carnal realm, he had absolute certainty that he could kill Blount. Therefore, he decided to finish Blount as to take revenge for his earth elite zombie.

Chapter 439: Revenge

Two days later, in one of the seven grand duchies, Bisli Duchy, Grand Duke Nehem Beige was praying in the largest church of the Church of Light within his dukedom.

This church was also the largest church found in Bisli Duchy, and it possesses a few thousand white priests and knights from the Church of Light. Around the grand hall, numerous disciples of the Church of Light were carefully guarding, protecting the safety of Nehem Beige who was praying inside.

As the Grand Duke of the Bisli Duchy, Nehem Beige had a majestic statue. After weiding the power of Bisli Duchy, Nehem Beige, who had been a follower of the Church of Light from the beginning, vigorously advocated the Church of Light in his dukedom, and made the people and nobles in the country believe in the God of Light, and to offer the God of Light their sincere beliefs.

As a Sky Rider himself, Nehem Beige's strength was out of the ordinary. Church of Light also dispatched numerous experts to protect him, while spreading the footprints of the Church of Light to every city in the Bisli Duchy. This made the populace of the Bisli Duchy more accepting of the good fortune from the God Of Light.

Nehem Beige was also one of the Temple Knights of the Church of Light, and had a fanatical faith in the God of Light. Every few days, he will come to this church in Bisli Duchy to pray, to feel the presence of the God of Light in this holy place, and to gain those divine energy he could personally feel.

Facing a statue as he piously kowtowed, Nehem Beige could feel the divine energy contained in his body to slowly flow. That kind of holy energy made him feel very comfortable. His zealousness towards the God of Light made him feel as though he possessed boundless energy.

All of a sudden, a strange noise entered Nehem Beige's ears. As he was carefully experiencing the God of Light's sacred energy, Nehem Beige could keenly sense that a wicked energy was approaching. He immediately creased his brows and stood up from ground, and said to Red Bishop Katos some distance from him, "What's happening? It feels as though a wicked energy is approaching here."

Katos was sent by the Church of Light to Bisli Duchy to promote the mysterious teachings of the church. Katos was a very devout follower of the Church of Light, and a priest with extraordinary strength. But his expertise is in comprehending the teaching of the Church of Light. Like Nehem Beige, he too had a feverish dedication to the God of Light.

"That's right. Who the hell is the reckless heathen? So daring and headless to come here to throw away its' life!" Katos could also feel that a wicked presence was getting closer. However, Katos knew that the church has countless rigid defense capabilities, and therefore paid no attention to that puff of evil aura.

"Oh yes that's right. Even for someone from Calamity Church, wouldn't dare to plainly infringe on my Bisli Duchy. Any ordinary pagan who dares coming here will be met their own death!" Nehem Beige faintly smiled and agreed with Katos' statement. "Hehe, the church is very pleased with our accomplishments here in the Bisli Duchy. Next time when we return to the head church, we will be able to get even closer to the God of Light, and appreciate the boundless presence of the God of Light, and obtain even more divine power!" Katos said to Nehem Beige with a faint smile.

Although Nehem Beigh was the Grand Duke of Bisli Duchy, but privately at the Church of Light, his status is below that of Katos. Therefore, Katos doesn't show much respect towards Nehem Beige, and was very casual in his speech with him.

"Oh yes. Whenever I thought of holy energy filling my body, I will be very excited. It seems that we need to work even harder. Ai. What a pity that the big heathen named Bryan disappeared for a long time. Otherwise if we could kill him, our contribution will be enough for us to obtain even more divine power and holy water!" Nehem Beige replied to Katos.

Katos forced a smile, shook his head, and said, "I think you better stop letting your imagination run wild. Even Lord Blount couldn't match that fella, so how could we handle him? This contribution is not something that we could obtain."

"Well, you can't say that for sure. Lord Blount is indeed powerful, but he was by himself after all, without company. Although our strength is not as powerful as that of Lord Blount, we still have Bisli Duchy on our side. Sometimes, the strength of a sea of people is greater than that of one Sacred Knight. I believe that if we knew where that heretic was, we might really stand a chance," Nehem Beige said ambitiously.

"Bang Bang....." Violent sounds suddenly came from the outside, as though the rumbling sound of thunders.

"Aaa.....aoo....." Miserable bawlings suddenly came from outside the door. Accompanied by the endless miserable shrieks that were shaking the boundary surrounding the grand hall.

Negem Beige and Katos gave a glance at each other, they both put on an expression overwhelmed with shock at the same time. The two knew just how many experts were present outside the grand hall, and also understood how incredibly hard was the boundary in that hall. With each wailing sound they heard, they could feel the light barrier, personally deployed by light Sacred magus Bordeaux from the Church of Light, was shaking. Their hearts were crammed with intense fear.

"Who the hell is that! This light barrier was personally deployed by Lord Bordeaux himself, who could make the barrier tremble that hard?" Katos said to Grand Duke Nehem Beige as his body trembled along with the surroundings.

"I have no idea. Our people are being massacred. We need to rescue them. The enemy must be very terrifying," Nehem Beigh replied and took out some discoloured armour from his space right. In a grave expression, he began to put them on.

"Plang!"

A crisp fracturing sound suddenly came from the very peak of the tall great hall. It sounded as though a drinking glass were smashed onto a rock surface and shattered into pieces.

When Nehem Beige and Katos heard this crisp sound, an intense feeling of dread suddenly flooded their hearts. Nehem Beige, who was wearing the complete set of knight armour, suddenly yelled softly, “Good gracious! The defense barrier deployed by Lord Bordeaux was breached!”

“What to do? What should we do? The one who came has pretty much around the same strength as Lord Bordeaux. I’m afraid that the two of us cannot deal with this person!” Katos said to Nehem Beige in an incomparably frenetic voice. His face had turned pale in fright.

“For now we can only evacuate!” Nehem Beige was rather calm. When we finished his words, he stopped putting on knight’s armour, but hastily went towards a side door.

When Katos saw Nehem Beige was leaving, without the slightest bit of hesitation, he hurriedly followed behind Nehem Beige, wanting to rapidly leave the area through the side door. He had long forgotten about rescuing those disciples being mercilessly killed outside of the great hall.

A ‘Whoosh’ sound was heard, and a man’s shadow stopped at that side door just in time. He was looking at the two with a wide, gloomy, cold smile.

“You, who are you?” Nehem Beige stiffly paused his steps, looked at the imposing Han Shuo, and asked somewhat panically.

Nehem Beige had wielded the power of Bisli Duchy for many years, and had experienced countless large and small military campaigns. Given that basis, he shouldn’t have so humiliateingly lost his self-control. But this time when Han Shuo came over, those mournful, miserable shrieks never stopped sounding. Even the renowned barrier of the light Sacred Magus Bordeaux from Church of Light was broken. That really gave him a huge shock, and therefore he had forgotten himself.

“He’s Bryan. I’ve seen his picture before. He is that big heathen!” Behind Nehem Beige, Red Bishop Katos of the Church of Light, suddenly pointed his finger at Han Shuo and shrieked.

“That’s right. Hehe. I think that I heard someone said just now that he wanted to kill me to gain divine power. This is very interesting.” Han Shuo sneered and looked at Nehem Beige, and said, “Where is Blount? As long as you tell me where Blount is located, I will let you die comfortably!”

“Guards! Guards! Kill this heathen!” Nehem Beige suddenly shouted loudly. A shining long sword was suddenly pulled out by him. The shiny bright silver fighting aura violently shot out like he had well practiced it. Included among his fighting aura, it carried a divine energy. His demeanor seemed to be very much astonishing.

On the corner of his mouth, Han Shuo revealed a trace of cruel smile. He blankly looked at Nehem Beige as he charged forward right until he was right in front of him. Only then did Han Shuo not-so-urgently threw a punch.

The berserk energy burst forth, and a heavy pressure that was like a mountain enveloped the whole area. Even Katos who was far away felt heavy in his heart, with a feeling of wanting to vomit.

Rumbles....

This punch from Han Shuo made Nehem Beige’s fighting aura immediately scatter. The long sword was bent into an arch and fell onto the floor. The remaining might entered into Nehem Beige’s body. A series of crackle and rattle sounds emitted from his body. After the sound stopped, the bones all over in Nehem Beige’s body shattered, but his internal organs remained intact and undamaged.

Han Shuo grinned as he arrived before Nehem Beige, with one leg stepping on Nehem Beige’s chest, he unenthusiastically asked, “Speak, where is Sacred Knight Blount?”

“Pei! Heretic, I....”

“Krrrack!” Without waiting for Nehem Beige to complete his sentence, Han Shuo stomped him with one foot. His mighty leg directly penetrated Nehem Beige’s chest which had silver armor on it. By the time Han Shuo withdrew his right leg, Nehem Beige had stopped breathing.

Chapter 440: Bloodbathing the Church

Having witnessed the merciless murder of Sky Rider Nehem Beige by Han Shuo, the Red Bishop Katos of the Bisli Duchy couldn't help take a few steps back, as the fear in his heart urged him to do so.

After shooting Katos a glance, Han Shuo moved towards him with great speed. Han Shuo had arrived in front of Katos before he could realize what had transpired around him. Han Shuo stretched forward his mighty hand as fast as lightning and grabbed Katos by the neck, hanging him in midair.

"Kaff, Kaff! Damnit, what da hell do you want?" Katos blurted out with difficulty. He used both his hands to grip Han Shuo's mighty hand, in a feeble attempt to ease the choking.

"Where is Blount located?" Han Shuo asked grimly as he held Katos' neck with one hand.

"Ugh, ugh....I don't know.....Really....." Katos replied, while his body was being hung in midair. He was twisting around with all his might, but unfortunately for him, he couldn't break free from Han Shuo's tight grip.

"Hehe, do you really think that I can't do anything to you if you decide not to talk?" Han Shuo said with a grim smile. Shortly after he said that, Han Shuo used his empty left hand and pressed the top of Katos' skull. Katos screeched miserably. Han Shuo exercised his five fingers, and forcibly stuck them into Katos' skull.

With this, Han Shuo used a secret technique derived from demonic magic called the 'Soul Searching Hand'. Five strands of gray smoke flowed out of his left hand along fingers and into his meridian channels. It then passed through Han Shuo's consciousness to obtain the memories stored in Katos' mind.

Being on the receiving end of the demonic magic, Red Bishop Katos was wailing like a banshee while struggling wildly. It was as though he was suffering from the most dreadful pain on earth. That was the kind of yelling that never failed to make one's blood run cold after listening to it.

Once 'Soul Searching Hand' was deployed, it will indeed produce an unimaginable amount of pain on the target whose soul was being searched. While performing the search, Han Shuo's five fingers were in constant motion inside Katos' brain. Such bouts of pain was not something an ordinary person could endure.

When Han Shuo used his secret technique to obtain the memories in Katos' mind, a puff of divine energy in Katos' body was immediately set into motion, rapidly converging at his forehead, attempting to resist and destroy the wicked energy within his brain. It's a pity that divine energy such as this was too weak against Han Shuo. Before it could fully converge, Han Shuo broke it up swiftly.

Under the effects of 'Soul Searching Hand', Katos' eyes revealed his lifeforce fading slowly, bit by bit. Moments later, his eyeballs rolled back and only sclera could be seen, and the inhuman shrieking disappeared. After his soul had completely vanished, he was left with a zero percent chance of being reborn.

After extracting his hand that was inserted into Katos' head, Han Shuo pulled out a spotlessly white handkerchief to clean his fingers which was covered in brain juice, and cleaned out the mess that had made its way to his legs. Only then, did he calmly walk out of the grand hall.

Outside the hall revealed a multitude of bodies strewn all over the floor. The Temple Knights and priests present were simply no match for an expert like Han Shuo. They were destined to be slaughtered eventually. But following these events, even more members of the Church of Light were going there, coming from different directions. A legion from the Bisli Duchy, stationed not far away, was also rushing to the scene after receiving the news.

Han Shuo surveyed the scene from an elevated position, and realized that this trip to the Bisli Duchy could be considered as having achieved its objectives. One of the rulers from the seven grand duchies, Nehem Beige of Bisli Duchy, was killed. The largest church belonging to the Church of Light had been bathed with blood. The position of the Church of Light in the Bisli Duchy will be met with unprecedented challenges.

As for Nehem Beige, a Temple Knight from the Church of Light, Han Shuo had originally planned to control him by having a mystical demon possessing his body. However, Han Shuo later discovered that holy aura was present in Nehem Beige's body, which had a world of difference in terms of nature compared to the mystical demons.

Only if Han Shuo could get rid of all the divine energy in Nehem Beige's body, that the mystical demon could possess his mind. But if there was no divine aura within his body, the people from the Church of Light would very quickly suspect an abnormality in Nehem Beige. Therefore, Han Shuo had no other choice but to take action and kill him efficiently.

There were still other churches of the Church of Light in Bisli Duchy, but comparing those with this church, those churches are obviously not on par. Besides, Han Shuo didn't have the luxury of time to clear all the churches of the Church of Light in Bisli Duchy one by one. Therefore, Han Shuo didn't linger any longer in Bisli Duchy, and immediately deployed the Art of the Demonic Ninth Heavens to fly away.

From Katos' memory, Han Shuo had obtained a lot of useful information. Katos' position in the Church of Light wasn't a low one. Han Shuo learnt of valuable pieces of information from Katos' memories, like the Church of Light's position, distribution and secret forces who operated in the dark. The Church of Light was an enormous religious organization. But what set it apart was the armed forces of this religious organization, who were extremely terrifying. Other than the great number of Light Priests and Temple Knights regiments, the Church of Light has three organizations who work in the dark, namely, Heresies Tribunal, Holy Angels, and Grace Believers.

These three organizations, Heresies Tribunal, Holy Angels, and Grace Believers, were secret forces serving the Church of Light unbeknownst to anyone. There were numerous experts in the three organizations. Several secret operations from the Church of Light were usually carried out by these three organizations. Compared to the Temple Knights, whose strength was known to everyone, these three dark organizations are much more formidable.

Only after learning of the true strength of the Church of Light, did Han Shuo realize why the Church of Light wielded such a powerful influence throughout the whole Profound Continent. While feeling apprehensive, at the same time, Han Shuo's intent to slaughter grew significantly larger. After experiencing his strength grow dramatically, Han Shuo felt that the Church of Light no longer posed as a threat to him. The transgressions they made these years, and the harm they did to the earth elite zombie, made Han Shuo realize that the enmity between him and Church of Light was something impossible to alleviate.

However, Han Shuo did not obtain any precise information about Blount from Katos' memories. All he knew was that after two years of rehabilitation in the Church of Light's headquarters, located at Oden Empire, Blount had fully recovered from his injuries obtain from the last time. As to whether the fully recovered Blount was still in Oden Empire, Katos had no idea.

Although Han Shuo couldn't obtain definite information from Katos, he still harboured a strong resolve to kill Blount. After giving it some thought, Han Shuo suddenly remembered about the existence of the Calamity Church. With that in mind, he flew towards the Boulet Duchy.

Last time, when the seven grand duchies attempted to form an alliance to deal with Brettel City, Han Shuo snuck in and learned of the real identity of the Grand Duke, Burt Zili, of Boulet Duchy. This summoner's meeting with the Necromancy Grand Magus Wolf, made Han Shuo aware that he originated from the Calamity Church.

Since Burt Zili was a key participant from the Calamity Church, perhaps he might be knowledgeable about the location of certain Sacred Knights, like Blount. Calamity Church and the Church of Light are arch-enemies, and therefore must be very mindful about each other's operations and movements. Being a religious organization as enormous as the Church of Light, the Calamity Church was indeed a target Han Shuo could make use of.

Boulet Duchy, Grand Duke Burt Zili's mansion. Han Shuo came in the dark.

Under the curtain of the night, underneath the Grand Duke's mansion, Burt Zili was sitting upright in an altar which had thick green and black smokes curling up around it. Surrounding the sinister and frightening Burt Zili were countless organs from magical beasts. The whole wicked altar was full of all kinds of organs from high-level magical creatures, which made the wicked altar looked like a strange magical beast pieced together with various kinds of flesh and organs.

At the middle of the altar, a rhombus shape was sketched using blood, which overflowed with strands of sinister and cold aura whenever Burt Zili's hands pressed among the air above it. Series of horrifying, inhuman-like howlings went through the middle of the rhombus drawing, giving people an intense palpitating like emotion.

"Oh....darling, come out, come out quickly!" Burt Zili softly yelled with a tender smile on his face. His two eyes were fixated on the middle of the rhombus drawing in the altar.

The rhombus drawing was the connection from this world to another world, the abyss of an infernal. As the horrible screams grew more and more intense, the smile on Burt Zili's face grew more and more charming. His two hands manipulating the empty space above the rhombus, repeatedly pulling the air upwards, as though he was pulling an invisible thread which raised a certain magical creature from it.

A lush green odd-looking hand which only had three sharp nails on it, with disgusting liquid stuck on its surface, slowly emerged from the rhombus. A gloomy and cold, nauseating aura was slowly emitted from the inside.

"Ha! Arise! Arise!!" Burt Zili got somewhat excited.

"Aooo!" a bewildering, mournful wailing sounded. Suddenly, a monstrous terrifying, lizard-like creature scuttled out from the center of the rhombus. It had thick green skin all over its body, covered with disgusting fluid. Its body was five meters long and had two tails. This stinky creature has a strong smell of fish on its body. It had two elephant like tusks and pointed teeth in its mouth.

As soon as it scuttled out from the rhombus, the magical creature shot towards a shadow outside the altar. Its four javelin-like, taper-sharp, devilish hands snatched at the shadow.

“Eh” a soft sound suddenly came from the shadow. Unexpectedly, a type of ruthless energy began to congeal midair. The rapidly approaching magical creature froze all of a sudden in mid-air while maintaining its fierce posture, as though it was being forcibly imprisoned by some kind of energy.

“Who’s there?” Burt Zili immediately cried out in surprise. He was overwhelmed with shock in his heart, and was somewhat gazing at the shadowy spot with fright, where the ‘eh’ sound came from.

Only Burt Zili knew of how hidden and tightly guarded this secret field which he practiced summoning magical creatures was. This person who silently entered this secret field obviously gave him an enormous shock. But what was even more shocking was that the high-level magical creature ‘Dejarka’ was halted and sat frozen in mid-air.

This high-level magical creature, Dejarka, possessed enough strength to kill a Great swordmaster, and its strength was at its peak formidability when it sprung into the air at high speeds. And yet, as it was before this person in the shadows, this powerful creature appeared to have no ability to resist, whatsoever.

As for how frighteningly powerful this person might be, Burt Zili simply dared not imagine!

Chapter 441: Fawning

“Who are you!?” Burt Zili opened his mouth again. As he uttered these words, his attention was fully focused at the space in front of him, his pair of vicious eyes stared at the shadowy spot, and his body stretched taut. Burt Zili was ready – not to fight, but to flee at the right moment!

An expert who could effortlessly freeze a high-level magical creature in mid-air, in addition to breaking into his secret room without him detecting it, is someone he knew he was no match for. The reason Burt Zili could survive so many years in battle and live on till now, was all because of that accurate and precise ability to judge.

From the shadowy area in which the sound came from, a tall figure revealed themselves. Within the lush green, hazy lighting, that person made their way below the imprisoned high-level magical creature. With a somewhat astonished expression, he took a few glances at the creature that he stopped in mid-air, and then smilingly asked Burt Zili, “Did you summon this?”

Burt Zili who was highly cautious at the moment, took another step backward, and knitted his brows as he took in Han Shuo’s whole body. An awl-like weapon made its way to his left hand. With a gloomy voice, he asked, “That’s right. Who are you? How did you get in here? What do you want?”

“Hehe, the Calamity Church is indeed a really strong organization with a multitude of talented people. This other-worldly magical creature indeed has extraordinary strength. Being able to summon it means that you must have quite the talent in summoning techniques!” Han Shuo continued with a smile. He didn’t seem to mind Burt Zili’s vigilance.

“Who in the world are you?” Burt Zili asked for the third time. He couldn’t fathom Han Shuo’s intentions for coming here, he constantly thought of how he could leave this secret chamber alive. His eyes were twinkling as he glanced at the few gateways that would allow a swift exit.

“Don’t be afraid. I harbour no bad intentions towards you. I’m called Bryan. You may have heard of me through Wolf. The reason I am looking for you is to find out certain information,” Han Shuo explained unhurriedly with a smile.

“Bryan? You are the lord of Brettel City? That Bryan?” Burt Zili softly shouted. He seemed rather shocked.

Han Shuo kept silent as he nodded his head. Conveniently, he took out his skeletal staff and waved it at Burt Zili who stood far away, thereby proving his identity.

Burt Zili confirming his identity, loosened up. His malicious and old face suddenly changed into a cordial smile, as he walked towards Han Shuo in large strides. “So we’re actually on the same side! You should have told me earlier! You really scared me!” said Burt Zili.

This Burt Zili carried a strange, nauseating smell on his body. Although he was enthusiastic in his walk approaching Han Shuo, it made Han Shuo feel some kind of discomfort. Han Shuo couldn’t help but take a few steps backward, and smilingly said, “You might want to send your magical creature back. It might die if it’s been trapped for too long.”

With a wave of his hand, a strand of demonic light flew out from Han Shuo’s palm. In the blink of an eye it fell onto the space where the high-ranking magical creature ‘Dejarka’ was suspended. After the strand of demonic light broke into its body, the weird magical creature resumed its fierce flight at high speeds.

“Return!” Burt Zili yelled hastily. Strings of long, tedious incantations were then spit out in rapid succession.

The magical creature, Dejarka, which resumed its charge towards Han Shuo baring fangs and brandishing claws, stopped its javelin-like sharp hands from moving, as though it was firmly grasped by some odd energy. It let out hissing sounds of unwillingness as it fell towards the center of the altar quickly and vanished within the rhombus diagram.

After withdrawing his high level magical creature, Dejarka, Burt Zili gave a few glances to the altar that stank to high heaven, forced a smile, then said, “This place is not suitable for us to chat. Come, we’ll talk upstairs.”

“Sure!” Han Shuo agreed.

After a short while, Han Shuo and Burt Zili of the Calamity Church arrived at a luxurious lounge located in the Duke’s manor. There weren’t any redundant people guarding its surroundings. Burt Zili personally took out some fruits from the seven grand duchies and placed it on the table before Han Shuo.

“Wolf and I have been friends for many years. In fact, everything that I know or have learnt about you has been through Wolf. Hehe, we are all on the same side, so there’s no need to feel so reserved. If there’s anything you need, please don’t hesitate to ask. As long as it’s within my means, I will never refuse!” Burt Zili said with a smile after serving some uncommon fruits to Han Shuo. His manner seemed very friendly.

Han Shuo’s sudden appearance, in addition to his demonstration of imprisoning magical creature ‘Dejarka’ just then, caused an enormous shock to Burt Zili. Originally, when he heard of the necromancy Grand Magus Wolf’s description of Han Shuo’s strength, he thought that Wolf must be exaggerating. He felt that the young-aged Han Shuo absolutely couldn’t reach the heights that Wolf mentioned.

However, now after meeting Han Shuo in person, Burt Zili realized that Wolf’s description indeed was somewhat inaccurate. He was too conservative in his account of Han Shuo’s strength. The strength of a person who could suspend high level magical creature ‘Dejarka’ in midair with no difficulty, is certainly way beyond that of a Great swordmaster or a Grand magus.

It was exactly because of this that Burt Zili’s manner towards Han Shuo was so unusually friendly. The smile on his face even seemed somewhat humble as to curry favor with Han Shuo. If other nobilities of the Boulet Duchy saw that, it would be difficult for them to believe that this Burt Zili is the same guy who was feared as a Grand Duke.

Cheerfully chewing a big mouthful of fruits, Han Shuo appeared to be very calm and unruffled. It was only after he ate a bunch of grape-like blue coloured fruits, that Han Shuo gave a soft cough, looked at Burt Zili who was sitting upright and still, and said smilingly, “The reason I specifically came to see you is to find out where Sacred Knight Blount is. You might had learned about the grievances I have with him. I don’t want to let him stay alive any longer.”

Burt Zili’s eyes suddenly shone. He confidently replied, “I happened to know the whereabouts of Sacred Knight Blount. He’s currently residing at the Brut Merchant Alliance, doing some detestable things for the Church of Light. The precise location should be Tariq City of the Brut Merchant Alliance. Oh right, they seem to be hunting after someone.”

Han Shuo knew that Calamity Church might be aware of informations about Sacred Knight Blount, because only an enemy would pay so much attention to the trails of a character like Blount. But still, Han Shuo didn’t anticipate that Burt Zili didn’t even need to get to Calamity Church to ask around, and could immediately inform him of the news about Blount. It seems that coming here was really the right decision.

“Thank you very much. I now know what I should do next.” Han Shuo stood up with a faint smile, and slightly bowed towards Burt Zili. It looked as if he planned to leave the place immediately.

“Hold on!” Burt Zili said hurriedly as soon as he saw Han Shuo about to leave without saying anything else. When Han Shuo looked back at him with a puzzled face, Burt Zili quickly continued, “Our dukedom will be your friend. No matter what or when, our duchy will always stand at the side of your Brettel City.”

“Thanks,” Han Shuo replied with one word, instead of stating any of his opinions about the matter. He proceeded on his way out by himself. When he reached the doorway, Han Shuo seemed to have remembered something. He stopped, turned around, and said to Burt Zili, “Oh, right. The Grand Duke of Bisli Duchy, Nehem Beige, and Red Bishop Katos have been gotten rid of by me. You can take advantage of the situation and make your moves against the Bisli Duchy.” “Rea.. really? You killed Nehem Beige?” Burt Zili shrieked right away as his face turned pale.

Han Shuo nodded his head and did not further explain himself. When Burt Zili was going to question about the details, he suddenly discovered that Han Shuo had disappeared without a trace under the cover of the night.

The pleasantly surprised Burt Zili, immediately began to gather all the major aristocrats within his dukedom in excitement. They had a secret military affairs meeting late in the night, and schemed on the best way of attacking the Bisli Duchy which had just lost its Grand Duke.

After Han Shuo left Burt Zili's manor, he directly flew towards the Brut Merchant Alliance. He deployed 'Art of the Demonic Ninth Heavens' to its fullest, and streaked across the sky like a shooting star.

Brut Merchant Alliance and Brettel City is separated by the seven grand duchies. At top speed, Han Shuo could fly a distance of up to ten thousand li a day. Using just less than half a day's worth of time, he arrived at Tariq City, which was located at the southwest of the Brut Merchant Alliance.

Dark Mantle of Lancelot Empire could be found in every country. Sure enough, it could also be found in Brut Merchant Alliance. After Han Shuo arrived at Tariq City situated on the southwest of Brut Merchant Alliance, he left a message in the city center using the communication protocol of the Dark Mantle members. After waiting for probably half a day, a member of Dark Mantle in Tariq City came over.

In the prosperous city center of Tariq City, Han Shuo followed this member of Dark Mantle all the way to the local secret headquarters. After entering a mansion house through the back door, the member of the Dark Mantle who didn't even give one glance backwards finally stopped at the doorway. He then said to Han Shuo with a steady face, "Please allow me to see your identity medallion!"

Han Shuo took out the medallion that represents his status, and revealed it before his fellow member. When the member of Dark Mantle saw the two sun symbols on Han Shuo's identity medallion, he immediately got shocked, and his manner instantly turned to be incomparably respectful. He asked, "Please forgive me for not recognizing Your Lordship. May I know who is Your Lordship?”

“I came from Brettel City!” Han Shuo replied smilingly.

“You, you are Lord Bryan?” that Dark Mantle member suddenly let out a light cry, and he then covered his own mouth so as not to startle someone with his shriek of surprise. His eyes were brimming with excitement and adoration when he looked at Han Shuo.

As he nodded his head, Han Shuo instructed, “Lead me inside. I want to meet the person in charge here!”

“Please come inside, please come inside. I will immediately go and inform that Your Lordship has arrived!” The member hastily brought Han Shuo all the way inside.

“Eh? It’s you. Why are you here?” All of a sudden, one of the three heavyweights of Dark Mantle, Cecilia, let out a yell in surprise. Standing at the front door of the house, she looked at Han Shuo with an expression of astonishment.

Chapter 442: Complaisant

After about three years worth of time gone by, the beautiful looking Cecilia had learnt to live with a little more tranquility and calmness in her life, while losing a bit of her arrogance and unruliness. What remained the same was her pretty appearance and grandeur temperament.

Nowadays, Han Shuo is more tolerant toward Cecilia as he used to be. This was partly due to her grandpa Sabakas, who personally deployed a transportation matrix for Brettel City, in addition to her change of attitude for not being so sarcastic all the time. Therefore, Han Shuo did not continue his mocking and ridicule towards Cecilia when met with her again.

“I have concluded my training and came to Tariq City for some personal matters. Long time no see! How’s your grandpa doing?” Han Shuo asked Cecilia, as he still held certain respect towards space sacred magus Sabakas.

Cecilia revealed a faint smile when she heard Han Shuo ask about her grandpa, and replied, “Thank you for your concern, my grandpa is doing well.” Looking around, Cecilia noticed that Han Shuo was travelling alone, and she continued, “Come, let’s go inside for discussions.”

From Cecilia’s attitude, Han Shuo could tell that she wasn’t prejudiced against him like she used to be in the past. This was a good development in Han Shuo’s eyes. Given his current strength and status, Han Shuo wouldn’t have felt the slightest bit of fear when facing the space sacred magus Sabakas, let alone Cecilia, who became one of the three heavyweights by relying on Sabakas.

However, since everyone here was members of the Dark Mantle, in the service of the Lancelot Empire, plus Sabakas could have been said as caring toward Han Shuo, it would be ideal if Han Shuo could get along well with Cecilia. No good would come to either of the parties if a dispute really erupted.

Thus, when noticing that Cecilia’s approach towards him had changed, he gladly trailed behind her and entered the inner section of the mansion.

When he stepped inside, it felt as though the sky and earth had spun, and space was turned upside down. By the time Han Shuo came to his senses, he realized that he had arrived at a serene, harmonious courtyard. Other than Cecilia, there were a few other members from the Dark Mantle in the courtyard. They seemed to be Cecilia's subordinates. Each and every one of them were sitting on round stone stools and were discussing something.

"Let me introduce you to everyone, this is Lord Bryan, fourth Dark Sun envoy of the Dark Mantle. You must have heard of him before," Cecilia said to the Dark Mantle members. As soon as Cecilia entered the place, the faint smile that was on her face just then immediately vanished, and was replaced with a solemn face and a tone of voice which only a superior held.

However, before members of the Dark Mantle came over to greet him, Han Shuo himself actually got a shock. Puzzlingly he asked Cecilia, "Since when did I become a Fourth Dark Sun?"

"Last time, during the civil strife in Ossen City, you assisted His Majesty the King in crushing the rebels, and furthermore, you succeeded in repelling two enemy sacred-grade experts. These contributions were cited as the reasons for your promotion. Oh, right, you disappeared three years for training, so perhaps you weren't informed about this. You may upgrade your identity plate when you return to the Dark Mantle headquarters," Cecilia explained sternly for Han Shuo. She doesn't seem to be joking.

Fourth Dark Sun! In such a huge and powerful organization like the Dark Mantle, every promotion can be said to have been an extremely difficult feat. Han Shuo would never have anticipated that he would climb so quickly to this position. This would also mean that throughout the whole Dark Mantle organization, only the three heavyweights could bind him.

Han Shuo understood in his heart that the reason he could become a Fourth Sun envoy so rapidly, was partly due to his achievements in the civil war, but more significantly, it was because of his good relations with Lawrence, and old astrologer Madam Grace's judgement of him.

"Oh! No wonder!" Han Shuo exclaimed smilingly.

"Greetings, my Lord!" After Cecilia introduction, all the Dark Mantle members at this place wore either a fawning or envious face. Each and every one of them greeted and bowed their heads towards Han Shuo.

"Alright, that's enough. Sit down guys," Cecilia said as she waved her hand. When she saw that the people went back to their seats promptly, she pointed at a place beside her and said to Han Shuo, "Lord Bryan, here's your seat."

Han Shuo sat there without hesitation. He knew that the Dark Mantle is a strict organization, and they pay close attention to where a person sits. More often than not, the seatings are arranged by their ranks. In the Tariq City branch, Cecilia is by right the highest ranked member there, and right beneath her is the rank, Fourth Dark Sun, which Han Shuo possessed. So naturally, his seat was right beside her's.

"Oh right, is there something that you need to inquire about, since you visited this branch?" Cecilia suddenly asked Han Shuo after he took his seat.

Nodding his head, Han Shuo replied, "I heard that sacred knight Blount of the Church of Light is currently residing in Tariq City, so I came here looking for him. If anyone knows where Blount is hiding, I hope that you can tell me."

When Han Shuo spoke, his eyes scanned around through everyone sitting there. Involuntarily, his glances gave off the feeling as if he was looking down on weak, tiny ants. All of a sudden, every Dark Mantle member present felt as if Han Shuo was the actual person in charge there.

As the person responsible for certain matters for the Empire, and one of the three heavyweights, Cecilia unexpectedly, seemed like a subordinate under Han Shuo's command. This feeling was extremely odd, but at the same time, exceedingly natural.

Even Cecilia herself felt that inexplicably strange feeling. All Han Shuo did was simply sit down and speak. He did not make any unusual movements when he talked, but inevitably became the center of everyone's attention. It had nothing to do with his status or his rank in the Dark Mantle.

"Sir, I know that sacred knight Blount had been spotted in Tariq City around half a month ago, but I have no idea as to whether he is still in Tariq City!" A Dark Mantle member stood up from his round stool and answered Han Shuo respectfully.

"Thank you. Do you know why he came to Tariq City?" Han Shuo asked with a faint smile.

"I think I know!" When this Dark Mantle member showed a dark face, Cecilia suddenly turned her head and said to Han Shuo. "It should be related to the reason I came here."

"Oh? What was it?" Han Shuo creased his brows and asked attentively.

"Outside of Tariq City, there's a canyon named Tarrag. Tarrag Canyon is similar to the Dark Forest of Lancelot Empire, an exotic place where magical beasts run rampant. All this while, Tarrag Canyon had been considered an off-limits area by the Brut Merchant Alliance. Other than some of the true experts, an average person would never dare venture into Tarrag Canyon.

Approximately three months ago, some experts who were cultivating in Tarrag Canyon, claimed that they had been attacked by some strong magical beasts, and were driven away from Tarrag Canyon. It is common knowledge that most super-ranked magical beasts live alone, and it's rare to find those that live in packs. This caught the attention of many different forces. I came here specifically, to investigate about this," Cecilia explained for Han Shuo.

With a doubtful face and creased brows, Han Shuo looked at Cecilia and asked, "What does this have to do with Blount? Could it be that Blount came here to investigate it as well?"

"No. Blount and his Church of Light members seem to be hunting for someone. This person should be a big heretic which the Church of Light determined, otherwise they wouldn't have sent Blount to personally set out on the campaign. The person also seems to be aware of the strange phenomenon in Tarrag Canyon. So with nowhere else to escape, this person pushed their luck and got into Tarrag Canyon. Probably hoping that the peculiarity of Tarrag Canyon will cause Blount and his party to abandon their pursuit.

However, the Church of Light always considered themselves as the spokespeople for God in this world, and naturally wouldn't care about the monstrosities in Tarrag Canyon. After they discovered that the big heretic entered Tarrag Canyon, Blount and his party made their way in there half a month ago. But since then, there had been no further news about it," Cecilia slowly explained as she looked at Han Shuo.

"So that's what it is!" Han Shuo realized what was going on, and immediately joyfully said to Cecilia, "Thank you for the information. Alright, I'm done here. You guys may continue your discussions. I'm going to take a trip to Tarrag Canyon."

"My Lord, please be careful. Tarrag Canyon is an extremely unforgiving place. We have lived in Tariq City for many years, and are aware of the mysteries surrounding that place. Even the lightning sacred magus Reynold Dila of Brut Merchant Alliance was stranded in there for a long time. After Reynold Dila learned about the abnormal behaviour of the creatures, he even forbade some adventurers from entering Tarrag Canyon. He, if anyone, should know about the dangers hidden in there!" The Dark Mantle member who reported information about sacred knight Blount to Han Shuo just then hastily warned Han Shuo.

"Thank you for your reminder. I will be careful!" Han Shuo thanked him with a smile, although he did not take it to heart.

Han Shuo, being in the Carnal Realm now, had the confidence to defeat any sacred grade experts. In demonic arts, breaking through to the next realm always meant many folds increase in strength. If he were to fight against sacred knight Blount and earth sacred magus Dempus again, Han Shuo had absolute certainty that he could kill them both.

At this moment, sacred grade experts were no longer formidable opponents against Han Shuo who had just entered the Carnal Realm. Even for a demi-god existence like the Ancient Lizard King, Han Shuo, who just underwent an unprecedented rise in confidence, would have the nerve to directly contend against him. Han Shuo believed that there weren't many things in existence found in the Profound Continent that could harm him, and therefore he did not have the slightest bit of fear for the Tarrag Canyon.

Part 2

"Bryan, are you going to Tarrag Canyon?" Cecilia suddenly asked.

Nodding his head, Han Shuo replied, "Yep, I'm going there to meet Blount. That guy injured my friend the last time we met. I will not allow him to live in this world any longer."

"Well then, is it too much to ask for you to enter Tarrag Canyon with us? We are preparing to uncover the secrets of Tarrag Canyon. We are all members of the Dark Mantle, serving the Lancelot Empire. Going in there with you gives us a better sense of assurance. Furthermore, we can help you keep a lookout for news regarding sacred knight Blount's location. What do you say?" Cecilia looked at Han Shuo with a pleading gaze as she sought for his approval.

His wild, impressive performance in Ossen City last time left a deep impression in Cecilia's heart. Although after the event, Han Shuo did clarify that the reason for his dramatic increase in strength was because he borrowed some other people's energy, but that kind of immense strength made Cecilia feel that it was just an excuse Han Shuo made to be modest.

Once he returned from his three years of training, he immediately said with incomparable confidence that he wanted to kill sacred knight Blount. Even without giving it too much thought, Cecilia could tell that Han Shuo's strength must have had advanced further. Otherwise, he wouldn't have made such claims.

To have an expert such as him accompanying them into Tarrag Canyon, will add a large amount of assurance to the safety of Cecilia and her party.

But now, given Han Shuo's current status and strength, even the King of the Lancelot Empire would have to meticulously curry favor and rope him in. Therefore, if Cecilia wanted to trouble Han Shuo, her tone would of course need to be endearing, instead of summarily and arrogantly giving orders like before.

After looking at Cecilia who was in a pleading expression, and the newly brightened eyes of the Dark Mantle members, Han Shuo hesitated for a moment, but finally nodded and said, "Alright!"

With the existence of his mystical demons, Han Shuo didn't need the Dark Mantle members' help to scout at all after arriving in Tarrag Canyon. The members were actually of little use for Han Shuo. But still, he is a fellow member of the Dark Mantle. Including the fact that he obtained the information he required from them, Han Shuo found it embarrassing to refuse it outright, and therefore he reluctantly accepted the request.

"Thank you. We still in our preparation phase, and will set off to Tarrag Canyon tomorrow, early in the morning. Erm, if you're tired, I can show you where you may rest," Cecilia earnestly thanked Han Shuo with a very faint smile on her beautiful face.

"Okay. Please prepare a secret room for me. I will be resting for a while!" Han Shuo gladly accepted. After the hostility between him and Cecilia was extinguished, the attractive looking Cecilia suddenly felt that much more pleasing to the eye. Thinking back on the overbearing Cecilia in the past, and comparing that to her current accommodating attitude, Han Shuo felt a sense of satisfaction.

"Follow me!" Cecilia walked towards a stair that led upwards. When he stepped inside, he had that giddy feeling as though the earth and sky were spinning again. The next thing he knew, he found himself in a room made of stone. "Rest well. I will go and get ready!" Cecilia said smilingly. As soon as her lovable body moved backward, she completely disappeared from this stony room.

In this Dark Mantle branch at Tariq City, they were able to utilize some wonderful space refraction magic. Although Han Shuo couldn't understand it, he could still destroy the boundary by means of brute strength. After arriving at the room made of stone, Han Shuo used some stones found there, and with some wood carved with peculiar symbols, he laid out a grimace shaped magical array around the room, and finally took out his skeletal staff.

As he finished his incantation, Han Shuo closed his eyes. His soul traversed through layer upon layer of space-time tunnels and emerged in the desolated land of departed souls.

On the summit of a lofty, rocky mountain, the earth elite zombie, wood elite zombie, fire elite zombie, metal elite zombie, and water elite zombie all lined up to form an arc. In the center of the five elite zombies, stones were swept along the ground, and sand whirled about it. Five colours of earthy brown, woodish green, fiery red, golden yellow, and watery white beams, violently shot out in every direction. Whiffs of raging, chaotic energy were released from bodies of the five elite zombies. Earthy brown, fiery red, and golden yellow combined with one another in a bizarre manner.

Every time the energy of three colours mixed together and converged, it would form dreadful rumbling sounds, and fomenting the chaotic energy the region in their center, fueling the formidable might of this Great Formation of Divine Corpses and Five Elements. A series of explosions came from its center, even the majestic, huge mountain seemed to be trembling uncontrollably.

The Five Elements – metal, wood, water, fire, and earth, exist in every plane of existence. The elite zombies, as they were nurtured and formed by the Five Elements, could skillfully manipulate the Five Elements. The Great Formation of the Divine Corpses and Five Elements could fuse the powers of the Five Elements, increasing the strengths of the five elite zombies, greatly.

In the center where the fusion of energy happened, chaotic energy shot out everywhere and in all directions. However, at the moment only earth elite zombie, fire elite zombie, and metal elite zombie could fuse their powers together. As for wood elite zombie and water elite zombie, they couldn't merge their powers with the three at the moment.

Riding on Bone Devil, Little Skeleton stood proudly on the empty space above the lofty mountain. He was acting as though he was a general, carefully reviewing his soldiers as he looked at them practicing the Great Formation of the Divine Corpses and Five Elements, constantly monitoring any variation in the chaotic energy the five produced. Occasionally he would intervene and suppress energy that shot towards the ground in order to avoid having his palace located not far away to collapse from the quake.

A spiritual connection suddenly leaped into Little Skeleton's soul, and his purple demon eye suddenly brightened. He stared at the distorted empty space before him, which looked like ripples of water, layer upon layer whose wrinkles were undulated. From there, a mighty soul emerged.

"Father, why did you come here?" Little Skeleton was somewhat surprised as he asked Han Shuo, whose spirit had just descended.

"I came to see how their practice is going." Han Shuo unfolded his consciousness to cover the five elite zombies below him, who were tirelessly practicing the Great Formation of the Divine Corpses and Five Elements, and observed the changes of the chaotic energy in their center.

"Little Earth, Little Gold, and Little Fire could fuse their energy together. Only Little Water and Little Wood couldn't get the hang of it. Father, did you come here to tell them what they should do?" Little Skeleton said to Han Shuo.

"No. The Great Formation of Divine Corpses and Five Elements were imprinted deep into their souls the moment they were born. The Five Elements is an innate skill of theirs, and I'm incapable of guiding them. It can only be done through their own practice and comprehensions," Han Shuo replied. After a few thoughts, with his attention focused on water elite zombie and wood elite zombie, he said, "Those two have yet to figure out the technique after spending so much time. Perhaps it is because they have not yet evolved to a certain stage!"

“That could be the case. Of the five, Little Earth was the first to appear. Little Fire and Little Gold have things that they could use to help them. Those two things seem to have helped them evolve faster. That might be why the three could master how to fuse the energy so quickly. Little Water and Little Wood only appeared later on, and didn’t have anything that could help them evolve faster, therefore even until now, they couldn’t proficiently put their innate skills to use!” Little Skeleton said to Han Shuo.

“Oh, right, how about the Pearl of Souls from the Tree of Souls. Have you given it a try? How were the results?” The reason he could make a breakthrough into Carnal Realm was all thanks to the efficacy of one Pearl of Soul. Therefore, when Han Shuo recalled about the wonderful Tree of Souls, he couldn’t help but asked Little Skeleton.

“Of course. They all took one Pearl of Souls from the tree. It is indeed beneficial to increasing our wisdom. It’s just that the Tree of Souls needs a long time to bear fruit, therefore it is temporarily out of use for the pearl fruits needed to help Little Water and Little Wood to evolve faster,” Little Skeleton replied somewhat helplessly, not knowing how to help water elite zombie and earth elite zombie.

“Well, it seems that I got to try and find a way to refine some medicinal pellets. To evolve naturally like this takes a rather long time,” Han Shuo replied after thinking for a moment.

“Father, with just the three of their energy fusing together, this Great Formation of Divine Corpses and Five Elements already is terrifying enough in power. Even for a powerful Bone Dragon, I believe that it will be annihilated once it is trapped in there!” Little Skeleton replied.

“Yep, I know the score. But once the five powers are combined, their might will be even more terrifying. In addition, as the five evolve and become stronger, the power of the formation will also further increase in strength. I look forward to even more surprises they will bring me!”

“Father, they will not disappoint you.”

“Alright, I have to leave now. Look after them and don’t let any mishap happen. Also, pay a little extra attention when they are practising the formation. They must not be reckless and careless in their practice.

“Understood!”

After seeing that Little Skeleton understood his instructions, Han Shuo did not continue to stay in the netherworld. He recalled his soul to where it was before and arrived at the Profound Continent.

Sensing for a while, Han Shuo saw that he still had some time to kill. He decided to continue his meticulous study of the three necromancy boundaries he found out in Cemetery of Death – Boundary of Fear, Boundary of Weakness, and Boundary of Aging. In fact, he actually made some progress during his intensive study, and gained some insights and understanding towards the topic.

It was precisely because of his habit of studying all the time that Han Shuo could progress so rapidly, and reach substantial heights in both fields.

Whenever he delved into solving a difficult problem, time would always pass rapidly unbeknownst to him. Suddenly, Han Shuo felt that the formation deployed around him trembled slightly, waking him up from his contemplation.

“Bryan, we can head out now.” Cecilia’s voice suddenly arrived in Han Shuo’s ears.

“Ok!” Han Shuo got up, conveniently putting away the rocks and bewildering woods around him, and walked outside the room.

Chapter 443: Boundary of Weakness

The Tarrag Canyon of the Brut Merchant Alliance is a restricted area. Any ordinary man could only dream of entering such a place. Just like in the Dark Forest in the Lancelot Empire, only the most willed of adventurers would ever dare venture into its depths.

Owing to the abnormal behaviors of the magical beasts in Tarrag Canyon some time ago, many eager traveller has been driven away. With the addition of warnings of lightning from sacred magus Reynold Dila of Brut Merchant Alliance, everyone kept a distance from Tarrag Canyon.

The followers of the Dark Mantle under Cecilia ventured into the Tarrag Canyon with Cecilia and Han Shuo leading them. They discovered not a trace of a single soul having ever set foot there. The Canyon was eerily tranquil.

The hills of the Tarrag Canyon were far more uneven compared to the likes of the Dark Forest of the Lancelot Empire, with a swamp at its every crevice.

“In the recent days, countless forces have dispatched their people to catch a glimpse of activity within the Tarrag Canyon. But the magical beasts that resided there seemed to have gone mad, and with that, increasingly violent, causing countless deaths and driving many more away from the Canyon,” Cecilia groaned in annoyance, her voice almost shaky as she dragged along.

Behind her were twelve Dark Mantle members directly under her control. She usually brought these twelve members of Dark Mantle with her wherever she went. Amongst them were magi, swordsmen, knights, bandits and archers. Together, they formed a complete team.

These twelve worthy subordinates were carefully handpicked by Cecilia herself. Over the course of years working together they have forged a certain harmony that only the most in-sync of teams could emulate, and, through even the most of dire times, emerged the victor. Furthermore, with the addition of the formidable Han Shuo there was no denying the power possessed by this team.

“Dame, why is it that there has been no trace of human intervention our whole way here?” Tiaru the bandit asked solemnly with caution as he examined the area.

Throughout the journey, Tiaru was focused only on scouring the place, not unlike a monkey as he scouted in every direction, providing the party with timely information. Despite having travelled deep into the canyon for half the day, they hadn’t met a single team of adventurers, nor anyone at all entering the Tarrag Canyon for that matter. The situation was baffling.

According to the scouts of the Dark Mantle, several adventurers had, in the past few days, entered the Tarrag Canyon. It would have made sense to have come across at least a few of them.

“I have no idea. Perhaps they have ventured far deeper into the canyon. Perhaps we should pick up our pace,” Cecilia replied without much thought. Her gaze, intentionally or otherwise, landed on Han Shuo, who was walking behind them.

Ever since they entered the Tarrag Canyon, Han Shuo had remained silent. He had merely followed closely behind their backs, and would, from time to time, study an enormous magic book. He didn’t seem the least bit concerned with the dangerous endeavour of descending into the Tarrag Canyon.

And indeed, that was quite simply the case.

Just when Cecilia woke him up in his secret room, Han Shuo began to delve into the enigma that was the Boundary of Weakness, and was perplexed with certain difficulties of the magic. He continuously withdrew magical tomes from his space ring, and studied and pondered on the subject assiduously.

Ssssss... A creature was approaching from afar.

Tiaru the bandit creased his brows, and sprung from a large tree straight towards another. He grabbed onto the branch of a slender willow tree and continued towards the source of the noise to figure out what was happening.

“It seems as though some magical beasts are coming. We must be careful, large hordes of magical creatures are difficult to handle. Hopefully we won’t be so unlucky this time!” Cecilia said to her subordinates as she withdrew a staff specially made for priests.

Han Shuo, who was in deep thought about how the Boundary of Weakness causes enemies to grow mentally and physically weak, had actually heard the ‘Sssss’ noise approaching well before the rest did. Without the need for mystical demons dispersing in every direction, Han Shuo managed to detect several hundred magical beasts drawing closer and closer to them with his consciousness. These hundred or so magical beasts approaching were of assorted ranks, mostly ranks three or four. The most powerful of them were just three first-tier magical beasts. There was an absence of any super-ranked magical creatures present in the wave, therefore Han Shuo felt no obligation for concern on his part.

The bandit, who had earlier swung away past the willows, had just then springboarded himself into the air off a branch, and landed firmly before Cecilia. “The beasts are approaching in the hundreds. They seem to be coming for us!” Tiaru reported in a low voice.

“Prepare for battle. These magical beasts shouldn’t be too hard to handle!” Cecilia ordered decisively. Soon after, they had begun to set up trap boundaries. The archers, magi, and swordsmen assumed their positions, with the magi and archers in the very middle, as they drew their weapons, defending the grounds.

Sitting in the center, Han Shuo creased his brows, and temporarily laid down his monstrous book. He looked at Cecilia, who was instructing her subordinates to deploy defense boundaries, and asked, grinning faintly, “Need any help?”

“Thanks, but we can handle this for now!” Cecilia replied, confident that she could deal with this group of magical beasts.

Han Shuo nodded his head and without speaking further, continued to study the magical book in his hand, titled ‘Necromancy Magic’, trying to make sense of the marvels and the deployment of the Boundary of Weakness.

Not only could the Boundary of Weakness make all those that entered it feel frail and fatigued, it also had paralyzing and incapacitative effects on one's soul. This is because the Boundary of Weakness is assembled by two segments of incantations – one aimed at the enemy's physical body, and the other at his soul.

However, to fully unleash the true wrath of the Boundary of Weakness, one must master perfect a balance of power against the flesh and soul. Failure on either flesh or soul means failure entirely. Han Shuo had practiced for a long time, but still had yet to grasp it. He was unable to perfectly put together the two incantations, and therefore unable to deliver a true Boundary of Weakness.

Han Shuo realized, reading the book, that the crux of every living being is its soul. To maim one's soul would be to, in turn, maim one's body. If one were to feel mentally feeble and weak, his body would reflect it and begin to lack strength. By such reasoning, Han Shuo concluded that the point of attack is to cripple the soul. As soon as the soul perceived itself to be weak, the physical body would also weaken. Han Shuo knew then that he was progressing in the right direction, but needed a moment to digest all the information and truly master it. He racked his brain, hoping to see the light.

As Han Shuo slowly wrapped his head around it all, hundreds of magical beasts of the Tarrag Canyon rushed forth. They seemed to be able to detect the scent of humans. Their pupils were scarlet red as they roared violently, charging straight at Cecilia and her people.

"These beasts are mad!" Cecilia shouted softly. The magical staff she was waving shot out silvery lights that sprinkled onto the five swordsmen at the forefront, providing them with strength and enhancing their powers.

Multiple incantations sounded beside Cecilia as the fire magus, lightning magus, and water magus chanted along. Fire Snakes slithered off with vigour, strobes of lighting bombarded through the sky, and tree roots shot out of the ground like pointed stakes, all aimed at the pack of magical beasts rushing towards them.

As the spells came down, havoc wreaked over the flock of beasts. Many lower ranking creatures immediately lost all fighting capability when hit by the wave of magic. Only some first, second and third rank magical beasts could withstand this wave of magical attack, owing to their resilient bodies, and continue to storm ahead.

Two archers released torrents of arrows with admirable composure. After streaking through the vast sky, one after another, the arrows landed clean into the beasts with a swoosh, killing each one of them. Not a single miss.

Under the double-barreled attack of the magi and archers, a third of the magical beasts had collapsed for good before they could even get close. Some of the more powerful magical creatures that were closest to the area could release magic and poisonous fluid. Creatures like the Frost Eagles and Medusa began spewing frost and venom.

Cecilia ceaselessly performed all sorts of auxiliary spells on her fellow comrades, while the three mages deployed boundaries to block incoming attacks. The traps that were set up in advance were also deployed, and the magical beasts fell into a pool of blood one after another.

It must be said that Cecilia and the Dark Mantle members beside her had great rapport and coordination with each other. In the previous ten days, due to the team's cooperation, a great majority of the magical beasts were killed using spells or arrows before they could come anywhere near them. And if any of those creatures did manage to get close to them, they would have been met by five unwavering swordsmen defending the front, ready to deflect any approaching enemy at any given time. It looked as though this battle really wasn't much of a problem for Cecilia and her team.

At that moment, Han Shuo gazed at the magical beasts, still charging fiercely, unafraid of death. Han Shuo seemed to have had an epiphany of sorts, and urgently chanted an incantation. The chilling element of death that hovered through the air suddenly converged, and formed a ring around the flock of magical beasts.

All of a sudden, the high-ranking magical creatures which were charging forward became strangely sluggish. It was as though they were collectively hit by some powerful anesthetic, slowing them down to half the speed.

“I did it!” Han Shuo gasped in pride and amazement. He was shocked to see the magical creatures within the Boundary of Weakness become so lethargic.

All of a sudden, Han Shuo felt an enormously mighty presence sneak towards them. He squinted, spying on it.

Chapter 444: Beating up a Sneaky Attacker

Cecilia and the others were fully focused on dealing with the magical beasts attacking them. Only high-level creatures remained. Rushing forward, they released poisonous fluids and magical spells unceasingly, skills that they are undoubtedly born with.

It had initially been somewhat of a challenge to Cecilia and her party defeating the beasts. However, after Han Shuo's Boundary of Weakness came down, the magical beasts slowed down tremendously in an instant. Cecilia and her team managed to then catch their breaths, regather their mental strength and take advantage of the situation to deploy some magical spells, enveloping the remaining magical beasts in an abyss of suffering.

The meatshields at the frontlines who had been standing upright all the while, dedicated to guarding the area, withdrew their javelins and darted them straight at the beasts, who were yet crawling into range, bodies and souls exhausted by the Boundary of Weakness, impaling them.

"Thank you!" Cecilia shouted to Han Shuo, who was a distance away.

"No problem! That was nothing," Han Shuo replied with a faint smile.

Even without the help of Han Shuo's Boundary of Weakness, Cecilia and her party would have managed to fend off the flock of magical beasts, but it would not have been nearly as simple. There was simply no way the knights and five swordsmen could have come out unscathed as they did had it not been for Han Shuo.

A swordmaster wielded his imposing weapon of choice as he marched into the field of corpses. He stripped the magical cores off several high-ranking magical creatures one by one. Delighted, he exclaimed, "What a harvest we have here!"

"Don't bother with cores under rank three, they aren't worth nearly enough gold coins. Besides, we better hurry out!" Cecilia instructed from a distance.

“Yes my Lady, I won’t be long,” a second swordmaster named Karey replied, raising his voice as he strode away towards several magical beasts that had earlier been met with rather violent deaths.

Han Shuo furrowed his brows, sensing someone lurking in the shadows. It was zooming nearer by the second, headed straight for the swordmaster furthest away from everyone else. The figure emitted a queer but powerful aura. Han Shuo was certain that once the figure got close enough to the swordmaster, the outcome would be certain death.

A sudden thought struck Han Shuo. With a tighter consciousness, he became transfixed on the being hiding in the lush undergrowth. Han Shuo was standing beside Cecilia when he was reduced into a lump of black radiance, then simply disappeared without a trace.

Cecilia noticed that someone beside her was missing and abruptly turned around confused. “What? Where’s Bryan?”

Meanwhile, swordmaster Karey, who was unwittingly collecting magical core of medusa, suddenly heard a faint rustle, setting him on edge. Without a second to spare, an orb of green smoke had rolled over to him. The green smoke engulfed him before he could react, like being swallowed whole.

In an instant, Karey felt as though his body was being clasped firmly in an enormous hand, from which there was no escape. With such tight pressure against his chest, he hadn’t even the breath to call for help, and could only watch as they receded deep into the shrubbery through the cloud of green smoke, farther and farther away from Cecilia and the others. Karey was brimming with fear without a clue what was going on. He dreaded unknown, but there was nothing he could do. He would not budge and could not speak. Karey grew sullen, his heart gradually sinking.

“Don’t worry, I’m right beside you. We have to find out where this thing is taking you!” chimed a familiar voice.

Karey beamed. It was Han Shuo. Through Cecilia, Karey had heard of the frightening power he possessed. And now, having witnessed Han Shuo trail them undetected, Karey was reassured. Han Shuo was everything Cecelia described and more.

The tremendous orb of green smoke rolled along carrying Karey with it. Only after nearly half a dozen li further into Tarrag Canyon did the smoke begin to slow down as they approached a muddy ground. All of a sudden, the once static sludge began to generate an immense pulling force, drawing Karey into it.

Han Shuo, who had been trailing along, extended his five right-hand fingers, and out of them stretched five infinitely fine strobes of green light. With his eagle-like claws, he slashed at the sludge like a beast.

The mass of soggy ground blew up. Bit by bit, sludge skewered the sky above it as the ground began to tremble.

Karey was startled by all the rumbling, all the while knowing he was done for, there was no escaping this. But at that moment, the restraints on his body loosened. Han Shuo stood grimly before him, green lights still shooting from his fingertips. Karey regained mobility and attempted to break away from the smoke surrounding him. The lump of green which had held him so tightly seemed to have lost its grip completely.

As a swordmaster, Karey wasn't too weak himself. He crept out in a flurry, hopping off the protruding sludge, which now resembled pillars, and escaping to the shore.

"Show yourself!" Han Shuo yelled towards the sludgy ground as he stood imposingly above it. The lights from his fingertips faded away.

Just after Han Shuo reclaimed his explosive energy, the ground settled. The sludge stakes plunged back into the ground, revealing a human figure glazed head to toe with mud.

"Who are you?" asked the figure, her weak voice creaking, almost like a rusted hinge.

Han Shuo was in disbelief. The voice he was hearing, it was undoubtedly that of an elderly woman. The figure was burrowed deep within the shrubbery, her face all the while obscured from Han Shuo as he approached the sludge.

“Who are you? Why did you attack me?” Karey retorted before Han Shuo could reply.

In a swish, the figure flew off high into the sky, and dove downwards at Han Shuo like a bird of prey ready to scoop up its next meal. She did not answer, and instead cursed, “How dare you meddle with my business! You mischievous child! I will slaughter you!”

Streams of green smoke poured from the old woman through seven apertures, who looked simply menacing. Her appearance was very much like that of the foulest of spirits imaginable.

The green smoke in the air seemed to waft through the air randomly, but it was in fact drifting rapidly at Han Shuo. It began to move several times as fast just as it approached Han Shuo, effortlessly trapping him. The green smoke bore through Han Shuo’s body by the pores of his skin.

The old woman followed several steps behind the smoke flowing from her eyes and nostrils. As soon as the wisps of green smoke had attached themselves to Han Shuo, she began to let out the most repulsive laugh. A wave of strange energy burst out from her palm, and with it she cursed Han Shuo.

Strands of green smoke entered Han Shuo’s body, a sensation of millions of ants devouring his flesh and blood from the inside. Han Shuo’s consciousness could render clearly every last abnormality on his body. When he saw that the old woman was covering him with her palm, Han Shuo snorted coldly, and the demon infant within his body began its suction.

The energy that entered Han Shuo’s body, like a whale taking in water, flowed straight through him into the demon infant. After two rotations, a strange substance, apparently nutrition for the demon infant, formed. Only now did the old woman’s palm reach the top of Han Shuo’s head.

Her eyes filled with shock and bewilderment. The old woman seemed to have felt the unusual movements of the energy through Han Shuo’s body, and cried out in terror. She attempted to flee as quickly as she could.

Han Shuo was right beneath the old woman and began to smile. He looked up at her within arms reach, and threw a fist. In a flash, the knife-like demonic yuan poured into the old woman through the center of her palm. It destroyed the strange energy that had been brewing on her palm like a massive, earth-shattering dragon, and continued straight through her guts.

A stream of blood gushed from the woman's mouth. She had been struck flying up to the sky. Her face was in pain, her heart filled with regret. Damnit, why did I provoke this guy? After evading the Church of Light all these years, in spite of everything, because of a single moment of foolishness I'm just going to die at the hands of some stupid demon? And all for nothing, she thought, sighing.

Before the old woman's body even landed, Han Shuo flew over at lightning speed, and firmly grabbed her by her sludgy, tangled hair. A whiff of demonic yuan flew into her body, and subdued her. He then carried her, descending to the ground.

They had only dealt blows face-to-face once, but already was she heavily injured and captured alive. Unable to resist, the old woman's heart filled with dejection and sorrow. She had no idea what the hell was wrong with the world. This young man could actually be more frightening than those of the Church of Light, who had been hunting her for many years. This was unacceptable.

For this ferocious old woman, Han Shuo could show no mercy. He dragged her by the hair towards less muddy waters, and shoved her head into it. A few scrubs later, the sludge which had coated her face was mostly gone.

"Speak. Why are you attacking us? Who are you?" Han Shuo demanded coldly, tossing her aside to pull out a clean handkerchief for all the scum on his hands.

Chapter 445: Same as Heretics, but Big Differences!

Much of the sludge on the woman's face had not gone away with the dirty water, leaving her barely less filthy than before. But, finally, after a little help from Han Shuo, her complexion could at least be distinguished.

She appeared to be in her fifties or sixties, hair of ash-grey, long and tangled. The carving knife known as time had left a confluence of wrinkles like ravines on her face, and her skin thin, inelastic and lacking any radiance. Her eyes carried the only distinguishing color on her, a rare green tainted with unresolved resentment.

Her green eyes fixed on Han Shuo, inspecting him as he raised her. At only what seemed like twenty years old, Han Shuo couldn't have possessed such pinnacle strength, whether in cultivating magic or martial arts. However, there he was, having just defeated her simply, without room for any resistance.

Pa! A slap flew across the old woman's face. Han Shuo yelled, "I'm talking to you!"

When it came to Han Shuo, there was no respecting anyone who would mount a sneak attack on another so indiscriminately, not even for an elderly woman. Besides, with those green eyes, she looked none too virtuous anyway.

She awoke abruptly at the slap, her heart loaded with fury, and exploded at Han Shuo, "Little demon, you can kill me, but you will not humiliate me!"

"Shut up and answer my question or you'll suffer!" threatened Han Shuo impatiently as he glared at the old woman. He turned to Karey who was walking towards him, and said, "This old hag left a trail behind for a reason. Cecilia and the others must be on their way. Go and catch up with them."

"Alright. I am forever grateful for your Lordship's rescue. Your humble subordinate shall engrave this in his heart!” Karey bowed at Han Shuo, and finally left.

“How did you know about the markers?” the old woman questioned, though she was unable to move.

“Did you really think your foolish trickery would escape my discerning eyes?” asked Han Shuo sarcastically, “Now speak! Why did you bring us here? What are you planning?”

The green eyes glowed up like strange lights. She has checked her body in silence, and attempted to move with her own power.

“Stop wasting your energy you old fart! You cannot escape!” Han Shuo scolded, staring at her coldly. He was confident that she could not escape.

“Hm,” he scoffed. He got behind the woman and began to caress her back with his mighty hands.

“What are you doing? What are you doing?! I’ll talk! I’ll tell you everything! Please, spare me!” The old woman was frightened to the bone. She could no longer maintain a steady mental state, and began shouting involuntarily. Much to his surprise, she sounded like she was on the verge of tears

“I beg you, please spare me. I’m old. I could be your grandmother. You wouldn’t do this to your own grandmother! I’m just an ugly-”

“Shut the fuck up. What is the matter with you? I don’t have such unconventional fetishes!” Han Shuo shouted. Filled with rage, he pulled back his mighty hands, raised a brow, and asked her in a deep voice, “You have the body of divine favor?”

“Ye... yes. So what?” She had been relieved to hear that Han Shuo wasn’t trying to violate her. But after his last question, she was shocked, and muttered, “How did you know that?”

Han Shuo was about to answer her, but shrugged instead. He raised his head and stared into the distance, then smiled grimly. “I’ve searched high and low for them, but unexpectedly, these men came sending themselves to my doorstep!”

Han Shuo stopped interrupted. He sensed a twenty-strong envoy headed their way. They were men of the Church of Light, experts of mixed professions. And their leader happened to be Han Shuo's own mortal enemy, sacred knight Blount. They were approaching the area following the trails.

Just as his consciousness detected the arrival of these men, several mystical demons swooped over to eavesdrop on their conversations.

A little while later, Han Shuo's gaze fixed on the old woman. With a faint smile, he chuckled, "So you are the big heretic that Blount is after! Elizabeth, did you plan to kill Karey, and shift the blame on the Church of Light? You drew us here so we would confront them? Very smart. Very smart indeed. You sinister cunning old thing, surely not a good thing."

"How did you know that? Who in the world are you? How is it that you know everything?" Elizabeth looked at Han Shuo petrified. Her body trembling, she continued, "You obviously already know the answer, so why ask? What do you want with me?"

"Hush now," he snickered perversely. "They are discussing their reasons for hunting you. Let me listen." Han Shuo pursed his lips and gestured at Elizabeth to stay silent.

"What, what do you want?" Elizabeth's heart was filled with doubt. This unfathomable young man before her had surprised her quite enough. She had no idea where Han Shuo came from nor what he was up to. A sense of unknown danger lingered with her, an unpleasant feeling, to say the least.

Minutes later, Han Shuo turned to face Elizabeth once more. He had on a sinister smile across his face. Nodding his head, he said, "Not bad, Elizabeth, not bad at all. Your unique body of divine favor can absorb the Church of Light's holy energy. It's no wonder the Church hasn't spared a pain to try to kill you!"

"You know it, you know it all. Fine, what do you really want?" Han Shuo had, by now, listed each and every one of her secrets. Elizabeth was certain it would be near impossible to escape from Han Shuo's palm, and consequently loosened up. She looked at Han Shuo calmly, with a face that seemed to say 'do whatever you want to me, I don't care'.

"Such an interesting body of divine favor. Very interesting. Hmm, we are both heretics being hunted by the Church of Light. Perhaps we needn't be so unfriendly towards each other!" Han Shuo said with a slight grin.

"You, you hold grudges with the Church of Light as well?" Elizabeth was in a perturbed state of mind. After an unceasing suspension between hope and despair, that cool, composed attitude of hers had long gone without a trace.

"That's right, just like you! A big heathen on the run from the Church of Light." Han Shuo beamed at Elizabeth, and continued, "However, that was a long time ago. Now we are not so similar. I am the hunter, and Church of Light is the prey! Hahah, we both are heretics, but with big differences!"

Just after uttering those words, 'whooshing' sounds began, and several human shadows landed. They were priests of the Church of Light. Two magi that had deployed floatation spells were now hanging in mid air. One of them, oozing with arrogance, said to Elizabeth below, "You shall not escape today!"

The hissing noise crescendoed as more and more people approached. Within the blink of an eye, a group of Temple Knights led by sacred knight Blount arrived by the light priests, and swiftly surrounded the area where Elizabeth was.

Attention gathered on Elizabeth. Han Shuo, who was directly facing Elizabeth, happened to have his back towards sacred knight Blount. In addition to this, as Blount was fully focused on the limping Elizabeth, he had failed to notice that the lofty figure before him was the same one that had left him heavily injured three years prior.

Elizabeth could not move at the slightest, and looked on helplessly as experts from Church of Light surrounded her. She grew anxious, what felt like flames licking at her eyebrows. With regards to Han Shuo's declaring himself the hunter and the Church of Light the prey, Elizabeth evidently did not buy it, and pleaded, "Release me! I'll bring you along to escape through the sludges, otherwise we will die here!"

“Elizabeth, you have murdered countless pious followers through the years. Church of Light has been after you for four odd years, but has never been able to fully surround you. But this time, this time we shall see how you manage to escape!” sacred knight Blount chuckled as he looked at Elizabeth. After recovering from his injuries, he still appeared very much calm and unruffled.

Shit shit shit, I’m going to die here, Elizabeth thought when she saw Han Shuo remain unmoved, while those of the Church of Light tightened around them bit by bit, totally cut off her opportunity to escape. Her heart was eventually crammed with a feeling of despair.

“Huh? Elizabeth, you’re acting rather odd today! Don’t you usually flee as fast as the wind? Why aren’t you running away today? Could it be that you want to fight us to death? Hahah. With Lord Blount here, you must be courting death!” said the first magus to Elizabeth calmly.

“Enough nonsense, take her down!” sacred knight Blount yelled, pacing towards Elizabeth leisurely.

All of a sudden, a concentrated aura of death could be sensed from outside of the encirclement. The expression Blount’s face flipped and he immediately dropped his foot to look around. He discovered that an innumerable amount of undead creatures had surreptitiously encircled them.

Only at that moment did sacred knight Blount shift his attention to the person whose back he had faced all along. The imposing view of Han Shuo’s back became oddly familiar. This peculiar familiarity gave Blount an intense feeling of unease. Blount abruptly gestured for the members of the Church of Light to halt, and said to Han Shuo in a deep voice, “That friend over there, we seem to have met somewhere before!”

“Of course. Of course we’ve met, Lord Blount!” Han Shuo said in an evil grin and finally turned around, his piercing eyes stuck on Blount.

Chapter 446: Killing the Enemy

Even after three years, when Han Shuo's voice sounded again, sacred knight Blount could tell exactly who this man, whose back he had been string at, was.

Blount's humiliating defeat in their battle all those years ago had undoubtedly left a lasting impression on him. For Blount, the fight ended most shamefully, truly the lowest moment of his life. For the three years that followed, Blount, who was still recovering from his injuries, could not help but think about Han Shuo. Now that Han Shuo stood right in front of him once again, Blount, a ruthless murderer with a particular aversion to infidels, was unable to control his expression.

"You!" yelled Blount in a voice dripping with hatred. Blount clasped a shiny golden spear tightly in the palm of his hand. His veins were popping out. His grip grew tighter and tighter, as though he were trying to break the spear in two. It was obvious how deeply rooted the hatred was in his heart.

Han Shuo nodded in acknowledgement. Carrying a sinister grin on his face, he said, "We meet again!"

"Lord Blount, who is this child?" The talkative magus was puzzled. He could not understand why a sacred knight such as Blount himself, one of majestic status within the Church of Light, would be acquainted with an obviously immature and inexperienced brat.

"You, you two know each other?" muttered Elizabeth, who was paralyzed under Han Shuo's foot and could do so much as twitch a finger. She looked at Han Shuo, bewildered.

"Hahah, of course!" Han Shuo replied, smiling ominously. Without turning his head, Han Shuo waved his hand and patted Elizabeth on the shoulder. Suddenly, the energy within her that shackled her body disappeared. "Your body of divine favor can absorb the sacred energy from their bodies. How intriguing. Today is your lucky day. Perhaps you may even get to absorb the holy energy of a sacred knight. Elizabeth, be sure to seize the opportunity!” Han Shuo said to Elizabeth in a strange tone as she rose to her feet behind him. Han Shuo’s gaze was fixed on Blount.

Elizabeth stared at the sacred knight Blount who looked as though he was facing against a great rival. A thought suddenly occurred to her. She pointed at Han Shuo and said in an appalled tone, “You, you are that necromancer from the Lancelot Empire, aren’t you? I’ve heard about you before. You single-handedly defeated Blount and his men? Oh my! It really is you!”

Elizabeth, an infidel the Church of Light had been hunting tirelessly, surely kept with the news. And of course she would often inquire about those like herself, wanted dead by the Church of Light. The battle for Ossen City three years prior was the single greatest setback the Church of Light had suffered in recent years. The news of this event, propagated by certain parties with differing intentions, had spread across many countries.

News that the sacred knights, symbolic of the mighty presence of the Church of Light, suffered crippling defeat, spread like wildfire far and wide, as though the Plague spell in necromancy magic had been cast. For heretics suffering in hardship due to the Church of Light, this news was music to their ears. Any infidel with the slightest competency would know the name ‘Bryan’.

The men of the Church of Light who encircled Han Shuo and Elizabeth turned pale upon hearing Elizabeth’s words. Three Temple Knights stood closest to Han Shuo and were the first to charge towards Elizabeth, but before Han Shuo even made a move, the three subconsciously took a few steps backward, distancing themselves from Han Shuo, and returning to the circle.

“Him.... it’s actually him...,” the magus of the Church of Light asked Blount doubtfully, mumbling to himself as he stared frightened at Han Shuo. His voice diminished, as though he were afraid of arousing Han Shuo’s attention.

“Prepare to move! Forget about Elizabeth. Aim every attack at him!”

Blount softly yelled. Immediately after that he glared at Han Shuo, and said, "Three years had passed. I don't believe that this time you will be able to injure me again!"

As soon as Blount spoke those words, an enormous sacred aura escaped from Blount's body. The divine aura and his golden fighting aura fused together with perfection. The muscles on his body suddenly burst out glorious golden rays, giving him the appearance of a man cast in gold, a golden man, a truly awesome spectacle in the most literal sense of the word.

Han Shuo's pupils gleamed. Through the aura on Blount he could sense just how powerful he was. He discovered that in those three short years, Blount's strength had improved to some degree. His aura must have doubled by some miraculous transformation.

"This time, I will not injure you again." Han Shuo looked at Blount with cold eyes, and continued word by word, "I will kill you!"

Han Shuo grinned fiercely as his clenched fist shot at Blount.

As the golden spear in Blount's hand brandished with layers upon layers of golden light, Han Shuo used his right fist like a hammer. A radiant, cataclysmic energy congealed in his palm. A garish flash of red light shot violently out of his fist. After the light faded, a scarlet red fist the magnitude of a hill appeared out of thin air, descending rapidly onto Blount.

Blount was in great fear. He could feel the destructive power contained within the punch. The energy he had gathered in the last three years, gushed into the golden spear in his hand, turning him into a golden sun. He hurled the spear upwards at the gigantic scarlet-red fist smashing down on him. As the golden spear flew up in high speed, a chorus praising the God of Light could be faintly heard.

When the golden spear stabbed on the scarlet fist, a deafening rumble erupted. The radiance above their heads was enough to momentarily blind every spectator but the two themselves. The immense fluctuation of energy began to fan out violently in every direction. Elizabeth and the members of the Church of Light ducked for shelter.

It was at this moment that the undead creatures who had been silently surrounding them seemed to have gotten a bugle call to mobilize and attack. Several members of the Church of Light were caught off guard and immediately drowned by the undead creatures. Amid their terrorizing howls, the chilling sounds of undead creatures crunching on human bones could be heard.

Only Elizabeth was excluded from the attacks of the undead creatures. But listening to the men of the Church of Light being eaten alive by the undead, she could not help but shiver. She was scared witless as she looked at Han Shuo, and thought in her heart that he was indeed the biggest heretic!

Han Shuo's mad laughter rumbled like a storm. "Blount, oh Blount, it seems that despite your efforts in becoming stronger, you will die here! No one can save you today!"

Of everyone there, Elizabeth was the most laid-back. The disciples of the Church of Light were surrounded by throngs and throngs of undead creatures summoned by Han Shuo. The creatures did not attack Elizabeth, and in that time she managed to recover from her temporary blindness and could once again see. She turned towards the direction of Han Shuo's voice.

However, all she saw was a strange banner of light closing in on Blount, formed by the scarlet fist. Han Shuo, howling with laughter, could hardly be seen as he rapidly revolved around Blount. The endless flow of pounding fists led to a clear indication that Blount was not alright.

Sacred knight Blount lacked any strength to fight back, and could only attempt to stand his ground and defend unwaveringly.

The sacred knight, even in his golden state and with far heightened power, groaned in anguish just as he had done before under Han Shuo's high speed bombardment. Trails of fresh, dark red blood ran from his nostrils and out the corner of his mouth, staining his golden armour. Not a bit of that composed, arrogant vigor could be found in him anymore.

What made Elizabeth even more astonished was that Han Shuo seemed to have yet to exert much strength at all. On the contrary, he looked like he could be doing this in his sleep, taking his time tormenting Blount.

Sacred knight Blount's body was convulsing in a fit, his spear waving in the air, as streaks of energy stung him like fire ants, the power in his hands were weakening by the second, and, as such, the speed at which he brandished his golden spear was growing slower and slower.

Peng! A punch broke through layers of spear shadows and Han Shuo quietly withdrew his fist. Sacred knight Blount's hand movements suddenly froze. A series of Pi Li Pa La fracturing sounds emitted from his body. Blount stood blankly before collapsing to the ground.

Under Elizabeth's dumbstruck gaze, out from the ground on which sacred knight Blount laid, a foolish-looking zombie warrior emerged. The zombie had on an unusual, earthy-grey armour. The hard ground was like water to him; he seemed to ascend from the ground without any hindrance.

Thud! Thud! Thud! When the strange-looking zombie warrior had completely floated out of the earth, it stomped on Blount's body in a mad rampage. Fresh blood spilled uncontrollably all over Blount's body as the life force in his face faded away little by little.

"Oi, Elizabeth, how about you hurry over and absorb the divine energy from his body before he's dead!" Elizabeth had still been in a daze, but upon hearing this she was beyond overjoyed.

"For me? Really?" she exclaimed like it was ecstasy, her voice still quivering. She gazed at Han Shuo from a distance away in pleasant disbelief.

"Of course. Only by absorbing the divine energy from this sacred knight will you qualify to be my slave!" Han Shuo said, smiling.

"Sla... slave?" Elizabeth was dazed again. Her brain was slow to comprehend everything she was hearing.

"Who sent you to my doorstep to provoke me in the first place? Hurry up and decide! Die or serve me. Make your own choice!" GH groaned coldly.

After three seconds of silence, Elizabeth shot her hand up to declare her position. "I'm willing to be your slave!" she exclaimed, before flinging herself towards a dying Blount.

Chapter 447: Implanting Demonic Blood

What a shame for sacred knight Blount. He had hoped that his three years of painstaking cultivation would allow him to exact his revenge on Han Shuo and finally clear that grudge. That he would, nonetheless, wind up even more pathetic than the last time was anyone's guess.

If not for the golden armour and divine energy protecting his body, sacred knight Blount would perhaps not have had to suffer so much pain. After all, any ordinary man who had been trampled by an earth elite zombie would indeed have died instantly, with considerably less pain.

Blount, however, was protected by the armour on his body, in addition to his fighting aura and sacred energy. Therefore, he did not immediately die when the earth elite zombie stomped on him repeatedly, but instead, let out harrowing squeals as he died. With the pain of both his physical body and spirit dejected and shrouding him at the same time, Blount hadn't even the strength to kill himself.

It was at this moment that the wrinkly old woman rushed towards him in excitement. With fear in Blount's eyes, Elizabeth pounced on him like a malevolent spirit, her sharp fingers directly piercing into Blount's neck, exposed and unarmoured.

All the divine energy, which Blount had received in exchange for his devout conviction, gushed from his body like water from a collapsed dam into that of the sinister Elizabeth. Elizabeth, who had earlier been beaten to the bone by Han Shuo, was restored of all energy.

Streaks of green smoke once again slithered in and out of Elizabeth's seven apertures like slender green snakes. Her green eyes glittered with wicked vigor, and a vicious look adorned her face, like a mentally deranged prison inmate. Her internal organs, which were unlike those of a regular person, ran like a brand new machine at maximum speed, absorbing and breaking down the divine energy from sacred knight Blount's body, and converting it into a strange energy that she could readily utilize.

While Elizabeth, deranged and thrilled, took in the divine energy, Han Shuo appeared behind Elizabeth without warning. With one thought, his consciousness targeted on Elizabeth's body, taking a clear glimpse into its every minute movement.

Elizabeth's body composition was as different as could be compared to that of a regular person. If not for her human appearance, with an aura and body structure like that, Han Shuo would have never considered her human. In addition to the differences in skeletal structure and meridians, there were five fist-sized cyclones in her body. As Elizabeth digested the divine energy from Blount's body, these five cyclones revolved rapidly. They must play a crucial role in the process.

Thanks to the existence of these five cyclones, Elizabeth could absorb the divine energy in sacred knight Blount's body. But as for Blount's painstakingly cultivated fighting aura, the five cyclones had no effect whatsoever. It seemed that the only thing they did was act on the divine power in Blount, which he had apparently obtained through piety to the God of Light.

Han Shuo was very curious in his heart as he had never heard of a body of divine favor that could digest sacred power. It was no wonder the Church of Light wanted her killed. Han Shuo vaguely believed that this gifted body of hers was rather different from any ordinary body of divine favor. Perhaps there were some secrets hidden within Elizabeth that even she herself did not understand.

And soon, the divine energy was completely drained from the body of sacred knight Blount. With such might, even after having lost all his sacred energy, Blount would simply not die. His face was a grim, gravestone shade of grey as he stared blankly, awaiting death.

Elizabeth laughed in maniacal satisfaction. Pulling away her two hands from Blount's neck and dripping with blood, she gestured towards Han Shuo and thanked him, "Thank you, thank you!"

"You're welcome!" Han Shuo smiled grotesquely. He approached Elizabeth from the back, and extended his right hand. His middle finger stabbed into the back of her head. At the tip of his finger, a drop of dark red blood essence cracked through his skin and shot into the blood vessels in the back of her head. Elizabeth shrieked as the blood essence of Han Shuo's demonic infant made its way into her brain.

His unoccupied left hand pressed gently on Elizabeth's back. A gust of wicked force of attraction was released. The strands of energy that had just purified through her five cyclones a moment ago gushed from her back. Not a moment later, Han Shuo had absorbed more than half of it.

"Master, I am your devout servant. Please, spare my life!" Her voice diminished as she begged. She was terrified. The energy she had absorbed from the members of the Church of Light were meant to enhance herself. It had never crossed her mind that that same sinister energy in her body could be absorbed by another. There was no way she could suppress the dread in her heart.

Much to her surprise, all that begging for mercy may have had some effect. After Han Shuo extracted a portion of energy that had been partially converted by the five cyclones, he began to shriek, and let go and ceased to touch her.

After removing his fingertip from the back of Elizabeth's head, Han Shuo patted her forehead, and said with a faint smile, "Human and magical beasts can form a master-slave contract, but between humans, it's somewhat inconvenient. Hahaha, you must have felt a little something extra in your brain, haven't you?"

"Yes....yes, master. What have you done to me?" The biggest heretic on Profound Continent had endless tricks up his sleeves. Who knew if this being was actually human or the devil. He was undefeatable.

"It's nothing, really. Just like the binding power of certain contracts, so long as you do not attempt to betray me, you need not worry about that thing in your brain. However, if you do have such thoughts, haha, your brain will end up just like his!" Han Shuo smiled wickedly, and his feet stomped on sacred knight Blount's head.

Pak! Like a blown up watermelon, fresh dark red blood exploded onto the ground, mixed with brain fluids, white and red.

“Master, your most humble servant would never do anything to betray you. You will witness your servant’s loyalty. I swear!” As she stared at the ruptured head of the sacred knight, she seemed to have seen her own inhuman state after crossing him. Without the slightest doubt of the validity of this wicked young man’s words, she kneeled before Han Shuo and submitted to him with no objections. She paid no heed to the red and white matter that smeared the ground.

“Very well. I see you understand,” Han Shuo said in satisfaction. After a short pause, he continued, “You can absorb divine energy from members of the Church of Light. This is very good.” He smirked. “As long as you follow me, I believe that your strength will definitely progress at an ever higher speed.”

“This old slave will remember her master’s kindness for the rest of her life!” Elizabeth professed.

“Alright, get up. There are still a few followers of the Church of Light over there that have yet to die. You may go and absorb all the holy energy in their bodies as well!” Han Shuo instructed Elizabeth, and began speaking to her in a gentle manner.

Without another word, Elizabeth bolted from Han Shuo’s feet like lightning. Strands of monstrous green energy flowed from her orifices, and she set out to deal with the Church of Light members who had yet to die.

Seeing Elizabeth’s conscientious work ethics, Han Shuo felt reassured. After diffusing a drop of his demonic blood in her body, if Elizabeth had any thought of betraying him, Han Shuo would be the first to know, and he would then mobilize the demonic blood in her brain to instantly kill her.

Furthermore, Han Shuo, who was able to absorb the energy from Elizabeth’s body directly, would naturally not allow any chance for her to possess a level of strength that surpassed his own. Such a dependable slave, and nevertheless an interesting body of divine favor, was of much use to Han Shuo. The earth elite zombie looked at the pile of mush that had once been the brain of sacred knight Blount, and blankly transmitted to Han Shuo, “Father, is he dead?”

“Yes. He is indeed dead. However there remains energy in his soul, power that will prove useful to me!” Han Shuo answered. Shortly after, at a single thought, the Demonslayer Edge flew out from his nape. Blount’s soul, which had yet to dissipate, and which any ordinary person couldn’t sense, was suddenly sucked into the Demonslayer Edge.

During the last armed rebellion in Ossen City, the Demonslayer Edge had absorbed too much negative energy. Even then it could have been considered as being in hibernation stage, and had yet to fully pacify the negative energy. However, Han Shuo understood in his heart that this was crucial for the Demonslayer Edge. As to whether or not it could become an exceptional murder weapon, that depended on whether it could completely digest energy and form a ferocious soul.

Perhaps Blount’s powerful soul, after entering the Demonslayer Edge, would act as the main soul, and help the Demonslayer Edge speed up to evolve a ferocious soul.

After Blount’s soul was ingested by the Demonslayer Edge, it again concealed itself in Han Shuo’s body. Soon after, Han Shuo’s attention turned to the armour on Blount’s body, the weapon in his hand, and his space ring. A sacred knight of the Church of Light must have plenty of expensive treasure on him, right? Han Shuo thought.

Without the slightest respect, Han Shuo snatched the armour and golden spear from Blount’s body and placed it in his own space ring. The two pieces of equipment were the works of top-notch alchemists from the Church of Light, and one must have divine energy to use them to their greatest effect. Of course, Han Shuo did not have any allies in the Church of Light, but if he were to sell these items, he would without a doubt receive a good trade.

Blount’s space ring had been forcibly broken into by Han Shuo. Inside were several chunky books from the Church of Light, some loose gold coins, a couple of low-grade weapons, two simple, unadorned magic scrolls, and some thin yellow paper.

When he finished rummaging through Blount's belongings, and saw the contents of the thin yellow paper, Han Shuo's expression flipped.

Chapter 448: Classified Documents

The tomes and scattered gold coins of the Church of Light inside of Blount's space ring did not catch Han Shuo's attention, and neither did the few knight weapons in there that were clearly far inferior to the one Blount had been wielding. However, there were two magic scrolls that did stand out; one was a space magic scroll for escape, and the other an earth magic scroll for creating a sort of earth shield. Each were meant for ensuring one's survival.

But what a pity it was that during the battle just moments ago, the series of attacks on Blount left him with no strength to retaliate. With Han Shuo bombarding Blount with punches left and right, he hadn't even the chance to activate a magical scroll, and was only released after the bones throughout his body were shattered.

The two magic scrolls were Han Shuo's for the taking. Though precious, however, they weren't incredibly rare. It was the few sheets of thin yellow paper, or more specifically, their contents, that really piqued his interest.

The Church of Light, the self-proclaimed most compassionate church on Profound Continent, was in fact conducting some rather shady business out of the public eye. From the thin yellow papers, Han Shuo found out exactly how Blount had managed to gather so much strength in the span of three years. As it turned out, this miracle owed to the blessings ceremony of Church of Light.

As the most influential religious organization on the Profound Continent, the Church of Light cared most about two things. One, to gain an abundance of pious followers of the God of Light, and two, to have pure-souled believers selflessly offer sacrifice. Through these official records, Han Shuo learned that once followers with pure souls sacrificed to the God of Light, the blessed would acquire even more divine power from the God of Light.

However, many of the pure-souled were not followers of the Church of Light. And ever so often, even the firmest believers of the Church of Light would suddenly wake up to the realization that offering their souls meant certain death, and find that perhaps they weren't so willing to give up everything and surrender their souls. Well, it was at times like these that the Church of Light made use of certain means to compel them.

The proportion of people with incomparably pure souls was miniscule amongst humans. Blount's full recovery and huge increase in strength were paid for with the sacrifice of eighty-seven pure souls.

Those eighty-seven pure souls were secretly captured from various countries by the Church of Light by all kinds of dishonorable means. The thin yellow papers were application forms submitted by sacred knight Blount to the Church of Light to hold a sacrificial ceremony. On them were the hand signatures of the incumbent pope of the Church of Light, along with other high ranking members.

"No wonder. No wonder Blount could possess such power in such short time! Clearly, the Church of Light is none more ethical than the likes of the Calamity Church. From the outside they seem respectable, promoting all sorts of virtues and such, but what they do in the shadows is no different from the latter."

After making such a huge leap in strength, Blount must have thought himself immortal, so he stored the documents in the space ring. But who would have guessed they would now be in the hands of Han Shuo. Han Shuo understood that the documents contained the signatures of over half of the high-ranking Church of Light members, and what that meant.

Feeling apprehensive about this unusual method through which the Church of Light gained divine energy for its members, Han Shuo also felt a sense of extreme pleasure and thrill for having obtained such information that could be used against the Church.

"Hahaha, I bet the Calamity Church will be very pleased to hear about this! This document contains the signatures of the pope of the Church of Light and its high-ranking members. They shall make known the wrongs of the Church of Light through their own means," Han Shuo laughed to himself in victory.

“Master, the other members of the Church of Light are all dead!” Elizabeth’s face only revealed excitement. The five cyclones in her body were rapidly spinning as energy entered her shriveled body strand by strand.

Han Shuo very carefully held the sheets of yellow paper in his hand, and turned his attention to the surroundings. Just as Elizabeth had said, this party from the Church of Light, without a single light grand magus in their team, was all dead from the attacks of the undead.

Han Shuo squinted, and his consciousness made a round on Elizabeth’s body. By his estimations, Elizabeth had absorbed enough divine energy to allow her strength to double. However, even though Elizabeth had taken the divine energy from sacred knight Blount, she was still a long shot away from attaining the level of strength that Blount had possessed.

On one hand, this was because Blount’s mighty strength hadn’t relied solely on his divine energy. His fighting aura played the main role. On the other hand, after passing through the conversion cycles, the divine energy which Elizabeth could really utilize was reduced to only a fraction of the input.

After all, Elizabeth wasn’t a follower of the Church of Light, and couldn’t utilize the sacred energy. This was rather similar to Han Shuo’s situation; he needed to completely remove the dross energy from the enormous killing aura he absorbed, after which, all that was left would always be only a tiny portion of pure energy which he could utilize.

After absorbing all that sacred energy, Elizabeth’s strength would be barely enough to reach the level of a sacred swordmaster. Even without the demonic blood in her body, the strength she had currently possessed could pose no threat to Han Shuo. After examining deep into Elizabeth, he nodded and said, “Very good. You have done a decent job. I see there is yet raw divine energy in your body. Would you like a quiet place to digest it?”

“Thank you for master’s concern. My body will slowly convert this energy without the need to deliberately digest it,” Elizabeth replied immediately.

Nodding, Han Shuo did not continue talking, but cast his gaze in another direction.

Not long after, the Dark Mantle arrived with Karey's guidance. By then the undead creatures summoned by Han Shuo had completely vanished. There were only about a dozen bodies of Church of Light members remaining around Han Shuo and Elizabeth.

The disciples of the Church of Light died in a grotesque state. Sacred knight Blount's body became a mound of mush after his bones were shattered and body trampled. The disciples that had been partially devoured by undead creatures died in an even more appalling scene, with parts missing from their bodies. The metallic stench of blood lingered all around.

Cecilia and her party shot a glance at the scene and felt sick in the stomach. Fortunately the Dark Mantle were a rather resolute, hardy group, and did nothing to embarrass themselves before Han Shuo.

"Bryan, what happened?" Carefully avoiding the bloodstains on the ground, she made her way over to Han Shuo.

"They are the reason I came here this time. Hmm, with Blount dead now, it seems that my business here is settled!" Han Shuo said with a faint smile and he raised his head to look at the sky. He was thinking about paying Wolf a visit, and handing him some fascinating 'souvenirs'.

As a sinister organization with influence ranging the whole continent, it was most appropriate for the Calamity Church to do such things. Besides, they were a mortal enemy of the Church of Light, and would never let go of any opportunity to strike the Church of Light. The document in Han Shuo's hand contained the signatures of their highest leaders, including the pope. Once the Calamity Church exposed them, the clean image of the Church of Light would surely be tarnished. The thought left Han Shuo somewhat impatient.

"Sacred knight Blount is dead?" Cecilia's petite mouth dropped wide open as she stared bemused at Han Shuo. She could not believe what she was hearing.

“There, right under my feet. That headless body!” Han Shuo said coolly as he pointed at the unsightly Blount. The pool of fresh blood was still warm.

Cecilia’s expression went blank as she stood there, staring, utterly speechless. “Lord Bryan, that, that old woman, why is she here?” Karey asked, pointing at Elizabeth who stood respectfully behind Han Shuo. Karey had almost been killed by Elizabeth.

“From now onwards she will be my slave!” Han Shuo replied. After a short pause, Han Shuo said to Cecilia, “If there’s nothing else, we shall bid farewell!”

Han Shuo did not have much interest in the strange phenomena in the depths of the Tarrag Canyon.

“Erm... err...” Cecelia watched as Han Shuo was leaving, again speechless. She stammered as she filtered through reasons to make him stay, but could not think up an excuse.

All of a sudden, a rumble came from afar, the sound of a mountain collapsing in the depths of the Tarrag Canyon. The ground within a ten mile radius from the epicenter tremored like there was an earthquake.

Han Shuo, who had just been leaving, furrowed his brows, and discovered that herds and herds of magical creatures of the Tarrag Canyon were running desperately for the edges of the Tarrag Canyon. Among them were even a few super-ranked magical beasts.

“What’s going on? What’s happening?” Cecilia cried in shock as she looked in the direction of the sound.

“It came from deep inside the Tarrag Canyon. Something must have happened in there,” Karey blurted.

“Let’s have a look!” Han Shuo said to Cecilia. His curiosity had been evoked, and he no longer had the desire to leave.

“Thank you!” Hearing this, Cecelia’s heart was put at ease. “Don’t worry about it!” Han Shuo replied. He then turned his head and shot a glance at Elizabeth, and instructed, “Follow me!”

“Yes, master!” Elizabeth answered eagerly.

Chapter 449: Going in Alone

Han Shuo, Elizabeth, Cecilia, and the rest were keen on finding out what was happening in the depths of the Tarrag Canyon. Even Han Shuo, who didn't tend to care much for miscellaneous matters like this, was interested and decided to join the investigation.

With their minds set on the task, Han Shuo led the team of over a dozen into the depths of the Tarrag Canyon.

Half an hour later, a herd of five or six hundred magical beasts of all kinds, with several vicious manticores taking the lead, hurtled towards the lot of them.

Following at the back of the herd were some weaker rank four and five creatures, while at the front were hundred high level beasts, about ten manticores taking the lead. Compared to the first wave of magical creatures that attacked Cecilia and her party, this wave was overwhelmingly larger.

The expression on Cecilia's beautiful face suddenly changed, and she ordered her subordinates to get into defense position at once, for the fear that the magical beasts would trample them into meat patty.

"No need for that. It seems that these magical beasts are fleeing for their lives. They're unlikely to attack us!" Han Shuo explained at ease. Through his mystical demons, he could see into the great distance. Three of those demons soared towards the depths of Tarrag Canyon, and discovered that they were not alone. Several other teams of explorers had made their ways past Han Shuo and Cecilia. He also observed that as the magical beasts dashed forward, they made no effort to attack the humans as they had previously done.

After hearing Han Shuo's advice, Cecilia hesitated for a moment, and shouted, "Alright then, let's stick together to avoid the beasts coming our way!"

At her command, the group of Dark Mantle members rushed to gather up with her. Only Elizabeth turned a deaf ear to Cecilia's words, and stood firmly behind Han Shuo.

The so-called heretic to the Church of Light very soon realized that Cecilia was not particularly strong at all. Even with the aid of her twelve subordinates, Elizabeth did not feel that they could be of any sort of assistance. Having witnessed Han Shuo's terrifying strength, Elizabeth, the lesser heretic, had for a long time considered Han Shuo a man who could keep her secure.

Cecilia and her party soon discovered that Han Shuo was indeed correct. The herd of magical beasts that was charging over obviously had discovered the traces of the group of people when they arrived at the area. The beasts merely continued at their pace, passing by as though they had not noticed them.

"Huh? What's going on?" asked Cecilia as though she was talking to herself, but her eyes were on Han Shuo. One thing was for clear to Cecelia, Han Shuo definitely knew something.

Shaking his head, Han Shuo replied, "I'm not sure either. We'll find out when we get closer."

As soon as he finished those words, Han Shuo took charge and strode towards the depths of Tarrag Canyon, not at all concerned about the magical beasts zooming by. Elizabeth followed closely, lest she would fall behind.

"Let's move!" Cecilia ordered tactfully. Along the way, more and more herds of magical beasts ran out from the Tarrag Canyon, including some super-ranked magical creatures. Like the first batch of them, they did not waste any time attacking when they saw Han Shuo and the others, but were preoccupied solely with running away, as though they were running from some disaster.

All of a sudden, Han Shuo's body stopped moving. His three mystical demons deepest into Tarrag Canyon seemed to be blocked by a peculiar energy similar to boundaries. The mystical demons came to a halt, unable to move an inch forward.

"Stop!" Han Shuo yelled. The rest were jolted, and froze beside Han Shuo.

“What’s the matter?” Elizabeth asked.

Han Shuo’s brows creased intensely. His powerful consciousness expanded outwards. An invisible field undulated in the air, like ripples on the surface of water, with Han Shuo at the center. After his consciousness unfolded in all directions, every living thing around him was projected into Han Shuo’s heart.

When his consciousness arrived outside the region from which the three mystical demons were blocked, Han Shuo deployed his demonic arts; his consciousness changed into a form the energy could not detect, and easily broke in. He proceeded to venture deeper.

Within this region, the elements that filled the space between heaven and earth were all strangely absent. He felt not a trace of the elements of light, fire, water, or wind. Even the air was gone. The place truly felt like a vacuum, where one would be overcome by a dreadful sense of suffocation.

As his consciousness continued forwards, he suddenly felt a few enormous presences. These presences were as enormous as that of Ancient Lizard King Dagassi, and brought Han Shuo a profound feeling of threat.

Startled, Han Shuo’s consciousness no longer continued to explore deeper, and suddenly receded like a tide. Shortly after, he opened his eyes and said to Cecilia, “It seems that this time you must give up on continuing to probe deeper!”

“Why?” When Cecilia heard Han Shuo’s words, her heart grew apprehensive.

“I can feel that something peculiar happened in the deepest part of Tarrag Canyon. However, there are some beings of formidable strength present. Right, even for an expert like sacred knight Blount, there’s no doubt that he would have died if he had entered. So, if you are not looking to die, I advise that all of you evacuate immediately, just like those magical creatures,” Han Shuo told them as it was.

There wasn’t just one mighty presence in the depths of Tarrag Canyon. Otherwise, Han Shuo would have still had the guts to bring them deeper.

Given the fact that there were a few of those presences in there, Han Shuo could only ensure his own safety, and certainly couldn't attend to all of them.

"So you are saying that there are very powerful people in there?" Cecilia was greatly alarmed, and again questioned closely.

"I can't be certain if they are human or not. But what's certain is that they are very powerful presences. You will not be able to handle them!" Han Shuo explained. He turned to Elizabeth and instructed, "Go back to Tariq City. I will look for you after I take a look inside. I will be able to find you as long as you are in Tariq City. If you don't do as I say, you will be digging your own graves!"

Elizabeth grew frightened at the sound of that and replied, "Master, rest assured I shall be awaiting your return." Elizabeth did not stay any longer, and left immediately without a second glance at Cecilia and the others.

After Elizabeth left, Han Shuo shot a stare at Cecilia, and gave her a final warning, "I've said all that I ought to say. It's up to you to listen. But if you are to go in there, be forewarned that none of you will come out alive!"

As soon as he finished his words, not waiting for a reply, Han Shuo transformed into a strobe of black lighting, and faded towards the Tarrag Canyon.

It was only when even Han Shuo's shadow could hardly be seen that Cecilia shouted, "Hey! Can you bring us inside for a look," but obviously Han Shuo did not hear that.

"Dame, what should we do?" Karey looked on as even more magical beasts rushed out. Among them was a magnificent silver dragon of over ten meters. He felt a sense of mild apprehension, as it was obvious to him that if a super-ranked magical creature like the huge silver dragon had to make an escape, then there must have been something truly dangerous in the depths of the Tarrag Canyon.

"Dame, why don't we go back as well. Bryan would never lie to us!" Bandits had the innate ability to sense danger. Although he couldn't clearly sense the powerful existences deep in the canyon like Han Shuo could, the stifling in his heart was too difficult to bear. With his many years of adventuring experience as a bandit, this sensation indicated the presence of some overpowering force.

When the bandit opened his mouth, Cecilia, as a fellow comrade for many years, finally turned around to look at the few, and finally her gaze landed on the bandit. In a solemn voice, she asked, "You felt something didn't you? I know that after so many years, your senses have always been accurate."

"Yes, my Lady. It is very dangerous in there. Given our strength, it is not advisable for us to enter," the bandit replied with haste.

"Alright then, we will retreat immediately!" By means of her many years of experience interacting with the bandit, Cecilia finally made a decision, and a wise one at that. She turned around and planned to return to Tariq City using their original route.

A dashing young man appeared on the spot where Han Shuo had stood like a ghost. He had silvery-grey long hair and donned a matching elegant robe adorned with large, embroidered lily flowers on its edges. He was empty-handed, and his feet hovered above the ground as he smiled and asked, "Excuse me, the young man who left here just a moment ago, who is he?"

"Wh... Who are you?" Karey was shocked at the eerie arrival of the young man. He didn't even know how he had gotten there. It was as though he had materialized out of thin air in the wake of Han Shuo's absence.

Cecilia took one look at the young man, and the tip of her brow twitched. "Don't know," she replied bluntly. "Come on. We will leave here at once."

She began to march away, somewhat frenetic and hurried. Although Karey and the others felt that something wasn't quite right with Cecilia they, as mere subordinates, did not question her, nor did they respond to the young man, but immediately followed behind Cecilia and left.

"What a bunch of uncultured children. Kids these days know nothing about respect for their elders!” the bewitchingly handsome young man sighed grudgingly, as though he was lamenting the ways of the world. He then headed in the same direction as Han Shuo and into the depths of Tarrag Canyon like a ghost.

“My Lady, who was that person? It felt as though you knew him?” Only after sprinting into the distance, far away, and when Cecilia’s slightly slowed down, did the clever bandit open his mouth to ask.

“He is the protector of the current seven grand duchies, State Preceptor of the former Verdun Dynasty – Stratholme the old monster!” Cecilia replied with a bitter smile.

Chapter 450: Twelve Round Spheres

Without the burden that was Cecilia and her gang, Han Shuo strided into the depths of the Tarrag Canyon. Along the way, he traipsed through throngs of magical beasts, mid-and high-level ones scattered throughout.

But when Han Shuo arrived where his mystical demons had come to a halt, he no longer saw a single magical creature. A pungent scent waft in the air where Han Shuo sensed no magical elements. Something was very, very wrong.

Surveying the scene surrounding him, all Han Shuo could see was the endless trails left by magical creatures all the way into an infinite distance, millions or billions of footprints. Apart from this, there wasn't much useful information. The few mighty presences he had sensed with his consciousness previously gave Han Shuo a sense of his own mortality.

On the plus side, Han Shuo had only himself to worry about, and with his current strength, he believed that even if he didn't manage to defeat the forces inside, escaping unscathed wouldn't be too much of a task, so long as he wasn't surrounded. It was self-confidence that allowed Han Shuo to venture in alone.

Wishing not to linger for extended periods, he entered the region. That strange energy that had thwarted the mystical demons did not have the same effect on an expert like Han Shuo. With a sway of his body, Han Shuo passed through the liquid-like defense effortlessly, and proceeded with his descent with the aid of the sensing capabilities of his consciousness.

Not a moment later, the State Preceptor of the former Verdun Dynasty, Stratholme, arrived at the region where Han Shuo had just been standing. Along the way, Stratholme the old monster babbled what sounded like gibberish to himself, and only ceased his blabbering as he paused outside the region. He let out a gentle gasp. The old monster had obviously discovered the energy field meant to hinder any average person. He waved his hand, and his left hand pressed on the empty air gracefully, as though he was pushing open an incorporeal door. His body then drifted in through the air like a ghost, and disappeared in the blink of an eye.

Not long after Stratholme entered, another person arrived. The lightly-built old man had bushy, snowy brows so long that they flowed to his neck. From the outer perimeter of the region, lightning pierced through the invisible defense like a sword, allowing him to intrude.

Then, yet another person, a delicate and dignified madame, whose body was wrapped in layers of mist, passed seamlessly through the defense.

Soon afterwards, several more teams of adventurers, who regarded themselves with decent strength, arrived as well. Their curiosity compelled them to delve into the area, but they were nevertheless forcibly prevented by the defensive shield. No matter how hard they tried, they could not break through the defense. All they could do was gaze into the air and lament their inadequacies.

Han Shuo, the first person to intrude, carefully concealed his presence, and his enormous consciousness went from overflowing to restrained. Instead of barging all the way forward like he had previously done, he first wrapped up his own body, and hid in the shadows of some colossally tall trees, pacing himself as he journeyed forward.

Not only was any elemental energy absent in this region, but even oxygen in the atmosphere was extremely thin. Utilizing his exquisite ability to exercise control over his body, Han Shuo closed all the pores on his skin, stopped his breathing and heartbeat, and had his demonic yuan slowly revolve around the demonic infant. As a consequence, unless one caught sight of Han Shuo with their own eyes, even one with the most outstanding strength would not be able to detect Han Shuo's presence through their perception.

Along the way, severed limbs of magical beast littered the grounds, which were further stained with various assortments of fresh, colourful blood from the magical creatures. It seemed that the mangled bodies lying around were all of high-ranking magical creatures levels two and above. Severed limbs of super-ranked creatures such as the dragon could be seen everywhere.

Without needing much thought, Han Shuo understood that it was the tragic deaths of these high-ranking magical creatures that caused all the other magical beasts of Tarrag Canyon to flee. Indeed, if not for the countless dead high-ranking creatures, the other magical beasts which had lived their whole lives in the depths of Tarrag Canyon would never desert their home all so suddenly.

What was actually going on in there? Han Shuo got even more curious.

Doing his best to blend in with his surroundings, towering trees and thick shrubs, Han Shuo hiked for another ten minutes at a moderate pace, and finally reached the deepest part of Tarrag Canyon. Once inside, the scene of an endless, crystalline lake caught Han Shuo's eyes.

The water was so serene and pure that it looked like a huge mirror laid over the land, not even the teensiest ripple could be seen. This view of vast blue waters simply wasn't enough, however, to distract from the surrounding landscape of the countless carcasses of super-ranked magical creatures, all of which seemed to have died under the most inexplicably gruesome circumstances, and not a single one of which wasn't severely dismembered.

The brilliant hue that filled this great lake at the heart of the canyon resembled that of a sapphire crystal, refracting a resplendent blue under the gentle illumination of sunlight. The encircling sea of remains of super-ranked magical creatures left an exceedingly unsettling atmosphere.

Han Shuo concealed himself behind the lush leaves of a broad tree. His eyes squinted slightly as he looked over to the lake in the distance.

At the center of the huge mass of water was an isle of flat land. There stood dozens of humanoids whom Han Shuo did not recognize. They were densely packed on the island, all with the same solemn looks on their faces as they worshipped in the direction of a tall, pointed building that resembled an altar, located at the center of the isle.

If it weren't for their light-green skin, their python-like tail, and the pointy horns protruding from their foreheads to their napes, perhaps Han Shuo might have regarded them as human beings.

However, with those three distinctive features, Han Shuo would never, ever view them as humans. The mouths of these humanoids let out peculiar buzzing sounds similar those of cicadas as they kowtowed to give worship to the altar.

This altar was similar to magical towers often used by a magus. At the top of the pointed altar laid the hearts of countless magical beasts, reeking of rotting fish alongside bright, clean magical cores. Four humanoids, likely the leaders of this troupe, each with a row of five pointed horns growing from their foreheads to their collarbones, stood at the four corners of the altar. They spoke in a mysterious language akin to the droning of insects as they threw hundreds upon hundreds of those hearts and cores into a giant, grotesque oral cavity filled with thick mucus at the center of the altar.

The four figures were the powerful presences that Han Shuo had previously sensed. As they stood within close range, even without his consciousness to expand and actively probe, Han Shuo could sense the formidable aura emanating from them. Han Shuo reckoned he could handle one of those creatures alone. But if all four of them were to attack together, Han Shuo could only attempt to escape.

After observing for a while, Han Shuo quickly discovered that the strengths of these creatures were entirely differentiable by the pointy horns on the top of their heads. Among the beings on the isle, the four at each corner wielded the most terrifying strength. Around the altar and below their feet, there were a dozen or more creatures with four horns on their heads, and they stood closest to the altar.

One would find less and less pointed horns on the kowtowing creatures the further he looked around the altar. The creatures situated at the outermost perimeter donned merely a single horn.

All of a sudden, an occurrence familiar to Han Shuo captured his attention.

At the peak of the pointed altar, suddenly, a wave of tentacles slowly hoisted twelve round spheres the size of fists. One of those spheres emanated a pure aura of death, which caused Han Shuo to palpitate. It had never crossed his mind that an aura of death could be so pure.

In any plane where life was existent, there would naturally be such incidents as birth, senescence, illness, and death. As long as lives continued to end, the element of death would be present in that plane of existence. However, most creatures exhibited in addition a hideous mess of emotions like fear, rage, stubbornness, and resentment just before they met their ends.

It was precisely due to the presence of these emotions that the element of death could not be pure and on any plane of existence. Even in the netherworld where Little Skeleton resided, the element of death was always contaminated with chaotic impurities aplenty.

However, within the sphere, Han Shuo felt only the element of death in its purest form, no impurities whatsoever. On top of that, it contained an overwhelming amount of the element of death, and therefore proved an irresistible temptation for a necromancer like Han Shuo.

Instinctively, Han Shuo believed that the sphere could bring him immense benefits. If it wasn't for the exclusive control he held over his physical body, perhaps Han Shuo's heart would have begun beating faster from the excitement.

Han Shuo was thrilled. While he concentrated his attention on the sphere of death, he began to study the other eleven spheres using his consciousness.

After much surveying, Han Shuo was again shocked to the core. Of the other eleven spheres, seven of them contained elemental energy just as pure as the one containing death. These were namely light, darkness, wind, fire, water, electricity, and earth.

As for the remaining four spheres, although they did not contain pure elemental energy, they still contained some bizarre energy, one of which was the extremely rare energy of destruction. Another seemed to be a condensed form of fighting aura, constantly emitting different shades of fighting aura from dark blue to golden. The last two were even more baffling. Their insides were flowing like the revolution of celestial bodies, which, after great amount of contemplation, Han Shuo felt were somewhat similar to the uncommon aura found on certain space magus and summoners.

Twelve round spheres in total. Generally dim and dull, brownish in colour. They looked rather unexceptional from a distance. Perhaps, only a figure at Han Shuo's level could understand just how mysterious, strange, and diverse the energies that these spheres contained were.

Chapter 451: Origin Crystals

After the twelve round spheres had appeared in the middle of the altar, intense elemental energy of all sorts, suddenly filled up the area which was previously devoid of any energy.

Concurrently, the four humanoids who were on the altar, each bearing five horns on their head, quickly sped up pouring the huge amount of magical creatures' hearts and crystal cores into that big mouth.

There were thousands just like them worshipping the event under the altar. Their green eyes shone with excitement. They were not unlike the religious fanatics Han Shuo had come across, carrying a bigoted, unreasonably zealous attitude. Their bodies shivered slightly, whilst their droning sound gradually grew more and more energetic.

Han Shuo, hiding within the thick branches and leaves of a big tree, had a clear observation of everything happening in the big lake ahead. His heart held an uncontrollable desire to possess that ball which emitted the pure elemental aura of death, but still, Han Shuo was not one to behave rashly.

The odd-looking creatures bearing the five horns, all emitted aura which could rival in its formidability to that of the Ancient Lizard King, a demigod existence. If these four creatures were to join forces and circle around Han Shuo, Han Shuo was not certain that he could escape alive.

With eyes full of greediness, Han Shuo's gaze remained unwavering at the round sphere filled with the rich element of death. His mind stated to quickly consider all the ways and consequences of obtaining the sphere.

Suddenly, his senses projected three beings who were roughly similar in might. The appearance of these three beings who were slowly approaching gave Han Shuo an idea, his eyes light up with delight.

Han Shuo who had been very carefully hiding his body since the beginning, gradually glided towards the direction of the three whiffs presences, while quietly releasing a wisp of his own, concealed to which any ordinary person would have no means to discover.

Indeed, as he planned, the strand of presence Han Shuo had deliberately leaked out, immediately caused the approaching experts to sense it. With Han Shuo at the center, the three gathered together within a very short period of time. In the blink of an eye, one after the other, the three mighty beings, originating from the Profound Continent, suddenly assembled a short distance away from Han Shuo.

“Eh? It’s you! The old monster!” As soon as the old man with his eyebrows encroaching his neck reached the place, he let out a soft cry and stared somewhat astonished at the former State Preceptor of Verdun Dynasty, Stratholme.

“Reynold you little bastard! You’re not dead yet! Hehe, good, good.” the handsome, bewitching Stratholme, teased at the lightning sacred magus of Brut Merchant Alliance as he smiled delightedly.

The composed upper-class woman, enveloped in a faint hazy mist, was the last one to arrive. She shot a glance at Stratholme and greeted him in a gentle voice, “Stratholme, long time no see!”

“Elder sister Tiana!” Stratholme the old monster said smilingly after he bowed towards the upper-class woman wrapped in a mist in the distance.

This upper-class woman called Tiana nodded her head at the old monster in acknowledgement, and soon after turned to look at the smiling Han Shuo and asked in a puzzled face, “This is..?”

“Hehe, I’m a nobody. Erm, I came from the Lancelot Empire!” While Han Shuo was gracefully bowing at the three, his heart was filled with shock. He didn’t expect that the old man with the long eyebrows was the lightning sacred magus Reynold Dila of the Brut Merchant Alliance.

As a high ranking member of the Dark Mantle, Han Shuo was aware of just how renowned this old man was in the Brut Merchant Alliance. Even the leaders from the core merchant guilds that formed the Brut Merchant Alliance, had to be reverent and respectful towards this old man, and will absolutely not be unbridled in front of him.

And yet, amongst the three, such a character was the one with the weakest strength.

In contrast to Stratholme the old monster, and the upper-class woman named Tiana, Reynold the lighting sacred magus was considerably more inferior. No matter how formidable Reynold was at the sacred grade, he was merely a sacred grade expert.

But Han Shuo could feel the formidable aura of a demigod level expert from the body of Tiana, the upper-class woman, and Stratholme the old monster. Stratholme the old monster had a well-known reputation, and Han Shuo had heard of him time and time again. That this dirty old man who was the State Preceptor of Verdun Dynasty about a hundred years ago, could breakthrough to the demigod realm, is sufficient to illustrate just how terrifying his strength must be.

Stratholme the old monster whose appearance was inconsistent with his actual age addressed the upper-class woman as 'Elder Sister Tiana'. Although Han Shuo is one of the highest ranking members in the Dark Mantle, he had no idea who this upper-class woman was. But by inferring on how Stratholme addressed her, Han Shuo reasoned that this woman must be somewhat older than Stratholme.

"Lancelot Empire? Since when did the Lancelot Empire possess an expert of such youth?" Tiana was somewhat flabbergasted and she, in a puzzled face, looked towards the old monster Stratholme and lighting sacred magus Reynold.

"Bryan? Are you the city lord of Brettle City, that Bryan?" At first, Stratholme's brows were creased, but soon after he realized something and beam of glistening light shoot out from his eyes, landing on Han Shuo's body.

"That's right!" Han Shuo admitted.

"No wonder. It seems that rumors still possess some truth in them. I always thought that the Lancelot Empire exaggerated in saying that you forced two sacred-grade experts to retreat. Now it seems that there had indeed been such an incident!" the old monster said as he nodded.

When lighting sacred magus Reynold heard Han Shuo admit his identity, he focused his attention on Han Shuo. After carefully sizing Han Shuo up, with a weird look on his face, he said, "So it's you. Hmm, what a brazen young man. Interesting."

"Alright, let's cut to the chase. I believe everyone is aware of the situation. For the time being, we don't have to worry about the whole sequence of events, but I presume that all of you know the nature of the twelve balls. The four fellas with the five horns, each possessed demigod like strength. None among the four of us have the chance to succeed by going in alone. Are you all interested in cooperating?" Tiana the upper-class woman interrupted.

"Of course! The sooner the better!" Stratholme the old monster was the first to concur.

Lighting sacred magus Reynold of Brut Merchant Alliance, not only nodded in immediate response, but he added further, "I'm aware of my capabilities. Of the twelve balls, I'm only asking for the Origin Crystal of Lightning. Moreover, I will be in charge of dealing with the aftermath!"

"Alright. After it's done, the Origin Crystal of Lightning will be yours. As for the both of you, we will divide the spoils according to our contributions. Any objections?" Tiana said solemnly as she looked at the old monster and Han Shuo. Naturally, she expects Han Shuo to agree to the proposal.

"I don't have any objections. I trust that elder sister Tiana will be impartial!" Stratholme replied in a relaxed manner as he shrugged. Immediately after that he turned to look at Han Shuo and asked, "What about you?"

Han Shuo saw fit to join forces with them. However, it seemed that all of them knew about the nature of the spheres, and only Han Shuo had no idea about their functions, even though he could sense the boundless energy within. Therefore, when Stratholme averted the question to him, Han Shuo replied awkwardly, "I have no objection either. It's just that, erm, honorable elders, what exactly are those twelve round spheres?"

All three of them simultaneously turned expressionless, as they took a double take at Han Shuo. Stratholme stared blankly for a while, and said smilingly, “You don’t know?”

Shaking his head, Han Shuo honestly admitted, “I really don’t know.”

“Those are Origin Crystals of elements. After merging it with a magus’ soul, it will morph the soul into a Soul of Element, causes the magus’ affinity of the element to improve by a hundredfold, and reach a state where they will be most compatible with their elemental energy – a magus with Soul of Element could deploy magical spells instantaneously. Also, it will speed up a magus’ comprehension towards the understanding of the energy of same origin. Erm, in short, it comprises of a lengthy list of benefits!” Stratholme the old monster explained for Han Shuo forthright.

“The most important thing to note is that, only a magus that has formed a Soul of Element possesses the capabilities to become a god in their line of magic. Soul of Element and Body of Element are the foundations for a magus to become a god!” The upper-class woman Tiana added on top of old monster Stratholme’s explanation in a grave expression.

After hearing what both of them had to say, brilliant rays shot out from lightning sacred magus Reynold’s eyes like bite-sized lightning bolts were being discharged within his eyes. It was obvious that he was extremely thrilled.

Han Shuo, who was just as shocked, let out a soft cry. He finally understood why they were so excited and restless. Shortly after, he turned his attention to the twelve round balls far in the distance. After a short pause, he asked, “There are four balls without the presence of pure and intense elements. What about those?”

“Your are indeed attentive in your observations. Not all magic in this world is necessarily reliant on elements. Space magic and summoning magic are examples of that. Ok, the interior of those two spheres are in a nebula state. Those are the principles and profound comprehension towards space magic and summoning, and they can fuse with a magus’ soul to form Soul of Principles, which is somewhat similar to the Soul of Element. Soul of Principles could be used by a magus to further their understanding towards the mysteries of space or summoning, and it is only by having a certain level of comprehension towards the mysteries of those principles, that a magus could truly become a god, instead of demigod!” the upper-class woman Tiana explained after she gazed at Han Shuo in an astonished manner, somewhat surprised at Han Shuo’s remarkable sensory.

“The last two balls. The one constantly radiating lights of fighting aura is suitable for swordsman and knights to use, and helps warriors like us, form a Soul of War. Again, it has different effects compared to the others, but in essence it is basically the same – allowing us to save a hundred or even a few hundred years worth of time, in making our souls to possess the foundations of becoming a god. As for the last sphere that carries the aura of destruction, er, only suitable for psychos. No sane person would ever touch that!” Stratholme continued.

“Let’s move, there’s no more time for chit-chat!” Tiana suddenly spoke. Right after she finished those words, an azure coloured staff appeared in her hand.

Chapter 452: Demonic Blades

The azure staff materialized in Tiana's hand and immediately, the element of water came to life in the region, which had just regained a presence of elements. The dry air was now filled with moisture, while the blanket of fog that lingered around Tiana grew thicker.

"Reynold, take care of those in the outermost perimeter. You two get close to retrieve the Origin Crystal. I will deploy magic from the sides to assist the two of you. Tiana bluntly elected herself to be the leader, as the staff in her hand began to rapidly absorb the rich element of water in the region.

"Let's go!" shouted the old monster Stratholme in a low voice. A simple and unadorned longsword the width of about two fingers fell into his hand. Immediately after he spoke, he flew off a hundred meters away, charging straight towards the aliens, who were holding some sort of wicked ceremony.

Han Shuo was empty-handed. When he saw Stratholme suddenly on the move, Han Shuo reduced to a cloud of black light and followed tightly behind Stratholme. While in the air, Han Shuo's ten fingernails started to grow rapidly. Within the blink of an eye, they were a meter long. His frightening fingernails twinkled with the incisive gloss of the edge of a knife.

'Demonic Blades' was a demonic art that could only be practiced by one who had reached the Carnal Realm, as the body of a demonic practitioner could only prompt the sudden growth of demonic claws within the realm. Naturally, those in the demonic sect would not simply call their own fingernails, however long they were, 'claws', therefore they were dubbed 'Demonic Blades'.

After the meter-long fingernails were perfused with demonic yuan, the Demonic Blades truly resembled sharp blades, even somewhat sharper than some regular grade A weapons.

When Stratholme the old monster finally found the time to take a glance behind, he was shocked by the bizarre changed on Han Shuo's two hands, wondering, is this kid even human? How are his nails sharper than the sharpest knives?

Buzz... Buzz...

The aliens in the midst of a procession immediately sensed some incoming danger. They let out an ear-piercing noise that resonated through the sky. For one who was no real expert like Han Shuo and the three, one such as Cecilia, that buzzing alone would cause their eardrums to rupture.

"I'll go right and you take the left. Let's move!" Stratholme the old monster shouted loudly. An unhealthy light grey appeared on his handsome face. Before Han Shuo could answer, the old monster's speed multiplied abruptly, and he streaked across the surface of the vast lake in an instant, heading into the isle covered with aliens.

With one sweep of the longsword in Stratholme's hand, colourless and formless fighting aura erupted like a volcano. The bodies of a dozen or more aliens closest to Stratholme exploded violently, shattering into pieces just three meters from him.

For swordsmen and knights, even though they possessed fighting aura, their fighting aura carried different colours. From the pale blue fighting aura of a swordsman apprentice to the gold fighting aura of a sacred swordmaster, they all varied in colours. Legend had it that only an expert who had broke through to divine swordmaster could possess colourless and formless fighting aura. This Stratholme before his eyes was evidently one of the said experts on the level of divine swordmaster.

If not for Han Shuo's mighty consciousness, and his unwavering attention to Stratholme's attack movements, he perhaps wouldn't have had so easily noticed the intimidating colourless, formless fighting aura condensed in his longsword. Without any colour as indicators, the opponent would hardly be able to tell just how horrific the fighting aura was, and it would surely leave any opponent of his with a headache.

Absolutely marvelous! Indeed a true, out-and-out demigod expert! No wonder sacred swordmaster Karel and Dempus suffered such a crestfallen defeat. Han Shuo thought inwardly, having witnessed Stratholme's attack.

Even while observing Stratholme, Han Shuo's own movements weren't slowing a tad. By the time Stratholme swept out his longsword, Han Shuo had landed in the middle of another side of the aliens. Hundreds of humanoids with green skin, python-like tails and one or two horns on their head, coldly fixed their green eyes on Han Shuo. A dozen or more of those aliens were already charging at him.

"Hmph, just in time to try my new demonic art Demonic Blades on you fools," Han Shuo said to himself in a low voice, sneering. His two bladed hands moved succinctly in a criss-cross motion. Dazzling lights flashed one after another as Han Shuo made his way forward, laughing grimly.

The few aliens that had tried to approach him were now sliced into shreds, their bodies reduced to the fleshy equivalent of julienned vegetables. Some of those aliens even maintained running position, but their heads and half of their bodies would fall apart cleanly.

Even more aliens turned into severed limbs and corpses in a flash. Perhaps Han Shuo had waved his Demonic Blades too rapidly, or maybe the Demonic Blades themselves were excessively sharp, but there was not a single shriek from the aliens, not even an expression of pain on their faces.

As if an incorporeal incisive weapon was being unceasingly whirled around his body at such high speeds it was impossible to see, Han Shuo advanced towards the center of the isle and the aliens who were charging towards him from all around simply split into pieces. Not one of them could get anywhere closer than three meters to Han Shuo.

Lightning sacred magus Reynold who had just released large-scale lightning magic, 'Omnipresent Lightning', revealed a rather ugly expression. Under his voice he exclaimed, "What a terrifying young man. It's no wonder Brettel City was left so brazen!"

Just then, a dense element of lightning converged from all around. The bright, clear sky turned into hundreds, maybe thousands of lightning bolts with the girth of an infant's arm. Accompanied by the fierce rumbling of thunder, the lightning tangled in the air like dragons before striking the isle in the middle of the lake.

At long last, Han Shuo finally witnessed just the severity of a magical spell cast by a sacred grade magus!

Hundreds of thousands of lightning bolts struck down like a thunderstorm in the bright, clear sky. Jolts of lightning of differing diameters filled the sky. Although Reynold's target was merely the isle in the middle of the lake, the coverage area of this 'Omnipresent Lightning' spell was clearly far wider.

As thunder and lightning bombarded the ground below, the deep blue lake transformed into an ocean of electrical sparks. The tranquility of the lake was completely disrupted by the rumbling. One after another, jets of water mixed with the power of lightning shot to the sky. The water pillars were extremely muddy, obviously expelled from the bottom of the lake by the thunder.

Strands of electric currents flooded the big lake. Fish and shrimp, which weren't considered magical creatures, floated on the surface with their stomachs to the sky, dead beyond all doubt.

If the mere boundary was such a horrific sight already, then surely those aliens on the isle, the true targets, were suffering even more devastation. Heavy lightning struck the land, densely packed. Each and everyone of those aliens collapsed to the ground, letting off thick, black smoke.

Of the aliens with less than three horns on their heads, not one survived the attack of the lightning magic.

Those with three horns were trembling to insanity, and must have suffered rather extensive injuries. Only the four-horned aliens emerged unscathed. Each of them had their eyes locked firmly on Stratholme and Han Shuo, ready to gang up and attack.

The five-horned alien leaders had managed not only to deflect all lightning, but before the lightning even came close to them, they perished due to the energy they emitted, causing absolutely no harm. Of the four alien leaders, two remained in their posts to proceed with the ceremony, while the other two slowly rose up to the sky, and headed towards Stratholme and Han Shuo.

For Stratholme and Han Shuo, as the main assault forces, this kind of high-coverage lightning magic had hardly any adverse effects on them. They continued to charge towards the altar.

The aliens with one or two horns had had no chance of attacking Stratholme, and were massacred under the two's attacks. And while those with three horns could, with a higher moving speed and better bodily defense, they were barely enough to resist the two for a while, yet unable to hinder the pace of the two as they charged ahead.

However, the four-horned aliens were flight-capable. Over a dozen of these aliens closed in on Stratholme and Han Shuo separately. Even with the incisive longsword and Demonic Blades wielded by Stratholme and Han Shuo respectively, they could only leave blood traces, and couldn't behead the aliens effortlessly like before.

The four-horned aliens were, despite their strength, somewhat inferior to a sacred swordmaster, they weren't much of a gap apart. Surrounded by threateningly powerful four-horned aliens, even Han Shuo and Stratholme held back.

But even more frightening was that two of the alien leaders with five horns were stepping down from the altar. Han Shuo had long appraised the strength of these two alien chiefs. Their cold green eyes lacked the emotion that any mortal being would display. Even as they approached, a kind of destructive aura wildly converging on their bodies.

"Elder Sister Tiana, can you do it now?" Stratholme the old monster yelled.

"Hang in there for two minutes. It will be ready very soon!" Tiana replied from a great distance.

Han Shuo felt the temperature was dropping rapidly in the area. The vast lake, which was still spurting a moment before, had actually turned into thick layer of ice at some point. Lightning still thrashed now and then, but surprisingly, were unable to break the thick layer of ice. The even more terrifying fact was that the surrounding temperature was ever falling. There seemed not to be a hint of warmth between heaven and earth, only a spine-chilling coldness.

Chapter 453: Icebound

As the pair of five-horned aliens dove downwards, Han Shuo felt an enormous pressure crashing onto him. One of them was plunging towards Han Shuo from high up in the air. The five horns protruding from its head were flaring with cold, dark green light, causing them to look like five jade batons from afar.

Before Han Shuo could even react, he felt his consciousness being violently stung by five mysterious energy forces. The five rays of energy felt like sharp awls, dealing an enormous stabbing pain onto Han Shuo.

His consciousness seemed to be thumped!

The whirling motion Han Shuo was making with his two hands while wielding Demonic Blades abruptly halted. The seven four-horned aliens which had surrounded Han Shuo continued to close in on him, and the horns on their heads similarly shone with dark green radiance. Shortly after, twenty-eight mysterious energy forces came pouring into Han Shuo's consciousness, and with that followed another twenty-eight weaker attacks on his soul.

What a splitting headache!

That was the most direct string of blows he had ever perceived. The acute pain even caused Han Shuo momentary vertigo and hallucination. Although an attack on the soul was a rather straightforward technique, it could give one an immense pain as though his brain was being rummaged with knife blades.

Countless years of cultivation in the demonic arts had caused Han Shuo to develop his ability to endure pain to an extraordinary stage. Not only did the demonic arts allow Han Shuo's soul to evolve into a high-level consciousness, it also made his consciousness more tenacious and miraculous than a normal human being could ever imagine.

In all those days of the constant, perverted tempering of his body, he had endured pain and agony that no ordinary person could endure. Thus, when the stinging pain suddenly burst forth in his mind, the dizziness only lasted for two seconds!

After those two seconds, the blood essence within Han Shuo's demonic infant flared up, and instantaneously, his consciousness gained an inexhaustible energy.

Unexpectedly, the lump of consciousness in his brain broke into millions of strands. The energy forces attacking Han Shuo's consciousness suddenly lost their target!

A moment later, Han Shuo's scattered consciousness regrouped at the site of his demonic infant.

The altogether thirty-three soul-attacking energy forces reacted as they sensed the reappearance of Han Shuo's consciousness. However, before they could attack again, Han Shuo's consciousness, which was fused with the demonic infant, suddenly released an absorption force of utmost ferocity!

The 'Demonic Art of Assimilation', which represented the inherent attribute of demonic cultivators to devour everything, was deployed with the demonic infant as the root. A violent vortex formed.

Of the mysterious energy forces aimed at attacking Han Shuo's consciousness, twenty-eight were trapped by the absorption force before they could pull out from Han Shuo's body!

Han Shuo tightened his consciousness. Like a giant whale inhaling, twenty-eight soul-attacking energy forces entered the tiny mouth of the demonic infant.

The five mysterious energy forces that originated from the alien leader, however, seemed to be a step ahead. When Han Shuo's consciousness regathered in the demonic infant to form the 'Demonic Art of Assimilation', the five mysterious energies seemed to have sensed danger and escaped from Han Shuo's body in advance.

"ROAR!" Han Shuo shouted loudly after having sensed his demonic infant breaking down and absorbing the mysterious energy. The Demonic Blades in his two hands thawed and resumed their rapid whirling.

When the five horns on the alien leader shone brightly it was already charging rapidly towards the seven quadrahorned alien experts. The green pupils that locked coldly on Han Shuo suddenly seemed to contain an extra trace of fear. The blueish-green lustered horns on their heads turned a bleak shade.

Only the alien leader that descended from the top of the altar retained the tint of its five horns. It looked as if the five mysterious energy forces that left Han Shuo's body in advance had been recalled to its source, so as to not suffer further damage.

Before reaching the Carnal Realm, Han Shuo already understood that the demonic arts, which benefits one to the detriment of others, possesses the miraculous ability to engulf energy. With Han Shuo's leveling up in demonic realm, the demonic infant's ability to engulf energy for its own use became increasingly prominent.

However, perhaps it was because demonic cultivators belonged to an extremely wicked faction, the demon infant's engulfment seemed to reject all positive energy, including holy energy and fighting aura. It was as though the demon infant refused to absorb this energy in order to preserve the pure wickedness of the energy in Han Shuo's body.

When it came to chaotic, negative energy that caused violence and corruption, no matter how strange or mysterious the origin, once it fell deep into Han Shuo's body, the demonic infant would always magically absorb it, and convert it into the purest, most suitable energy for the demon infant to continue growing and evolving.

It was such with the wicked energy in Elizabeth's body, and with the energy contained in the bodies of these overtly unkind aliens.

Subconsciously, Han Shuo realized that he himself was the big heretic of the evil faction. All kinds of evil energy was his to use!

I am, indeed, a bad guy! Not only that, I'm the also the bad guy that punishes other bad guys!

As Han Shuo thought to himself and laughed, the Demonic Blades in his two hands revolved rapidly, producing flashes nearly invisible to the naked eye.

As for the four-horned aliens nearest to Han Shuo that were unable to retreat in time; before, Han Shuo's Demonic Blades could leave only blood trails on their bodies. But now, after a round of Demonic Blades flashes, Han Shuo discovered that the new wounds on the seven alien experts around him were deep to the bone!

The trace of fear in the green pupils of the seven alien experts turned into sheer dread. All of a sudden, the seven aliens that surrounded him stepped away from Han Shuo uniformly. Fresh, reeking green blood gushed uncontrollably from the new cuts on their bodies!

Han Shuo, too, was dazed. He inspected the meter-long Demonic Blades, almost flabbergasted, not understanding why his Demonic Blades could suddenly deal such extensive injury to the seven aliens.

After some careful thinking, Han Shuo noticed that the only difference between this attack and previous attacks was that the demonic infant had now absorbed the mysterious energy that attacked his soul from the seven aliens. Could the reason have been his demon infant's absorption of the twenty-eight strands of mysterious energy from the aliens?

"Hey! Elder Sister Tiana, could you hurry up a little?" Stratholme's yell sounded a short distance away from Han Shuo as he was pondering.

When Han Shuo turned his head, he discovered that Stratholme was swimming around a group of aliens. Wielding a longsword, his lily-embroidered robe was daubed with fresh green blood. Stratholme gave the impression that he was some sort of germaphobe as he appeared to be extremely uncomfortable with the green blood splattered on his robe.

He attacked with his longsword, swerving around the group of aliens, and would slash off the corners of his bloodstained robe from time to time. Even at such a moment of life and death, he was concerned with the cleanliness of his robe. This simply left Han Shuo between laughter and tears.

Stratholme seemed slightly flustered. Han Shuo couldn't help but sigh at just how mighty and experienced Stratholme the old monster was. All throughout, he did not allow the five-horned alien leader a chance to get near to him, and rather moved around the four-horned aliens that surrounded him in a wonderful pattern. Again and again he would strike with his sword, and there would be another blood hole on an alien's body.

Ginger gets spicier with age. This old monster is a cunning and seasoned adversary, Han Shuo thought as he formed an impression of Stratholme.

"Done!" yelled upper-class woman Tiana from her distant hiding place.

Soon after, the temperature in the region plunged. Gusts of bone-chilling wind converged in an instant and slithered around like a giant anaconda. Even the four-horned aliens, once swept by the cold air, froze into ice sculptures. Among those formed were four columns of cold air of the greatest thickness, and they fiercely enveloped each and every one of the four alien leaders.

The two on top at the altar and another two under the altar were shrouded by dense, frigid air, specifically prepared for them by Tiana. The four alien leaders, who were nearly a head taller than the rest of their species, did not immediately turn into ice even through the cold air, so cold it could freeze space-time itself.

But still, they suffered some effects. Their bodies were visibly freezing. Crackling noises could be heard from the alien leader pursuing Stratholme, as its speed decreased gradually. And finally it was as slow as a snail, its bodily functions largely compromised by the cold air.

After that one magical spell was deployed by Tiana, the space between the heaven and earth became a frozen realm. The entire lake was frozen over. The cold air, the atmosphere, human shadows; everything seemed to have paused. Besides Stratholme the old monster, Han Shuo, and Tiana, nothing could leap or frisk about.

Han Shuo, too, quivered and silently cursed about the crippling coldness! After a few glances at the five-horned alien moving sluggish, yet mechanically, Han Shuo was finally certain that Tiana was a water divine magus. Otherwise, her bone-chilling air would never have been able to freeze the demi-godlike aliens.

“Now is the time, go grab the things!” commanded Tiana. A trace of unquestionable excitement could be heard in her voice.

The Origin Crystal of Water!

Despite having lived as long as she had, hiding in the shadows of the continent for however many years she had, it still proved an unrestrainable temptation for the water divine magus!

“Move!” yelled Stratholme the old monster suddenly. A new set of silvery-grey, lily-embroidered robes replaced his previous frayed robe. His gaze was fervent as he watched the round sphere radiating lights of fighting aura. His body shot out like lightning.

Of course, Han Shuo didn't want to fall behind. For the first time ever, he deployed 'Art of the Demonic Ninth Heavens' to its fullest. Reynold and Tiana were blind to his flight path. By the time he had reached the top of the altar, his own shadow under the altar where he had just stood had yet to vanish.

Please consider supporting the project on Patreon!

Chapter 454: Plundering Treasures

When Han Shuo and Stratholme the old monster arrived at the top of the altar, neither seemed to have any hesitation whatsoever. They immediately reached their hands out to grab the twelve balls hoisted by the fleshy tentacles.

Needless to say, Stratholme the old monster first grabbed the sphere radiating lights of fighting aura, while Han Shuo aimed at the sphere emanating the pure aura of death. Out of some miracle, Han Shuo happened to land just where he needed to, near the orb that he had been eyeing so yearningly. As he extended his mighty hand, his meter-long fingernails shrunk and vanished bafflingly.

Just before Han Shuo's mighty hand could land on the orb, an anomaly occurred. The twelve tentacles, which had been static since they rose from the altar, suddenly began to writhe frantically. To his surprise, he managed to grasp nothing but the air.

"Huh?!" Stratholme cried out in surprise. His body shifted at high speed, and layers of phantom trails of his hands could be seen. His eyes were fixed on the Origin Crystal of Fighting Aura, not letting go for even a moment.

The twelve fleshy tentacles wriggled about much like a monster. Clouds of heavy green mist began to drift from the middle of the altar which, in an instant, had spread all around the isle. A shiver ran down Han Shuo's spine and he was sure something was very wrong.

Meanwhile, the four five-horned aliens icebound by Tiana's cold streams of air, let out popping sounds as their green skin made contact with the mist. Their stiff bodies began to tremble, accompanied by creaking noises. Their sluggish movements became faster and faster. The two alien leaders on the altar shot cold stares at Han Shuo and Stratholme respectively.

"Quick! They have broken the seal," warned Tiana anxiously, raising her voice from afar.

Han Shuo recovered from his trance and his demonic yuan began to churn faster than ever. The alien on the altar charged at Han Shuo and the latter suddenly roared.

Twelve mystical demons which had been hiding in the surroundings in an immaterial state suddenly solidified to form physical bodies. Each and everyone of them let out malevolent and horrifying shrieks as they stormed towards the twelve spheres.

Han Shuo paid no heed to the alien headed straight at him but sped up to maximum capacity and stared fixedly at the sphere overflowing with the pure aura of death.

Deep within his heart arose a sort of feeling of unwell. Although he had confidence in the speed of his twelve mystical demons, the leakage of strange scents from the altar along with the green mist gave Han Shuo a palpitating uneasiness.

He therefore could not place all his hope on his twelve mystical demons. He, too, made a move without the slightest hesitation.

Buzz Buzz...

An insufferable buzz sounded from the mucousy mouth at the center of the altar. An eerie sensation that would make one's hair to stand on end disseminated throughout the region in a second.

This buzzing was as sharp as a sword and carried an unstoppable soul-attacking firepower. Compared to the soul attack that the five-horned alien leader unleashed just prior, this one was over ten times as strong!

Han Shuo's consciousness took a hit before he was able to completely scatter it. The pricking pain that followed exceeded any sort of pain that Han Shuo had ever suffered in all his years.

Unable to withstand the ache on his consciousness, Han Shuo almost fainted and his vision blurred. Within a split second, a fantasy land arose in Han Shuo's mind, his hands and feet turned cold and limp.

Han Shuo's consciousness sustained heavy damage. His body fell through the air involuntarily.

Suddenly, Han Shuo's consciousness, still hallucinating, felt twelve small, consecutive stabs of pain. Of course, relative to the sting loud buzzing on his consciousness, this kind of pain was totally negligible.

However, it was precisely thanks to these twelve stabs of pain projected in his consciousness that Han Shuo, who had entered a land of fantasy due to the fainting, promptly awoke. His body did not continue to plunge helplessly towards the ground.

At the next moment, Han Shuo realized that the twelve mystical demons he had painstakingly refined had their souls all completely annihilated!

The horrible buzzing was mixed with soul attacking energy. Given that even Han Shuo's consciousness could suffer serious damage, the twelve mystical demons refined from his blood essence clearly would never have survived!

Upon regaining awareness, Han Shuo halted the fall of his body. He suddenly found that right beside him were three spheres emanating different energies.

One was the Origin Crystal containing the pure element of death, another Origin Crystal contained the pure element of darkness. The last sphere was brimming with the energy of destruction!

Perhaps it was because the three balls were a class of treasure that only an evil powerhouse would be willing to hold together. When the awful loud buzzing began, the twelve madly convulsing muscles ceased to move. Eventhough Han Shuo's consciousness had suffered a heavy blow and nearly fell off, by clinging onto his determination, he arrived at the three spheres.

Of course, the twelve mystical demons had played a role as well. Were it not for the deaths of the twelve mystical demons reflecting their pains onto their host, Han Shuo might regrettably have had fallen into the giant grotesque mouth at the center of the altar!

Without any hesitation and with great difficulty, Han Shuo resisted the discomfort in his brain, took out the Demonslayer Edge which was still in hibernation stage and made use of its incisiveness to cut off three of the tentacles. Subsequently, his space ring flashed and the three orbs entered his space ring, along with the tentacles holding them.

After successfully collecting three Origin Crystals, Han Shuo felt somewhat more relieved of the sorrow of losing his twelve mystical demons. At a glance, Han Shuo's gaze locked on an Origin Crystal of Fire ten meters away from him. Just as he was about to make a move to collect it, he heard Stratholme the old monster's shout, "Hurry! Get out of here!"

This loud warning from Stratholme was meant specifically for Han Shuo. Han Shuo immediately turned his head to look at Stratholme, and suddenly discovered that his silvery-grey robe was stained with fresh blood, dark red in colour. His seven apertures flowed unceasingly with blood. It was apparent that the fresh blood on his new robe was his own.

The bewitching, charming demeanor usually borne by Stratholme had vanished. His humiliating look made Han Shuo somewhat fearful. He did not even deal with the fresh blood on his body, but with a frightened look on his face, gazed down at that disgusting mouth that had been constantly fed with magical beasts' crystal cores and heart.

Following along Stratholme's line of sight, Han Shuo couldn't help but look down at it as well.

All he saw inside was a large, green head covered in thick pus, slowly forcing his way out. Han Shuo could tell that it was the head of another green-skinned alien. This one had a skull somewhat larger than those of the four alien leaders.

Most significantly, however, was that there were six horns on its head!

The five-horned aliens already possessed strength equivalent to a demigod's. As to just how powerful this six-horned alien must be, Han Shuo dared not imagine!

Even with the sensing ability of his consciousness, Han Shuo couldn't sense the presence of this emerging alien. Based on Han Shuo's understanding of demonic arts, he was sure that this alien possessed strength far superior to anyone in the region!

No wonder Stratholme the old monster was so frightened and wanted to leave. It was afraid that this alien who was about to arise could have the strength of a true god!

“Run!” Tiana screamed at the top of her lungs. Han Shuo could sense that she had immediately put her words into action. Her presence became further and further from this region!

“Run!” the old monster again shouted. He turned a blind eye to the remaining Origin Crystals which were almost within reach around him and flew away at speeds even faster than when he rushed over.

Given that his body was currently seriously injured, and he was yet able to deploy that skill with speed faster than when he had entered, this was sufficient to illustrate that he overdrafted his energy to escape.

“My... my Origin Crystal of Lightning!” Reynold’s unreconciling moan came from a distance. He was jumping up and down as though he had lost his mind. Stratholme the old monster, however, was none too concerned and would not pause for even a moment to help Reynold collect the Origin Crystal of Lightning not too far from him.

At this stage, Han Shuo did not hesitate. Just as Stratholme the old monster made a move, Han Shuo too gathered all the energy within his body to escape. He took one last regretful look at the remaining spheres before finally turning away.

Of the twelve spheres, Han Shuo had obtained three. The orbs containing fighting aura and pure element of water were, however, missing. Stratholme the old monster ought to have successfully collected them. Seven Origin Crystals, including the Origin Crystal of Lightning, sat there motionless as before.

However, neither Stratholme nor Han Shuo dared to stay any longer to collect more!

Unusually, instead of chasing after the escaping Han Shuo and Stratholme, the five-horned aliens all gathered at the huge mouth where the terrifying six-horned alien was ripping it apart as it struggled free itself. They jointly teared the huge mouth, helping the formidable six-horned alien to break free from it.

“My... my... my Origin Crystal!” lightning sacred magus Reynold of Brut Merchant Alliance murmured alarmed as he stared at the Origin Crystal of Lightning from afar, jumping up and down.

“If you are still not leaving, then you shall die here,” said Stratholme the old monster who was spitting up blood after he arrived beside Reynold. After serving him his final alert, he flurried towards the outside, not taking another look at Reynold.

“My... My... Origin Crystal...” Suddenly, Reynold was no longer jumping up and down in fury, but seemed to be dazed and gaped blankly at the Origin Crystal emitting the purest elemental aura. Han Shuo had travelled the distance of a kilometer and arrived beside Reynold. He shot a glance at Reynold, who wore a blank, stupefied expression, but did not say a word. He rapidly shot away following behind Stratholme.

Reynold was a lightning sacred magus of the Brut Merchant Alliance. Han Shuo held an unfavorable impression towards the Brut Merchant Alliance. Reynold, who had actively participated in the governmental affairs of the Brut Merchant Alliance, might have had even secretly assaulted Brettel City in the past. On top of that, it was inevitable that the two would turn against each other in due time. At this point Han Shuo couldn't care less if Reynolds lived or died.

Chapter 455: The Abandoned Sacred Magus

Soon enough, Han Shuo caught up with Stratholme the old monster and water divine magus Tiana.

When they arrived at the defensive shield, a mortifying aura shrouded the land. A suffocating pressure pushed down against them.

The three exchanged glances aghast, before Stratholme the old monster exclaimed, "This can't be good. It has arisen!"

Han Shuo and Tiana both knew who the old monster was referring to. Tiana's calm, frail face changed and she reached out her hand stick with utmost agility to the region defended by exotic energy. An ice awl sparkling with cold light suddenly materialized in her palm. The dense water element within was menacing. She directed the ice awl towards the space defending this area as it shot out.

Creak!

The ice awl of the water divine magus, seemed to be pricked on the toughest iron and stone in the world. The ice awl shattered into a million pieces!

Their hearts sank in unison. Stratholme the old monster questioned, "Elder sister Tiana, what's wrong?"

"The energy has been reinforced. I can't break this defense!" explained Tiana with a trace of panic in her voice. Her face grew ugly.

Stratholme the old monster furrowed his brows. The longsword, which he had carried in his hand all along and never stored in the space ring, began to emit a fighting aura like fireworks, albeit colourless and formless. A dazzling white light flashed.

Stratholme gathered all the remaining energy he had and struck at the defense field.

Clang!

Just as before, his bombardment seemed to have landed on an immovable stone. He pulled back his slightly trembling right arm. In an expression of overwhelming shock, he growled, "I can't break it either!"

One magic attack and another physical attack, but neither worked!

"That thing got out. He must have reinforced the defense energy! We might not be able to break through it," Han Shuo said heavily as he looked at the two bewildered demigod-like experts. It was clear to him that the six-horned alien race must have done just that.

Buzz Buzz...

A strange loud buzzing began in the distance. Unlike the previous buzzing that attacked Han Shuo's and the old monster's souls, this one came with some peculiar effects. It seemed to be able to rip apart the sky. Fine lines of space ripples appeared in the sky, bright, colorful chasms appeared beneath the cracks in the air.

The old monster Stratholme and Tiana exchanged glances. They simultaneously exhaled breaths of cold air. Gaping at the rifts in the air radiating colourful light, their faces turned an ugly expression.

Stratholme, who had just pulled out a scroll in his hand, turned to Tiana as though he would weep and said, "The fluctuation of the space is too violent. The space magic scroll can't be deployed at all. This guy has cut off all of our escape routes!"

At this point, even Tiana was at her wit's end. She shook her head and sighed, "We're going to die here. Stratholme, this is my fault. I've failed you. I never expected to face such a beast!"

The two with their demigod strengths were unable to break through the defense that enclosed this region by means of their own strength. The next best thing they could do to survive was to utilize a space magic scroll, rip apart spacetime and escape through it. However, that shrill caused fissures in space. Within a chaotic space, a space magic scroll was of absolutely no use. There, indeed, seemed to be no hope of escaping.

"My turn!" Han Shuo, who had not said anything but remained calm all along, suddenly spoke.

The reason Han Shuo managed to appear calm all the while was that he still had a few tricks up his sleeves!

The gazes of the two demigod experts immediately landed on Han Shuo's body. The old monster stared blankly for a while before he asked, "You, you have a way?"

Han Shuo did not answer, but chanted an incantation. The foolish-looking earth elite zombie suddenly appeared. Stratholme the old monster and Tiana both looked at each other with obvious doubt in their eyes. They seemed to have no idea what purpose this low-level zombie warrior could serve at such a moment.

Suddenly, a most astonishing phenomenon occurred before their eyes.

When the mindless zombie warrior fell to the ground, its body melted into the earth, much to their surprise. The hard ground seemed to pose no resistance against it and its body rapidly disappeared.

In this world, although an earth magus could utilize the power of the earth, they could only do so for offense or defense. They couldn't explicitly utilize the energy of the earth to bore through it at will, like the earth elite zombie, the favoured son of the earth, could.

Therefore, when the body of earth elite zombie sank into the ground like quicksand, the divine magus and divine swordmaster both gawked in disbelief at the surreal sight before them and stood dumbfounded.

"Let's go!" called out Han Shuo, who was already deep inside the underground tunnel.

The two demigod existences turned from staggered to euphoric. They looked at each other and kept into the tunnel.

"Save... save me!" Just as the three entered the underground tunnel, the wailing of lightning sacred magus Reynold arrived from afar. His voice was riddled with fear.

A choking pressure approached like a strong wind. Han Shuo and the others who had just entered the tunnel understood instantly what was going on – the six-horned alien had emerged. Reynold attempted to flee towards the tunnel, presumably under the pursuit of alien experts.

Han Shuo turned towards Stratholme and Tiana, and found the two with similarly creased brows, maintaining their silence with extreme rapport.

They had given up on Reynold! Han Shuo understood this in his heart.

Han Shuo knew what he needed to do next. He issued an order to the earth elite zombie. The thick, solid earth slowly filled up the opening to the underground tunnel.

When Stratholme the old monster and Tiana saw the last trace of light vanished from above their heads, they exhaled. It was as though a boulder was relinquished from their hearts. Their appearances loosened up slightly as well.

In the dark, Han Shuo had very clearly seen the expressions on their faces. He gained a deeper understanding towards human nature.

It's every man for himself!

"Thank you, Bryan. You really are a lifesaver!" praised Stratholme the old monster, who was following behind Han Shuo.

"Don't fret it. We are partners. It's my duty!" Han Shuo replied in the darkness, although his heart could not accept that to be true.

The real reason Han Shuo brought the two into the underground tunnel was that Han Shuo couldn't tell if he would run into any more terrifying dangers later on. Vaguely, through his instincts, Han Shuo felt that it wouldn't be so simple to escape alive this time. But with these two experienced fighters beside him, the three might have a greater chance of staying alive. It was only under such circumstances that Han Shuo was so willing to save the two.

The three had obtained all the loot they seekers from the trip. There wasn't much discrepancy between their strengths, therefore they would have greater odds of escaping alive by working together. As for Reynold, he was a far stretch short of their strengths. At such drastic times, he would be of no use. It was the inevitable, logical move to abandon him.

“Elder Sister Tiana, this is your Origin Crystal of Water!” Stratholme drew out a ruby, which glowed a soft, warm red light in the darkness. Stratholme handed over the sphere.

Turning his head to catch a glimpse, Han Shuo witnessed an unrestrainable excitement on Tiana’s face. Her hand trembled as she caught and held onto the round sphere. With her eyes sparkling brightly, she murmured, “Origin Crystal. I have an Origin Crystal!”

Tiana was quite old. After the Origin Crystal was put into her space ring, having lived for so long , she learned quickly how to stabilize her emotions. After taking in a deep breath, she looked ahead towards Han Shuo who was leading the way and asked, “How much longer until we get out?”

“Very soon! But I think you two can feel it too. Even here, deep underground, we can still feel that heavy pressure. I doubt we are truly safe yet!”

Just two minutes later, the earth elite zombie broke through the ground. The garish light of day peered through.

The three lept out from the tunnel. Han Shuo took a quick scan through the surroundings. Before having a clear idea of where he was, his consciousness suddenly felt as though it was targeted. This feeling was anything but reassuring. Han Shuo immediately yelled, “It knows where we are!”

Although Stratholme the old monster and Tiana didn’t have sensing capabilities as sharp as that of Han Shuo’s consciousness, that stifling pressure they felt did not disappear. They understood right away that Han Shuo’s words were true.

“Come with me. We’ll walk and talk!” Tiana said with haste. The mist surrounding her turned once again thicker and she flew into the distance. Han Shuo and Stratholme followed behind her closely.

“The six-horned tribal king of the Soul Race has locked onto our souls.

As long as we are within the Profound Continent, he will be able to find us. Their kind are innately good at understanding souls. They possess a profound understanding of souls, which I believe you have experienced for yourself. We simply can't break free from his soul targeting!" Tiana said to Han Shuo and Stratholme the old monster as she breezed past like the wind.

"Soul Race? What race is that? Why is it that I've never heard of it?" Han Shuo asked, creasing his brows while trying to keep up.

"This is not a race from the Profound Continent. They appeared once in Profound Continent several thousand years ago, but then they disappeared and were never to be seen again. As to why they would suddenly show up in Tarrag Canyon this time, I have no idea either.

"The knowledge I have of this race, I've only inadvertently come across it in an ancient scroll. I have no way of knowing the specifics of what happened all those years ago. It was from their appearances that I surmised they are of the Soul Tribe," Tiana explained.

Tiana's eyes twinkled. Han Shuo did not expect Tiana to know nearly this much about the Soul Race. However, it would have been inappropriate for Han Shuo to get to the heart of that matter.

"Elder Sister Tiana, could it be that once the six-horned tribal king of the Soul Race recognizes our souls, we will have no option at all, but to merely wait for him to catch up and kill us?" Stratholme the old monster asked, concerned about his own safety.

"Not really. We have the Origin Crystals in our hands now. As long as we merge it with our souls and form Soul of Element, not even this six-horned tribal king of the Soul Race will be capable of sensing the locations of our souls. Once a Soul of Element is formed, we will fuse together and be one with the elements found everywhere between the heaven and earth. He will not be able to locate us," Tiana explained.

"But the process of merging one's soul with an Origin Crystal takes time, during which he could possibly locate our souls, and kill us one by one. What are we to do?" Stratholme said with a bitter smile, as though he was overcome with sorrow having obtained a most valuable treasure that he would be unable to enjoy.

A thought struck Han Shuo. He recalled that he could make use of the skeletal staff to have his consciousness descend into the netherworld. Separated by boundless distance of different planes of existences, no matter how remarkable the abilities of this six-horned tribal king, there would be no way for him to detect the position of Han Shuo's consciousness. Han Shuo could simply fuse the Origin Crystal with his soul in the netherworld and hide from the pursuit of this terrifying being.

This would be the most dependable method. Furthermore, Han Shuo's consciousness was not like Tiana's or Stratholme's souls. Once one attained a certain realm in demonic arts, his soul underwent an evolution into an incomparably superior consciousness. Han Shuo reckoned that, given a little bit of time, his consciousness would surely find a way to break free from the sensing of the six-horned creature.

With that in mind, Han Shuo became at ease. But Han Shuo was still rather curious about this Soul Race, hence, he did not hastily depart, but stayed to continue listening to the conversation between Tiana and Stratholme.

"There's still a way out for us," Tiana said in a weird expression.

"What is it?" the old monster asked anxiously.

"By utilizing the transportation matrix facilities of various countries, we can travel faster than him. Then, if we bring him to a powerhouse with enough strength to contend against him, we could pit him against one of those few formidable existences within the Profound Continent. Then perhaps, we really will have a chance to escape this alive!" Tiana said to Stratholme after hesitating for a moment.

The old monster's eyes lit up as he immediately understood what Tiana meant, and replied, "Beings within Profound Continent that could resist the six-horned king of the Soul Race, you can count them with a single hand. Plus, the majority of them don't live in fixed locations. The only ones in fixed locations are those in the headquarters of the Church of Light and Calamity Church!”

Han Shuo, who was planning to leave, was shocked, but continued to decide, “Church of Light it is then!”

Tiana and Stratholme the old monster both made a strange expression. The two exchanged glances, remained silent for a moment, and finally nodded in agreement with Han Shuo’s proposal.

For the Church of Light, who had always taken it upon themselves to exterminate heretics, to have such an obviously unkind race appearing at their headquarters – Han Shuo thought this to be amusing.

Chapter 456: Consciousness Healed

With that decision made, the three set their individual agendas and they began executing their grand scheme with the objective of ensuring their own survival.

Although Han Shuo had lost his twelve mystical demons, his consciousness could sense the vitality coming off from all kinds of life within range. However, he couldn't get a clear view of every nook and cranny like the mystical demons could.

Luckily, Tiana and the old monster were rather familiar with the geography here, so Han Shuo need only follow their lead.

Along the way, Tiana and Stratholme the old monster ceased to discuss anything meaningful, and Han Shuo could obtain little useful information from them. Of course, Han Shuo wouldn't force them to talk if they didn't want to, although he was scheming in the back of his mind.

The Profound Continent was vast and extensive. It housed numerous nations, countless tall mountains and deep oceans, and a whole variety of races, including the human race.

No one could have fully comprehended just how many people there were on this continent with extraordinary talent and incomprehensible power. Based on Tiana and Stratholme's previous conversation, Han Shuo was almost certain that even those like Tiana and Stratholme, both of whom possessed the strength of demigods, were not nearly the strongest of Profound Continent.

However, from what he was hearing, Han Shuo also understood that there were only a few beings on the whole of Profound Continent with strength more formidable than theirs. It made perfect sense to Han Shuo the more he thought of it. Given that he had never even heard about certain demigod beings, it was hardly unexpected that he hadn't an inkling what they were up against.

As the two richest and most powerful religious organizations on Profound Continent, the Church of Light and the Calamity Church, their capacity for spreading influence over every region across the continent was sufficient to illustrate just how mighty they were. To be able to stand tall and never fall for thousands of years, perhaps no one would have believed that there were no almighty beings backing them. It was a reasonable assumption that any being more powerful than Tiana or Stratholme would be present at the headquarters of the two religious organizations.

Stratholme grew concerned. “Elder Sister Tiana, whichever way I go about it, it still seems a bit inappropriate. When we arrive at the Church of Light’s headquarters at Oden Empire, we will definitely cause immeasurable damages to the Church of Light. And of course, I don’t expect that the Church of Light is going to let us get away with it. What then?” Three were arriving at a city of the Brut Merchant Alliance called Tjaba and began to slow down.

“There’s nothing we can do about it. The Church of Light is closer to here. What’s more, the Church of Light has always made it their business to deliver kindness to any living creature in suffering. Therefore I am confident that they will forgive us,” Tiana replied in a righteous tone. After thinking for a while, she added, “No need to be too worried. The protector safeguarding the headquarters of the Church of Light cannot leave their post. So, provided that we leave as soon as we’re done, there shouldn’t be much of an issue.”

“Well then, if you say so, I can be at ease!” Stratholme the old monster nodded in comprehension. Perhaps he felt relieved that the merciful Church of Light wouldn’t seek revenge on them, or maybe he was reassured that the protector of the Church of Light wouldn’t be able to leave the headquarters.

The city of Tjaba isn’t far from Tariq City, both are equally metropolis belonging to the Brut Merchant Alliance. The three hastily made their way to the transportation matrix facility at Tjaba City. Han Shuo furrowed his brows and said, “What should we do? In every country, the guards regulating their transportation matrixes don’t allow any unauthorized personnel to use it. Only certain figures of great importance are granted access to transportation matrixes that even a wealthy man would be denied admittance.”

“No worries!” Stratholme the old monster said, smiling slightly. Somehow there was a badge held in his hand. The old monster swaggered his way to the person in charge of this magical transportation matrix, held up his badge at those men, and said, “We are going to Thea City!”

Without any objection, this person in charge respectfully started up the transportation matrix, and allowed the three to enter it. After a flash of white light, they appeared at Brut Merchant Alliance’s Thea City.

Stratholme the old monster had lived for countless years and had witnessed the rise and fall of nations. It was no surprise at all that he would possess certain artifacts that allowed him to move freely between various countries. After arriving at Thea City, the three let out a sigh of relief, and continued their journey by flying to the Oden Empire.

Thea City of the Brut Merchant Alliance was one of the closest cities to the Oden Empire. No transportation matrixes between two countries would ever be interconnected, therefore the three had to continue by flying. Fortunately, the three fugitives had temporarily shaken off the vigorous pursuit of the six-horned Soul Race tribal king when they used the transportation matrix. At that moment, they weren’t as strained and anxious as they were previously.

As the trio possessed demigod strength, their airspeeds were phenomenal. In less than half a day, they made it to the most powerful empire on Profound Continent – Oden Empire.

Upon arriving at Oden Empire, Stratholme the old monster pulled out another badge representing a different identity. And yet again, they were unimpededly granted access to the magical transportation matrixes in Oden Empire. After three consecutive long-range teleportations, they finally arrived at the city closest to the Church of Light’s headquarters.

It was a city in Oden Empire named Sandro City. Right after exiting from the transportation matrix, they saw plenty of Temple Knights and Light Priests of the Church of Light walking on the street.

The Church of Light held tremendous influence in the Oden Empire. As the closest city to the Sacred Mountain of the Church of Light, Sandro City was run by Oden Empire officials alongside followers of the Church of Light. Han Shuo took a quick look at the surroundings and discovered that the architecture had strong religious influence as churches of the Church of Light could be seen at every corner.

An absolute majority of residents living in Sandro City were devout followers of the Church of Light. Many of them came from all over the continent, having travelled far and wide to migrate to this city, as they believed that this city was the closest to the God of Light and would allow them to better listen to the teachings of the God of Light.

“Alright. that beast will need at least a day’s time to get here. In the meanwhile, we can have a little rest. I have suffered rather extensive injuries, but fortunately we were able to leave in time. Otherwise, I would be staying there forever!” Stratholme said to Han Shuo and Tiana after walking out from the transportation matrix and let out a sigh of relief.

“Sure! Let’s find a place and rest for a while!” Han Shuo agreed. His consciousness had, as well, sustained serious damage. The terrifying Soul Race could possibly be there in just a day. Furthermore, this location was at the base camp of the Church of Light. Once Han Shuo’s identity was exposed, the Church of Light wouldn’t let him off for sure. The more energy he recovered, the better his chances were to escape alive when the time came.

The three no longer spoke superfluously and Han Shuo concealed the aura in his body. Soon after, the trio found a small, remote hotel, and requested for three rooms close to each other.

The six-horned tribal king of the Soul Race had taken note of their souls, meaning that the three were all in the same boat in facing this enemy. But still, Han Shuo remained vigilant. Immediately after entering his room, Han Shuo deployed a magical formation. He would immediately be alerted if there was the slightest disturbance in his surroundings.

After everything was in place, Han Shuo sat cross-legged and began activating the blood essence in his demonic infant to heal his heavily injured consciousness.

The deafening buzz of the six-horned tribal king inflicted pain akin to millions of daggers dragging across his consciousness. If it wasn't for Han Shuo's prompt response of immediately concealing his consciousness by splitting it into millions of strands, there was a real possibility that his consciousness would have been completely wrecked.

But, so long as his consciousness was not exterminated, he could activate the blood essence within his demon infant to release demonic yuan energy, and use it to recombine the scattered consciousness.

In fact, Han Shuo had already started doing so along their journey to Sandro City. And now, with his attention fully concentrated on actuating his blood essence, the rate at which his consciousness recovered instantly increased.

A human soul is comprised of three ethereal souls and seven corporeal spirits, the three ethereal souls being Heaven, Earth, and Life, while the seven corporeal spirits are Mind, Intelligence, Impetus, Strength, Central Axis, Vitality, and Heroism.

The seven corporeal spirits reside in the internals of one's body. As long as the three ethereal souls are present, the seven corporeal spirits can be reassembled, and one's soul will not fade away between heaven and earth.

Han Shuo's demonic arts caused the three ethereal souls – Heaven, Earth, and Life – to fuse into one, forming a consciousness. This consciousness not only had remarkable abilities, it could even separate into millions of strands and hide among the seven corporeal spirits. When the six-horned tribal king released the soul attack, Han Shuo's consciousness did this without a second to spare, therefore it was able to escape the calamity.

The three ethereal souls of an average person would require their seven corporeal spirits to survive, meaning that once his physical body perished, his three ethereal souls would dissipate. Han Shuo's consciousness, however, was bound by no such limitation. Even with his physical body turned into fine powder and his seven corporeal spirits totally destroyed, his consciousness would still be able to drift away, select a new body and be reborn. But in that case, he would need to spend a few hundred years to cultivate his new physical body in order to regain his original strength.

Although his consciousness would not be destroyed with his physical body, he still required the energy of seven corporeal spirits to heal his consciousness once it was injured. Fortunately for Han Shuo, as a demonic arts practitioner, he possessed top-notch ability to control his body. Han Shuo used his blood essence to generate demonic yuan energy, which in turn induced the seven corporeal spirits residing in his seven chakras. Strands of energy from the seven corporeal spirits assimilated into his consciousness, healing it bit by bit.

The process of recovering his consciousness, with Han Shuo's all-out effort, did not take too much time. After his demonic infant consumed a dozen or more droplets of blood essence, the energy generated by his seven corporeal spirits was absorbed by his consciousness, thus, his heavily-injured consciousness was completely healed.

If the consciousness of a demonic practitioner was injured, as long as the person's physical body and demonic infant were not destroyed, it wouldn't be hard to recover. However, if the two were destroyed, the consciousness would have no choice but to select a new body, spend perhaps tens or even hundreds of years to cultivate a demonic infant in the new physical body. And only then may the healing process for the injured consciousness begin.

As soon as his consciousness had recovered, Han Shuo awoke from his meditative state. His enormous consciousness began to spread out immediately to get a glimpse of the situation in Sandro City.

Chapter 457: Ploy

No living being less mighty than Han Shuo could elude his consciousness, allowing him a complete overview of the situation in Sandro City.

This place was indeed worthy of being the closest city to the Sacred Mountain of the Church of Light. Through his consciousness, Han Shuo discovered that there was an abundance of Church of Light followers carrying divine energy in their bodies, the whole Sandro City was brimming with churches, numerous magical towers had been erected, and holy energy permeated in every corner in the city.

Everywhere his consciousness passed, each and every expert in its vicinity would appear in Han Shuo's perception. He sensed that a light sacred magus was present in Sandro City. Not only that, there were all sorts of followers of the Church of Light that occupied every crevice in the city, amongst whom a staggering number were powerful experts.

As Han Shuo was slowly expanded his sensing power, he felt ripples of divine energy crashing in from the Sacred Mountain not far from Sandro City. The divine energy was forcing people to their knees to bow, and induced a tranquility of the mind and even-temperedness that seemed to signify a readiness to serve.

Even for the bloodthirsty Han Shuo, under the effect of this sacred energy, he felt as though he would surrender, repent and be absolved of his crimes. A wisp of energy that penetrated deep into the soul arrived thereupon. This soul-penetrating energy possessed a sort of intense seductive property, one that could turn people permanently into obedient slaves.

Han Shuo released a soft groan. Immediately, his consciousness, which was snooping through Sandro City, stopped expanding outward, receding instead. He also concealed the presence coming from his body.

The divine energy transmitted from the top of the Sacred Mountain of the Church of Light, to certain devotees, perhaps granted heightened divine energy. However, to any ordinary man, this kind of divine energy carried an intense captivating power, pied-piping people to throw themselves into the embrace of the Church, offering their firm conviction to the God of Light.

As the heretic that the Church of Light so wished to eliminate, Han Shuo undoubtedly understood what it meant for an ordinary person when they were exposed to this kind of divine energy with captivating power aimed at their souls. Such practices of the Church of Light obviously had no resemblance to the transparent practices they paraded.

After withdrawing his consciousness, the suffocating pressure which had shrouded him all along did not disappear. Starting from Tarrag Canyon, the three had travelled across numerous cities. And yet, that soul targeting from the six-horned tribal king of the Soul Race, had never ceased.

And by now, this choking pressure had grown even stronger. Han Shuo could sense creatures of the Soul Race rapidly approaching.

Ding!

A sharp tinkling sounded in his ears. It was an early warning from the magical formation, only audible to Han Shuo.

“Bryan!” barked Stratholme the old monster. Judging from his voice, his body must have had sufficiently recovered.

“In a second!” cried Han Shuo, disengaging the magical formations around him. He then opened the door to Stratholme and Tiana outside.

“He’s almost here!” There was a trace of undeniable distress on the old monster’s face. Despite his preparations, when it came time to confront this terrifying six-horned tribal king, the old monster could not help his pessimism about his future outlook.

“We need to get in the vicinity of the Sacred Mountain of the Church of Light right away. When he’s almost here, we will immediately intrude into the Sacred Mountain and await the six-horned tribal king’s appearance. Only when both sides have fought and are wounded will we stand a chance.” Tiana remained ever so graceful and sumptuous, but the look on her face was growing heavy, indicating that, just like Stratholme, she too was riddled with apprehension.

“Alright then. Let’s move,” Han Shuo replied succinctly.

Neither Stratholme nor Tiana said anymore. With Tiana showing the way, the trio left Sandro City quietly.

The Sacred Mountain of the Church of Light was so tall that it pierced through the clouds. The three arrived at the foot of the mountain. When they looked up, it seemed as though the blue dome of heaven was prodded through by the Sacred Mountain. A sense of peace and tranquility rose in their hearts.

“The Sacred Mountain is 9,763 meters tall, with the City of Light located at the top. Inside are the most powerful experts of the Church of Light protecting the place. We can first sneak halfway up the mountain. Then, when the six-horned tribal king is almost here, we make a run for the summit of the Sacred Mountain,” Tiana explained to Han Shuo and Stratholme when they arrived at the foot of the mountain. She seemed very familiar with the Sacred Mountain of the Church of Light.

Han Shuo and the old monster nodded simultaneously and Tiana did not need to explain any further. She proceeded in leading the two flying to the middle of the Sacred Mountain.

“Follow me. We must find a place where we can hide. There are many experts of the Church of Light on the top of the mountain. Two of them are just as powerful as we are. One is a light divine magus and the other a divine knight. In addition to that, there’s an ancient Saintess. God knows how long she’s been around. If our whereabouts are exposed, we might be terminated by the Church of Light even before the six-horned tribal king arrives!” Tiana explained to Han Shuo and Stratholme as they flew up the Sacred Mountain.

All three of them were beings of demigod strengths. Even when they arrived at nine thousand meters up the Sacred Mountain, the three still managed to soar up.

Since arriving at the headquarters of the Church of Light, Han Shuo had reserved his consciousness and observed his surroundings solely with his naked eyes. From what he saw, he discovered that starting at the foot of the mountain, structures of the Church of Light covered every surface. Tens of thousands of followers of the Church of Light lived on this lofty, huge mountain.

“This way!” Tiana called out, leading towards a steep, projecting cliff at the middle of the Sacred Mountain.

Behind this cliff was a dark cave. After Tiana lead Han Shuo and Stratholme to land at the precipice, they walked right into the dark cave.

As soon as he entered the cave, Han Shuo found that the cave wasn't actually as dark as it seemed from the outside, on the contrary, there were a few magical lamps. The cavern was extremely spacious, no doubt excavated by men.

“Huh? Elder Sister Tiana, have you been here before?” Stratholme the old monster asked, astonished.

“No, but I sensed this place to be uninhabited. Alright, we will stay here for the time being. Erm, let me deploy some spells and form boundaries to cover our presences!” Tiana replied almost impulsively.

Neither Han Shuo nor Stratholme further questioned her. Tiana stood at the only entrance and exit to the cavern, took out her azure staff, and slowly recited magical incantations.

Tiana abruptly paused her chanting and bolted from the cave like lightning. Just after her exit, she finally completed the final phrase of her incantation. In an instant, water element of utmost intensity enveloped the only mouth of the cave. The energized water element solidified rapidly. Before Han Shuo or Stratholme could react, a chunk of ice a meter thick sealed off the exit.

The expressions on Han Shuo and Stratholme the old monster's faces flipped. Stratholme was furious and shouted, “Elder Sister Tiana, what is the meaning of this?”

Two divine presences zoomed down from the summit of the Sacred Mountain indiscreetly. After a few breaths, they arrived beside Tiana right outside the cave. Separated by crystal-clear, solid ice, Han Shuo could see that one of them was dressed in a Light Priest outfit, and another in a divine knight outfit. They both looked very young.

The duo who descended from the mountain top at great speeds made no effort in concealing the frightening presences coming from their bodies. Therefore, Han Shuo was immediately certain that they were the divine light magus and divine knight Tiana had previously mentioned. Both of them were similarly demigod beings!

“Tiana, you have done well. You may fuse with your Water Origin Crystal on the top of the Sacred Mountain at ease. Our Saintess will protect you from the persecution of that alien!” said the young looking divine knight with a tender smile on his face.

“Bergson, that young man Bryan is the big heretic you had all been hunting for all along. Do with him whatever you please. As for Stratholme, so long as he hands over that Origin Crystal of Fighting Aura, we shall let him walk. He has no conflicts with your Church of Light!” Tiana felt somewhat irked in her heart, and pleaded for the old monster.

“I’m sorry, I’m not the one to decide on this matter. Let’s put off the discussion until I’ve reported to The Saintess,” the divine knight called Bergson shrugged, and afterwards smiled and said, “However, if Stratholme is willing to vow loyalty and devotion to the God of Light, then that surely won’t be a problem!”

Suddenly, both Han Shuo and Stratholme sensed whiffs of intense divine energy which shrouded all around the cave at an unknown time. Add to the fact that Tiana had frozen off their only means of escape, the situation seemed like it could not get any worse.

“Elder Sister Tiana, I never expected this from you!” Stratholme the old monster who was trapped in the cave stared blankly at Tiana. His voice, although tranquil, carried a distinct wrath.

“Stratholme, I’m so sorry, but Bergson and I are very good friends. As long as you hand over that crystal ball of fighting aura, I will find a way to let you walk out of this Sacred Mountain alive!” There was not a hint of remorse on Tiana’s face, and she kept ever so graceful and poised.

The frightening presence rapidly approached. Though they were separated by layers of boundaries, Han Shuo and Stratholme could still hear that weird buzzing noise.

At the same time, a beautiful, tender melody waft from the summit of the Sacred Mountain. A surge of divine energy possessed only by the gods fell before the cliff in an instant.

Chapter 458: Domain of the Divinity

Han Shuo and Stratholme the old monster glanced at each other. They then realized that the Saintess, the one Tiana had mentioned, was standing before them.

This expert who possessed the strength of a god. As soon as she arrived, Han Shuo and Stratholme seemed to be enveloped by a sludgy marsh-like energy. Simply wiggling their fingers was proving to be a challenge!

Domain of the Divinity!

A look of overwhelming shock appeared in both Han Shuo and Stratholme's eyes. The kind of energy that caused the desire to kneel and worship in their hearts, and difficulty to even budge from head to toe, was such power that only a true god could possess as legend has it, an energy which incapacitated mere mortals from coming close to facing them!

"Saintess!" The two demigod existences of the Church of Light kowtowed simultaneously, wearing a respectful expression from their hearts' deepest pits.

"Your Holiness!" Even Tiana performed a solemn etiquette in a grave expression.

However, Han Shuo and Stratholme were unable to clearly see the appearance of the being who had just arrived. But that omnipresent holy aura was nevertheless breathtaking. There seemed to be a beautiful song extolling the God of Light mixed with the holy aura as it reverberated in the depths of their souls.

This voice carried an occult power, which could appeal to one's prejudices and emotions as it sang the praises. Han Shuo gradually lost the strength in his hands and feet, as though he was willing to throw himself into the embrace of the God of Light, and from then on, to forever serve Him with utmost dignity.

Not good! Han Shuo's heart quivered and he came to his senses.

By now, Han Shuo was completely certain that the holy power he had previously sensed from the Sacred Mountain originated from this Saintess of the Church of Light. It was only due to the great distance and the wide dispersal of holy power of the Saintess to cover the whole of Sandro City that Han Shuo did not feel much discomfort the last time.

Perhaps the holy aura was naturally released and was not aimed at Han Shuo and Stratholme, but because this mighty godlike existence was in such proximity to them, they found it particularly difficult to resist and gradually desired to surrender their hearts and souls.

All these years of practicing the demonic arts had tempered his willpower, and granted Han Shuo a stubborn tenacity unlike any other's. He submerged his consciousness at the site of the Demonslayer Edge, which was still hibernating in his body. He constantly stimulated his consciousness using the inexhaustible ruthless desire to destroy that the Demonslayer Edge emitted, therefore his consciousness had been unswervingly sober and calm all the while, and did not sink into the Domain of the Divinity.

"Scour!" Stratholme the old monster unsheathed his longsword. The formless fighting aura reverberated within the sword hilt and produced a peculiar sound, which he used for resisting the corrosive influence of this divine energy.

Stratholme wore a grave expression never seen before. His brows were locked tightly together, and his breathing became irregular. He had exerted every last bit of his strength to resist!

Buzz Buzz...

The resounding buzz that came from the six-horned tribal king of the Soul Race, seemed all of a sudden to have enveloped the whole Sacred Mountain. An ice-cold, desolating aura that carried not a trace of humanity, like indestructible ice blades, filled every space in the region.

The noise had been, at first, exceedingly unpleasant to the ear, but at once became incomparably pleasant to Han Shuo and Stratholme. Thanks to the sudden emergence of this buzzing, the tempting divine power discharged by the Saintess, as though it had been shattered into pieces with a sharp sword, obliterated completely!

“What a terrifying energy!” Stratholme the old monster cried out in surprise with lingering fear in his heart after letting out a sigh of relief.

A gentle, sweet voice instructed from outside the cave mouth separated by the thick layer of ice. “Intercept the attackers first. As for these two, we shall deal with them after the Soul Race leaves!”

“Yes, Saintess!” the three demigod existences including Tiana responded simultaneously.

Whoosh! The green skinned, python tailed, six-horned tribal king of the Soul Race was the first to arrive in front of the cave mouth. Immediately, the four pentahorned experts showed up and stood behind their king.

Without any unnecessary exchanges, the five of the Soul Race made a prompt move to attack the few people blocking the cave upon descending to this region.

A silhouette of a person in a dress as white as snow suddenly appeared. The Saintess, cladding a White Priest gown, turned her focus to repulse the six-horned tribal king. Han Shuo and Stratholme could finally see the Saintess who they could previously only hear.

She appeared to be a beautiful, young girl, wearing a sweet smile on her face. Solely from her appearance, she gave off a sort of flawless, pure, holy quality. Add to the wholly refined temperament she naturally emitted, this young girl seemed to be the incarnation of the holiness of the God of Light.

Beautiful, holy, and regal were the most intuitive descriptions Han Shuo had for her, which made him momentarily cast away all sense of disgust he had for the Church of Light. It was as though this girl had all the desirable traits of a woman. Only the word ‘perfect’ could adequately describe her flawless appearance.

This young girl flew out from the incline and gracefully arrived before the six-horned tribal king, holding the Holy Grail that reflected dazzlingly holy light. Holy water flowed within the Holy Grail.

To proceed, she swirled the Holy Grail in her hand. An enormous force the mass of a mountain seemed to engulf the six-horned tribal king. From the looks of it, the body of this six-horned tribal king was swaying along with the Holy Grail.

A devilish buzz soon sounded from the mouth of the six-horned tribal king. Akin to a celestial dragon ascending to heaven, his gargantuan tail shot towards the Holy Grail at lightning speed.

Dong! A frightening sound seemed to envelop the whole of Sacred Mountain. Aftershocks invisible to the naked eye violently shot out in waves. As though they were being bombarded by high-yield explosives, an avalanche of fist-sized pebbles rushed down from the cliff protruding from the mountain.

The Sacred Mountain rumbled like an earthquake, a 9,000 meter tall mountain at its epicenter. Han Shuo and Stratholme, imprisoned in the cave, swayed along with the tremor.

Meanwhile, the four Soul Race leaders who accompanied their six-horned tribal king had their merciless green eyes locked on Tiana and the other two demigods. They began attacking the trio almost precisely as the six-horned tribal king made a move. The horns on their heads again started to radiate that nefarious green light. Han Shuo, who already had a taste of its unpleasantness, immediately understood that it was another attack on the soul.

“We have to find a way out of here. If we don’t leave now, we will not have another chance!” Stratholme said to Han Shuo hastily, while his eyes closely followed the world-shaking battle from behind the thick ice.

How could Han Shuo not realize just how unfavorable of a situation it was? This cave was defended with a layer of divine energy by that Saintess. Even the solid rocks were filled with divine energy. Tiana’s ice boundary, too, was reinforced with divine energy from the Saintess. Even Han Shuo was at his wit’s end.

We have no choice. We must try the metal elite zombie! After arriving at that decision, Han Shuo summoned the metal elite zombie. The metal elite zombie sparkling with golden rays from head to toe appeared from the netherworld. At Han Shuo's command, he attempted to dig open a tunnel using his ability to manipulate metal and stone.

Clink! Clank! A sharp noise sounded under the foot. Han Shuo turned his attention and the metal elite zombie made a helpless shrug at him, and transmitted, "The stones here are mixed with some strange impurities. Their attributes have changed. I cannot make an opening!"

"That damned Tiana!" Han Shuo cursed with an ugly look.

It seemed that no matter the moment, he could not reveal his hidden trump. The last time they escaped the Soul Race tribal king, Tiana witnessed Han Shuo make use of the earth elite zombie to dig open a tunnel in order to escape. This time, Tiana had certainly told the Church of Light about the miraculousness of Han Shuo, hence the Saintess of the Church of Light injected divine energy into the rocks.

With this escape route blocked up, they obviously wouldn't give the two a chance to leave with space magic scrolls. Under the effects of this Domain of Divinity, even a sacred space magus wouldn't easily be able to leave using space laws, let alone Han Shuo and Stratholme, who merely had space magic scrolls.

"Can you do it?" When Stratholme saw that Han Shuo's zombie warrior had no effects and heard Han Shuo curse at Tiana, Stratholme understood what was going on. His heart sank and he had a feeling of helplessness.

Shaking his head, Han Shuo replied bitterly, "Tiana sold us out. Even my trump card was blocked!"

As he spoke, Han Shuo had a staunch expression in his eyes. He considered deploying the Demonic Blood Disassembly to escape. Doing could severely wound him, but it seemed like his only way out.

"Father, are you looking to break open this cave?" the metal elite zombie suddenly transmitted.

"Yes, but it seems that there's no hope now!" Han Shuo replied without thinking, still wondering if he should deploy the demonic escape technique.

Right after Han Shuo finished those words, the metal elite zombie took out the metal attribute treasure he obtained from the place of extreme metal – the Golden Cudgel. While Han Shuo wasn't paying attention, this most precious treasure of metal attribute slowly grew an insane length, turning into a massive pillar, sparkling gold!

Chapter 459: Escaping Alive

The golden cudgel filled the cave with brilliant golden light as it grew. The dazzling golden rays finally caught Han Shuo's attention.

He saw that under the manipulation of the metal elite zombie, one end of the golden cudgel – a treasure of the metal attribute – was pushing against the solid ice on the cave mouth deployed by water divine magus Tiana and further strengthened by the Saintess. Naturally, the metal elite zombie couldn't completely grip the golden cudgel as it had transformed to the size of a huge pillar of great height. But with that said, the metal elite zombie could still manipulate the golden cudgel with the energy of metal element in his body.

The golden cudgel, purportedly capable of destroying any solid object, under the manipulation of a metal elite zombie, a great force burst out from its one end that pushed against the iced cave mouth. Under the watchful eyes of Han Shuo and Stratholme, it broke the solid ice like a twig.

The golden cudgel weighed tonnes. Except for the metal elite zombie, whose body was filled with the energy of metal element, no one could move the golden cudgel, not even Han Shuo with the brute force of his physical body. It seemed that the metal elite zombie yielding the golden cudgel indeed deserved the reputation of possessing the greatest fighting strength. Even the shield of ice reinforced with divine energy from the Saintess could be forcefully broken open under the pounding of the golden cudgel.

"Let's go!" Stratholme the old monster shouted. He was shocked and delighted at the same time.

Han Shuo, who had been staring blankly at his metal elite zombie in disbelief, immediately returned to his senses when he heard Stratholme's yelling. With an incantation, the immensely proud metal elite zombie along with his golden cudgel were sent back to the netherworld by Han Shuo.

“Let’s go!” Han Shuo replied and flew out at lightning speed through the broken cave mouth with Stratholme. The combat between Tiana and those from the Church of Light, and those of the Soul Race continued like wildfire. Among it, the Saintess displayed truly terrifying strength. All along, under the protection of boundless divine energy enveloping her, and the Holy Grail bursting with holy light, the six-horned tribal king was forced to remain within bounds.

“This is not good, they have broken through the ice!” The solid ice boundary at the cave mouth was deployed by water divine magus Tiana. She sensed it the instance her ice boundary was destroyed.

Han Shuo and Stratholme flew out from the cave just as Tiana finished speaking.

However, at this moment, no matter the Saintess of the Church of Light or the three demigod beings, they were all busy fighting off those of the Soul Race. When battling against such a grade of experts, unless one’s team possessed strength well above that of their opponents, one must not be distracted in the least.

Tiana and the two others handled the four five-horned members of Soul Race, with the divine knight as the main fighter while Tiana and that light divine magus ceaselessly dealt frightening magic attacks. Although Tiana and the light divine magus deployed layers upon layers of defense boundaries, in a battle of three versus four, it was obvious that the three were in disadvantageous position.

As Tiana let out a cry of surprise, her cold air attack against the few Soul clansmen become a tad slower. The pressure on the light divine magus and divine knight, which was already difficult to handle, instantly increased multiple times over. That caused the divine knight to be miserably swooped by three tails, nearly wounding him gravely.

While their hands were all tied up, Han Shuo and Stratholme the old monster felt zero hesitation to avail themselves of the situation and flew right away into the distance. They dared not stay at this Sacred Mountain a moment longer.

Han Shuo and the old monster were extraordinarily fast in their escape. Before the few were able to catch sight of the two, they had already rushed out from the region.

The Saintess of the Church of Light placed all her attention on the six-horned Soul Race tribal king and dared not to distract herself in the slightest. All she could do was to look on helplessly at the departing duo, not having extra hands to intercept.

“Quick, run!” Stratholme shouted to Han Shuo as soon as he rushed out from the Sacred Mountain.

It was, of course, clear to Han Shuo obviously just how dire the situation was at the moment and fled like lightning, following closely behind Stratholme. But in contrast to Stratholme, the expression on Han Shuo’s face was much calmer and collected, unlike the panic on Stratholme’s face.

Once departed from the cave in the Sacred Mountain, countless means of escape opened up for Han Shuo. In terms of airspeed, Han Shuo believed that even a character with strength a grade higher than his would be incapable of chasing up to him. At the very least, he could still use the transportation matrix connecting to the Cemetery of Death to escape. Therefore, with such aces up his sleeves, Han Shuo wasn’t as anxious as Stratholme the old monster.

After the two escaped from the Sacred Mountain of the Church of Light, instead of returning to Sandro City close to the mountain, they took the longer route and flew to Ortley City.

Once they entered Ortley City, Stratholme used the authority in his hands to gain access to the transportation matrix. After travelling to a few transportation matrices, the two flew from the borders of the Oden Empire back to Brut Merchant Alliance. They then finally arrived at Tariq City.

Upon arriving at Tariq City, Han Shuo immediately sensed the position of Elizabeth through the drop of blood essence in her brain.

“Bryan, it was all thanks to you that we could escape alive. Well, I owe you one!” Stratholme the old monster said to Han Shuo after arriving a Tariq City.

“You’re welcome!” Han Shuo replied with a slight grin. After a short pause, Han Shuo creased his brows and asked, “The six-horned tribal king could sense our souls. What do you plan to do next?”

Stratholme the old monster revealed a worrisome expression at those words. He sighed before saying, “I will immediately find a secluded place to fuse my soul with my Origin Crystal. Only by fusing the soul can we completely free ourselves from the pursuit of the Soul Race.”

“But we haven’t the slightest detail about the situation at the Sacred Mountain of the Church of Light. If that six-horned tribal king did not suffer serious injuries in the battle with that Saintess, and gets to you when you are still fusing with the Origin Crystal, that will mean certain death for you,” Han Shuo exclaimed.

“There’s no other way. I can only take a chance. If midway through it, the six-horned tribal king comes knocking at my door, it’ll be my luck!” The old monster again sighed helplessly.

Han Shuo didn’t know how to respond. There was indeed no better alternative.

Han Shuo actually had a rather good impression with regards to Stratholme the old monster. Because of the existence of the seven grand duchies, Han Shuo could have become his enemy in the future. Yet, from their interactions during the prior few days, Stratholme’s conducts could have been called straightforward, instead of harboring any evil intentions towards Han Shuo because he was the Lord of Brettel City as Han Shuo imagined.

“Well then, good luck!” Han Shuo said after shaking his head and sighed lightly.

“You too. I hope there is a chance that we see each other again. It sure was nice to meet you!” Stratholme the old monster said with a smile, as though he laid down some worries in his heart. Afterwards, he seemed to suddenly recall something and hesitated for a while before saying, “Bryan, after we part ways today, we may never see each other again. I need to discuss something with you. I hope that you will agree on the account we have fought shoulder to shoulder.”

“Tell me about it first,” Han Shuo creased his brows and had a good guess of what Stratholme wanted to discuss.

“For many years, I have been the State Preceptor of the Verdun Imperial Court, which is no more, and has been split into the seven grand duchies today. I still have some feelings for the seven grand duchies. In the future, perhaps the six-horned tribal king will find us both and we shall both die. Or perhaps one of us will survive this calamity.

“If I do survive, I shall restrict the seven grand duchies to never again infringe on Brettel City. However, if I do not, and you so fortunately survived, I hope that, for my sake, you will not let the people of the seven grand duchies live in hell.

“Your Lancelot Empire and Brut Merchant Alliance have always coveted for the seven grand duchies. I know that once I die, the seven grand duchies will no doubt be conquered. If you live through this, all seven grand duchies will be swooped by Brettel City. I’m not asking you to give it up, but I hope that you will treat the citizens of the seven grand duchies well,” Stratholme the old monster requested earnestly as he stared deeply into Han Shuo’s eyes.

It was only because Stratholme had calculated the likelihood of his death that he would say such things. No matter the perspective, Stratholme’s request wasn’t too arduous. Therefore, right after Stratholme finished, Han Shuo nodded and reassured, “Don’t worry, I will treat the citizens of the seven grand duchies well.”

Whether or not Stratholme would die, Han Shuo had no clue, but he knew that he himself would be able to escape this alive. He had long wanted to get his hands on the seven grand duchies. That decision wouldn’t change even if Stratholme lived. Now, Stratholme merely asked Han Shuo to treat the citizens well, which was not inappropriate at all.

“Thank you. I will return to Stranglethorn Valley and make some arrangements. Then I shall find a spot that any average person would be unable to detect to merge with the Origin Crystal of Fighting Aura. I truly hope that there will be a day that we meet again!" Stratholme the old monster smiled and left placidly.

After Stratholme left, Han Shuo muttered in a low voice, "I hope you can escape this calamity!"

Towards this demigod existence that had obstructed the Lancelot Empire's military expeditions for many years, Han Shuo now held only a feeling of sympathetic respect and reverence. He truly hoped that there would come another chance to meet with the old monster again. After the old monster gradually vanished from Han Shuo's sight, he took a deep breath and flew away. He went searching for Elizabeth by relying on his senses.

"Come with me!" Han Shuo instructed when he saw Elizabeth, and he brought her back to Brettel City.

Chapter 460: Peerless Murderous Soul

Upon arriving at Brettel City, Han Shuo introduced Elizabeth to Jack and others, gave a few instructions, and immediately headed to his secret chamber and activated his transportation array.

Once he entered the Cemetery of Death, Han Shuo was overcome with exhilaration. That terrifying pressure which had been trailing him – as a shadow does a body – vanished without a trace.

“It’s gone!” Han Shuo cried out in surprise.

Ever since leaving Tarrag Canyon, Han Shuo could feel a bone-deep pressure coming from the six-horned tribal king of the Soul Race. But upon entering the Cemetery of Death, that heavy pressure on his chest all could no longer be felt.

He walked out from the hall, looked down at the snow-white bones under his feet, then raised his head to gaze at the dark, murky sky. Suddenly, Han Shuo realized what was going on.

It seemed that the boundary that enveloped the whole Cemetery of Death was isolating him from the six-horned tribal king’s trace of his soul. As long as he was in the Cemetery of Death, Han Shuo believed that the six-horned tribal king would never be able to locate him.

Before arriving at the Cemetery of Death, Han Shuo had worked out plenty of escape plans. He had even prepared to use the skeletal staff to send his soul down to the netherworld for shelter once he entered the Cemetery of Death. But now it seemed that none of that would be necessary. The boundary of the mysterious Cemetery of Death, unexpectedly, solved Han Shuo’s worries.

“Cemetery of Death, oh Cemetery of Death, how many more secrets are you hiding?” Han Shuo couldn’t help but lament.

To be able to block off the sensing power the six-horned tribal king on his soul, this alone adequately explained just how miraculous the boundary that shielded the Cemetery of Death was.

Poor Stratholme. Perhaps you have already left Stranglethorn Valley for secluded cultivation. But even if you are still in Stranglethorn Valley, the Cemetery of Death isn't a place you could enter. Han Shuo thought to himself.

Without the menace of the six-horned tribal king breathing down his neck, Han Shuo's mood somewhat loosened up. Afterwards, he sat cross-legged at the spot where he had previously refined his mystical demons and from his space ring, he withdrew the three spheres he managed to plunder.

Three spheres. One of the Origin Crystal containing the intense element of death, one containing the element of darkness, and the last one emanating the energy of destruction that could cause one to palpitate – the Crystal of Destruction, one that only a maniac would want to fuse with, according to Stratholme.

Along the way as they ran away from the Sacred Mountain of the Church of Light, Han Shuo had asked Stratholme about the exact technique of utilizing the Origin Crystal. And now, everything was in its place. Han Shuo aimed his eyes at the Origin Crystal emanating pure element of death.

With the Origin Crystal dispersing pure element of death in hand, Han Shuo steadily entered into the Origin Crystal with his mental strength and felt the incomparably enormous and pure elemental energy of death stored within. Next, Han Shuo tried to act according to the methods that Stratholme had described. He opened up his consciousness for the Origin Crystal to fuse with his consciousness.

All of a sudden, something Han Shuo had never anticipated happened. His mental strength could clearly sense the tremendous pure element of death. But when he tried the method Stratholme prescribed him, attempting to fuse his consciousness with this element of death, his consciousness immediately locked up, absolutely prohibiting any iota of the element of death from entering.

His consciousness had completely rejected the energy of the Origin

Crystal, thus leaving him unable to form the 'Soul of Element' that Stratholme and Tiana had mentioned.

Han Shuo's demonic infant had the fantastic ability to absorb an array of evil energy and transforming them. However, Han Shuo's consciousness was nevertheless very selfish, not permitting one bit of energy incompatible with demonic arts to assimilate with it. Han Shuo could clearly sense the rejection from his consciousness.

Perhaps the Crystal of Destruction will produce better results!

After putting away the Origin Crystal of Death, Han Shuo took out the sphere that emanated intense energy of destruction, and tried to fuse the energy of destruction into his consciousness again using the same methods.

The consciousness once again rejected!

As before, not a trace of that enormous energy of destruction could enter his consciousness, and naturally he unable to fuse with it.

Han Shuo frowned. With one hand holding Origin Crystal of Death and another the Crystal of Destruction, he thought, I have spent a great deal of effort plundering these two spheres and yet, in spite of everything, I can't absorb any of it. It seems this endeavor was all for nothing.

There were three important components in Han Shuo's body. One is the demonic infant located in his lower abdomen. The demonic infant was the source and root of demonic yuan, which was the basis for deploying demonic arts. The other two components were located in his brain. His consciousness, formed after his three ethereal souls fused together, was the basis for everything. Its importance was self-evident.

The last one, just like the demonic infant to a demonic arts cultivator, was the source and storage of energy. What was stored in this part of the brain was mental strength. It was the crux for Han Shuo, a necromancy grand magus, to release necromancy magic.

Of the three, the most important was of course the consciousness, also known to the average human as the soul. The consciousness contained all the experiences and memories Han Shuo had, including all his realizations, all his knowledge of demonic arts and comprehension of necromancy magic.

The consciousness was the only evidence that Han Shuo was alive!

With his demonic arts attaining such a stage, Han Shuo would never permit any mishap on his consciousness, the basis for his demonic arts to advance further.

However, based on Stratholme's explanation, Han Shuo knew that if one wanted to become God in the domain of magic, one's soul had to form a Soul of Element. Only with that could his soul be perfectly compatible with the element, and possess the most profound realization towards that line of magic.

But still, the Soul of Element was obviously also an evolution of one's soul, and evolving one's soul meant change. What a pity it was that his soul had previously been transformed into consciousness, most suitable for practicing demonic arts. Unless Han Shuo devolved his consciousness to its original state, the Origin Crystals would be of no use to him. No matter what the perspectives, the demonic arts, compared to necromancy magic, was always more valuable to Han Shuo. Hence, Han Shuo would never relinquish his attainments in demonic arts. Besides, he didn't believe that he couldn't become a God without forming a Soul of Element. After some consideration, Han Shuo gave up on merging with the crystals.

Origin Crystal of Death, Destruction, and Darkness. Han Shuo could use neither of the three of them. He placed the three spheres before him, and started to ponder on how to maximize the utility of the three objects he had procured with all that effort.

After some thinking, a light bulb lit over his head. He summoned little skeleton from the netherworld.

"This is for you. Take it and fuse your soul with the energy within. This way, you can better utilize the element of death in the netherworld." Han Shuo handed the Origin Crystal of Death to little skeleton as he appeared and informed him of the process to fuse it with his soul.

“Thank you, thank you father. I can feel that this thing will bring me unimaginable gains. This must be the most valuable treasure for an undead creature. I don’t know what it will transform me into, but I’m certain that I will become stronger. That will surely be the case!” Little skeleton held the Origin Crystal emanating pure aura of death with blinding light exploding from his Purple Demon Eyes. Han Shuo could sense his immense excitement and delight.

“Good then. I believe that you will be stronger!” Han Shuo said with a faint smile as he felt the hard-to-restrain excitement from little skeleton.

“Father, with this, I will be able to subdue bone dragons. In my world, I reckon I will be stronger and stronger. My scope of influence will expand a hundredfold!” little skeleton said with exuberant ambition.

“Alright, go ahead. Immediately fuse with the Origin Crystal of Death like I taught you!” Han Shuo said smilingly and when little skeleton nodded, he sent him back to the netherworld with another necromancy spell.

As for the Origin Crystal of Darkness, of those beside Han Shuo, only Emily could exhibit its use to the greatest extent as no others practiced dark magic. It seemed that this time, Emily would surely go mad with joy. After fusing her soul with the Origin Crystal of Darkness, her strength would advance by leaps and bounds without a doubt.

All that remained then was the Crystal of Destruction. After racking his brain, Han Shuo still couldn’t figure out what to do with it. As he stared at the Crystal of Destruction, he found that the Crystal of Destruction was somewhat different from other Origin Crystals of elements. Once one’s soul fused with this boundless energy of destruction, they would become deranged, only knowing to wreak havoc.

He held the Crystal of Destruction, gazed at it for ages, and yet had no idea what to do with it.

Suddenly, a boundless craving for ruthless massacre rushed from Han Shuo body. With a thought, the Demonslayer Edge suddenly flew out from Han Shuo’s nape and landed on his palm. Inexhaustible resentment and murderous intentions overflowed from the Demonslayer Edge, flooding the whole Cemetery of Death.

A stream of blood glistening bloody rays flowed from the Demonslayer Edge as though it was alive.

Han Shuo understood that the murder weapon that was the Demonslayer Edge had evolved and formed a true main soul! From that day onwards, the Demonslayer Edge would truly be an unparalleled demonic weapon!

While Han Shuo was looking at the Demonslayer Edge with excitement, the Demonslayer Edge suddenly flew out from his right hand. Before Han Shuo could react, its edges had pierced through the sphere containing the energy of destruction.

While Han Shuo was stupefied – the main soul that had just formed within the Demonslayer Edge had begun to fuse with the frightening energy of destruction in the crystal!

Chapter 461: Concealing the Consciousness

In a rather short time, the energy contained within the sphere of destructive aura had fused with the main soul in the Demonslayer Edge. After the fusion of the main soul and the crystal of destruction, it flew back into Han Shuo's body and again sank into hibernation stage.

The Demonslayer Edge was a demonic weapon closely tied with Han Shuo. It had now formed a main soul, and therefore gained its own intelligence. As the Demonslayer Edge was originally casted with Han Shuo's blood essence and demonic yuan, the main soul would eternally serve Han Shuo as its master. Unless Han Shuo's consciousness dissipated, the Demonslayer Edge would always be a demonic weapon for Han Shuo alone to use.

Han Shuo stared at his empty hand that had lost the sphere containing destructive energy, and thought to himself that this was a pretty good ending, and at least it wasn't used to benefit outsiders. After absorbing the destructive energy in the round sphere, the Demonslayer Edge would no doubt only grow more terrifying. As a weapon that only he alone could use, the stronger the Demonslayer Edge became, the more advantageous it would be for Han Shuo.

Three Origin Crystals. One gifted to little skeleton, another fused with the main soul that just formed from Demonslayer Edge, and the last one belonging to Emily the dark magus. All three of them were people that Han Shuo could trust the most. Although Han Shuo's consciousness could fuse with none of the three Origin Crystals, it could be said that his strength had improved indirectly.

To Han Shuo, who had originally planned to fuse with the Origin Crystal containing intense element of death, the Origin Crystals didn't concern him anymore. The only thing that continued to worry Han Shuo was the threat of the six-horned tribal king of the Soul Race.

As long as Han Shuo remained inside the Cemetery of Death, the six-horned tribal king of the Soul Race couldn't do anything to Han Shuo as he couldn't detect the presence from Han Shuo's body.

But the problem was, it was impossible for Han Shuo to stay within the Cemetery of Death forever. The moment he left the Cemetery of Death, the six-horned king would sense the position of Han Shuo's soul. And when that happened, Han Shuo would have to confront this terrifying threat that he momentarily could not resist.

It seems I still need to purge that guy's sense of my consciousness! Han Shuo thought and began sifting through the memory that Chu Cang Lan left to him for a way to tackle it.

As Han Shuo carefully went through the memories, it suddenly occurred to him that once he reached the next Nine changes realm in demonic arts, even if he didn't seek a deliberate way, his consciousness would become undetectable by the six-horned king.

Once Han Shuo reached the Nine changes realm, not only could his physical body transform into any form he wished, his consciousness too could have a myriad different transformations. By then, that six-horned tribal king would never be able to detect Han Shuo again.

Of course, after Han Shuo broke through to the Nine changes realm, if the six-horned tribal king came knocking at Han Shuo's door, he would be courting death.

Currently, in the Carnal realm, although his consciousness could not alter as he wished, he could still conceal it with a concealment technique. As long as Han Shuo didn't intentionally use the wonderful energy of his consciousness, and remain in a state of nothingness under the effects of the concealment technique, no one could sense the position of Han Shuo's consciousness.

In fact, the consciousness concealment technique was one of the many miraculous abilities that the consciousness had. Unfortunately, Han Shuo had not spent enough time and effort delving into the marvelousness of consciousness. Once he found out that the consciousness could remain in a state of nothingness as long as he didn't use it to explore, he began to practice this method of concealing the consciousness.

Not only would this state not affect Han Shuo's thinking and memory, it would also help Han Shuo make more rational decisions, and not cause him to lose control of his emotions or do anything at odds with his character.

Once Han Shuo thought that he mastered this technique of concealing his consciousness, he of course was eager to test if it was genuinely useful. He returned to the center of the Cemetery of Death and activated the transportation matrix, returning to the secret chamber in the city lord's mansion of Brettel City.

Indeed, as expected, even after he left the Cemetery of Death, Han Shuo did not feel that pressure coming from that six-horned tribal king, indicating that the consciousness concealment method was definitely working. Han Shuo no longer needed to be concerned about the potential threat of the six-horned tribal king anymore.

Immediately, he summoned Dorcas, Jack and the others for a meeting. When everyone was present, Han Shuo turned to Dorcas and said, "From today onwards, you will be in charge of the invasion of the seven grand duchies. You will make preparations at once. I shall take a trip to Ossen City, and provide you with detailed instructions when I return!"

"I have been waiting for this day for so long!" Dorcas' eyes were sparkling with exuberant ambition. The excitement of this war-lover was plainly visible.

"Master, what are you planning to do?" Dark dragon Gilbert asked Han Shuo, puzzled.

Han Shuo did not answer, instead instructing, "You stay by Dorcas. His strength is of no use. You will be in charge of protecting him and keeping him from assassination."

"Alright then. How come I've become a bodyguard? Before this I was protecting Trunks, and now it's someone even weaker," the dark dragon mumbled in unwillingness.

“Elizabeth, you stay in Brettel City. Guard against people playing tricks in the dark. There are a few with poor strength in Brettel City. You must protect them with your life.”

“Got it, master!” Elizabeth replied.

Afterwards, the duo of Dorcas and Jack thoroughly explained the current situation in Brettel City to Han Shuo. From their words, Han Shuo understood that the current population of Brettel City had increased over ten times over to around 530 thousand people. Under the leadership of Dorcas, Brettel’s military had 50,000 elite troops, in addition to 30,000 guards defending the city.

As the ever-expanding Brettel City possessed its own weaponry workshops and armour smiths, never short of all kinds of ore supplies coming from the five mines around it, every last one of the altogether 80,000 soldiers of Brettel City were fully equipped. Compared to the imperial guards of Ossen City, their weapons and armour were in no respect inferior.

With King Lawrence’s vigorous backing, the convenience of magical transportation matrixes, and the unusual terrain of Brettel City, in the short span of a few years, Brettel City had transformed into a true major city that was invulnerable to attack, and with flourishing businesses. The city now had a powerful, well-trained army. In addition to the lack of worry for future consequence, it was the best time to go on the offense at the seven grand duchies.

“Very well. I shall pay a visit to Ossen City. When I return, I shall set off with you all!” Han Shuo said and chuckled heartily as he felt entirely free from worry. With that, the meeting concluded. Han Shuo then headed towards the transportation matrix in Brettel City.

Currently, of the things that threatened Han Shuo the most was the six-horned tribal king of the Soul Race, and another was the Church of Light. The six-horned tribal king could not sense Han Shuo’s location, and hence this threat could be disregarded. As for the Church of Light, although Han Shuo couldn’t contend against them if the two demigod beings of the Church of Light were to act together, Han Shuo was confident that he could easily escape.

As for the Saintess with her Domain of the Divinity, based on what Stratholme the old monster said, Han Shuo knew that she was bound to the Sacred Mountain of the Church of Light, and generally never left the mountain rashly. This seemed her hardly a threat to Han Shuo.

With that, Han Shuo really didn't have much to worry about. Being in Carnal realm, Han Shuo longed to go all out with no restraints. Only by completely satisfying his desires could he break through from Carnal realm and reach the next Nine changes realm. Therefore, Han Shuo hardly exercised restraint to the desires from his heart, ready to start punching and kicking towards significant undertakings.

Historically, in the school of demonic arts, anyone who advanced to Nine changes realm would first completely set free all their longings while in Carnal realm. These people were more often than not ambitious and ruthless characters in their worlds. For dynasties, these elders of the school of demonic arts, all played important roles, the trendsetters of their times.

As Brettel City had its own transportation matrix, it was incredibly convenient to go back and forth to Ossen City. Han Shuo made use of the space magic transportation matrix and appeared in the capital city in the blink of an eye. Upon arriving at Ossen City, Han Shuo headed straight towards the Dark Mantle headquarters.

Before coming to Ossen City, Han Shuo learned from Dick that Emily now rarely executed missions herself. She was currently in charge of assigning and distributing tasks. The post was more relaxed and lacked a lot of dangers. It seemed that perhaps Emily had ridden on Han Shuo's coattails a little, and therefore she could be so comfortable and relaxed.

Mount Ordas, Dark Mantle headquarters.

In three years, Han Shuo had turned into a legendary character in the Dark Mantle. Ever since he first stepped into the headquarters, while on his way, the people would look at him with a most revered expression in their eyes.

“Where is Lady Emily?” Han Shuo asked the guide who was bringing him to the Candide’s secret room.

The guide then recalled of Han Shuo and Emily’s relationship. He revealed a meaningful smile and replied to Han Shuo, “Lady Emily and Lord Candide’s place aren’t separated far from each other. Lord Bryan, where do you intend to go to first?”

“Bring me to Lady Emily’s secret chamber first,” Han Shuo instructed.

“Very well,” the guide answered respectfully. His gaze towards Han Shuo was filled with admiration coming from the bottom of his heart.

To these people, although the current Han Shuo was not the one of the three heavyweights of the Dark Mantle, he was a character more honored than them.

Chapter 462: Of Course It's for You

In the stony room were a few wide bookcases and a black wooden table where Emily was fully concentrated on an ancient personal letter held in her hands. Her brows were slightly knitted, puzzling over the dark magic knowledge recorded on the ancient letter.

“Reporting to Lady Emily, Lord Bryan requests an audience!” a voice came from a tubular hole on Emily’s desk.

A pleasantly surprised expression took over her face and she involuntarily let out a gentle cry. She put down the ancient letter with haste and took out a clear rounded mirror from her space ring, and touched up her tender, lovely cheeks.

“Lady Emily, can Lord Bryan enter?” when the guide heard her soft cry, he understood that Emily was in the secret chamber, but since she did not reply, the guide repeated his question.

Emily, who was tidying up her appearance in a flustered manner, hastily replied with her lovable voice, “Hold on, I will be ready in a second!”

As she spoke, she double checked her face in the mirror, making sure that not the slightest blemish was visible. She then smoothed out her black robe with magic. Finally, she said, “Alright, Lord Bryan may enter!”

With a flash of bright light, Han Shuo appeared in the stony room through a short-distance transportation matrix.

“Bryan!” Emily exclaimed delightedly when she saw the imposing stature that had been constantly in her mind standing in her presence. She threw herself into Han Shuo’s broad chest and tightly embraced him with all her strength, as though Han Shuo would disappear at any moment.

Han Shuo had a warm smile on his face as he looked down at Emily in his embrace.

Not only hadn’t her beautiful face aged after three years, but it had grown even more fascinating and charming. Her delicate face flushed with joy and excitement, making her already beautiful and alluring appearance even more mesmerizing.

Han Shuo could feel the rapid climb in temperature of Emily's body. After three years of abstinence, an irrepressible fire surged up in his lower abdomen as he savored the wonderful feeling of having such a magnificent being in his embrace, with her supple skin as smooth as it looked and her slender neck, her curvaceous physique, bum and bosoms thick in all the right places.

Emily obviously felt the erection and heat coming from Han Shuo's lower abdomen. She became usually sensitive to such things after receiving much nourishment from Han Shuo. Her sight suddenly blurred, her voice and body, too, started to tremble lightly. Subconsciously, her two hands which were tightly wrapped around Han Shuo began unbridledly moving across his broad back.

Han Shuo let out a gentle roar and swept Emily off the ground in one motion. In a flash, he sat her down on the office desk used to distribute assignments to members of the Dark Mantle, and their clothing tore into shreds...

A long while later, Emily couldn't make the slightest movement with her fingers, and curled up in a languid posture in the comfy, wide chair.

A thread of demonic yuan flowed into Emily's body, gradually nourishing her, restoring the lost physical power little by little.

Some more time passed and Emily, who was in extreme comfort, took a deep breath and opened her bright eyes. With her gaze focused on Han Shuo, she asked, "Bryan, when did you arrive at Ossen City?"

"Just now!" Han Shuo had thrown on a new set of clothes. He gently pulled out a soft blanket and layed it over Emily's tender body.

Her eyes suddenly lit up with excitement and the corners of her mouth curved with a trace of sweet joy. In a shy tone, she asked, "Then does that mean I was the first person you visited when you arrived?"

"Yep," Han Shuo replied smilingly.

"Very good!" Emily nodded, full of energy. She looked pleasantly at Han Shuo and held his big hands tight, guiding them to gently rub on her cheeks.

“This is an Origin Crystal of Darkness I obtained from Tarrag Canyon. Take it. Slowly fuse your soul with it. It will make you form a Soul of Element, which is enormously beneficial to your practice of dark magic!” Han Shuo said with a warm smile as he revealed the Origin Crystal containing pure elemental energy of darkness and placed it in Emily’s palm.

As soon as Han Shuo removed the Origin Crystal of the purest of dark element from his space ring, Emily, who had been curled up lazily in her chair, immediately sensed the pure element of darkness stored within.

This element of darkness contained not the tiniest bit of impurity. Its uncontaminated energy carried an indescribable temptation power. Eventhough Emily did not use her mental strength to deliberately examine it, as a dark magus, she could deeply sense just how miraculous and mysterious what was contained within was.

“Such pure element of darkness. What, what is this thing?” Emily asked with her bright eyes on Han Shuo.

“This is called an Origin Crystal. It contains an enormous and pure element of darkness free of any impurities. Once your soul is fused with an Origin Crystal, it becomes a Soul of Element. This will let you possess the most profound realization of dark magic, and your soul and dark element will reach the most compatible state.

For any magus practicing elemental magic to become God, the person must form Soul of Element and Body of Element. An ordinary magus may never get the knack of forming a Soul of Element. Even if they do, it can’t be easily realized for any ordinary persons.

With this Origin Crystal, so long as you fuse it with your soul, the enormous, pure element of darkness stored within can directly make you form a Soul of Element. With that, you will undoubtedly make rapid progress in your practice of dark magic. In addition, you will possess the foundation of becoming a God in dark magic!” Han Shuo explained with a smile.

Emily couldn't help but shiver slightly. Her eyes were gleaming with disbelief. She looked at Han Shuo, and with a trembling voice, she stuttered, "Br...Bryan... this is for me? Are you sure this is for me?"

"Silly woman, of course it's for you!" Han Shuo said as he gently caressed Emily's face. Suddenly, Han Shuo recalled something and said solemnly, "However, given your current realm attainment, you must absorb it carefully. I don't know if your soul can fully bear this enormous amount of dark element. In any case, be careful of all things!"

"I, I will!" Emily held the Origin Crystal of Darkness with both hands, she was so stirred up that she nearly fainted in euphoria. From Han Shuo's explanation, she realized what this Origin Crystal would mean for her. It was a most precious item that could make her a God. She could no longer express her gratitude and adoration towards Han Shuo with words.

"Lady Emily, is Bryan in there?" Candide's voice interrupted from a magical device on Emily's table.

Candide's voice seemed somewhat unsteady and excited for some reason. Before Han Shuo could answer, Candide spoke again through the magical device, "I sense an incomparably pure and tremendous aura of dark element coming from your location. Are you both alright?"

Han Shuo and Emily exchanged a glance and they both came to their senses. Candide was, too, a dark grand magus. He had immersed himself in dark magic much longer than Emily had. His comprehension of dark magic had likewise presumably exceeded that of Emily's.

As Han Shuo did not utilize any special technique to cover up the aura that the Origin Crystal of Darkness emitted, Candide, as a dark grand magus, it was a matter of course that he would sense the presence of this enormous pure element of darkness.

"Quickly put it away!" With one hand covering the sound-transmitting magical device, Han Shuo hastily instructed Emily.

Emily had already come to her senses when Candide's voice sounded, but the first thing she did was hurriedly get dressed. Only after Han Shuo's reminder did she put away the Origin Crystal. Shortly after, she said with panic, "He knows, what do we do, what should we do?"

As a figure of such high authority, Emily shouldn't have been so panic-stricken. The reason she was so out of her wits was purely that the Origin Crystal had overwhelmed her to the point of shock. She was so excited that she found it challenging to remain calm, hence her agitation.

"It's okay. Not only does he not have a clue about anything, plus, even if he knew that I handed the Origin Crystal to you, there's nothing he could do about it," Han Shuo soothed Emily. He realized that the Emily was now too emotional, and it would be inappropriate for Candide to enter. He immediately added, "You stay here and calm down yourself. Leave Candide to me!"

Han Shuo then stood on the transportation matrix in Emily's room. After a flash of bright light, he appeared before Candide.

"Bryan, I've just received reports, you indeed have returned. Oh right, I sensed an extremely pure aura of dark element coming from Emily's stone room a minute ago. For so many years, I have never perceived such pure dark elemental energy from anywhere. What's going on?" Candide asked.

"Nothing much. I was just using my martial arts to help Emily aggregate some dark element, so that she could more clearly sense the presence of dark element," Han Shuo said smilingly as he tried to conceal the truth. Shortly after, he changed the subject, "Lord, I have met Stratholme the old monster."

Perhaps the subject of Stratholme the old monster provoked Candide's interests, or perhaps Candide was astute and understood that Han Shuo was unwilling to discuss it thoroughly, Candide did not investigate any further about the enormous dark element, but asked in astonishment about the course of events that led to Han Shuo and Stratholme's meeting.

Chapter 463: A Big Gift

Except anything related to the Origin Crystals, Han Shuo told the story of his encounter with the old monster and Tiana at Tarrag Canyon. Even the incident at the Sacred Mountain of Church of Light located in Oden Empire was disclosed.

Candide was all ears as Han Shuo described his account from the beginning 'til the end and his brows were tightly knitted together.

“Lord Candide, about those true powerhouses of Profound Continent and the Soul Race people, do you have any knowledge of them?” The reason Han Shuo revealed everything was to ask Candide if he was aware of their existences.

“Tiana is the protector of Kasi Empire. In Kasi Empire, Tiana is a godly being. She is a character of the same as era our Lancelot Empire's dark divine magus Ayermike Cotton. I genuinely did not expect her to still be alive!” Candide exclaimed.

Ayermike Cotton? A character his era?! Han Shuo was startled.

Ayermike Cotton is one of the most reputable characters in the history of Lancelot Empire. It was all thanks to his existence that Lancelot Empire was established and possessed such mighty power and influence these days.

However, Ayermike Cotton the dark divine magus was a character from 500 years ago! Having found that out from Candide, Han Shuo then realized just how long Tiana had actually been alive. It was no wonder that even Stratholme the antediluvian old monster that lived through two dynasties would address her as ‘Elder Sister Tiana’!

“Besides Tiana, about those of the Church of Light and Soul Race, does your Lordship know of their origins?” Han Shuo asked as he stared blankly at Candide.

“That divine knight and light divine magus of the Church of Light you mentioned, I've read a little about them from ancient records. They are both existences of the Church of Light famous for their strengths a few hundred years ago. Everyone assumed that they had both died of old age. They had unexpectedly lived on until the present day.

“As for that Saintess of the Church of Light, and that Soul Race of Tarrag Canyon, I have no idea. If not for you telling me this news, perhaps, I would have never learned of such characters on Profound Continent. These beings are far beyond anything I can imagine,” Candide lamented as he repeatedly shook his head and sighed.

Although Candide’s knowledge was rather limited, Han Shuo learned, at least, of the origin of Tiana and that she was a protector of Kasi Empire.

“Bryan, do you mean that you already have the strength of Stratholme and Tiana?” After a long while, Candide suddenly asked as he stared blankly at Han Shuo.

Just then, Han Shuo mentioned fighting shoulder to shoulder with Stratholme the old monster and revealed the encounter with the Soul Race. Candide soon realized one small detail – Han Shuo and Stratholme were beings of the same class!

There was nothing worth hiding here, so Han Shuo nodded and calmly admitted, “I believe I now possess that so-called demigod strength.”

“Unbelievable, truly unbelievable!” Candide spoke somewhat incoherently and mumbled, “Madam Grace’s astrology is truly miraculous. No wonder she said that you can bring Lancelot Empire a new future. With the presence of an existence like yours, any nation can grow mighty.”

“Mighty or not, I don’t know, but I do know that Stratholme will not be appearing in the seven grand duchies for the time being, and the Brut Merchant Alliance has just lost their sacred lightning magus Reynold. Given that the magical beasts from Tarrag Canyon roam all over their streets disturbing residents, in addition to the group of Soul Race of unknown origin, I reckon they won’t have the capacity to deal with other matters.

Now is the best chance for our Lancelot Empire to send troops and take down the seven grand duchies. It is now or never!” Han Shuo explained to Candide ambitiously.

“Bryan, go meet His Majesty. I believe that His Majesty will fully support you!” Candide urged. It seemed that he was itching to get on with it as well.

Han Shuo nodded. After authenticating his identity as a Fourth Dark Sun envoy from Candide, and without notifying Emily, Han Shuo headed directly for the imperial palace by means of transportation arrays in Dark Mantle headquarters that only some highest level personnel could operate.

“Bryan, you joker, disappeared all of a sudden for three years. You have finally returned!”

Lawrence, the king of the Lancelot Empire, personally came to greet Han Shuo when he heard that Han Shuo had requested to meet him and laughed heartily as soon as he saw Han Shuo.

Compared to three years prior, the Lawrence now had more of that imposing demeanor of a monarch wielding the power to dictate the lives and deaths of others. He appeared even more mature and experienced. He even deliberately kept a beard over his originally clean shaven upper lip. His eyes beamed wisdom and prudence.

“Your Majesty, long time no see!” Han Shuo stepped forward with a faint smile. Leaning over to Lawrence’s side, he continued, “Your Majesty, let’s have a chat alone!”

Lawrence waved his hand at his imperial bodyguards to send them away, “You are all dismissed!” Afterwards, he dragged Han Shuo back to the grand hall, chucklingly said, “So we are actually still good friends away from the public eye. How come you remember to visit me this time?”

“I came here with the intent of presenting you with a big gift!” Han Shuo smiled.

“Oh? A big gift?” Lawrence asked engrossing.

“The seven grand duchies!” Han Shuo proclaimed.

Lawrence's body jolted. His eyes burst out cold rays that one wouldn't dare look at directly. With excitement in his voice, he asked, "Bryan, are you confident about this now?"

Han Shuo nodded, and again disclosed what he had to Candide.

By the time Han Shuo completed his story, Lawrence was trembling from the head down. He held firmly onto Han Shuo with both hands, his fiery eyes ardently on Han Shuo, and in an astonished voice he asked, "Bry... Bryan, you mean..... you mean you now possess demigod strength?"

"That's right!" Han Shuo affirmed.

"Good! Good! Good!" Lawrence howled with laughter with his face to the sky. He then continued with a broad smile, "After the honorable Ayermike Cotton, finally, our Lancelot Empire is once again blessed with a demigod being! Haha, from now on, no one will disregard the mighty existences of my Lancelot Empire!"

"Don't celebrate so soon. Like I just said, a demigod existence isn't the apex of strength on the continent. Besides, I'm not the only one with demigod strength. Tiana of Kasi Empire is another. Over at the Church of Light headquarters in Oden Empire, there's far more than one demigod existence!" Han Shuo doused Lawrence with cold water when he saw that Lawrence was so excited he nearly went mad, and feared that Lawrence might rely on him too much.

"I know, I know!" Lawrence said in an elated voice. "Of course I know. But with you in Lancelot Empire, I feel much more reassured in my heart. I have long thought of conquering Brut Merchant Alliance and Kasi Empire, but had always shelved it aside because of all sorts of apprehensions. But now, our Lancelot Empire can really flex our military muscles!"

"Alright. I knew you wouldn't do anything so ill-judged! Hmm, you can start with the seven grand duchies first. Of the seven, Helon Duchy and Boulet Duchy have secretly allied with me long ago. As long as we set about this covertly, without Stratholme the old monster appearing to upset the apple cart, swooping all seven grand duchies is definitely in the bag," Han Shuo said in a deep voice.

“Very well, I will back your campaign fully. Whatever military resources or physical resources you require, speak, what do you need? Tell me, and I shall aid you with all the resources of my kingdom!” Lawrence cut straight to the point. He seemed determined to firmly tether up Han Shuo.

“Frankly, military strategizing isn’t my strong suit,” Han Shuo replied with a bitter smile. After thinking for a moment, he continued, “As for how to attack the seven grand duchies, it’s better if I just leave you and your men to discuss and deal with it. Oh, by the way, it would be best that Dorcas is appointed commander for this matter. This chap has roamed about the seven grand duchies for the past several years, and is therefore totally familiar with the situation there. In addition, he has expertise in military strategy. I trust he will make a fitting commander!”

“No problem, I will make arrangements! Rest assured, without Stratholme’s hindering this time, the seven grand duchies will surely give in to the military might of my Lancelot Empire!” Lawrence assured.

“Well then, I have said what I ought to have said. I believe you will need some time to prepare as well. I shall depart now! I, for one, have yet to make time to see my ladies. If I don’t look for them as soon as possible, they are going to start grumbling for sure!” Han Shuo said smilingly to Lawrence.

After receiving a few meaningful winks from Han Shuo, Lawrence empathizingly said, “I understand. Haha, go ahead and repay your ‘debts’! Oh, right, your mansion has been rebuilt and all the servants are still there. Every now and again Phoebe, Fanny and the others stay there for a few days. Don’t forget that you still have a home in Ossen City!”

Previously, during the upheaval at Ossen City, in one night, many mansions of the nobles were destroyed into puffs of smoke. The mansion he received as a count was no exception to this heavy damage. Originally, Han Shuo thought that the mansion had been completely ruined. It looked as if Lawrence did indeed care about Han Shuo very much, to go as far as to completely rebuild the house for him.

“Thank you, Your Majesty!” Han Shuo replied. Without saying any more, he left the palace.

“A demigod expert! Madam Grace is indeed an admirable astrologer. Bryan, oh Bryan, you truly are my lucky star!” Lawrence muttered softly after Han Shuo had left.

Chapter 464: Days of Debauchery

For days in a row, Han Shuo remained in his own mansion at Ossen City. Fanny and Pheobe came by when they received the news, and savored every rare moment they had with Han Shuo. In the meantime, whenever Emily had completed her work at the Dark Mantle, she too would head over. Of course, her lips were sealed about the Origin Crystal of Darkness that Han Shuo gave her.

In those few days, Han Shuo had indeed lived a most pleasurable life. All three women in Han Shuo's life were lovely ladies that an ordinary man would yearn for even in their dreams. Having not seen each other for three years, the ladies would deliberately accompanied Han Shuo for every second they had together. Phoebe and Emily, who long had especially close physical relationships with Han Shuo, would even more persistently stick to Han Shuo.

Being in Carnal realm, Han Shuo could hardly restrain his desires, and that was especially so when it came to sexual desires. During those couple of days, he would intemperately be with Phoebe and Emily all day long. Initially, they would make love to Han Shuo separately by themselves. But later, Han Shuo found it hard to contain his sex drive and he couldn't have cared less if either of them had qualms about it.

After the first occasion of them sleeping together, the two ladies gradually let go of their reluctance, and began cooperating to serve Han Shuo better. Phoebe and Emily, who originally had minor discord, improved their rapport as they pulled together, and their relationship grew stronger and stronger.

Han Shuo, being in Carnal realm, did not find such a preposterous thing distasteful. In fact, when he discovered that such behaviour actually helped the two ladies bond with each other, he further ravaged the two by doing so even more frequently. Throughout the process, Han Shuo discovered that his mind would unwittingly grow calm and stable. Everytime his desires were set free, his demonic yuan would grow richer and stronger.

The only thing that caused Han Shuo some distress was Fanny. Perhaps she was really shy, or perhaps it was Firenze's provision, but everytime Han Shuo attempted to break through her last defense and take down Fanny, she would always reject Han Shuo, telling him with flushed cheeks that Firenze wouldn't allow her to lose her virginity before she got married.

"That old fart! He meddles so much with other people's businesses!" Who knows how many times Han Shuo repeated those words and how many times he cursed Firenze in his heart. If Han Shuo had been studying the curses of dark magic, perhaps Firenze would have long been cursed to death by Han Shuo.

"Bryan, I forbid you from speaking of my father like that. Erm, in any case, you already have Emily and Phoebe, aren't the two of them enough to make you, make you...." Fanny murmured in a frail voice, panting, after she pushed Han Shuo away. Her upper garment was half-untied with her bosom slightly revealed. Amorous feelings drizzled in her eyes. As she was rather shy, she was unable to complete yet sentence.

When Fanny rejected him at that crucial moment, Han Shuo was fumed with rage and rained curses on Firenze. Although Han Shuo's leaning tower was erect and ready for action, his face was flushed, panting heavily much like a wild animal during mating season, he had no choice but to pick up his pants and consider if he should immediately leave and look for Emily and Phoebe to satisfy his needs.

It was at this moment, Han Shuo's demonic yuan began to react chaotically, causing Han Shuo to turn pale with fright. Such a situation had not occurred for a very long time. This sudden occurrence left Han Shuo somewhat bewildered. The more Han Shuo forcefully repressed his clear desires for Fanny, the more disorderly that demonic yuan energy became. Even the demonic infant felt unwell.

Oh shit! Han Shuo cursed in his heart when he realize what was actually going on.

In the Carnal realm, it was only when the desires in Han Shuo's heart were completely liberated that he would make progress in the realm as well as deepening the demonic yuan. On the contrary, if Han Shuo exercised restraint against the cravings from his heart, he would not improve but instead deteriorate in the realm. For the last couple of days, Han Shuo had restrained himself from acting on Fanny more than a couple times. He had earlier on faintly felt that something was wrong. But now when the demonic yuan in his body sank into utter chaos, he immediately came to his senses.

Han Shuo was very clear just how intense that desire to deflower Fanny was. The more Fanny rejected, the fiercer the craving to possess her got. Especially, time after time, when Han Shuo nearly had his way as even Fanny was struggling to contain herself, that desire in his heart would increase by folds.

After this was repeated several times, Han Shuo finally suffered the consequences. He felt as though he was gradually losing control over the demonic yuan in his body.

The more Han Shuo tried to give up and leave, the worse his body condition got. For a character like Han Shuo of such exceptional class, it was really difficult for any average person to harm him. Apart from a certain secretive and mysterious character of godlike strength, only Han Shuo could really cause damage to himself.

Feeling the overwhelming changes in his body and the intense struggle in his heart, Han Shuo was red-faced, with the veins on his forehead, and on the brink of a total meltdown as he hesitated on whether to deviate from his cultivation and sustain serious damages to his body, or to possess Fanny and calm down the disorder in his heart.

“Bryan? Bryan? What’s wrong with you?” Fanny obviously also discovered that Han Shuo’s condition was far from good. Not minding that her breasts were semi-revealed, she rushed to Han Shuo and reached out her hand to caress Han Shuo’s forehead seeped with cold sweat, at a loss for what to do.

Damn it! Fanny is my woman to begin with. I am going to do her sooner or later anyway. How can Firenze come in and meddle with my business! After thinking for a while, Han Shuo no longer beat about the bush and suddenly embraced Fanny. When Fanny found herself in a confused state of mind not knowing what to do, the gasping Han Shuo moved his mouth close to Fanny's ear and told her the current situation as it was.

When Han Shuo finished his explanation, Fanny started to breath rapidly. Similarly panting, she asked, "Bryan, are you for real? You aren't joking right? We must do that thing, only then you won't be in so much pain?"

"I really wasn't joking, such is the peculiarity of my martial arts!" Han Shuo explained with a bitter smile as he puffed hard.

An amorous feeling gradually filled her bright eyes. Fanny no longer showed the slightest resistance. She took the initiative and undressed herself before Han Shuo, bit by bit laid bare her body of ideal proportions. Her curvaceous, naked body, like fine jade, emitted enchanting rays that hooked onto one's soul. Han Shuo stared at Fanny right before his eyes, intoxicated.

"Bryan, what... what are you waiting for?" The corners of Fanny's mouth curved to form a faint smile, which in Han Shuo's eyes, was ever so charming, ever so lovable, and ever so irresistible!

Without any hesitation, Han Shuo made a move. Fanny's nymph-like bare body completely fell on Han Shuo's wide chest. At that moment, demonic yuan in Han Shuo's body was no longer chaotic while the demonic infant suddenly turned quiet.

Fanny's look when she was embarrassed was drop-dead gorgeous. All of a sudden she wrapped her arms tightly around Han Shuo's back and cried somewhat nervously, "Bryan, be gentle, I'm afraid of pain!"

"Don't worry, you won't feel the slightest bit of pain!" Han Shuo reassured her tenderly. Han Shuo, like a cheetah, carried Fanny onto a large, cozy bed.

Shortly after, the enchanting moans that could sweep away a man's soul, combined with Han Shuo's beastly gasping, began reverberating from the room, which sounded like an incomparably touching song of nature.

“This little wench, succumbed just the same in the end!” In another room, Phoebe who was practicing with a sword suddenly halted and mumbled after carefully listening for a while.

“Hehe, I knew she couldn’t escape the malicious hands of that little lecher!” Emily said smilingly after walking into Phoebe’s practicing room. She had just returned from a day’s work at the Dark Mantle.

“That’s true! It’s just that I feel disdained at her persistence all this while. Humph! So pure and righteous, as though, as though she was imploring us, to be, to be so wanton!” Phoebe couldn’t seem to voice the reason for her discontent.

“Hehe, sister Pheobe, don’t be silly. You are the only person that was licentious, can you please not drag me into the same boat with you?” Emily rocked her body backward and forward, winked her eyes as she mocked Phoebe on purpose.

“Look who’s talking!” Phoebe’s cheeks blushed as though they were smeared with red dye. She flew into rage from humiliation, charged towards Emily, putting down the longsword, and tickled Emily. Striking back, she said, “You aren’t wanton? Then who’s the one that used the mouth, and even very much enjoyed it!”

“Damned sister, I will tear up your mouth!” The originally complacently smirking Emily turned so embarrassed that she nearly bore a burrow to hide herself. The two with blushing faces fought playfully. As it was just a jest, they did not actually exert much strength, “Ohhh.....” Suddenly, the two heard an significantly sharper moan from Fanny.

The hand movements of the two ladies fighting with each other suddenly froze. The two were very clear that the loud moan meant Fanny had been utterly defeated. Soon after, the duo seemed to simultaneously recall something, and immediately their faces both flushed. They could unquestionably feel the rising temperatures of each other’s bodies.

Emily licked her rosy lips and suggested, "I'm certain that Bryan definitely has yet to finish. How about we look for him, and take Fanny in as well?"

"Hey! Who was the one that claimed to be not licentious, but always comes up with such ideas!" Phoebe cursed softly, but continued with an even softer voice, "Good idea. I do want to get a look at Fanny's appearance now!"

"Well then, let's go find him!" Emily dragged Phoebe into Han Shuo's room.

"Hehe, just in time to keep me accompanied!" Han Shuo laughed heartily when he saw the two come to him.

Soon enough, the room was again filled with boundless ecstasy. That dissipated moaning sound that itched the heart once more reverberated.

Chapter 465: The Dark Dragon's Plead

Time just seemed to fly as Han Shuo revelled in the joy of having several partners at his full disposal. His innermost desires were completely liberated. There was no longer any indication of cultivation deviation of his practice of demonic arts. Instead, it improved with each passing day.

Regarding the matter for which Han Shuo returned to Ossen City, with the exception of King Lawrence and certain members of the Dark Mantle, nobody was given any information on it. Consequently, in the past few days, while Han Shuo was seeking pleasure with his three women in his mansion, no bigwigs came by to interrupt his indulgence.

Good times evidently never last. When Emily came by this time, she notified Han Shuo that Lawrence had completed arrangements to invade the seven grand duchies. Thus, Han Shuo had no choice but to, yet again, depart from Ossen City.

Fortunately, the space magic transportation matrix connecting Ossen City and Brettel City had been completed. As all three ladies were of honorable statuses, they could utilize the transportation matrix to effortlessly visit Han Shuo. Therefore, Han Shuo's departure did not cause intense melancholy to the three ladies.

After one final briefing with Lawrence and Candide, Han Shuo left Ossen City for Brettel City.

Once Han Shuo arrived at Brettel City, he learned from Dorcas and the others that Brettel City was basically ready. As soon as the reinforcement troops from the empire arrived, they could head right over to the seven grand duchies.

As military warfare was not Han Shuo's strong suit, he handed over all military power to Dorcas to do what he was best at. For so many years on the arena that was Brettel City, Dorcas had amply demonstrated his talents in military strategy. Each and every soldier of Brettel City accepted his leadership willingly.

"Senior brother!" Bollands respectfully saluted Han Shuo at the doorstep when he returned to the city lord's mansion.

“Huh? Why are you here?” Han Shuo was startled when he saw Bolland and couldn't help but to size him up.

After three years, the killing intent and reeking of blood that had always lingered around Bolland were all gone. Han Shuo understood that this wasn't a sign that Bolland had made no progress in God Slaying Devil Path, but the contrary. From the aura Han Shuo sensed emitting from Bolland, he figured out that Bolland had successfully cultivated in the God Slaying Devil Path to the realm where he could conceal his killing intent.

At this realm, Bolland could skillfully put his killing intent to use. Any time he was not engaging with enemy combatants, not a trace of killing intent in his body would spill out. Compared to his former state of intense killing intent from head to foot, his well concealed killing intent indicated that he had made lightning-fast progress.

“Senior brother, for the last three years, I have constantly come and gone in various battlefields, secretly absorbing the killing intent that wafted through the air using the martial skill you taught me. After that, I digested the energy in accordance with the method you instructed me. As senior brother has been cultivating without leaving a trail for the last three years, I have not gotten the chance to meet you. It was sometime ago when I learned that senior brother made an appearance in Brettel City, therefore I specially rushed over here.” When Bolland came face to face with Han Shuo, he wore a most humble, deferential expression, even more diligent than when he served his former master Karel.

Han Shuo knew that this was because he could give Bolland what Karel never could.

After three years, based on the substantial yet reserved aura radiating from Bolland, Han Shuo could be certain that his cultivation of God Slaying Devil Path had been fruitful. Compared to the strength of a great swordmaster of the past, Bolland's must now have been considerably more formidable.

“Come on in with me!” Han Shuo nodded before instructing Bollands and marched straight into the city lord’s mansion.

After they arrived at a practice field in the mansion, Han Shuo stamped his feet and, with his eyes on Bollands, he instructed, “Attack me with all your strength. I want to see how much you’ve progressed in the last three years!”

“Yes!” Bollands gradually withdrew his longsword. Just as he unsheathed the fine sword, strong, concentrated killing intent was released. With every inch unsheathed, the killing intent congealed on his body grew sharper and stronger. Indistinctly, a wicked look of savagery emerged in Bollands’ eyes.

God Slaying Devil Path was a kind of demonic arts meant solely for massacre. The more a cultivator immersed into the field, the more frightening the killing intent of the cultivator became. So much so that it could even affect the body of the cultivator.

Han Shuo had a deep understanding of the God Slaying Devil Path. The reason he taught Bollands this demonic art was so that Bollands would become an additional weapon of his own disposal. Therefore, when he saw the madness in his eyes, Han Shuo wasn’t startled but delighted. He understood that Bollands almost reached the finest state in his cultivation of the God Slaying Devil Path.

Under the watchful eyes of Han Shuo, that longsword that Bollands had been pulling out bit by bit suddenly unsheathed like lightning. At the same time, an incisive killing intent, which could seemingly rip the air apart, violently erupted from Bollands’ body.

Hundreds of thousands of phantom images of swords, like pythons breathing with ferocious killing intent, came slithering towards Han Shuo.

Han Shuo opened his left hand, his demonic yuan circulated and formed a ghostly face. Initially, it was only the size of a palm. But when the mass of sword phantom images propelled by killing intent arrived in front of him, the ghostly face had grown so big it blotted out the sky and hid the earth. Suddenly, it opened up a humongous bloody mouth, swallowing all of the phantom swords.

The five fingers on Han Shuo's left hand then twisted to form a hook. It was as though his five fingers were connected to the ghostly face through millions of incorporeal strings, with the movements of his five fingers controlling the sinister ghostly face. Like a starved wolf, the ghostly face launched itself towards Bollands. Before he could react, the enormous bloody orifice had swallowed Bollands.

While Bollands was losing his mind from fear, the ghostly face suddenly exploded. In an instant, it vanished into thin air. It was as though all that had just happened was Bollands' own imagination, with the exception of Han Shuo still standing unruffled at the same place, still displaying a tranquil and calm smile.

After awaking from the shock, the madness in Bollands' pupils faded away. He respectfully kowtowed towards Han Shuo, and said, "Senior brother's martial arts sure enough have attained perfection!"

"You did very well. To be able to advance to such a stage in the duration of three years shows that you indeed have been very hardworking!" From the strike Bollands had just dealt, Han Shuo could tell that his strength had improved rapidly. Currently, with the benchmark of Profound Continent, he ought to have been able to pit against an expert who had advanced to sacred swordmaster.

"Master, you have returned!" Elizabeth's voice suddenly sounded from afar. A moment later, Elizabeth appeared right before Han Shuo.

"Senior brother, what was that martial skill back there? Was that sinister ghostly face real?" Bollands was astonished by the attack Han Shuo had just made on him. He paid no attention to Elizabeth but stared fixedly at Han Shuo as he questioned insistently.

"That is formed by congealing demonic yuan. Haha, as for whether it was real or not, you figure that out yourself. When you reach a certain realm in your maneuver of killing intent, you too can congeal it with killing intent. You will understand then!" Han Shuo explained with a faint smile. He paused for a moment, and suddenly moved to Bollands' side.

Before Bollands could react, Han Shuo suddenly pressed his hand on Bollands' head.

Certain knowledge pertaining to the basics of demonic arts flowed from Han Shuo's palm into Bollands' brain.

Upon reaching the Separate demon realm, Han Shuo could portion and organize his memories. The knowledge that Han Shuo poured into Bollands' mind was just some of the most basic information for those cultivating in demonic arts, such as expound teachings on the topic of cultivation deviation, some bizarre remarkable abilities of demonic cultivators, and certain cultivation malpractices.

This knowledge was information that every demonic arts cultivator should understand. Han Shuo worried that Bollands would be so anxious for quick results, not realizing the discipline required for practicing demonic arts, that he would sink into an irremediable state of madness. That was why Han Shuo passed down this foundational knowledge to him, lest he lost self-control and turned into a monster that only knew to slaughter.

"Alright. Digest this knowledge thoroughly!" Han Shuo said looking at Bollands after he withdrew his hand.

"Thank you senior brother. I will never ever forget this great favor from you for the rest of my life!" Bollands was moved to tears and crawled towards Han Shuo with sincere gratitude.

"That's enough, you just have to practice well!" Han Shuo said with a grin.

Out of nowhere, dark dragon Gilbert begged, "Honorable master, help me, you must help me!" Gilbert displayed an unprecedented anxiousness.

"Dark dragon, what's the matter?" Han Shuo stared puzzled at dark dragon Gilbert as he scuttled their way, not knowing what would made him so nervous.

"Master! My most honorable, most admirable master! You must help me! Otherwise, my grandpa, and perhaps even the entire race of dark dragon will be done for!” Gilbert was frenetic. When he arrived before Han Shuo, he dropped to his knees, totally unlike his usual sloppy manner.

Han Shuo furrowed his brows. With a heavy voice, he said, “Get up. Tell me what’s really the matter?”

Gilbert had a resolute look. With his eyes looking deeply at Han Shuo, he pleaded, “Master, if you don’t agree to help me, I, I won’t get up!”

For so many years, dark dragon Gilbert had gone through fire and water with him and never imagined betraying him. Especially the time at the forbidden ground of Dark Forest, he nearly died for him.

And now, dark dragon Gilbert must have been met with a truly distressing problem that he would behave so unusually. When Gilbert finally finished, Han Shuo did not hesitate and nodded, saying, “Get up, I promise you! Whatever the matter, I will help you!”

“Thank you master!” the dark dragon cried gratefully and stood up. He then hastily explained, “My grandfather left me Dragonspeech Bone made using a chunk of his own bone. Through this chunk of Dragonspeech Bone, even as I kneel before you, I can still hear my grandpa’s instructions.

For a long time, my grandpa told me that someday, my dark dragon race will face a great catastrophe and that if our race couldn’t avert the disaster, we will forever be wiped out from the underground world. I always thought that my grandpa was just giving alarmist talk. However, just this morning, my grandpa transmitted a message through Dragonspeech Bone, saying that this great calamity is approaching, asking me never to return to the underground world, and the further I stay away the better.

Not only that, he even left me his last words! I know that something very terrifying is on the verge of crashing down on our dark dragon race, or perhaps it already happened! Master, I beg you, please save our dark dragon race!”

The dark dragon Gilbert again kneeled at Han Shuo’s feet, his eyes gazing at Han Shuo, pleading.

“I already promised you!” Han Shuo helped dark dragon Gilbert up, and continued, “I don’t know if I could be of help, but I will take a trip to the underground world with you!”

“Thank you master! Thank you master! I know that with your help, our dark dragon race will surely turn peril into safety and avert the disaster!” Gilbert asserted.

“Bollands, you take Gilbert’s place temporarily, follow alongside Dorcas in the dark and protect him. Elizabeth, you stay in the city. Assist Dick in his job of keeping Brettel City safe!” Han Shuo instructed.

With a war at nigh, logically speaking, Han Shuo shouldn’t be wandering far. However, the relationship between Han Shuo and dark dragon Gilbert wasn’t simply that of master and servant. Given that the dark dragon race was possibly facing the threat of extinction, in addition to such pleading from Gilbert, Han Shuo really couldn’t find an excuse to refuse.

Fortunately, the protector of the seven grand duchies, Stratholme the old monster, was powerless to defend himself at the moment, and therefore would not appear in the seven grand duchies for some time to come. On such a large scale military campaign, the absence of Han Shuo, who wasn’t exactly good at the art of war, wouldn’t have done much to affect the general situation of the war.

Therefore, with the decision made, Han Shuo once again summoned Dorcas, Jack, and the others, handing over a detailed overview of certain matters.

“My Lord, be at ease. With the full support of the empire, in addition to the Helon and Boulet Duchies’ cooperation surreptitiously, I am certain that I can take down the seven grand duchies!” Dorcas said with complete confidence. In presence of Han Shuo, the wild ambition in his eyes was hardly concealed.

“You haven’t been around Brettel City for years anyway. In fact, Brettel City would operate as usual even without you!” In Brettel City, there was none other than Jack who would be so daring to speak so bluntly to Han Shuo like that.

Han Shuo was muted in shock. Soon after, he flew into rage out of humiliation, and said, “You damned little fatty. If you can’t make Brettel’s economy grow, don’t doubt for a second that you’ll get just what you deserve!”

“Hahah, take a look at how glorious and flourishing Brettel City has become under my rule! You won’t have the chance!” Jack burst into complacent laughter.

“Oh, right!” Han Shuo suddenly recalled something, and immediately instructed Dorcas, “When you attack the seven grand duchies, treat every citizen well. Be wary not to kill indiscriminately!”

“Rest assured my Lord, I know what to do!” Dorcas pledged.

“Then I can be at ease!” Han Shuo shot a glance at the impatient dark dragon Gilbert, and said, “Let’s go to the underground world!”

Chapter 466: Disastrous Turn of the Dark Dragons

There hadn't been much change in the underground world. Along the way, they still often saw ugly goblins and batmen looting all over the place. The whole underground world was terrorized with chaos. The situation seemed like it would never change if it were given a few hundred years.

"Gilbert, do you know exactly the kind of disaster your dark dragon race will run into? You can't be totally clueless, can you?" Han Shuo questioned Gilbert as they headed towards the dwellings of the dark dragons.

"Master, I really don't know anything. That was all that my grandpa told me through Dragonspeech Bone. I have no idea at all!" the sullen Gilbert answered. He was not in a good mood.

Throughout the journey, the very much anxious Gilbert constantly urged Han Shuo to pick up his pace. It seemed that although Gilbert was a runaway, he still held deep feelings for the dark dragon race. Otherwise, he wouldn't have had entreated Han Shuo so piteously.

Having followed alongside Han Shuo for so many years, although they had met some hazards, the two would always manage to escape the jaws of danger. Unknowingly, dark dragon Gilbert felt as though Han Shuo could handle any danger, as though there was nothing that could truly harm him.

Especially when Han Shuo recently emerged from the Cemetery of Death, being a dark dragon that was linked to Han Shuo via contract, Gilbert knew more than anyone the terror of the strength possessed by Han Shuo! Therefore, when he received the message from his grandpa, he immediately thought of Han Shuo, and believed that only Han Shuo could help the dark dragon race safely overcome the calamity.

When Han Shuo realized that he wouldn't get much more information from Gilbert, Han Shuo squandered not a second more asking. Gilbert had a far superior understanding of the underground world compared to Han Shuo. Therefore, with Gilbert's guidance, they did not waste much time in the first underground layer where dark elves ran amuck. They descended through an arduous cliff-like cavern, arriving at the next layer that was slightly darker.

There was no absence of light upon this layer of cliff rock, but it was rather weaker than in the previous layer. Tall, lofty, luminescent plants could be found everywhere, illuminating this layer, yet clearly visible, though it required a little more effort.

"Come with me!" Gilbert hardly spoke as he lead Han Shuo directly to a narrow tunnel. He seemed very anxious.

Along the way, Han Shuo roughly learned from the dragon about the geographic distribution of the underground world. There were three layers in total. The top layer was where the dark elves and lizardmen resided. Relative to the rest, the creatures on the layer were the weakest. Even for the ancient dark elves Han Shuo had met before, they were still weaker compared to the creatures in the two following layers.

Of course, an abnormal existence like the Ancient Lizard King was an exception. For beings like the Ancient Lizard King that climbed to the pinnacle of the five ranks by evolving, wherever he was placed on the Profound Continent, he remained a mighty existence.

However, it was incredibly rare to find existences like his. The great majority of lizardmen were still that stupid, incapable of being so lucky as he was to evolve to the fifth stage, and possess such immense strength that he could leave this plane of existence.

The dark dragons lived in the second layer. The creatures found there were usually extremely strong. Other than the dark dragon race that lived together, there were some very formidable super-ranked magical beasts that lived in solitary. But in regular circumstances, these super-ranked magical beasts all inhabited their own territories, and everyone simply kept to their own businesses.

The dark dragons were a kind that no one dared provoke. They were a formidable race to begin with, and they even lived in a large group. Therefore, despite being surrounded by a myriad of other formidable creatures in this second layer of the underground world, not many were willing to provoke the dark dragons.

Han Shuo took this to mean that he could basically eliminate any threat from the second layer.

The third layer of the underground world, however, now that was a region of great mystery. According to Gilbert, there wasn't a creature alive who knew what dwelled in the next layer.

According to legend, there indeed were tunnels connecting the second layer to the third layer. However, it was incredibly rare to find a creature who knew where the tunnel was located. And of the super-ranked magical beasts that so fortunately found the tunnel and ventured into the third layer, not one returned!

Therefore, pertaining to the situation in the bottom most layer, no person, or perhaps no living being, was truly clear about it!

After crossing the narrow tunnel, Gilbert again took Han Shuo walking for a long time, and they finally arrived at a region covered with mountain ridges. This was a huge canyon with unbroken ridges of irregular heights as far as the eye could see. From a distance, it looked as though enormously long dragons were entrenched there.

As soon as they arrived at the region, HS's sensitive nose picked up a faint reeking of blood, "I smell blood!"

Gilbert's eyes turned red, on the brink of tears, he cried, "Grandpa, I'm home! Gilbert is home!"

Gilbert's voice echoed without end in the great canyon. He was already rushing towards the canyon as he cried those words. Han Shuo hastily followed behind him.

"Get lost!" from the deepest part of the canyon, came an angry roar of an aged man, with terror in his voice.

"Grandpa, it's my grandpa's voice!" Gilbert was pleasantly surprised and turned to Han Shuo, "My grandpa is still there. He is alright!"

"But I believe you have already lost some clansman!" Han Shuo shouted lightly and grabbed dark dragon Gilbert. He suddenly accelerated and shot towards the canyon at lightning speed.

Under their feet, a thirty meter long body of dark dragon was strewn bare at the back of a mountain ridge. As Han Shuo and Gilbert flew overhead, looking at the ground beneath them, they could make out that the body of this dark dragon was most likely cut by sharp weapons, with hideous wounds all over his magnificent body.

"Uncle Delix!" Gilbert obviously recognized the body of the dead dark dragon and snarled with his eyes popped out.

However, this dark dragon wasn't the only carcass!

As they continued flying towards the canyon, three additional dead bodies of dark dragons appeared under their feet one after another. These three dark dragons must have suffered cruel torment before they died. Every body were riddled with cuts and wounds. One was even dismembered into three pitiful chunks!

Gilbert knew all four dark dragons that were killed, particularly the gigantic dark dragon that died in the most miserable state of being butchered into three. He nearly fainted in grief and indignation. No longer able to restrain himself, he wailed in tears.

Because that was Gilbert's father!

"You scoundrel! Run! Run far, far away!" a frantic scream, as though weeping blood, came from the depths of the canyon, which was mixed with Gilbert's grief-stricken crying. Han Shuo's heart grew as cold as it could, giving him an impulse to slowly torture the offender to death by separating their skin and flesh into a thousand chunks.

Even without actively using his consciousness to probe the situation inside, he could sense the few presences within, one of whom was especially powerful. Faintly, Han Shuo even felt that their aura bore some resemblance to that of water divine magus Tiana. When this feeling arose in his heart, his desire to kill grew even more vigorous.

“Move! Put it off until we get to the canyon!” In spite of Gilbert’s bawling in loss of self-control, Han Shuo grasped him firmly and hurriedly flew into the canyon with a gloomy face.

“Here comes another one, tut-tut, interesting!” Suddenly, a disdainful, ice-cold sneer could be heard coming from the depths of the canyon.

“I will kill them, I will kill them! No matter who they are, I will kill them!” Gilbert the dark dragon constantly repeated those words as he wailed. His usual sloppy, happy-go-lucky attitude had long vanished.

At this moment, other than grief, perhaps all that Gilbert felt was deep-rooted hatred.

Finally, with Han Shuo pulling Gilbert along, they arrived at the biggest canyon.

The first thing that entered Han Shuo’s eyes was an enormous pure white cage made of some unknown materials. Inside the cage were about seventeen dark dragons that had transformed into human form with skin as dark as ink. There were elderlies as well as young ones. They all wore collars around their necks, not unlike dog collars. Bloody whip scars were visible on their faces. Not even a dark dragon with the appearance of an underage girl was spared. There were trails of open wounds on her cheeks still flowing with fresh blood, she seemed to have just received a lashing.

Around the cage were six people in clad in matching attire that was as white as snow. They all wore an ice-cold expression, carrying a whiff of indifference and ruthlessness.

Among them was a middle-aged man with a handsome face that could have been carved with blade. He looked at Han Shuo and Gilbert with a cold and indifferent smile, hands clasped behind his back. The presence coming from him was rather similar to that of Tiana. Furthermore, he was the being with the greatest strength in his group – a demigod being!

“Another puny reptile!” This handsome middle-age man looked at Gilbert as though he was looking at a pet, naturally causing a feeling of aloofness. He then turned to Han Shuo, "Who are you?"

"You know Tiana, correct?" Han Shuo asked instead of answering.

Including this handsome middle-aged man, all six of those in white slightly changed their expressions. The middle aged man that lead the group creased his brows before saying, "You actually know of my junior sister. Who are you?"

"Who are you people?" Han Shuo was startled and yelled.

"We are from the Shrine of Ice. I'm Corey the Ice Celestial. How did you come to know of my junior sister Tiana the Snow Celestial? Who are you? Are you a friend or a foe?" This man from the Shrine of Ice known as Corey, a so called Ice Celestial, questioned coldly with his eyes fixed on Han Shuo.

Chapter 467: Ganging Up?

Like the Church of Light, the Shrine of Ice was one of those rather famous religious organizations on Profound Continent. The Shrine of Ice worshipped the Ice Goddess. Although its influence wasn't as extensive as the Church of Light, it was not to be belittled.

The Shrine of Ice was the state religion of the Kasi Empire and their headquarters were also located at the top of the coldest mountain in Kasi Empire. Unexpectedly, Tiana was not only the protector of Kasi Empire, but also came from the Shrine of Ice, and was even their Snow Celestial.

Han Shuo learned secrets from Corey that even Candide from the Dark Mantle knew nothing about. It seemed that this Shrine of Ice was rather mysterious.

At last, Han Shuo finally understood why Tiana would scheme against him. It was because the Church of Light and the Shrine of Ice had always co-operated closely. As the Snow Celestial for the Shrine of Ice, it was a matter of course that Tiana would entrap them for the Church of Light.

The group from the Shrine of Ice, led by Corey the Ice Celestial, were all on high alert as they looked at Han Shuo. Among them, Corey was the strongest, possessing strength approximately that of Han Shuo's. As for the other five, based on the ice-cold aura they emitted, they possessed about the strength of a sacred grade expert.

The strength of this party was not, however, to be underestimated. No matter the nation, they represented forces that no one dared neglect. To be so daring to enter the second layer of the underworld and massacre the dark dragons in their own territories, would certainly have had to possess a certain level of power to be successful.

It was also at this moment that Han Shuo began to understand why Lawrence was so happy to find out that Han Shuo possessed demigod strength. The Oden Empire had the Church of Light. Kasi Empire had the Shrine of Ice. Such religious organizations would generally possess terrifying experts. Perhaps the reason the Lancelot Empire had dared not to wage war for so many years was that it held misgivings for those existences.

Soon after, another question arose in Han Shuo's heart. The strength that the Kasi Empire demonstrated completely crushed that of the Lancelot Empire. But why was it that for so many years, the Kasi Empire hadn't yet infringed on the Lancelot Empire? By relying on their Ice Celestial and Snow Celestial, before Han Shuo became a demigod, who on Lancelot Empire could stop them?

Apart from this, the Brut Merchant Alliance and Angela Empire were both supported by mighty experts. Even the seven grand duchies had Stratholme the old monster, another demigod existence. How was it that for so many years the Lancelot Empire remained safe and sound?

"What's your intention?" the Ice Celestial again shouted as Han Shuo indulged in his thoughts. He had unsheathed a bone-chilling longsword in his hand!

Han Shuo immediately came to his senses, and turned his head to glance at dark dragon Gilbert. All he saw was that Gilbert was rained with curses from a small, tearful old man trapped in Corey's cage. The old man seemed likely to be Gilbert's grandfather, patriarch of the dark dragons – Gilges. Although he spoke in a nasty, disgruntled tone, his anxious look showed that he was concerned.

Gilbert turned a deaf ear to his grandfather's roundly abuse, but stared at Corey the Ice Celestial with his eyes full of sheer hatred. Even without practicing God Slaying Devil Path, the killing intent coming from his body was still incredibly dense. It was a bloodthirsty desire to destroy everything regardless of the consequences.

"Nothing really!" Han Shuo groaned coldly. He opened up his hand. Five dark rays shot out from his fingertips straight towards the pure white cage imprisoning the whole clan of dark dragons.

Against Han Shuo's expectations, Corey, who stood right beside the cage, did not intercept the attack but sneered as he looked disdainfully at Han Shuo. The other five put on the same expression. This expression showing in their eyes irritated Han Shuo.

However, very soon, Han Shuo found out why those people had such contemptuous faces. Without Corey or the other five obstructing, the five rays landed directly on the spotlessly white cage, making a few “dong dong” sounds, but remained intact under Han Shuo’s bombardment.

Han Shuo was stunned. He was very clear as to just how terrifying the impacting force contained in those five rays was. Even iron and stone, no matter how hard, would be pulverized when met with those forces. Nevertheless, after taking a direct hit from Han Shuo, the cage managed to come out unscathed. This was obviously beyond Han Shuo’s expectations.

“This cage was blessed by the Goddess of Ice. If you could damage it, we would have turned around and fled!” Ice Celestial Corey sneered incessantly at Han Shuo. Then, he turned the ice-cold longsword in his hand to point at Han Shuo, saying, “A foe, it seems!”

When Corey said those words, the other five of his party all left the cage simultaneously, seemingly unconcerned about it breaking. One after another, they dispersed cold, detached expressions, likely preparing to leave both Han Shuo and dark dragon Gilbert behind.

Of this delegation of six, Ice Celestial Corey was the most powerful. From the presence coming off of him, he seemed to be a mage swordsman. The longsword in his hand contained enormous icy-cold aura, which was mixed together with pure, cold divine energy, bearing astonishing resemblance to the holy energy found on the temple knights from the Church of Light.

All so-called religions were like this. They could always exchange piety towards their respective gods for some divine energy. Even just a mere share of divine energy was more than enough for them to transcend beyond their own limitations, and gain strength unimaginable to the ordinary man.

When he noticed the six fellows of the Shrine of Ice attempting to surround him slowly, Han Shuo couldn’t help but crease his brows. If it had just been Ice Celestial Corey alone, Han Shuo would not at all have been afraid, after all, Han Shuo had extreme confidence in himself. However, if those five sacred-grade experts were brought into the picture, Han Shuo would have felt somewhat vexed handling them all at once.

Especially, among the five, two were water sacred magi. At that moment, they had already begun chanting their spells. All of a sudden, the entire second layer of the underground world seemed to have transformed into a world of ice and snow. Bone-chilling coldness filled this entire region.

“Friend, no matter who you are, don’t even think about leaving here today!” Corey advanced towards Han Shuo one step at a time as incantations from his subordinates hummed through the air. The longsword in his hand was gradually covered with a layer of frost glittering like diamonds, containing an incomparably frosty aura.

“Ganging up? Hahah, being ganged up on is the last thing I’m afraid of!” Han Shuo was suddenly no longer anxious. Laughing mischievously, he took out the skeletal staff from his hand and followed by chanting necromancy spells. Undead creatures appeared all around Han Shuo one after another.

Before Corey could get close to Han Shuo, every last empty space around Han Shuo had begun to close up until there was none left, all occupied by numerous densely packed undead creatures.

Starting from the lowest ranking skeletal warriors and ghouls, all the way up to evil knights, a bone devil and a mummy lord, a complete gamut of undeads were summoned. Above all, there was a bunch of totally uncanny zombies each clad with oddly looking armour. Among them was the metal elite zombie wielding the golden cudgel sparkling with golden rays, while the fire elite zombie held the Fire Lotus pulsing blazes.

Among all the undead creatures, the elite zombies somehow appeared offbeat!

“You, you really are a damn necromancer!” Corey was shocked, somewhat shaken by the countless undead creatures Han Shuo summoned.

“Heheh. So what if you’re a necromancer? We have even the entire tribe of dark dragons imprisoned in our hands. With merely a ragtag team of lowly undead creatures, what exactly do you think you can do to us?” Corey was very conceited, obviously not seeing these living deads as a threat.

“Lowly?” Han Shuo sneered. Soon after, he inwardly delivered an order to the five elite zombies: Find an opportunity to form the Penta-elemental Undead Formation.

As the little skeleton was busy fusing his soul with the Origin Crystal containing pure death element, he did not make an appearance this time. But with the five elite zombies, in addition to the three evil knights and the mummy lord, Han Shuo was still certain they could withstand the six from the Shrine of Ice.

But having said that, as a surefire guarantee, Han Shuo nevertheless had the elite zombies prepare to deploy the Penta-elemental Undead Formation. Although the five elite zombies still could not completely fuse their energies, based little skeleton’s previous statement, Han Shuo noted that even the currently half-complete Penta-elemental Undead Formation could still unleash formidable firepower.

“Master, I want to avenge, I want to kill them!” dark dragon Gilbert roared in rage.

“With what? Just you lot?” Corey sneered in the most pejorative tone possible. After that, with loathing in his eyes, he roared, “Cleanse away these filthy necromancy creatures for me!”

At Ice Celestial Corey’s words, those behind him who had been chanting abruptly ceased. Shortly after, the entire region thoroughly transformed into a world of ice and snow. Frigid gusts of air engulfed the entire valley. Huge icicles and hailstones the size of quern shit down from the sky, directed at the undead that crowded the canyon.

The magic released by a sacred grade magus was indeed terrifying, and even more so when deployed by two sacred magi simultaneously!

The entire canyon turned into an awful scene of icicles and hail shooting in every direction. Of the tremendous count of undead creatures Han Shuo summoned, the low ranking skeletal warriors and skeletal warriors would be slain one after another.

In no time at all, several thousand undead creatures were pounded into ground meat by icicles and hail. But with undead creatures with the level of hate warriors and above, their tough bodies were capable of resisting the attack. Naturally, the bone devil and mummy lord, undeads of such high level, were left unscathed.

The bone chilling aura extended to cover the whole great canyon, causing even the dark dragons imprisoned in the cage to shiver and creak. But as far as the undead were concerned, low temperatures would never be a threat to them. Under the torrent of icicles and hail, the remaining undead were all lined up to launch an attack at Corey and his party.

Chapter 468: Corey the Ice Celestial

The three evil knights who had been reformed by Han Shuo all wore armour that gleamed like mirrors, wielding extremely long bone spur that carried an intense aura of death. Counterintuitively, the three charged at the front-most line.

Mounted on massive fire-spitting warhorses and holding huge bone spurs in their hands, the kick-ass evil knights exuded inexhaustible aura of death as they charged head on at Corey and his party.

Behind the three evil knights were five additional evil knights who were not reforged with demonic magic, and behind them were the mummy lord and bone devil. As for the five strange looking elite zombies of five elements: earth elite zombie and wood elite zombie utilized their innate skills, hiding deep beneath the earth and hiding in a outlandish plants respectively. Fire, water, and metal elite zombies mixed themselves among remaining zombie warriors that survived by mere chance, and slowly dispersed to encircle Corey and his men.

Corey, wielding a longsword coated with a layer of ice as tough as diamond that emanated bone-chilling cold air, before the three evil knights got near him, he suddenly let out a cold groan and brandished the longsword in his hand. Colorless fighting aura mixed with frosty cold aura launched out from the longsword and headed for the three evil knights on fire-spitting warhorses.

Frigid air current found between heaven and earth that could freeze any ordinary living organism congregated immediately with the colourless fighting aura. The originally colourless and formless fighting aura exploded with bright light and assimilated with the cold air current, forming a colossal icicle glittering with frosty light. The icicle mixed with indestructible fighting aura shot towards the three evil knights.

Han Shuo, who was standing beside dark dragon Gilbert, smirked and vanished in the blink of an eye. When his body was again visible, he was standing tall in the air ahead of the evil knights, and threw a ferocious punch from above.

As though a red dragon had shot out from Han Shuo's hand, under the propelling of Mystical Glacial Spellfire, red flames danced around his fist. Carrying scorching light and heat, it pounded right in the middle of the colossal icicle.

Creak!

A crisp shatter of ice rock resonated. Under the effect of Han Shuo's ferocious force, the slender and long demonic flame first made a big hole on the icicle, only then from within the icicle it released the intense heat it carried, evaporated away the icicle that contained Corey's colorless fighting aura.

"Your opponent, is me!" Step by step, without touching the ground, Han Shuo marched towards this Ice Celestial from the Shrine of Ice. As raging flames burned in both his hands, the searing heat interweaved with cold air found all around, producing fine water droplets that rained down.

"Who, who the hell are you?" Corey shouted, his heart palpitating with fear. After that strike from Han Shuo, this Ice Celestial of the Shrine of Ice finally had a taste of just how daunting was Han Shuo's strength was.

Even without actively probing Corey with his consciousness, over such short distances, Han Shuo could still sense Corey's actual strength. Corey however, despite possessing exceedingly formidable strength, didn't have such miraculous demonic arts as Han Shuo. Therefore, from the beginning, Corey failed to realize that Han Shuo was an opponent of the same grade.

Afterall, it was exceedingly rare to find demigod existences in the whole of Profound Continent. In his defense, Corey had come prepared. Nearly every cream of the crop expert in the Shrine of Ice, apart from Tiana, was brought here. He did not think that somebody he randomly came across in the dark dragons' territory would possess such strength to contend against them.

Most significantly, as the demonic arts which Han Shuo practiced was as different as it could be from the martial arts in this world, Corey did not feel any circulation of fighting aura in Han Shuo's body, thus dismissed the possibility that he was a martial arts practitioner. Only after Han Shuo withdrew his skeletal staff did Corey realize that Han Shuo was merely a necromancer. When he saw that Han Shuo did not summon bone dragon, he even further looked down upon Han Shuo.

A mere grand magus was nothing in his eyes. Any one of his five subordinates could easily finish Han Shuo. Hence, he never would have expected Han Shuo to be of any threat!

However, when he discovered that Han Shuo could smash his icicle in one strike, he knew he was gravely mistaken in his assessment. That was the reason he again interrogated about Han Shuo's origin gravely.

"You are about to be no more than a corpse anyway, why bother asking?" Han Shuo stared at Ice Celestial Corey with murder in his eyes. The two fireballs in his hands, formed by congealing demonic yuan energy, hurled at Corey as Han Shuo finished.

Perhaps only characters the grade of this Ice Celestial could truly understand the power of the energy contained within these seemingly ordinary fireballs! He roared, and his longsword fluttered, sending sparking, translucent cold air towards the two demoniacal fireballs.

Against Corey's expectations, the raging fireballs that were flying towards him in straight lines, evaded the discharge coming from his longsword with bizarre, sinuous maneuvers. Like two autonomous living beings, the fireballs with their unpredictable trajectory again came flying towards him.

Behind the two diabolical fireballs stood Han Shuo, wearing a smile even colder than this world of ice and snow he was in. He sent a command to earth elite zombie, then told dark dragon Gilbert from a distance, "You're just going to have to look after your grandpa in a moment!"

The spell released simultaneously by two sacred grade magi filled the entire region with intensely frigid air, a mixture of snowflakes and ice shards fluttering everywhere, as though there was a frozen mountain where the Shrine of Ice was located.

Perhaps because their energy was confined, each and every one of the imprisoned dark dragons shivered in the cold. The dark skinned girl covered with cuts and bruises, possibly due to the freezing cold, or maybe it was the ice crumbs that fell on her. Her skin seemed to have paled a significant few shades.

After Han Shuo spoke, the ground on which the cage rested suddenly crumbled into a dark cavern. As the imprisoned dark dragons screamed out in fear, the entire cage tumbled into the dark hole.

At the same time, right under Gilbert's feet, an underground tunnel opened up. Gilbert came to his senses in an instant, and leapt into the tunnel.

After both the cage and dark dragon Gilbert descended, the two holes that appeared so bizarrely, in the attentive watch of the Shrine of Ice experts, again miraculously closed up. Before they realized what was happening, the two holes had completely disappeared. The ground restored to its former smooth surface.

"Lord, Lord Corey! The Jedefrost Cage disappeared!" Suddenly, one of the magi that had been chanting, cried out in shock.

Corey, who was brandishing his sword to resist the tricky attacks of the diabolic fireballs, found time to take a glance behind him. His face turned an ugly expression. Corey the Ice Celestial had been on the defense against those diabolic fireballs all along when, all of a sudden, a dreadfully frigid gust of air gushed out from his body.

All of a sudden, cold air gathered rapidly with Corey at the center, and the space around him started to freeze, producing an enormous block of solid ice in midair.

The two constantly whirling diabolic fireballs manipulated by Han Shuo were frozen into the huge chunk of ice as well. Before Han Shuo could react, a dozen or so cold streams of air attached themselves to the solid ice and began to rapidly circle within the ice like silvery snakes, which then converged towards the fireballs trapped in the ice.

Dense white smoke immediately emanated from where the two fireballs were confined. Han Shuo could feel the demonic yuan energy contained within the two diabolic fireball depleting little by little under the besiege of the streams of cold air.

At the center of the huge chunk of ice sat Corey. As the caster, Corey wasn't affected by the cold ice. With his chilly eyes on Han Shuo, he suddenly flew towards him at high-speed. The enormous chunk of ice that completely froze the space around him, as though it was weightless, flew along with Corey and towards Han Shuo.

Midway, thick white smoke stopped emanating from the surface of the solid ice. The dozen or so cold streams of air finally wore down the last bit of demonic yuan energy in the two frozen diabolic fireballs, and there was no longer a trace of their presences.

At Han Shuo's command, the higher ranking undead creatures that suffered no effect under the previous wave of ice magic attack, circumvented Corey and charged at the five top experts from the Shrine of Ice. The five elite zombies too rapidly scattered around, preparing to release the Penta-elemental Undead Formation.

Seeing Corey fly towards him in that big block of ice, Han Shuo's two hands began to rapidly whirl about, all kinds of uncanny demonic magic suddenly flew out with whooshing sounds. When the streams of unstoppable demonic light met with the solid ice, they produced beautiful clanking sounds.

However, this enormous chunk of solid ice that constantly absorbed the frosty air from the area seemed to be made of the toughest substance. When Han Shuo's unique demonic attacks bombarded the boulder of ice, the deepest dent they made was barely a meter deep, absolutely incapable of penetrating through the solid ice and touch a single hair on Corey's head.

Ice Celestial is indeed a well justified nickname! Han Shuo praised in his heart. He had been, on the one hand, busy releasing all sorts of dazzling attacks on the ice, and on the other, rapidly dodging, pressingly turning over in his mind for ways to break the ice.

As the Demonslayer Edge had yet to completely fuse with the Crystal of Destruction, and was unable to find a way to break the ice at the time, Han Shuo had no choice but to evade at high-speed. Fortunately, when it came to speed, Han Shuo always had the upper hand. Chasing after Han Shuo in a colossal chunk of ice, although fast moving, Corey wasn't nearly as fast as Han Shuo and couldn't get anywhere near him.

One couldn't break through the ice, one couldn't catch up to the other, the two were locked in a stalemate.

“Father, let me do it!”

“Father, let me do it!”

It was at this moment that Han Shuo received messages from the fire elite zombie and metal elite zombie. The two were overflowing with self-confidence, and seemingly sent the telepathic messages to Han Shuo simultaneously. The two then began to charge at Corey.

Metal elite zombie and fire elite zombie. One wielded the invincible treasure of metal attribute – the golden cudgel, another wielded the destructive incendiary treasure of fire attribute – the Fire Lotus. Han Shuo suddenly arrived at his senses. His mood loosened up and he started to plot on how to relentlessly hit Corey when he was down!

Chapter 469: Ruptured

Fact proved that both the metal elite zombie and fire elite zombie, who obtained treasures of their respective attributes, could indeed release an incredible amount of energy.

Under the metal elite zombie's manipulation, the golden cudgel turned into a huge pillar glittering with golden rays. Carrying the force of millions and millions of tonnes, it directly hammered down on the enormous Boulder of ice that enveloped Ice Celestial Corey. A terrifying splintering noise broke out. Being in the center, Corey suddenly felt an unparalleled vigorous energy rush forth, causing his body to violently quake and his aura to become unsteady.

The fire elite zombie immediately followed. One after another, clouds of raging inferno continuously leapt out from the Fire Lotus in his hand and fell onto the solid ice that had yet to completely disintegrate. Thick smoke fiercely discharged from where the fire and ice made contact.

Corey turned pale with fright. If it was just one of those miraculous martial techniques of Han Shuo's that destroyed his ice shield, he may not have been so appalled. However, it was merely two strange looking zombie warriors that defeated the ice boulder which contained divine energy of the Ice Goddess, something absolutely beyond his imagination.

"What the hell are they!" Corey was stunned in fear by the fire elite zombie and metal elite zombie. He held tight onto his longsword that was covered with a layer of diamond-hard ice as he stared at the two elite zombies somewhat flustered.

It was at this moment that, like a ghoul, Han Shuo suddenly scudded out from the thick smoke. The Demonic Blades caused fingernails on both his hands to dramatically grow to a meter long. As he fluttered his hands in criss-cross motion, trails of demonic light violently shot out, seemingly weaving a huge intangible web to trap Corey.

Corey was extremely flustered. It was already extremely difficult to handle Han Shuo alone. Now to add to that, there was the fire elite zombie refined with pure elemental energy of fire. Indistinctly, he felt as though the Fire Lotus was actually subduing him, making Corey extremely uncomfortable. When he saw Han Shuo charging over, Corey shot out shard after shard of ice as he inched backwards, retreating.

Suddenly, right before Corey, Han Shuo gradually turned fainter and fainter until he completely vanished! Yet, that sense of danger never diminished but instead swelled in magnitude. This caused Corey great distress.

With him at the center, icicle after icicle fiercely shot out from the longsword in his hand in every direction. After losing Han Shuo's trail, that was the best idea Corey could come up with to attack him.

After Corey launched the full coverage attack, the huge net falling right over his head was seemingly destroyed and dissipated under the bombardment of the icicles.

However, Corey did not feel any more comfortable. On the contrary, that sense of danger that always shrouded his heart grew more and more intense. Corey had gathered all his concentration, rapidly revolved at the same spot on the ground in his attempt to locate the source of the danger, and yet, couldn't find anything.

When that sense of danger amassed to the very brim, a stab of pain shot at his soles. Corey was visibly frightened, and hastily rose high up into the air, escaping from the sneak attack that had suddenly come from beneath his feet.

Below Corey's feet, Han Shuo, who utilized the earth elite zombie to construct underground tunnels for him to mount a surprise attack, with a malicious grin, raised his head to look at Corey the Ice Celestial. As cold lights glistened from the Demonic Blades in his two hands, ten dark rays emitted from his fingertips like serpents, biting at Corey. Not only did they travel faster than lightning, their trajectories were even more tricky and unpredictable.

Damn it! Corey cursed at his own negligence. In a flurry, he whirled his longsword downwards.

Of the ten slithering rays, six were stopped in their paths by Corey's panicked defensive strike, while another four attached to his body as though they were his own shadows. Then, they exploded one by one at his hips and waist. A waterfall of fresh blood gushed from his wound and Corey's miserable howl sounded.

While he's wounded, deal him the final blow!

Han Shuo soared into the sky. There seemed to be demonic lights constantly circulating inside the meter-long Demonic Blades in both hands. Another ten rays again accumulated at his fingertips, ready to take Corey's life at any moment.

Out of Han Shuo's anticipation, this Ice Celestial Corey, one of even more honorable status than Tiana in the Shrine of Ice, when his lower body was burst open by those rays, he went as far as to hastily pull out a magic scroll. Before Han Shuo even came close to him, Corey had activated the scroll that was as white as snow.

"Retreat!" Corey shouted at the top of his lungs. The snowflakes that filled the air suddenly rushed towards him. In just a split second, Corey the Ice Celestial vanished into the snowfall.

When Corey's miserable howl reverberated, the snowflakes that blanketed the entire region all of a sudden wrapped around each of the few remaining experts of the Shrine of Ice. The five seemed to have melted into the snowflakes, and miraculously disappeared before Han Shuo's eyes.

Even though he could feel their presences in the snow with his outstanding consciousness, Han Shuo could not trace their exact locations. It was as though they had all melted into the snow. He could sense them, but had no way of attacking them!

When the group of six disappeared, the snowstorm that shrouded the entire canyon ceased. Han Shuo could sense the presences of Corey and his party disappearing bit by bit. When Han Shuo could no longer feel any of their presences, although the frosty coldness that shrouded the entire canyon remained, there were no longer any snowflakes wafting through the sky.

The undead creatures who had lost their targets, not knowing what to do, stood their ground dumbfounded as they awaited further commands from Han Shuo.

“Father, they have disappeared!” earth elite zombie transmitted naively after slowly emerging from the ground beside Han Shuo.

“They managed to escape! Their escape method was truly a miracle. It was actually achieved by blending into the ice and snow,” Han Shuo mumbled to himself. He instructed the earth elite zombie, “Open the underground tunnel. Bring dark dragon Gilbert and the cage out!”

“Okay!” the earth elite zombie replied bluntly. Right after, the ground beside the two suddenly split open to form a cavern. Therefrom emerged dark dragon Gilbert and the cage imprisoning the dark dragon race.

Gilbert lay on top of the cage, his tears constantly falling into it. He said nothing, but cried unceasingly at the patriarch of dark dragons, Gilges, who was right below him. His grandfather’s eyes were red through and through as tears rolled down, choking with sobs as he consoled Gilbert.

After glancing at Gilbert and the other dark dragons in the cage, Han Shuo quietly pulled open a distance with them. Han Shuo knew that it was best for them to have time together by themselves at such moments. Besides, perhaps Gilges might want to tell Gilbert about certain secrets of the dark dragons. It seemed inappropriate for him to remain there.

As the temperature in this tract of land had returned to normal, the ice and snow that previously covered the earth gradually melted away. Han Shuo sent the undead creatures back to the netherworld one after another, and then pondered the objective of the Shine of Ice making a presence.

The Shrine of Ice and the Church of Light had very friendly relations, and both possessed great influence over the continent. Although the two religions professed distinct doctrines, it was an open secret that they were allied with each other in private. Therefore, stemming from Han Shuo’s loathing towards the Church of Light, and adding to Tiana’s betrayal the last time, it seemed fitting that Han Shuo would view the Shrine of Ice as his enemy.

Although Corey had successfully fled through the snowflakes that filled the sky, Han Shuo nevertheless left an eternally unforgettable mark on his body. On top of that, given the existence of Tiana, this enmity he had with the Shrine of Ice would be impossible to resolve peacefully. Han Shuo had even begun considering how to deal with the Shrine of Ice.

As Han Shuo continued to ponder, he felt a message from Gilbert, asking him to come over. Without hesitation, Han Shuo arrived beside Gilbert. He saw that although Gilbert was still wearing the same sorrowful face as before, his mood had at last somewhat stabilized.

With every one of the dozen dark dragons imprisoned in the cage looking at Han Shuo, Gilbert's grandfather, Gilges, leaned in towards Han Shuo from within the cage, and thanked him sincerely, "The last time Gilbert returned, I did hear of some of your past achievements. Never did I expect that it would be you who would end up saving our kind. On behalf of all dark dragons, thank you for your great favor!"

"You're welcome. The relationship between Gilbert and I isn't as simple as you would imagine. Assisting you was the right thing to do!" Han Shuo made a hand gesture, indicating to Gilges that he need not be so courteous.

"I do understand. No ordinary person would ever be willing to risk their life for their magic pets. To rush over here from distant parts in order to help us dark dragons, that alone has fully explained your affection for Gilbert. It was indeed his good fortune to have followed you!" Gilges was definitely a thoughtful person. Due solely to the fact that Han Shuo would head over to aid Gilbert, he reasoned that Gilbert had definitely followed the right master.

"Grandpa, stop discussing such pointless things!" Gilbert complained. Afterwards, looking impatiently at Han Shuo, he asked, "Master, can you open up this damned cage? I have tried countless methods, but nothing has worked!"

"Let me try again!" Han Shuo replied and proceeded to deploy several demonic martial skills. However, this cage was blessed by the Ice Goddess, as mentioned by Corey, and indeed contained an exotic divine energy. A multitude of attacks, no matter how powerful, we're all frozen and disarmed by the bone-penetrating frigid divine energy, unable to break open the cage.

As the main soul of the Demonslayer Edge was fusing with the energy of the Crystal of Destruction, it now needed to be absolutely cloistered. With the assistance of the inconceivably incisive Demonslayer Edge, Han Shuo had absolute confidence that he could break this cage into pieces. However, as the Demonslayer Edge was currently unavailable, it remained a big headache.

Although the golden cudgel that the metal elite zombie wielded could destroy anything, if the cudgel really were to bombard the cage, the dozen or so dark dragon already on the verge of death would most likely give out before the cage did.

If this cage hadn't been enchanted with the divine energy of the Ice Goddess, Han Shuo would have been certain he could cut it open. But the situation at hand left him at his wit's end.

While he racked his brain, he suddenly recalled someone who might be of use. He let out a soft cry at once, "Perhaps there's still a way!"

Chapter 470: Past Events Thousand Years Back

“What do you mean?” Gilbert asked insistently.

“Elizabeth is in Brettel City. I think she can help us!” Han Shuo explained.

Elizabeth, a target on the Church of Light’s hitlist, possessed a most bizarre Body of Divine Favor with the miraculous ability to absorb divine energy from followers of the Church of Light. Han Shuo had a feeling that she might be able to absorb and remove the divine energy contained in the cage. Without the protection of divine energy from the Ice Goddess, Han Shuo had a hundred percent certainty of breaking the Jedefrost Cage.

“She?” Gilbert wasn’t fully convinced. But when he saw Han Shuo’s confidence in the idea, he asked, “Can she be trusted?”

“I’m not too sure either. But there’s no harm trying!” Han Shuo replied.

“You, you are called Bryan, right?” Gilges, the patriarch of dark dragons, raised his head and asked.

“Yep!” Han Shuo replied.

“Thank you for your rescue. My race of dark dragons will engrave your grace in our memory!” Gilges kowtowed at Han Shuo. Then, he raised his head and said, “One of the reasons those of the Shrine of Ice came here, killed my tribesmen, and imprisoned us here was to turn the entire race of dark dragons into their saddle horses. The other was to find out the route to the third layer of the underground world from me!”

The third layer of the underground world!

Han Shuo was startled. Then, with glistening eyes on the patriarch of dark dragons, he asked, “What exactly was the situation?”

Since Gilges took the initiative to divulge the condition at the third layer of the underground world, it seemed that he intended to speak out candidly about the whole sequence of events to Han Shuo, something Han

Shuo had not expected.

“Two years ago, when Gilbert returned, I learned from him that you were the owner of the skeletal staff. And from that moment on, I stopped advising Gilbert not to follow by your side. Because, the owner of the skeletal staff surely couldn’t be an enemy to us dark dragons!” the patriarch of dark dragons said in a heavy voice as he looked deeply at Han Shuo.

Han Shuo grew even more bewildered. Gilges seemed to actually understand certain origins of the skeletal staff. He couldn’t help but withdraw the skeletal staff and fiddle with. Looking at the patriarch of dark dragons in an odd manner, Han Shuo asked, “Why do you say so?”

“Because, five thousand years ago, the race of dark dragons had been going to battles under command of the original owner of the skeletal staff. The reason we dark dragons had always lived in the second layer of the underground world, was also because the original owner of the skeletal staff had commanded us to, so as to prevent anyone from intruding into the third layer of the underground world!

“I also heard a little from Gilbert about your encounter with Ancient Lizard King Dagassi. The Ancient Lizard King was his magical pet back then. Dagassi must have told you something, hasn’t he?” Gilges asked.

“Nope, Dagassi hardly discussed his previous affairs. All he told me was that I can find out the truth from the skeletal staff. However, at the moment, I have yet to completely grasp the secrets of the skeletal staff. Therefore, for the time being, I’m unclear as to what actually happened five thousand years ago. If you do happen to know, I hope that you can tell me,” Han Shuo requested as he looked at Gilges, his heart full of doubt.

Gilges shook his head with a bitter smile. The thirst in Han Shuo’s eyes forced him to gather his attention and say, “I have only lived for a little over two thousand years. I only know of these things from ancient records my ancestors left behind. What I know is very, very limited!”

“What exactly do you know?” Han Shuo questioned closely.

Under Han Shuo’s gaze, Gilges contemplated for a while and said, “Five thousand years ago, there was a great war that involved every powerhouse on Profound Continent. It was extremely intense and a great disaster. There seemed to even be experts from other planes of existence involved. The side with which the owner of the skeletal staff and us dark dragons stood likely lost in that great war. Some of the main leaders on our side escaped while some weren't as lucky. Our side suffered heavy damage. It is said that a few formidable races on our side were forever wiped out from Profound Continent! We dark dragons consider ourselves lucky. Although we've been holed up in the second layer of the underground world ever since, at least we weren't exterminated."

"I have no idea about the situation of other races, but we dark dragons have, under the instructions of the original owner of the skeletal staff, remained in the second layer of the underground world all this time. Firstly, it was to take shelter from the pursuit of the victors, and secondly, we had to stand guard at the path that connects to the third layer."

"When the owner of the skeletal staff gave us this command, he also told us that five thousand years from then, some mighty enemy would no doubt come down here. He said that as long as we could survive this calamity, provided that we had hold fast for five thousand years, we can at long last leave the underground world, and we would no longer need to defend it."

"That was all that I know. As to what really happened five thousand years ago, why we suffered such a crushing defeat, who the enemy was, what lay in the third layer, I'm clueless!"

Han Shuo fell into a deep contemplation. What was certain was that the original owner of the skeletal staff ought to be out of the leaders on this side five thousand years ago. Otherwise, he couldn't have left such instructions to the dark dragons. In addition, the original owner of the skeletal staff must have still been alive, otherwise he wouldn't have had left behind so many preparatory measures.

It was also from that moment that Han Shuo felt that the legends that circulated the outside world probably were nowhere near the truth. According to folklore, the Cemetery of Death was originally created by a group of necromancers, who used the Cemetery of Death for research on the mysterious knowledge about necromancy. For they had committed a gross multitude of outrageously depraved acts, magi of every school of magic united to destroy them, and the Cemetery of Death completely vanished with them.

As a necromancer, Han Shuo had heard much of such folklores. But when extrapolating based on the events in these folk stories, he concluded that they were set less than a millennium before. Now when he heard Gilges mention matters from five thousand years ago, Han Shuo was almost certain that the Cemetery of Death ought to have existed for a longer period.

Suddenly, Han Shuo recalled that Gilges had been alive for over two thousand years, and so he pestered, “You have lived for more than two thousand years. Are you aware of the existence of the Cemetery of Death, and the legends about that place?”

“Of course. I haven’t been completely ignorant of all the events of the outside world for the past two millennia. When it comes to certain major events, I still know a thing or two!” Gilges nodded, and soon continued, “Which legends do you mean, exactly?”

Han Shuo was delighted in his heart. He hastily depicted all the way through every legend the human world perpetuated pertaining to the Cemetery of Death. Then, with his bright eyes on Gilges, he asked, “Are such the facts?”

Shaking his head, Gilges replied, “Thousand of years ago there was indeed a group of necromancers that gathered at the Cemetery of Death. They produced a lot of wicked necromancy magic in their research – also true. And in the end they were hunted to death by every magus of every country, that is also correct. However, they surely did not build the Cemetery of Death. Like you, they possessed the Cemetery of Death, but were not the creators.

Although I don’t have any conclusive evidence, I’ve always believed that the Cemetery of Death was constructed by the original owner of the skeletal staff. And just like our dark dragon race's constant defense of the tunnel five thousand years, for the original owner of the skeletal staff to have built the Cemetery of Death, there must be some profound meaning to it."

"Then, do you know about the circumstances of the Calamity Church's origin? They don't seem to have appeared too long ago on Profound Continent. Why is it that they consider the Cemetery of Death to be their holy land? How did they know about the three miraculous abilities of the skeletal staff?" Han Shuo was anxious and asked Gilges in a hurried tone.

"I do know some things about the Calamity Church. That folklore you mentioned about the Cemetery of Death, except for the part where those necromancers constructed it, a large part of rest of the stories is true.

"The Calamity Church was actually founded by the same necromancers that formerly possessed the Cemetery of Death. At the time, they created countless terrifying magic in the Cemetery of Death. In particular, the appearance of this 'Plague' spell. It caused people in countless cities to turn into undeads.

"Therefore, they became the common enemy of the entire continent, and were finally extirpated by experts of various countries. However, they were very hard to kill. They weren't totally wiped out under the besiege of every country on the continent. But those few who so luckily survived would never dare to show their faces in public like they used to, and forever live in the dark.

"I have to say, these people indeed were incomparably mighty. Even with the combined effort of the entire continent to destroy them, they weren't completely eradicated. Those who survived even grew stronger and stronger, while their knowledge in the field of necromancy became more and more refined. They even began to recruit various wicked experts of the Profound Continent.

"That was, until these powerful necromancers attained new heights in their delvings into the field of magic, possessing the capacity of communicating with demons and evil gods. They established the Calamity

Church to worship the evil god, accepting more and more evil entities in Profound Continent, and flourished to the point now where even the Church of Light can barely suppress them.

“The Cemetery of Death is their birthplace, and also the place where the first generation of high-level Calamity Church members researched necromancy magic. For them to take the Cemetery of Death as their sacred ground, it’s a matter of course!” Gilges explained continuously as he looked at Han Shuo.

“So that’s how it is!” With Gilges’ narration, Han Shuo finally understood what the Cemetery of Death had to do with the Calamity Church. As it turned out, the Cemetery of Death was basically the laboratory of the evil necromancers that founded the Calamity Church. The founders of the Calamity Church would do research on producing that wicked magic in there. No wonder Wolf always said that Han Shuo was one of theirs.

Chapter 471: Taking in a Scourge

“Then, do you know why the Cemetery of Death and the skeletal staff disappeared altogether?” With Gilges’s explanations, Han Shuo easily figured out the rest of the stories. Now the only thing that Han Shuo couldn’t understand was how the skeletal staff could be lost from the hands of Calamity Church.

“I haven’t a clue either. Ever since the encirclement and extirpation campaign against the ancient necromancers started, the Cemetery of Death disappeared along with them. Even later when the Calamity Church was founded, the Cemetery of Death had never once reappeared. But now, with you obtaining the skeletal staff, gaining the ability to freely enter and exit, after thousands of years, did the Cemetery of Death once more emerge!” Patriarch of dark dragons Gilges shook his head. He didn’t seem very clear about what happened behind the scenes.

Han Shuo then continued to inquire a certain matter about Calamity Church and Cemetery of Death. But this time, Gilges couldn’t seem to answer those questions either. That was all he knew.

“Oh right, do you all still want to stay here?” When Han Shuo could no longer get any more useful information from Gilges, he planned of leaving.

“We still need to discuss a few things. Furthermore, we want to bury our children’s bodies!” when this topic was raised, Gilges again appeared very sorrowful.

“Master, I also need to bury my father. From today onwards, as long as I, Gilbert, am alive, I vow to wipe the Shine of Ice off the face of the continent!” Gilbert said with a staunch look. He seemed to have taken the Shine of Ice as his arch nemesis.

Han Shuo creased his brows. He, on the contrary, was eager to leave as soon as possible. After all, there were still plenty of things to deal with in the world above ground. However, he couldn’t be sure if those from the Shine of Ice would be returning. If by any chance, they did come back and he wasn't there, then the dark dragons would never be able to escape a tragedy.

After thinking for a moment, Han Shuo said, "Settle everything you need to here. After that, everyone leaves this place."

Han Shuo summoned the earth elite zombie and a bunch of zombie warriors. After issuing a command to the earth elite zombie, Han Shuo said to Gilbert, "Let them help you. Start by burying your father's corpse. I will wait here with you for a few days. Then, when it's all over and done with, you will carry the cage and we shall all leave!"

"Thank you, master!" Gilbert replied.

Hence, Han Shuo temporarily stayed at this great canyon. With the instruction of Gilbert's grandpa, Gilbert buried the dead bodies in accordance with the rites of the dark dragon race. The dark dragons in the cage then discussed the paths they wished to take in the future.

Han Shuo also remained there but kept some distance away from Gilbert and the others, assiduously researching the mysteries of the three necromancy boundaries that he obtained the last time. After Han Shuo successfully released the Boundary of Weakness, he easily picked up the knack of deploying the Boundary of Fear. In the short span of two days, he could proficiently release the Boundary of Fear.

The Boundary of Weakness and Boundary of Fear were virtually the same, therefore Han Shuo did need to spend much time to master the latter. But regarding the Boundary of Aging, he was rather perplexed. In the following three days, Han Shuo constantly bore into the method of releasing the Boundary of Aging. Although he attempted many times, not once could he form the Boundary of Aging.

After five days, with the assistance of earth elite zombie, all the dead dark dragons had been properly buried. In those five days, Gilbert finally brought order to his chaotic frame of mind. His grandfather Gilges also decided to leave temporarily, as to open up the cage and so that they would be safe if those of the Shrine of Ice were to return.

Perhaps it was because the dark dragons weighed as much as humans when they transformed into human form, or maybe it was the unique structure of the cage, but dark dragon Gilbert alone could carry that huge cage on his shoulder, totally disproportionate to his own size. Following behind Han Shuo, they went back to the first layer through the same path that they came from.

Before arriving at the first layer, Han Shuo suddenly felt some aura fluctuations of several weak presences from the entrance above them. This set Han Shuo on edge. However, those presences couldn't possibly pose any threat to Han Shuo, so he wasn't too worried.

When Han Shuo and dark dragon Gilbert walked out through the tunnel, he finally realized who was actually guarding the cave mouth.

The five mature, sophisticated-looking female dark elves that once had an orgy with Han Shuo brought a group of dark elves to wait at the exit. Standing gracefully among them, Shialan smiled as soon as she saw Han Shuo. In a most licentious tone, she exclaimed, "Hey! It really was you! What a rare occasion to have you here. Why didn't you visit our tribe? Is it that you despise us dark elves?" Ever since Han Shuo killed Adele, the five became her successor as the new leaders of the dark elves. Initially, Han Shuo had maintained contact with the underground world. But later, after Trunks gained control of the Valley of Sunshine, Trunks' men began to gradually trade certain things with the dark elves.

The underground world is abundant with certain crystals and unusual ores. There were even some uncommon treasures that couldn't be found above ground. Being the transaction point between a few countries, in the Valley of Sunshine, goods for the function of enjoyment and pleasure could surely be found in excess. Incidentally, the dark elves was a race that constantly sought the pleasures of life. Hence, during those few years, Trunks had gained more gold coins trading with the underground world than he ever could as a mercenary.

"How did you know I was here?" Han Shuo asked puzzled with creased brows as he looked at this dark elf.

"Hahah, ever since you entered the underground world, you have been constantly rushing all along the way. Therefore, plenty of batmen and goblins have spotted the two of you. Those filthy things now exchange food with us for any information about strangers that pass through. Right after you entered the tunnel to the second layer, I was already informed of your whereabouts!” Shialan explained. Shortly after, she giggled lovably and said, “Although these years you rarely come down to the underground world, without your help, we wouldn’t have been able to obtain so many rare playthings from Trunks. Since you have now come to the underground world, we as the hosts must show our hospitality!”

“So that explains it!” Han Shuo laughed. He then politely said, “I truly appreciate it, but this time I’m rather busy and don’t have much time. Next time I visit the underground world again, I will definitely pay you all a visit!”

Gilbert, dragging such a huge cage in his human form, appeared monstrous and strange, looking as though he were carrying a mountain on his shoulder. His face expressed disgust at his first glance at the dark elves.

If it wasn’t for his father’s recent passing, given the lewd personality of the dark dragon race, the dark elves would likely still have been his prey. However, Gilbert hadn’t been in a good mood. And now that Shialan and her party were delaying the dark dragons break from their shackles, he naturally couldn’t put on an amicable face.

“It’s him, that dark dragon!” Behind Shialan, a dark elf that had seen Gilbert before hastily whispered to Shialan.

Shialan again gave Gilbert a once over before shifting her glittering eyes to the few caged dark dragons for several more glances, wearing a pensive expression.

After a short while, a beautiful, pure, young dark elf beside Shialan coughed lightly. Shialan was startled. She couldn’t help but turn to look at this young beautiful dark elf with rather complicated emotions in her eyes. But she then returned to normal in an instant.

“Alright then. But since it’s such a rare occasion to have you come down to the underground world, we must not let you leave empty handed!” When Shialan took a quick look at that young dark elf, she seemed to have received some kind of directive. All smiles, she pointed at the young lady and said to Han Shuo, “This is the most beautiful girl currently among our race. Hehe, she is still unsullied! As our best friend, I now give her to you as a present. However you wish to treat her, as servant or slave, it’s all up to you, but you must accept this gift. Or else, you will be looking down upon the race of dark elves!”

Beyond Han Shuo’s expectations, after Shialan took one glance at the beautiful, pure young dark elf lady, she insisted on giving her to Han Shuo.

While Han Shuo was startled, he also couldn’t help but carefully size up this beautiful dark elf. With just one quick look, he noticed that this dark elf was indeed extremely beautiful. Standing in the middle of Shialan and the other four gorgeous women, the pure, youthful aura she emitted was even more alluring.

Not unlike the ordinary dark elves, there seemed to be some kind of very clean aura coming off from her body. Indicating that she genuinely had not been tainted by the lascivious culture of the dark elves. When she looked timidly at Han Shuo, she gave people a lovely, pitiful feeling for her.

Han Shuo looked this youthful dark elf up and down deeply and, in his heart, a very familiar feeling struck him, as though he had long been acquainted with this young lady. It was a wonderful feeling. Han Shuo thought carefully for a moment. He was certain that he had never met this young lady during the many times he entered and exited the underground world. He was absolutely puzzled.

Could there be such a thing as familiarity at first sight? Han Shuo thought to himself. He couldn’t help but continue sizing up this lady even more oddly.

“You must accept. If you don’t, you’re looking down upon us dark elves!” There was no telling what Shialan’s problem was, absolutely insisting on handing this young lady to Han Shuo. It was as though if Han Shuo wouldn't receive this girl, he would thenceforth be treated as an enemy to her race.

“Okay. You, come with me!” If the worst came to worst, there would just be one more servant in the city lord's mansion in Brettel City. Furthermore, it was not worthwhile to cause Trunks trouble for such a matter, and so he plainly agreed.

With that, Shialan and the others no longer obstructed Han Shuo but talked cheerfully and wittily with him, seeing him all the way to the exit.

Chapter 472: In the Know

In the underground world, the dark elves reigned supreme. But once they emerged to the surface of the Profound Continent, they became prey for humans.

The beauty of the female elves, and the expertise of the male elves with enchanted weapons, made for a great temptation to humans. On the Profound Continent, never was there a shortage of hunters that specialized in capturing elves, especially female elves, which the nobility loved.

This beautiful dark elf named Kroely actually remained a virgin among the dark elves that had an innate tendency to be wanton, which greatly aroused Han Shuo's interests. As soon as they left the underground world, Han Shuo asked, "Kroely, why is it that Shialan and the others wanted to give you as a present to me? Did they threaten you?"

Kroely was terrified, and dropped to her knees for Han Shuo, saying, "Master, you are a benefactor of the dark elves. It is my honor to be able to serve you."

Han Shuo gestured with his hand, and did not continue asking. However, throughout the journey, he nevertheless held doubts in his heart. He always felt as though he was already acquainted with Kroely. Yet, after long, careful thinking, he was still certain that he had never met her before.

"Bryan, I'd like to have a few words with you alone!" After walking out from the underground world, the patriarch of dark dragons Gilges suddenly spoke.

Han Shuo stared blankly for a short while before nodding. He then said to Kroely, "Leave us for a moment!"

Kroely shot a glance at Gilges, then respectfully replied, "Yes," and distanced herself from the rest. After Kroely left to a long ways away, Gilbert put down the cage that imprisoned his grandfather. After shooting a glance into the distance at Kroely, Gilges creased his brows and said, “Bryan, I feel that there’s something wrong with this dark elf. I sense some kind of familiar smell coming from her body.”

When Gilges said so, Han Shuo jolted, and cried in surprise, “You felt that too?”

“I don’t know why, but I noticed that while we were in the tunnel earlier, this dark elf repeatedly sized me up surreptitiously. It felt as though she wanted to harm me,” Gilges said in a low voice with his brows still furrowed. Soon after, he appeared rather embarrassed and admitted, “But perhaps it’s because I’ve gotten old, overly sensitive!”

Han Shuo, however, didn’t feel this way. The older one got, the more particulars one would notice, possessing insights that young people usually did not. With regards to this Kroely, Han Shuo himself had felt that something was wrong with her to begin with. And now with Gilges’ warning, he was on the alert.

Gazing at the slender, elegant, lovely dark elf standing afar, Han Shuo couldn’t help but carefully release his consciousness to slowly sense the aura on Kroely. There was indeed the absence of that lewd taste that female dark elves were usually tainted with.

However, when Han Shuo really sensed with his consciousness, he nonetheless felt that Kroely truly was somewhat atypical. It was precisely because her aura was so vastly different from that of an ordinary dark elf that Han Shuo felt suspicious. If he were to shut his eyes, merely based on his other senses, Han Shuo would never consider her as a dark elf.

As Han Shuo slowly observed Kroely with his consciousness, dark dragons patriarch Gilges mumbled to himself, “It’s rather baffling actually. Although I have lived many years in the underground world, I haven’t made much contact with dark elves. It was only that Adele who we imprisoned that spent a relatively long time with us. Why is it that from this young dark elf, I sense a familiar taste?”

“Grandpa, you must have gotten that wrong. I also knew of that Adele. She had a promiscuous taste to her. You could immediately tell that she was a slut with just one glance. But this Kroely, however, feels pure and clean. If it were not for her dark elf appearances, I would've taken her for a forest elf!" dark dragon Gilbert butted in.

Han Shuo was startled. His eyes shone as he gazed deeply at Kroely standing a distance away. He put on a thoughtful expression.

"Alright, let's stop discussing this!" Han Shuo suddenly interrupted, and waved towards Kroely who was quietly standing far away. When Kroely came over, he said smilingly, "We have some business to take care of and it's not suitable for you to come along. Here, take this coat of arms, and walk to Brettel City. With this, nothing will happen to you while you are in Lancelot Empire."

"Master, but I don't know the way. What if someone captures me in the Dark Forest?" Kroely looked timidly at Han Shuo, seemingly losing her head out of fear.

"From here, just head north all the way. After two days you will reach Valley of Sunshine. Should any problem arise, take my coat of arms to Trunks and tell him you are my servant. You are a dark elf, so you don't need to worry about your life even if you are captured. With this badge, my friends will let you go, and my enemies will keep you alive to extort me. In short, you won't die! Be at ease!" Han Shuo reassured her.

After Han Shuo was bestowed the title of Marquis, he naturally received a complete set of emblems that represented his identity as a nobility. This coat of arms, which had a beautiful escutcheon on it, was an identity mark exclusively for Han Shuo. It even contained a magical imprint, which no ordinary person could forge. And of course, those with the capacity to forge wouldn't do such things senselessly.

Kroely anxiously looked towards Han Shuo. Although Han Shuo seemed polite and amiable on the surface, his manner of speaking was staunch. She knew that as a mere servant, she was in no position to discuss terms whatsoever. Even if Han Shuo were to kill her on the spot, that would be her fate. Hence, this sharp-witted Kroely could only take the badge. She replied weakly, "Yes, master. Your humble servant wishes that there will be a chance to meet your Lordship again!"

“Certainly!” Han Shuo affirmed.

After Kroely left, Han Shuo chuckled grimly, “Wanna play this trick on me? Those dark elves must have been tired of living!”

“Bryan, what’s the matter?” The patriarch of dark dragons Gilges could tell that something was up from the start, and by now he could not resist asking.

“On Kroely, I sensed the aura of those dark elves who worship the evil goddess Rose. Back then, I nearly got killed in a sneak attack, which I believe was the work of that so-called spider goddess Rose. It seems that this Kroely is yet another attempt to attack me,” Han Shuo explained to Gilges gloomily.

Gilges was very shocked at Han Shuo’s bitter experience, but did not question any further about it. He knew that if Han Shuo did not speak of certain things, it wouldn’t be appropriate for him to ask about them.

“Let’s go!” Han Shuo instructed Gilbert and headed for the Cemetery of Death.

But in the end, after carefully weighing in his heart, Han Shuo did not bring the dark dragons to the Cemetery of Death. Although Han Shuo believed in Gilges the patriarch of dark dragons, there wasn’t just one dark dragon inside the cage. Han Shuo could not be sure that none of them, at any point in the future, would divulge the location of the Cemetery of Death.

Although the Cemetery of Death was indeed enveloped in a mighty boundary, and there was absolutely no way to open it without the skeletal staff, nothing was always absolute. Han Shuo didn’t believe that the Cemetery of Death’s boundary was almighty. Otherwise, those wicked necromancers that did their research there all those year ago wouldn’t have suffered such disastrous losses from the encirclement and extirpation campaign against them.

Therefore, Han Shuo did not bring the entire race of dark dragons to the Cemetery of Death, but placed them in the forest trolls’ village, and returned to the Cemetery of Death alone.

Over the previous several years, the forest trolls had always lived under the arrangements of dark dragon Gilbert. The forest trolls had long regarded Gilbert and Han Shuo as the messengers of their God, Datara.

The Valley of Sunshine wasn't far from the Dark Forest. When Trunks was still fighting for power over Valley of Sunshine, he even utilized the forces of these forest trolls through Gilbert. After the event, the forest trolls and Trunks had established a good relationship. There was even a portion of forest trolls that explicitly migrated to live in the canyons around the Valley of Sunshine to better cooperate with Trunks.

After grasping authority over the Valley of Sunshine, Trunks' mercenary band grew richer and more powerful with each passing day. For the purpose of exacting revenge, Trunks had invested all his effort into strengthening himself. With Han Shuo's backing behind the scenes, Trunks also established a good commerce relationship with various races of the underground world, including the dark elves and lizardmen.

Through the business transactions with the underground world all those years, Trunks had reaped impressive profits. With Han Shuo's introduction, Trunks became the second best friend of the dwarfs. By gifting large quantities of goods and supplies, Trunks obtained large quantities of bladed weapons from the dwarfs in exchange.

With Gilbert's assistance, there existed a close cooperation between the Valley of Sunshine and the forest trolls. Trunks provided weapons, armor and foodstuff for the forest trolls. By making use of the strong network of intelligence he had in the Valley of Sunshine, he provided the forest trolls with the trade routes of caravans that were either disloyal or disobey him for the forest trolls to carry out lootings.

Having experienced a round of inhumane torment, Trunks, who was hardly a benevolent person to begin with, became even more ruthless and decisive. In the prior few years, with the help of Han Shuo, Brettel City, Phoebe, Emily and the others, Trunks had completely grasped power over Valley of Sunshine in his hand.

Banding together the Soul Destroyer Mercenary Band, forest trolls, the dwarfs, lizardmen, and even Janet's bandit group, Trunks, with the Valley of Sunshine and the edges of Dark Forest at the center, has become a powerhouse that no country would belittle!

Chapter 473: Long-Distance Battle

One day later: The forest trolls' village.

Han Shuo brought Elizabeth over. With his demonic blood essence implanted in Elizabeth's body, if Elizabeth were to make any action of betrayal, he could take Elizabeth's life with just a thought. Besides, the Church of Light had forced her to an impasse. With such a solid and dependable master to cling onto, so long as she had the slightest common sense, she should have understood that there was nothing to gain in betraying Han Shuo.

After arriving at the forest trolls' village, Han Shuo saw dark dragon Gilbert keeping watch over the dark dragons imprisoned in the Jedefrost Cage. Right beside Gilbert, the old forest troll priest was directing some forest troll warriors to pass on huge chunks of cured meat to Gilges inside the cage.

The dark dragons, having been tormented by Ice Celestial Corey of the Shrine of Ice, ravenously devoured the chunks of meat in their hands. They must have been starving.

When Han Shuo arrived, a group of forest trolls, with the old priest taking the lead, bored down at Han Shuo, yelling the name 'Datara'.

With regards to the race of forest trolls, although Han Shuo's original intention was purely to exploit them, over time, he had grown somewhat sentimental toward them. Except for their innate tendency to plunder and loot, generally speaking, they mostly suited Han Shuo's taste. No matter how cruel they treated others, because of the little skeleton, these forest trolls would treat them with incomparable dedication and good faith.

"Get up." Han Shuo gestured with his hand. After the old priest and his party stood up, Han Shuo said smilingly, "In the future, make sure to be in frequent contact with Trunks. He shall provide you all with wise instruction."

"Rest assured, liaison. Under Lord Trunks' guidance, we have reaped great harvests these several years." A gratified smile blossomed on the ugly face of the old priest.

Han Shuo nodded. Then, he shot a glance at Elizabeth, encouraging her. “Give it a try, see if you can absorb the divine energy of the Ice Goddess from the Jedefrost Cage.”

“Understood, master!” Elizabeth replied respectfully, wearing an excited look on her face.

Elizabeth, who had been on the run for countless years, deeply realized the importance of her own strength. She understood that if she wanted to better protect herself and ensure her own survival, she had to possess great power. This command of Han Shuo’s directed at her was undoubtedly beneficial to her. With her bewildering body structure, if she could absorb the divine energy in the Jedefrost Cage, her strength would definitely advance one step further.

“Be careful. Inside are all my clan members,” Gilbert, unclear of Elizabeth’s strength, warned when he saw her approaching the cage with excitement.

Elizabeth nodded. When she got beside the Jedefrost Cage, without saying a word, she stretched her hands and grasped at the fences. She closed her eyes to start sensing the energy within the Jedefrost Cage with her Body of Divine Favor.

Han Shuo squinted slightly. What seemed to be lightning flashed through his eye slits as he locked his gaze on Elizabeth.

All of a sudden, Han Shuo saw that Elizabeth turned to a look of exultation. Streams of green smoke began to drift out from her seven orifices. The green smoke, resembling seven earthworms, wrung about at her nostrils, eyes, ears, and mouth. Her already ugly old face looked even more sinister as the green smoke pulsed at her seven orifices.

“Mas...Master, can she do it?” Gilbert took a shock at those bizarre things on Elizabeth’s face. As those imprisoned in the Jedefrost Cage were his grandfather and clansmen, he was terrified that Elizabeth might accidentally injure them.

Han Shuo made a hush gesture at Gilbert, and slowly approached Elizabeth. His immaterial and formless consciousness began probing for any sign of activity in Elizabeth and the Jadenfrost Cage.

Han Shuo could sense that Elizabeth's unique Body of Divine Favor had discovered the reservoir of the Ice Goddess' divine energy in the Jadenfrost Cage. That was also why Elizabeth was suddenly so excited. As the green smoke from her seven orifices curled up, the wrinkled skin on her two hands seemed to have turned severely shrunken and dried up, like two cyan iron hooks.

Her two wizened hands, much like the hands of a thousand year old mummy, glowed with faint green nefarious light. Strands of frigid energy like fine thread flowed gracefully along her two bony hands and into her body. The unique structure of her Body of Divine Favor allowed her to digest the divine energy.

The sinister looking Elizabeth displayed an excited and cheerful emotion in her eyes throughout the process. Strands of divine energy slowly flowed into her body through the conveying of her two hands. She could sense the benefits that the energy could offer her body.

Han Shuo let out a sigh of relief, assured that it was definitely the right decision to take Elizabeth as his slave. Being able to absorb this kind of divine energy, Elizabeth would definitely be of great use to him. While sensing the flowing streams of divine energy, Han Shuo mulled over if he should take away some of the energy she digested for himself after she was done absorbing it.

The frigid aura that constantly lingered around the Jadenfrost Cage was disappearing bit by bit along with Elizabeth's actions. Gilbert who had been observing from the side obviously also felt the changes to the Jadenfrost Cage and was pleasantly surprised. His mood turned much better. Now when he once more look at Elizabeth, that sinister face seemed much more pleasing to the eyes.

Just as Han Shuo and Gilbert both sighed in relief, Elizabeth's face suddenly turned frightened and her body shivered. Intense frosty aura permeated the air. Elizabeth tried to take out her two hands grabbing at Jedefrost Cage with all her strength, but, as though her hands were attached to the cage with superglue, she couldn't part with the cage no matter how hard she tried.

At the same time, the columns of the Jedefrost Cage suddenly overflowed with bone-chilling white smoke. The temperature in the surroundings began to plummet all the way down. The originally warm village of the forest trolls had seemingly fallen into a world of ice and snow.

Starting at an unknown time, under the caress of chilly cold wind, the entire village of the forest trolls was shrouded in snowflakes. The forest trolls immediately trembled in the cold. One after another, they started to shriek and shout in fear, with absolutely no idea of what was happening.

Han Shuo was terrified. He could clearly sense that there seemed to be a few potent strands of energy being poured into the Jedefrost Cage. The energy came abruptly. Not only did they cause the entire region to all of a sudden become bone-chillingly cold, it even firmly held onto Elizabeth's hands, not letting them budge at the slightest.

It was the dark dragons trapped in the Jedefrost Cage that suffered the most in the arctic atmosphere. Gilges' teeth chattered, the warm air exhaled from his mouth froze instantly. As for the younger dark dragons, the looks on their faces gradually stiffened, as if in just a moment, they would be completely frozen.

"Damnit, what have you done? I will kill you!" Gilbert roared in wrath, his hand already slapping towards Elizabeth. With Gilbert's strength, if he really proceeded, Elizabeth would be dead without a doubt.

"Stop it! It wasn't her!" Han Shuo shouted and raised his hand to stop Gilbert.

Gilbert was jolted by that shout of Han Shuo's. When he once more looked at Elizabeth's face, and saw her frightened and in pain, he returned to his senses. However, as the dark dragons in the cage were gradually turning rigid, Gilbert sank into a state of irascible restlessness. He shouted anxiously, “What should we do? What should we do?”

“Get everyone to evacuate!” Han Shuo shouted at the trembling old priest, and immediately summoned fire elite zombie. After issuing a command, he arrived behind Elizabeth in a split second and pressed his hand against her back at lightning speed.

Meanwhile, far far away, in the territory of Kasi Empire, at the summit of a frozen mountain encrusted with ice and snow...

On the top of the frozen mountain sat countless palaces made of ice crystals. Among them was a conical shrine that reached through the blue dome of heaven. At the center of that structure were a few Shrine of Ice experts headed by Ice Celestial Corey. They sat cross-legged in a semi-circle at the center of a huge magical array. Their bodies were frozen in ice, causing them to look like ice sculptures with no clear sign of life.

Each of them, Ice Celestial Corey and a few others, wore a solemn, respectful expression as they sat directly facing a huge ice sculpture of their Ice Goddess. Frozen still in ice, they maintained their posture and deployed magic from great distances. Strong and intense cold air filled the entire temple.

“He stepped in!” Suddenly, a shout came from Corey, now an ice sculpture.

“Frost the air, freeze the earth.....”

Except for Corey, the other ice sculptures started to chant in a deep, synchronized chorus. Cold air radiated all around from the main hall, with a solemn aura emanating.

Thousands of miles away, Han Shuo was pressing his two hands on Elizabeth’s shoulders. Demonic yuan surged in from her shoulders to her hands, mixing together with the bone-chilling cold.

Clouds of flames blossomed from the Fire Lotus held in fire elite zombie’s hand and wafted far and near. After the blazes flew out from the Fire Lotus, the interaction between the blazing hot temperatures and the wintry cold air produced thick white vapor that suddenly covered this world of ice and snow.

After the Fire Lotus was brought out and the clouds of flames fluttered about, the temperature in the entire village finally halted its rapid fall. The forest trolls, whose movements were slowed down by the coldness, gradually grew somewhat faster in their escape.

The entire family of dark dragons, whose bodies just froze in the Jadenfrost cage, with the help of the flames from fire elite zombie's Fire Lotus, the ice rapidly melted into water. Only then, did the chattering noise of Gilges' teeth continue to sound.

With Han Shuo's two hands pressed on Elizabeth's shoulders, demonic yuan rapidly surged into her palm. Han Shuo deployed the Mystical Glacial Spellfire to the fullest, producing a scorching temperature in order to help her withstand the assault of cold air coming from the columns.

Through the cold air erupting at Elizabeth's palm, Han Shuo sensed the divine energy activated by Ice Celestial Corey. He could be absolutely certain that the sudden changes happening to the Jadenfrost Cage must have had something to do with Ice Celestial Corey.

Han Shuo also understood that this Jadenfrost Cage, blessed by the Ice Goddess, must have had some sort of fantastical ability that allowed direct linkage to Ice Celestial Corey and the others. It seems that this time Han Shuo had fallen into Corey's ruse. Perhaps, the reason Corey so rapidly departed the dark dragons' canyon, unconcerned with the disappearance of the Jadenfrost Cage, was that he had planned to scheme against Han Shuo with it all along.

While he cursed at Corey's viciousness and ruthlessness in his heart, a steady flow of demonic yuan in his body wildly transformed into scorching red hot flames by means of the Mystical Glacial Spellfire, helping Elizabeth to resist the assail of the cold air coming from the Jadenfrost Cage at all costs.

It wasn't that Han Shuo cared if Elizabeth lived or died. It's just that even if Elizabeth died at this moment, the frigid aura in the Jadenfrost Cage would not disappear. In addition, having Elizabeth standing in between was definitely safer than having Han Shuo himself be in direct contact with the cage to contain the cold air.

“Cold, so cold!” Elizabeth could finally speak despite her chattering chompers after Han Shuo poured in his demonic yuan.

“Hang in there!” Han Shuo groaned coldly. He cast away all distracting thoughts and strenuously persisted with furrowed brows.

Under the effects of the rapidly plummeting temperatures, certain older and younger forest trolls, before the flames from fire elite zombie could warm them up, froze to death in the bone-chilling cold. The entire village of forest trolls were shrouded in fear. With the old priest roaring, every forest troll still alive fled in panic towards the outside of the village.

The fire elite zombie was still tirelessly releasing blazes with the Fire Lotus in his hand, strenuously persevering just like Han Shuo was. Although Gilbert’s duty was the least tedious, he was also the most terrified and restless of them all. Standing beside the fire elite zombie, although Gilbert was shivering in the cold, he still managed to hang on.

Looking at the gloomy faces of his clansmen trapped in the Jedefrost Cage, Gilbert understood that once fire elite zombie and Han Shuo could no longer hang on, his people would face the fate of being frozen to death. This made Gilbert very anxious, but unfortunately there was nothing that he could do to help. All he could do was to firmly observe the Jedefrost Cage by the side, and hate the Shrine of Ice with a burning passion.

“Father, it won’t do if we stay like this!” Suddenly, the fire elite zombie transmitted.

The cold air coming from the Jedefrost Cage grew more and more vigorous. Han Shuo also gradually felt he was losing strength, and realized that the fire elite zombie was right. Just as Han Shuo was clueless as to what to do, the fire elite zombie continued, “Father, let’s take the battle to my birthplace, then I will have a way to deal with this!”

The place of extreme fire! Han Shuo’s eyes beamed when he heard fire elite zombie’s words.

Chapter 474: A Cruel Decision

As both of them were located in the Dark Forest, the distance between the forest trolls' village and the place of extreme fire wasn't too long. Han Shuo immediately took action to implement fire elite zombie's suggestion.

"Gilbert, transform into dragon form!" Han Shuo instructed the anxious dark dragon.

Without the slightest hesitation, Gilbert let out a roar and soared into the sky. His body extended and expanded rapidly. In the blink of an eye, his humanoid body transformed into a humongous thirty-meter-long dark dragon.

With Elizabeth's two hands stuck to the Jadenfrost Cage, Han Shuo grabbed Elizabeth by her shoulders and soared to the sky along with the Jadenfrost Cage. Gilbert's meandering body dived downward, just in time to catch Han Shuo on his back.

"Wooo.....Cold! So cold!" When the Jadenfrost Cage subsequently made contact with Gilbert's back, the freezing cold energy automatically flowed into his body, causing his dragon body to lightly shiver.

Han Shuo creased his brows. Then, he flexed his muscles and lifted Elizabeth to the air, along with the Jadenfrost Cage. Although doing so meant that Han Shuo would have to spend some more demonic yuan, he could ensure that the Jadenfrost Cage wasn't in direct contact with Gilbert's body.

"Fly low and let fire elite zombie up. Then immediately fly towards the region where we came across the Lord of the Flames!" Han Shuo instructed Gilbert as he held Elizabeth and the Jadenfrost Cage high up.

"Understood!" The dark dragon made a loop and shot down, causing a turbulence of chilling wind and the snowflakes that layered the ground.

Fire elite zombie, who had been on standby, suddenly launched himself to the sky after a sprint, and landed steadily on the back of dark dragon Gilbert. He took another two steps to the Jadenfrost Cage and continued releasing blazes into the cage, warming up the dark dragons whose bodies were again beginning to freeze.

With everything in place, dark dragon Gilbert identified the directions, and flew towards the place of extreme fire at the fastest he could.

Standing on Gilbert, Han Shuo watched the ground below him as the forest trolls' village filled with arctic atmosphere. The small ponds, which were their water source, froze into ice before their eyes. All the forest trolls were terrified, trembling as they fled this world of ice and snow with all their might.

Many forest troll warriors carried their frozen children along, crying and mourning. Some of the older forest trolls lay sprawled on the ground, their frail bodies now popsicles and without a trace of life. Before the fire elite zombie could come to their rescue, they had left the world for the rest of eternity.

Looking at the hundreds of dead forest trolls, Han Shuo's heart was filled with remorse. He realized that this catastrophe that struck the forest trolls was his fault. Of these faithful, true forest trolls who had served him over the years, a tragic portion of the old, young, sick and disabled lost their lives to the icy cold.

Shrine of Ice! There will be no reconciliation between us!

Han Shuo roared in his mind. The demonic yuan in his body unceasingly flowed towards Elizabeth's arm and transformed into heat energy to resist the onslaught of the cold.

Although the distance from the forest troll village to the place of extreme fire wasn't too large, Han Shuo and the fire elite zombie felt as though the journey was endless. As Han Shuo had tremendous reserves of demonic yuan, he could still struggle on.

The fire elite zombie, however, started to reveal obvious symptoms of weariness and fatigue. Han Shuo could tell that from the flickering red light of the Fire Lotus.

The Fire Lotus, a treasure of fire attribute nurtured from the place of extreme fire, contained an incomparably enormous energy of fire. So long as the fire elite zombie could support it with his strength, in theory, he could always make use of the energy stored in the Fire Lotus. However, it hadn't been long since fire elite zombie was born. It was already rather difficult for him to sustain until then given his current strength.

Most significantly, it was the energy of extreme cold that the fire elite zombie was resisting this time! As the saying goes, fire and ice don't mix. Therefore, when resisting the icy energy, the antithesis of fire, the fire elite zombie needed to expend more energy than usual. To add to that, some of the Shrine of Ice experts jointly assaulted the Jadenfrost Cage with cold air so that the fire elite zombie would more quickly reveal signs of weariness.

Thousands of miles away in the Shrine of Ice...

Meanwhile, a group of Shrine of Ice experts lead by Ice Celestial Corey appeared calm and unruffled. Corey the Ice Celestial, in particular, even revealed a cold smile as though victory was within grasp. He seemed absolutely contented with his operation this time.

Humph! Merely a puny city lord. How dare he came head to head with us Shrine of Ice! Corey sneered in his heart while frozen in ice. He had already found out of Han Shuo's identity. Soon afterwards, with extreme confidence, he said, "In just a short while, we will freeze them all to death. Everyone keep it up!"

"Rest assured Lord Corey. With our cooperation, they are certainly doomed!" said a sacred grade magus.

"Lord Corey is truly insightful. This time, that Bryan won't be able to escape the calamity. When he dies an ice sculpture, I'm certain the Church of Light will be very grateful for our assistance!" Another sacred grade magus also found free time to speak and took the opportunity to praise Ice Celestial Corey.

"We don't want Church of Light's gratitude. Humph, we Shrine of Ice shall be the number one religion on the continent! By killing this Bryan, who they couldn't do anything about, we can incidentally prove them so!" Corey proclaimed.

“Lord Corey is right. We Shrine of Ice, as the messenger for the Ice Goddess on Profound Continent, should not be forever pressed under the Church of Light!” the magus immediately corrected his previous remark.

“Alright. Let us push harder, and freeze them all to death in one spurt of energy!” Corey softly shouted and did not continue to give more superfluous words.

The other few who did not talk simultaneously responded in agreement. Soon after, cold air pervaded their bodies. Strands of exceedingly cold aura passed through a mysterious magical array, which were then transmitted to the Dark Forest thousands of miles away.

“Father, I, I can’t hang on much longer!” fire elite zombie, who had been continuously sending out flames from the Fire Lotus, suddenly transmitted to Han Shuo.

Han Shuo could feel the sudden surge of cold air emanating from the Jedefrost Cage. He also felt that it was becoming harder to resist as he ceaselessly infused demonic yuan to Elizabeth’s two hands.

At that moment, the flames in the Fire Lotus were no longer bright and radiant. With the yuan energy of fire in fire elite zombie being consumed bit by bit, over time, it was drained to the brink of complete exhaustion. Elizabeth’s two hands turned purple in the cold. Her Body of Divine Favor couldn’t withstand the assault of such an enormous amount of cold energy. The few cyclones in her body gradually halted their conversion of energy.

However, they had, at that point, only made it halfway to their destination. At dark dragon Gilbert’s speed, they still needed over ten minutes to reach the place of extreme fire. If the circumstances continued, Han Shuo reckoned that before reaching the place of extreme fire, the fire elite zombie would succumb and be seriously injured, while Elizabeth and all the dark dragons in the cage would be frozen to death.

Han Shuo grew extremely anxious. What a pity that he himself already found it exceptionally hard to soldier on, and absolutely did not have an extra hand to assist in any aspect. If Han Shuo were to deploy the Art of the Demonic Ninth Heavens to the fullest, he could have been much faster than dark dragon Gilbert. Unfortunately, at present, he needed to hold the Jedefrost Cage up high while unceasingly withstanding the assault of cold air with demonic yuan, so his hands were all tied.

The innermost part of his heart was crammed with a dispirited emotion. Han Shuo racked every inch of his brain but couldn't find a way.

"Gilbert, speed up! If you don't get us to the place of extreme fire in five minutes, your grandpa and all your clansmen will perish because of you!" Han Shuo was at his wit's end, and could only tell Gilbert the circumstances as they were.

Han Shuo had made up his mind in secret that, by the time it all went south, he would cut off Elizabeth's two hands, and give up on the race of dark dragons. Although he was unwilling to abandon them, he really couldn't find a better alternative.

When Han Shuo finished those words, Gilbert let out a miserable howl. As his wretched howl sounded, the veins and arteries on his dragon body suddenly ruptured, causing fresh blood to burst out from his body, which fell like fine rain droplets.

At the same time, Gilbert's already lightning fast airspeed, suddenly doubled. Like black lightning streaking across the sky, he flew directly towards the place of extreme fire.

"No!" patriarch of dark dragons Gilbert bellows himself hoarse. He made a great effort to move his shivering body, with his two hands grabbing at the arctic cold columns, and yelled, "Little scoundrel, stop it now! Stop it! We are already hopeless. You are the only hope of the dark dragons, you must not die!"

As Gilbert's master, Han Shuo could clearly sense Gilbert's life force slowly draining away. At Gilbert's grandfather's yell, he realized what Gilbert was doing – activating his fullest potential in exchange for his vitality, as to save the race of dark dragons!

"Gilbert! Stop it!" Han Shuo suddenly yelled.

Elizabeth and the race of dark dragons weren't nearly as close to Han Shuo as Gilbert was. Han Shuo could watch the dozen or so dark dragons freeze to death, or cut off Elizabeth's hands without the slightest hesitation, but he couldn't watch Gilbert die from overdrafting his vitality!

Yet, towards Gilges and Han Shuo's shouting their heads off, dark dragon Gilbert turned a deaf ear, and flew towards the place of extreme fire with all his strength. In Gilbert's lantern-sized pupils, only a resolution to save his kind that even death couldn't stop could be seen.

"Gilbert, if you don't stop, I will immediately step aside!" Han Shuo shouted sorrowfully and angrily stamped his feet on Gilbert back. He could feel Gilbert's vitality washing away.

Gilbert's enormous body trembled. "Master, I beg you, please grant me this!" Sensing Han Shuo's fury, Gilbert finally talked. His simple, honest voice no longer contained a trace of his sloppy attitude, but was solemn and serious.

After a short pause, he continued in a deep voice, "Master, I'm honored to have had the privilege of following you. For so many years, during my days with you, I was very happy! It's true! Goodbye master. Even in death, I will never forget all the joys and fun I had with you!"

As Gilbert flew rapidly, his vitality too was draining away rapidly.

Han Shuo understood that Gilbert was offering his life in exchange for saving the race of dark dragons.

Even though Han Shuo felt indescribable grief in his heart as he sensed Gilbert losing his vitality, wishing to immediately sever Elizabeth's hands and abandon the dark dragons, Gilbert's plead was incomparably staunch and resolute, with simply no room for Han Shuo to reject.

He knew that he could not refuse this wish of Gilbert's. Therefore, he did not stop Gilbert anymore.

As Gilbert's downcast tone of farewell sounded in his ears, scene after scene replayed in Han Shuo's mind...

"Don't hesitate, think about it. If I become your servant, I can help you kill people, burn things, and fly everywhere and take out your enemies. As my master, you only need to give me treasure and beauties to enjoy. What a good business deal this is.”

“I can compromise if you don’t have treasure, but I must have beauties to sleep with, or I won’t do it!”

When he first met Gilbert, before becoming Han Shuo’s magical pet, Gilbert had some funny requests...

“Uh... my mighty, handsome, amazing, noble master, what... what do you want to do? Are you planning on hitting your cutest, most loyal, most honest, and most humble Gilbert? Um...”

“No! Absolutely not! I can’t fight my master with you guys! Not even if I die!”

In the forbidden ground, facing against Han Shuo who had entered demonic stupor, Gilbert stood foolishly, not knowing what to do, and stared blankly at Han Shuo, and waited for Han Shuo’s hundred-meter-long sword radiance to hammer down on him like a fool...

As those dribs and drabs of scenes of his past interactions with Gilbert replayed in the back of his mind over and over, tears began to inadvertently overflow from the rims of Han Shuo’s eyes.

“Nooo!!” Gilges made a long bawl and collapsed from the grief.

Beside Gilges, each and every one of the remaining dark dragons stared at Gilbert below them in disbelief. They recalled that naughty little dragon that never ceased to stir trouble in the valley, always breaking the tranquility, and always nagged about leaving home. When they again looked at this Gilbert, who offered his life in exchange for theirs, they couldn’t associate the two together no matter how.

Finally, with the increased flying speed, the price being Gilbert’s own life, before the fire elite zombie completely exhausted all his energy, Gilbert’s huge body, drenched with blood, descended into the ravine where the place of extreme fire was located.

It was also at this moment, Han Shuo understood that Gilbert’s condition had passed the point of no return. All his life force had been drained away in the process.

“Grandpa, take care of yourself! Master, thank you. I will always remember you!” Gilbert said those last words after falling into the ravine. His massive dragon head fell. Not a trace of life could be sensed in his body.

Han Shuo’s eyes were brimming with hot tears. Standing on his dragon body, Gilbert’s very last words echoed in his ears. His mind was filled with all the memories he had with Gilbert....

“Father, keep his soul!” At that moment, from the distant netherworld, little skeleton’s anxious message suddenly arrived.

Chapter 475: CounterAttack

At little skeleton's reminder, Han Shuo immediately came to his senses and stabilized his frame of mind. He focused up his consciousness, and sensed Gilbert's yet-to-dissipate soul in an instance.

The Demonslayer Edge suddenly flew out from Han Shuo's body and generated an intensely strong suction power. Gilbert's unscattered soul was drawn to it. In a split second, he flowed into the Demonslayer Edge.

Although the Demonslayer Edge temporarily couldn't assist Han Shuo in battle, absorbing one soul wasn't a problem. As the master of Demonslayer Edge, Han Shuo could even establish a region within the Demonslayer Edge specially for Gilbert where he could take refuge.

Han Shuo dispelled his sorrow. He suddenly recalled that the demonic arts and necromancy magic, his forte, were sinister arts the righteous despised. Whether it was demonic arts or necromancy magic, they provided the practitioner with extreme proficiency towards souls.

Han Shuo only thought to himself for the shortest moment before realizing that, regardless of whether he utilized demonic arts or necromancy magic, by making use of Gilbert's mighty soul, he could rebuild his physical body and have him revived. As long as Gilbert's soul remained, he wasn't completely gone.

With that in mind, the grief which Gilbert brought to Han Shuo weakened a great deal. After the Demonslayer Edge returned into Han Shuo's body, Han Shuo took one look at fire elite zombie and found fire elite zombie almost at the point of complete exhaustion. He immediately knew that he could not hesitate a moment longer.

The cold air in the Jedefrost Cage was as chilling as usual. At the moment, the demonic yuan that once filled Han Shuo's body from top to toe was drained to his knees. Yet, the energy being unleashed from the Jedefrost Cage still seemed infinite and everlasting. This left Han Shuo with the realization that the opponent had definitely surpassed them in terms of endurance.

“Move!” Han Shuo shouted and descended straight towards a narrow slit in the lavafall.

Before Han Shuo made it near the lava chink, the whole ravine suddenly started to tremble. Blazing high temperatures soared ever higher and higher. Fierce magma shot out like geysers.

All of a sudden, a strong feeling of longing filled the entire ravine, like a grief-stricken mother bitterly awaiting her long lost child’s return and finally finding him at the doorsteps.

“She, she knows I’m back!” fire elite zombie was pleasantly surprised and transmitted to Han Shuo. He too seemed overjoyed.

Han Shuo finally arrived at the gap in the lavafall. He deployed a protection shield, enveloping Elizabeth and the cage, and descended further down.

While climbing down, as the refiner of the fire elite zombie, Han Shuo could clearly feel that fire elite zombie was communicating with the Lord of the Flames down below. Upon arriving in this region, along with the climbing temperatures, the exhausted fire elite zombie started to restore bit by bit.

Fierce blazes violently roared all around them. Fiery bubbles popped up from the place of extreme fire. Terrifyingly high temperatures filled the area surrounding them.

Suddenly, a thunderous roar came from the place of extreme fire. When Han Shuo looked down, he discovered that the enormous body of the Lord of the Flames was slowly emerging from there. On the cliffs nearby, countless Scorching Demon Warriors were raised at an unknown time. Their eyes trailed Han Shuo and his party, who were gradually descending.

Upon sensing Han Shuo on the alert, fire elite zombie hastily transmitted to him, “Father, don’t be worried. She will help me!”

“Okay, it’s all up to you now!” Han Shuo trusted the fire elite zombie very much. When the fire elite zombie reassured him that there wouldn’t be a problem, he immediately let go of his worries.

Right after Han Shuo said those words, fire elite zombie, holding his Fire Lotus, landed on the body of the Lord of the Flames that just emerged from the place of extreme fire. Fire elite zombie then sat on the wide shoulders of the Lord of the Flames. Unending streams of energy were suddenly released from the Lord of the Flames. A dozen or so streams of magma even spewed from her mouth. Like fiery silk, they all wrapped around the Jedefrost Cage.

Simultaneously, the place of extreme fire, which had existed for who knew how long, and that even nurtured the treasure of fire attribute – the Fire Lotus – suddenly seemed to come alive. Thousands and thousands of strands of yuan energy of fire flowed into fire elite zombie's body. In no time, the fire elite zombie was restored with all the energy he previously exhausted.

The Fire Lotus suddenly exploded with magnificent rays. Under the manipulation of fire elite zombie, it mobilized the enormous yuan energy of fire in the place of extreme fire, sending out small clouds of flames that fluttered their way onto the Jedefrost Cage.

Han Shuo immediately felt the pressure on him greatly reduce. After such actions by fire elite zombie and the Lord of the Flames, the piercing cold of the Jedefrost Cage was all being used to resist the onslaught of the flames. Han Shuo no longer needed to continue resisting with excessive use of his demonic arts. Even Elizabeth and the dark dragons whose bodies were almost frozen stiff recovered in the heat of the place of extreme fire.

Thousands of miles away at the Shrine of Ice...

“Not good! There's an intense energy of fire pouring into it. What's going on?” that sacred grade magus that had been licking Ice Celestial Corey's ass, suddenly made a huge change in expression and cried out in surprise.

The previously calm, unruffled faces of the experts of the Shine of Ice were replaced with solemn expressions. Each and everyone of them casted their gazes on Ice Celestial Corey, their leader.

Even Ice Celestial Corey took a shock. Through some kind of mysterious connection, he also felt the changes to the Jedefrost Cage located in the Dark Forest. That energy which deepened all of a sudden revealed itself to be the most scorching energy of flames. As far as the Shrine of Ice was concerned, such fiery energy was what they most loathed, and also the most thorny energy to handle.

The sudden surge of this incomparably mighty energy completely disrupted Ice Celestial Corey's calmness. Under the attentive gazes of his subordinates, Corey pressingly turned over in his mind to come up with a countermeasure while trying to determine the source of the fiery energy that suddenly appeared.

After quite a while, Corey spoke again, "It must be them making a comeback at death's door. As long as we go all-out to withstand this wave of attack, they won't have any more energy to resist!"

"Lord Corey, if this turns out not to be their final push before they die, and we exert all our strength to resist this wave of attack, if, and this is completely hypothetical, by any chance, their strength exceeds our's combined, it would be very difficult for us to retreat by then," another sacred magus of the Shrine of Ice suddenly weighed in.

After letting out a cold groan, Ice Celestial Corey said, "There are no mistakes in my judgement. Even if another entity steps in, with so many experts from our Shrine of Ice cooperating, how many in the whole of Profound Continent can withstand us? Be at ease. This time I will be exerting all my strength, and undoubtedly will freeze them all to death in one go!"

Seeing that Ice Celestial Corey was somewhat displeased, the others did not raise any more objections. Corey's ego was infamous in the Shrine of Ice. He was a man who would never listen to others' opinions. Once he made his decision, all that one could do was wholeheartedly execute his plans with no questions asked about whether his decision was right or wrong.

Under Corey's command, the strongest few of the Shrine of Ice, using the mysterious magical array, began to release the divine energy from their bodies with all their strengths, intending to get rid of Han Shuo and the others located far in the place of extreme fire once and for all through the Jedefrost Cage blessed by Ice Goddess.

Back at the Dark Forest, in the place of extreme fire...

“Master, what do we do? What should I do?” Elizabeth, who could finally talk, shouted frenetically.

“Maintain this state and hush. This time it won’t be us that will have headache!” Han Shuo insisted before ceasing to respond to Elizabeth.

The inexhaustible yuan energy of fire in the place of extreme fire, through the two existences of fire elite zombie and the Lord of the Flames, poured onto the Jedefrost Cage. Scorching heat filled the entire region. The patriarch of dark dragons, Gilges, finally awoke from his fainting due to the roasting heat.

“Foolish little one, where is Gilbert that silly thing? Where is my grandson?” After Gilges woke up, he anxiously looked everywhere for Gilbert.

“Patriarch, Gilbert is..... he’s dead!” a dark dragon sighed sorrowfully with teary eyes.

“Ahhh.....”

As grief attacked into his heart, Gilges let out a mournful bawl.

At this moment, the party from the distant Shrine of Ice launched a ferocious counterattack. Cold, frosty air increased three folds and overflowed from the columns of the Jedefrost Cage and made contact with the high temperatures of the place of extreme fire, which, in an instant, produced thick smoke that covered Gilges and the others.

The extreme frigidity, like water in a collapsed dam, violently gushed towards Elizabeth’s body through her two hands. Han Shuo was startled, and hastily concentrated all his attention, wildly sending his remaining demonic yuan into Elizabeth’s two hands.

“Arhhh... That hurts!”

Elizabeth let out an agonizing shriek that sounded like a pig being slaughtered. Red, white, and green lights radiated from her two hands. In a moment, it would be frigid cold, in another, it would be scorching hot. When these two opposing energy forces collided, she felt pain that she had never felt before.

Previously, as Elizabeth’s body was frozen stiff by the cold, the pain wasn’t as difficult to bear as her body was numbed. But now, with the ice thawed, the pain became much more distinct and tormenting.

At that moment, Han Shuo couldn’t attend to Elizabeth at all. As he unceasingly deployed his demonic yuan to congeal and form flames on Elizabeth’s two hands, his consciousness suddenly felt something faintly from the Jadenfrost Cage. When he concentrated, Han Shuo’s consciousness seemed to sense a few presences from an extremely distant place. It was as though some kind of miraculous connection bound together the Jadenfrost Cage with some sort of energy from that distance place.

Suddenly, it became clear to Han Shuo. The presences that his consciousness felt on the Jadenfrost Cage was a trace of the souls of Ice Celestial Corey and his party. If they were to transmit their energy onto the Jadenfrost Cage through this mysterious method, their mental strength had to be highly concentrated. Therefore, through this mysterious connection, Han Shuo’s mighty consciousness could faintly sense them.

Just as Han Shuo comprehended those thoughts, the Jadenfrost Cage again burst out with ten times the coldness. Thick smoke enveloped the air of the entire place of extreme fire. Even the fiery threads that the Lord of the Flames had spat out were rapidly solidifying.

The Lord of the Flames seemed to have never met with such a thorny problem. Suddenly, irritated, she raised her head and let out a roar. The entire ravine, including the place of extreme fire, seemed to reverberate with her roar.

All of a sudden, the magma in the place of extreme fire bubbled up. As a counterattack from the angered Lord of the Flames, yuan energy of fire that were nurtured in this place of extreme fire over tens of thousands years converged and travelled along the fiery line shooting from the mouth of the Lord of the Flames to the Jedefrost Cage.

Fire elite zombie leapt head-on into the place of extreme fire. The Fire Lotus in his hand instantly mustered the terrifying energy within the place of extreme fire. The Fire Lotus no longer let out clouds of flames, but with fire elite zombie's hurling, carrying boundless energy of fire, bashed towards the Jedefrost Cage. "Father, be careful!" fire elite zombie's message arrived subsequently.

Han Shuo understood that the battle had now come to its most critical moment. He gathered all his attention. Even his mighty consciousness which had been meticulously hiding from the six-horned Soul Race tribal king, with no misgivings whatsoever, fully unfolded to firmly lock onto the souls attached to the Jedefrost Cage.

"Hang in there, they will be done for in no time!" within the Shine of Ice far far away, Ice Celestial Corey exclaimed.

Everyone there put forth their greatest strength. The divine energy which they obtained from the Ice Goddess for their piousness, like runaway horses, rushed into the Jedefrost Cage a great distance away.

Rumbles...

When the Fire Lotus bombarded on the Jedefrost Cage, a terrifying sound could be heard. Clouds of flames hopped out from the Fire Lotus and attached themselves onto the columns.

The dark dragons inside the Jedefrost Cage took a jolt. The young lady even spat out a mouthful of blood. She seemed to be injured by the sudden jerk.

When the Lord of the Flames unleashed all her strength, the fiery threads attached to Jedefrost Cage gushed forth with seemingly inexhaustible energy. Even more white smoke spread in every direction.

"They're too powerful! Lord Corey, I can't resist anymore!" the sacred magus who had been praising Corey shouted, frightened.

With fire elite zombie and Lord of the Flames cooperating to harness the energy that had been in the place of extreme fire for millions and millions of years, they utterly crushed all those of the Shrine of Ice. The Jedefrost Cage began to gradually melt under the scorching heat.

Through Elizabeth's two hands, Han Shuo was able to see that Ice Celestial Corey and his party were incapable of enduring any longer. Han Shuo's consciousness even felt that the few presences that had shrouded the Jedefrost Cage all along were fading away by the second.

It was at this moment that Han Shuo, who had been waiting for the right moment, suddenly made a move. While they were all frantically resisting the counterattack of the flames, all of Han Shuo's mental strength, his consciousness included, pounded at that few souls like sharp sword.

"Pfff....."

The group of experts in the Shrine of Ice, including Ice Celestial Corey, oozed streams of blood from their mouths. They felt as though their souls were hacked into pieces and sustained heavy damages.

With that, they no longer had any energy to resist. The Jedefrost Cage shattered with a loud crash. Thereafter, not a trace of frigid energy could be sensed at this place of extreme fire.

Elizabeth's two hands were freed. Han Shuo arrested her fall without hassle. The entire race of dark dragons were just set free from their incarceration. Although they had yet to fully recover, they were still able to hover in mid air with minimal effort. Not one fell into the place of extreme fire beneath them.

Thousands of miles away at the Shine of Ice...

Corey and the others, who were still frozen like ice sculptures, exploded from the ice and shot out. Ice Celestial Corey's body even flung into a distance, dripping with fresh blood all over.

The Shrine of Ice, enveloped in arctic cold all year long, was suddenly assaulted with a puff of warm air. This lofty, majestic shrine constructed out of ice crystals was being reduced to a lifeless body of water.

Disciples who were practicing martial arts and water magic in the Shine of Ice suddenly perceived high temperatures which they instinctively loathed and feared. Great frowns marred their faces as they tried to look for the source of the heat in alarm. Soon, they discovered that the largest shrine that housed the sculpture of their Ice Goddess for them to consecrate was also slowly thawing.

Such a thing had never taken place for the last millenniums. This phenomenon, to those in the Shine of Ice, was seen as more threatening than even demons ascending from the gates of hell. They were panic-stricken and terrified with no clue of what happened.

Could it be that the Ice Goddess had abandoned them?

While the Shrine of Ice fell into tumult it had never seen for thousands of years, Han Shuo let out a sigh of relief. But he soon took a shock, gazing at the Lord of the Flames in the place of extreme fire underneath him with an unimaginable expression.

All he saw was that the gargantuan Lord of the Flames, whose body was cast with magma, iron, and stones, was undergoing a shocking transformation. Chunk after chunk of stone as red as branding iron eroded from it in the thunderous roar of the Lord of the Flames. An insurmountable amount of energy was erupting from her body.

Gradually, as the titanic body of the Lord of the Flames swayed, her body grew in size. The lava from all over the place of extreme fire flooded into her like river rapids, seemingly supplying her with tremendous amounts of energy nourished by the place of extreme fire since the beginning of time.

Right before Han Shuo's eyes, the Lord of the Flames first grew wildly huge, her body almost filled the place of extreme fire. But after a while, the rocks on her body were shaken out rapidly. While lava watered down, her body then started to shrink bit by bit.

Han Shuo looked towards the Lord of the Flames without blinking. He sensed that as her body became smaller, the energy inside her grew even more powerful. Soon after, strands of fiery rays burst out from her body.

She was like a miniature sun, radiating light so glaring that one would be convinced their eyelids were transparent.

“Hahaha, I have finally evolved! Finally evolved!” With Han Shuo watching attentively, the Lord of the Flames, dazzling with red light, released a belly laugh. Gradually, the red light faded, revealing a plump middle-aged woman with red skin before Han Shuo.

Chapter 476: Not Born by Me and You!

Looking at that plump woman dancing and gesticulating for her joy, Han Shuo was momentarily dazed.

In his eyes, no matter how he tried, he couldn't find a way to associate this ordinary looking, rotund, middle-aged woman with thoroughly rosy skin, with that tremendously bulky Lord of the Flames. But having witnessed the whole transformational process with his very own eyes, Han Shuo knew that this woman was indeed the Lord of the Flames.

Most often than not, super-ranked magical beasts had the capability to transform into human forms. For mighty races like the dragons, they would already possess such transformation ability at just rank one. However, a subset of super-ranked creatures would be subjected to certain natural limitations for their rather unique body structures. For those creatures, In order to possess such morphing ability, they needed to evolve to an extremely high ranking.

The Lord of the Flames was one such magical creature. Her body was mainly composed of magma and volcanic rocks instead of flesh and bones, entirely different from what a regular magical beast would have. Therefore, to transform into human form, for their kind, they needed to be of extremely high level.

From the moment the Lord of the Flames transformed into that fat woman, Han Shuo knew that she had broken through her shackles, and evolved to the fifth stage to be the Emperor of the Flames. A fifth-stage Emperor of the Flames is the same as a human demigod existence, a mighty existence that would surely cause anyone on the Profound Continent to be terror-stricken at just the mention of their name.

After the Emperor of the Flames morphed, she seemed to be quite intrigued with this new ability she just gained. She would pat on her chest in one moment, and rub her shoulders in another, all while laughing heartily.

“Little scoundrel, this was all thanks to you!” the Emperor of the Flames chuckled and pointed at the fire elite zombie swimming inside the place of extreme fire. By rolling the lava to induce a current, she propelled the fire elite zombie in front of her, and grabbed him while chuckling heartily. With great delight, she then moved and danced with the fire elite zombie as though he were a toy.

Han Shuo was shocked. He stared blankly at the Emperor of the Flames ravaging the fire elite zombie, not knowing what would be the best course of action.

After a long while, the fat lady seemed to have had enough of playing, and finally put down the fire elite zombie. Chucklingly, she said, "Always looking for trouble for me. But luckily thanks to this trouble, I could break through this thousand-year shackle, and reach the level five realm!"

Without the fat lady also known as the Emperor of the Flames's violating, the fire elite zombie stood well on the magma of the place of extreme fire. With his two hands gesticulating, he used the energy of his soul to communicate with the Emperor of the Flames, "Mother, that's awesome! You are now just as good-looking as I am!"

Mother? Han Shuo was stupefied. With his jaw on the floor, he stared foolishly at the fire elite zombie and the fat lady communicating. For a moment, his heart felt incomparably sullen.

As early as the moment fire elite zombie was first planted at the place of extreme fire, Han Shuo was aware that the Emperor of the Flames treated fire elite zombie as her very own children. Because of the presence of yuan energy of fire, the fire elite zombie acknowledged the Emperor of the Flames as his mother, and certainly regarded her as his mother.

However, at the time, Han Shuo had yet to consider the fire elite zombie as his own son, and the fire elite zombie had yet to start addressing Han Shuo as father. But starting some time ago, unconsciously, Han Shuo did begin to regard fire elite zombie as his own son. He even grew accustomed to the fire elite zombie calling him father.

However, now that the fire elite zombie addressed the Emperor of the Flames as mother, and Han Shuo as father, looking at the obese middle aged woman before him, he suddenly felt a chill that made his hair to stand on end.

Han Shuo's scalp went numb. Listening to their conversation, the fire elite zombie flatly calling the Emperor of the Flames his 'Mother', and referring to Han Shuo as 'Father', he couldn't help but visualize certain rather terrifying scenes in his mind.

Too... too awful!! Han Shuo seemed to have thought of something, his expression turned incredibly ugly.

"Oi, young man over there, are you the father to my son?" Just as Han Shuo's imagination ran wild, the fat middle aged woman yelled at Han Shuo.

"Are you the father to my son?" Those words sent shivers down Han Shuo's spine. Putting on a smile even more unsightly than crying, he hastily replied, "Not, not born by me and you!"

When Han Shuo said those words, he really wished to slap himself across his face. The more he panicked, the more incoherent his speech got. His look grew even uglier. He had never faced such an embarrassing situation for years.

"Nonsense, of course I know you and I did not give birth to him!" the Emperor of the Flames carefreely berated Han Shuo. She seemed like a rather shrew woman, with no shame whatsoever. She then added, "Moreover, I cannot give birth! Yah, and needless to say, you can't either no, can ya!"

"Father, my mother can now transform into human form. She wants to leave this place and experience the outside world!" fire elite zombie transmitted to Han Shuo. Afterwards, fire elite zombie felt that Han Shuo's mind was in disorderly. Concerned, he asked, "Father, what's wrong? Why are you so frenetic?"

"Noth-nothing!" Han Shuo replied hurriedly.

"Ever since I learned of this good place, I have always remained here to accumulate more energy and evolve. It has been such a long time that I've lost count of how many years have passed. And now, finally, I can transform into human form, good time to see and experience the outside world,” the fat lady cut in as she looked at Han Shuo.

“Oh... That’s good. The human world is indeed fascinating. With your appearance now, ordinary persons will definitely not look upon you as a non-human. Given your valiant strength, you can travel anywhere on this Profound Continent,” Han Shuo replied to the Emperor of the Flames.

All of a sudden, Han Shuo was startled. It was only now that the Emperor of the Flames’ formidable demigod strength crossed his mind. Notwithstanding the chills he got from fire elite zombie’s addressing them as father and mother, this Emperor of the Flames of demigod strength would not turn against him owing to fire elite zombie. If he could make use of Emperor of the Flames’ strength to assist himself, this would undoubtedly be an invaluable boost to him.

Thus, right after he spoke those words, and before the Emperor of the Flames could respond, Han Shuo hastily invited her, “I’m familiar with the human world. Why not come over and visit our Lancelot Empire, and observe the differences between the world of mankind and the world of magical beasts.”

“Ah sure, I don’t have any specific destination anyway. I was planning to wander around and go wherever that takes me,” the fat lady straightforwardly agreed to Han Shuo’s proposal, much to Han Shuo’s surprise. After thinking for a moment, she grabbed the fire elite zombie before saying to Han Shuo, “Let’s go up first.”

“Oh, Okay!” Han Shuo replied. He then turned his gaze to the dark dragons, who were also dumbstruck staring at the Emperor of the Flames below them, and said, “Let’s go. Get to the top of the ravine first. We’ll discuss everything later.”

“Bryan, is Gilbert, is that naughty little one, is he dead?” Gilges, patriarch of dark dragons, recovered his energy little by little after escaping from the cage. At level four of the evolutionary ladder, he could completely adapt to the high temperature over there without the slightest discomfort.

However, from his face, it was obvious that he was in deep pain, pain that seemingly could never be unknotted.

When Gilbert was mentioned, Han Shuo couldn't help but again feel sorrow in his heart. But in contrast to before, as he had found means to resolve this, the sadness was no longer as intense. With some difficulty, Han Shuo forced a smile, and consoled Gilges, "Be at ease. Although Gilbert is dead, I have kept his soul. Give me some time, and I shall have him reborn and again stand before you."

After a short pause, with cold sparks flashing in his eyes, in a deep voice he added, "Plus, Gilbert's sacrifice will not be in vain. I will make the Shrine of Ice pay a hundred times for what they've done!"

"Rea... really? You can resurrect Gilbert?" the patriarch of dark dragons said with a slightly trembling voice as he looked at Han Shuo in disbelief.

Han Shuo nodded. Right when he intended to give him a complete guarantee, he had a second thought. It did not matter if he used demonic arts or necromancy magic, the resurrected Gilbert would never truly be the same as the one who had just perished. At his realization, he felt once again deeply saddened. He sighed, "I can pledge that Gilbert will revive. However, there will be some changes to his new body."

Gilges was no ordinary being. He understood exactly what Han Shuo meant. He sighed and replied, "As long as he can be resurrected, nothing else matters."

"Let's go, let's go. For someone of several thousand years old, you are as long-winded as a woman." While Han Shuo and Gilges continued to sigh with sorrow, the Emperor of the Flames couldn't help but hasten them. She had never yet taken a tour of the continent with the identity of a human. Now that she had finally evolved with great difficulty to the fifth stage, the Emperor grade, she became rather impatient.

Without any more words, Han Shuo nodded at Gilges before flying out through the opening in the lavafall. One by one, they all evacuated.

Upon arriving at the ravine, Han Shuo gazed at the crowd of non-human living creatures. For a moment, he couldn't figure out where to put them.

“We wish to avenge Gilbert! From today onwards, the Shine of Ice will be the sworn enemy of us dark dragons!” A robust yet boorish-looking dark dragon, immediately let out a bellow of rage when he saw Gilbert’s corpse on the ravine, bathing in his own blood.

During the thrilling great battle in the valley, magma from the place of extreme fire violently shot about everywhere, causing yet another volcanic eruption in the small ravine. Among them, the magma, enriched with a huge amount of yuan energy of fire, submerged Gilbert’s dead body. Gilbert’s once lifeless carcass, after boiling in the magma, was now reduced to a pitiful mass, his skin and flesh all vaporized. All that remained were a colossal skeleton, a magical beast crystal core, and two eyeballs.

Looking at Gilbert’s skeletal remains, even with the means to resurrect Gilbert, Han Shuo could not hold back his anger, and roared at the sky in burning fury, “That’s right! We must take revenge!”

At this moment, dark dragon patriarch Gilges flew to Gilbert’s remains and very carefully collected Gilbert’s crystal core and his two eyes, stowing them away like treasure.

After that furious cry, Han Shuo summoned the earth elite zombie. Using the earth elite zombie’s gift, dark dragon Gilbert’s colossal skeletal remains were buried deep underground so that someday in the future, it could be used to reconstruct Gilbert’s physical body.

“I want to go the human society!” the Emperor of the Flames said resolutely as she looked at Han Shuo.

When Han Shuo was just about to agree, his consciousness suddenly felt an endless hatred coming from Tarrag Canyon. He took a shock in his heart and immediately came to his senses. When he completely released his consciousness to deal with the Shrine of Ice earlier, the six-horned tribal king of the Soul Race had discovered his trails.

Feeling apprehensive, Han Shuo quickly concealed his consciousness.

Abruptly, an idea crossed Han Shuo’s mind and his eyes glittered. After a short while, the corners of Han Shuo’s lips curved and revealed a most sinister grin. He found a way to deal with the Shrine of Ice.

“Oi, you, young man, didn’t you say you would bring me to the human world?” the fat lady again hastened Han Shuo without the slightest scruple.

“Elizabeth!” Han Shuo lightly yelled.

“Yes master, any commands?” Elizabeth’s body had now recovered. After suffering a bout of unforgettable pain, Elizabeth’s body was now abundant with divine energy that came from Ice Celestial Corey and the others. The divine energy, without Corey and the others interfering, could be slowly absorbed by Elizabeth’s Body of Divine Favor.

As the saying goes, what doesn’t kill you makes you stronger. This time, not only did the fat woman evolve from Lord of the Flames to become the Emperor of the Flames, Elizabeth obtained a lot of gains as well. Once her body completely absorbed the divine energy, Elizabeth’s strength was sure to be enhanced one step further.

“Show her around the Lancelot Empire. Erm, if she gets bored, just bring her to Brettel City. Do you understand?” Han Shuo instructed Elizabeth with his eyes squinted.

Elizabeth understood Han Shuo’s wishes. She respectfully nodded and replied, “Rest assured, master. I will make her enjoy herself to the fullest.”

“Alright alright, let’s go,” the fat woman said impatiently, wanting to depart and take fire elite zombie along.

“Hold on!” When Han Shuo saw that the Emperor of the Flames was grabbing to fire elite zombie’s hand and not letting go, he hastily shouted, “He cannot leave with you!”

“Why not? This is my kid, why can’t he leave with me?” The fat lady was somewhat displeased and groaned with her eyes glaring at Han Shuo.

“He is also my kid!” Han Shuo hurriedly answered.

Gilges included, the entire race of dark dragons, and Elizabeth, all had a strange look on their faces after Han Shuo said those words.

After another shudder, Han Shuo forced a smile and said, "It's better if he follows me." That manner of expression, sounded just the same as a divorced couple fighting over custody rights of their children.

The Emperor of the Flames was angered. Just as she was about to say something, the fire elite zombie tugged on the corner of her clothes, and communicated with her telepathically.

The emotion on her face was indefinite, but turned relieved after a short while. She glared at Han Shuo and said, "Take good care of our kid for me!" She then immediately grabbed Elizabeth up and flew away from the Dark Forest.

Han Shuo was speechless.

Chapter 477: Six-Horned Tribal King's Abnormality

The Emperor of the Flames left immediately, leaving behind Han Shuo who was speechlessly looking at fire elite zombie. In his heart, Han Shuo was astounded, not knowing what fire elite zombie told the Emperor of the Flames. Han Shuo transmitted, "What did you tell her?"

"Nothing much. I only said that the netherworld is my real hometown, and I still have a lot of business to do there!" fire elite zombie answered honestly, he would never lie to Han Shuo.

Han Shuo knew that the Emperor of the Flames had long realized fire elite zombie's origins. But because the two bore astonishingly similar auras, as they both had absorbed enormous amounts of fire yuan energy in the place of extreme fire, she regarded fire elite zombie as her own son. Perhaps only fire elite zombie alone could communicate with and placate the Emperor of the Flames when she was overstimulated.

"Alright then, let me send you back!" After thinking for a moment, considering that fire elite zombie did not have anything else to do in that realm for the moment, and that he would certainly improve faster in the netherworld, Han Shuo sang an incantation and sent fire elite zombie off.

Upon completing his incantation, a brief connection was formed between Han Shuo and the netherworld. Han Shuo sensed a message from little skeleton from the region where the fire elite zombie landed his feet.

From the message he transmitted, Han Shuo understood that little skeleton was currently still fusing with the Origin Crystal of Death. This process seemed to have persisted for a really long time. The reason little skeleton previously transmitted a reminder to Han Shuo all of a sudden was because little skeleton could feel his boundless sadness. Therefore, he took a pause to remind Han Shuo.

Han Shuo replied to little skeleton, telling him that he could be at ease while he continued fusing with the energy. After that, he took a deep breath and turned his sight to the crowd of dark dragons. He said in a deep voice, "What do you all plan to do next?"

"After we recover our strength, we dark dragons must exact revenge for our clansmen!" Gilges asserted. He seemed to have made a firm resolution to take retribution on the Shrine of Ice for Gilbert.

However, even though Ice Celestial Corey and the others in the Shrine of Ice suffered serious injuries, merely with the race of dark dragon now, to contend against the Shrine of Ice would be like riding for a fall. At first, Han Shuo wanted to impart a few words of advice, but upon reconsideration that his words might bring down their spirits, Han Shuo only stammered before shutting his mouth.

But the old and experienced Gilges understood Han Shuo's concerns from Han Shuo's expression of wanting to say something and hesitating. In a deep voice, he said, "Worry not, nothing will happen to us. Besides, this time it was because we did not take any precaution that we could suddenly be captured. We dark dragons, having lived so many years, will not allow some lowlives to bully us."

When Han Shuo looked at Gilges, he felt as though Gilges still had a few tricks up his sleeves. This dark dragon who had lived for countless years ought to have better insights and foresight than Han Shuo. Therefore, Han Shuo nodded and said, "Then you all be careful!"

"I hope to be able to see Gilbert again!" Gilges said with his eyes looking deep into Han Shuo's. His tone carried some pathos and a bit of pleading.

"That day will come, don't worry. Oh, right. This time those few from the Shrine of Ice received some rather heavy injuries. I believe that in this short period of time, those from the Shrine of Ice wouldn't dare visit your canyon," said Han Shuo.

"Thank you, Bryan! We, the race of dark dragons, will forever be your friend!" Gilges thanked him sincerely.

"You're welcome. Erm, goodbye!" Han Shuo did not continue exchanging words of courtesy with Gilges, but replied simply in a smile before deploying the Art of the Demonic Ninth Heavens and departed.

In the snowland Far North of Kasi Empire were unbroken chains of dove-white mountains. It is a world shrouded in harsh arctic climate throughout the year. No matter which direction or how far one looked, they would only see the monotonous white colour of snow.

Located on the summits of these cloud-piercing mountains were glorious, serene shrines made of ice crystal piles. The frozen mountain in the center was particularly outstanding and towering. The headquarters of the Shrine of Ice was located at the summit of that mountain.

The wind was bone chilling. The sky was covered with ice and snow. In this white, icy world lived numerous disciples of the Shrine of Ice. Majority of them are of Kasi Empire nationality. They were here to offer their most sincere conviction to the Ice Goddess.

For many years, the main peak located in the center of the mountain range had always been a restricted area. Except for during certain special festivals and for some followers of the Shrine of Ice of grandeur status, an average person would never be allowed to step foot into the main peak.

However, in the past two days, an unimaginable major event occurred, forcing them to loosen up this rule. Numerous disciples on the surrounding mountain peaks ascended to the main peak. In fear and trepidation, they exerted the meager divine energy they had to re-solidify the largest shrine of ice on the main peak.

Just two days prior, in this exact snowland that blew bone chilling wind, situated on the main peak which had the lowest temperature in the region, this shrine of ice all of a sudden started melting. The few elders in the Shrine of Ice, and even Ice Celestial Corey – one of their highest ranking leaders, all sustained injuries and had to recuperate. This grievous news spread throughout the entire religious organization like wildfire.

Could it have been that the Ice Goddess was angered at their incompetence? Or perhaps demons were on the verge of invading the Shrine of Ice? Many of those disciples conjured to themselves as they were horrified of the changes happening to the Shrine of Ice, no idea of what was actually going on.

Such a bewildering phenomenon which had previously not once occurred for hundreds of thousands of years caused an incalculable negative impact on the Shrine of Ice. Gradually, fear started to spread among those followers of the Shrine of Ice in the snowland. Even followers located in other regions learned of the tragic events at the headquarters of the Shrine of Ice.

Far North of Kasi Empire, Icicle City.

Icicle City was one of many cities around the snowland of the Far North. An ordinary adventurer team would need only ten days to travel from Icicle City to the Shrine of Ice located in the depths of the snowland.

On this day, after a long and tiresome trek, Han Shuo finally arrived at Icicle City, and set to carry out his plan of retaliating against the Shrine of Ice.

Han Shuo's plan was very simple. Just like how they dealt with the Church of Light, he would open up his consciousness, and draw the six-horned Soul Race tribal king to come and kill him. The only difference now was that Han Shuo could effortlessly conceal his consciousness. Therefore, when the six-horned tribal king came over, Han Shuo would need only to conceal his consciousness, and he would vanish from the senses of the six-horned tribal king.

In addition, Han Shuo could be certain that in the Shrine of Ice, there were no godly existences like the Saintess from the Sacred Mountain of the Church of Light. Otherwise, during the battle days before through the Jedefrost Cage, they would have all frozen to death long before they could get to the place of extreme fire.

From the fact that Snow Celestial Tiana needed to escape to the Church of Light in order to take shelter from the six-horned Soul Race tribal king, Han Shuo reckoned that there were no characters in the Shrine of Ice who could rival the six-horned tribal king. Otherwise, Tiana would have returned straight to the Shrine of Ice instead of going to the Church of Light.

Given the strength of the six-horned tribal king, once he arrived at the Shrine of Ice, by which Han Shuo had already concealed his consciousness, this six-horned tribal king would not hesitate to turn up every rock on this frozen mountain to search for Han Shuo. The Shrine of Ice, just like the Church of Light, was accustomed to being arrogant. Therefore, with almost no thinking required, one could safely assume that there would be a great battle between the two.

Han Shuo was somewhat looking forward to counting the losses the six-horned tribal king would cause the Shrine of Ice as there would be no one of equal strength to stop him once the six-horned tribal king, a godly existence, arrived at the Shrine of Ice, Han Shuo fully let go of his consciousness. When the six-horned tribal king locked onto Han Shuo, he felt an unbounded, ice-cold intention to ruthlessly kill him. However, outside of Han Shuo's expectations, the six horned tribal king seemed not to have taken any immediate action!

Han Shuo was somewhat amazed. He stayed an entire morning in Icicle City, but did not sense the six-horned tribal king approaching. This indicated that the six-horned tribal king still remained at Tarrag Canyon as before.

This obviously ruined Han Shuo's scheme. Han Shuo spewed execrations in his heart. His consciousness could still sense the boundless desire to murder him coming from the distant Tarrag Canyon. However, the six-horned tribal king's inaction left Han Shuo's plan insurmountable.

The last time Han Shuo escaped from Tarrag Canyon, the six-horned Soul Race tribal king brought along four of his generals, and ascended to the top of the Sacred Mountain of the Church of Light almost immediately, exhibiting a ferocious demeanor of killing anyone who stood in his way. Who knew that after just such a short time had passed, when the six-horned tribal king sensed Han Shuo's presence, he would actually do nothing. This somewhat baffled Han Shuo.

Could it be that the Soul Race had changed its temperament? Han Shuo immediately rejected that possibility as soon as it arose. From the first time Han Shuo met this race, he understood their heartless nature from their cold pitiless eyes. Besides, the tremendous desire to kill coming from the six-horned tribal king was still present. This proved that they definitely did not turn kind towards Han Shuo.

There must have been some other reason, Han Shuo pressingly racked his head.

Could it be that the six-horned tribal king was injured on the Sacred Mountain of the Church of Light the last time? Han Shuo felt that this was more likely to be the case. It was only possible that the six-horned tribal king was injured in the battle with the Saintess, and was currently recuperating from his injuries, that he would temporarily let him and Stratholme the old monster off.

When Han Shuo thought so, he couldn't help but feel glad for Stratholme. Thinking that as long as Stratholme took advantage of this period to merge his soul with the Crystal of Fighting Aura, he would not need to worry about the menace of this six-horned tribal king.

Since the six-horned tribal king wasn't coming for the time being, Han Shuo had no choice but to devise another plan. Seeing that the snowy mountain was almost within reach, Han Shuo prepared to check out the headquarters of the Shrine of Ice. Without the presence of any godly expert, Han Shuo believed that he could freely enter and exit the Shrine of Ice, not at all concerned about his own safety.

After he made up his mind, Han Shuo immediately set out on his own towards the snowland where the Shrine of Ice was located. Wishing that the six-horned tribal king would come looking for him, Han Shuo completely unleashed his consciousness. Not a grain of sand within a huge perimeter in his surrounding could escape his surveillance. He had an unimpeded journey all the way to the Shrine of Ice.

Chapter 478: A Strange Sight

This was a world of ice and snow. The coldest place on Profound Continent was right here. All along the way, cold wind whizzed. Snow covered every nook and cranny. It was a vast expanse of whiteness as far as the eyes could see. Trees, stones, rivers, all were encrusted in a layer of ice. It was as though the world had lost its colour.

However, within the coverage of Han Shuo's consciousness, he sensed a trace of the presence of ice bears, snow wolves and frost eagles in this bone-numbingly cold region. These magical creatures, who preferred cold regions as their natural dwellings, roamed about in this remote, deserted world of ice and snow, adding a hint of vitality to this world.

Of the numerous mountain summits, Han Shuo had one specific target. His heart was as cold as ice, sterner to massacre as he flew at lightning speed.

The most formidable characters in the Shrine of Ice were the duo of Ice Celestial Corey and Snow Celestial Tiana. The two were the true backbones of the Shrine of Ice. Of the two, Snow Celestial Tiana once schemed against Han Shuo on the Sacred Mountain, with Han Shuo nearly being captured alive by the Church of Light. On the other hand, there was Ice Celestial Corey. Not only did he abuse the entire race of dark dragon, his actions even resulted in Gilbert's death.

On top of that, the Shrine of Ice and the Church of Light were the of best allies. Han Shuo couldn't find any reason not to retaliate against them.

Before he got close to the frozen mountain in the center, Han Shuo slowed down his flying speed. While his consciousness was still fully unfolded, he concealed the presence coming from his body. Carefully observing each and every movement on the main peak, he sought a way to intrude without being detected.

Gathering up his attention, Han Shuo's consciousness immediately sensed the existence of a frost and cold boundary all around the summit. The boundary enveloped the entire main peak of the mountain range with vigorously cold wind and ice. Within that cold wind and ice, Han Shuo sensed the presence of divine energy of the Ice Goddess.

This discovery made Han Shuo even more cautious in his approach. He further slowed down his advance towards the shrine of ice on the main peak. In his heart, he rapidly turned over in his mind how to deal with the situation he was presented with.

One after another, disciples of the Shrine of Ice entered and exited the frozen mountain. Yet, the huge boundary made no warning signals nor defensive responses.

Han Shuo carefully examined for a moment, and found out that among these disciples that entered the main peak of the Shrine of Ice were in fact ones upon whom the Ice Goddess did not even bestow divine energy. However, their bodies were all ice-cold without exception. Much lower than the normal human body temperature.

With a mere once-over, Han Shuo figured out a solution. Hovering in the sky at a height hard to catch sight of with the naked eye, Han Shuo slowly adjusted his body temperature. He even deployed the Mystical Glacial Spellfire to generate cold air in his body, at a finely-controlled intensity. In a heartbeat, Han Shuo's body temperature plunged to match the disciples of the Shrine of Ice down below.

On Profound Continent, there were existences with greater strength than Han Shuo. However, Han Shuo was convinced that no one else surpassed him in terms of the ability to exercise control over physical body. This self-confidence came from the demonic arts' perverted forging of his physical body!

After properly adjusting his body temperature, Han Shuo again surveyed the area for another while to be absolutely certain that in this way he would not trigger the boundary surrounding the frozen mountain. Only then did he begin searching for an opportunity to enter this main peak.

Watching for a while, Han Shuo discovered that halfway up the frozen mountain there was a protruding steep cliff. There wasn't a single disciple of the Shrine of Ice manning the region. Having found a vulnerable spot, Han Shuo made use of a window of opportunity and noiselessly descended to that cliff from high altitude.

His consciousness firmly locked onto the entire frozen mountain. While meticulously concealing the presence on his body, he had long discovered Ice Celestial Corey's exact location – in a conical building on the mountain top.

At this point in time, Ice Celestial Corey ought to have still been in recovery period. Han Shuo could sense that his aura was smooth and steady, without any fluctuation of emotions. There was not a single person stationed around the conical building. As long as Han Shuo could stealthily get to that building and mount a sneak attack, Han Shuo was confident of succeeding.

However, to reach that structure from the precipice where Han Shuo was, and not be detected by anyone midway, would be quite the impossible feat.

This was because, on the entire frozen mountain, other than steep mountain roads, there were no trees nor rocks that could provide concealment. In this place where every inch of every surface was blanketed with ice and snow, any slightest movement could cause others to catch one in sight.

Moreover, from a magical tower on the apex of the mountain, Han Shuo sensed some kind of magical wave undulation similar that of Sky's Eye. This magic released by the magical tower seemed to be able to catch every movement on the mountain.

Han Shuo thought for a moment with creased brows, and suddenly called to mind metal elite zombie. After thinking briefly, he felt that this method was feasible.

Although a solid layer of ice covered the mountain, the inside was fundamentally still supported by hard rock. The thick layer of ice above it was naturally formed on one hand, while also deliberately thickened by the Shrine of Ice on the other hand. With metal elite zombie's abilities, Han Shuo could entirely bore through rocks and reach right to the bottom of the building that Corey was in.

This is indeed feasible! Han Shuo immediately spread open his two hands. His fingernails suddenly grew madly long to form the incredibly incisive Demonic Blades that glimmered cold light. With his demonic skill, Han Shuo began to dig into the ice. After boring three meters deep into the ice, Han Shuo finally saw the foundational support of the frozen mountain – rocks.

Han Shuo issued his command to metal elite zombie. Once he understood the command, golden lights radiated from his palm. Metal yuan energy steeped into the rocks like flowing water. Afterwards, under Han Shuo's attentive gaze, the hard, solid rock split open, creating a pathway.

As Han Shuo gazed at the tunnel produced, he couldn't help but lament in his heart how truly useful the five elite zombies had been to him, even without taking their strengths into consideration.

Following his sense of Corey's location, with the assistance of metal elite zombie, from halfway up the mountain, Han Shuo unhurriedly headed towards the mountain summit where Ice Celestial Corey was located.

The metal elite zombie himself could freely go in and out in rocks, as though he were swimming in water. But now, having to take Han Shuo along, metal elite zombie had no choice but to open up a tunnel. Using some methods that Han Shuo could not understand, while metal elite zombie's palms discharged brilliant golden rays, the hard rock was split up, recombined, and tamped to build a path growing upwards.

As metal elite zombie's palms glowed golden, the tunnel didn't seem in the slightest bit dark. While he followed behind metal elite zombie up an inclined pathway, he considered the particulars on mounting a sneak attack on Ice Celestial Corey.

All of a sudden, the metal elite zombie stopped. Caught off guard, Han Shuo almost bumped into metal elite zombie.

They had walked just a few hundred meters. There was still a long way up the frozen mountain summit where Corey was. Why would metal elite zombie suddenly stop?

Han Shuo was puzzled. Looking at the back of metal elite zombie, Han Shuo didn't hesitate to transmit, "Why did you stop?"

"Father, look!" metal elite zombie leaned to one side. The rocks around him pulled back a little, making enough space for Han Shuo and metal elite zombie to stand shoulder to shoulder.

Han Shuo strode over to the empty spot that metal elite zombie specifically let out, and cast his sight following the upward direction that metal elite zombie pointed to with his right hand. He was immediately dumbstruck by what he saw.

In front of Han Shuo was a big chamber made by hollowing out the mountain rocks. There stood a magnificent, approximately sixty meter tall statue of the Ice Goddess, within the emptied insides of the mountain.

This grand, gargantuan statue of the Ice Goddess was made of ice as polished as perfect crystals. The carving was vivid and lifelike. She wore an expression as cold as ice, with her left hand holding firmly onto a crystal staff also carved from ice, appearing as though she was fighting against some wicked demon. Her look was solemn and dignified, giving off a sacred feeling of inviolability.

The Ice Goddess statue was dressed in a unusual striped robe. But as the entire graven image was made of the same block of solid ice, Han Shuo could clearly see her body interiors.

Inside the body of the carving, there were no internal organs, but a mixture of iced water and some peculiar substances was circulating within. It glistened like diamond as it slowly flowed through her body in some kind of strange pattern.

However, in the lower abdomen of the statue of the Ice Goddess where the uterus should have been, stood a fully-naked, beautiful young lady with jade-like skin. Her eyes were serenely shut, and emanated not an iota of the presence of life. She possessed such beauty that could give the Saintess of the Church of Light a run for her money – so perfect it seemed impossible that it could exist in this world!

Han Shuo stood below the statue. When he raised his head to look at this majestic carving of the Ice Goddess, a feeling of insignificance surfaced from the bottom of his heart. He was momentarily awestruck by this Ice Goddess statue in the center of the mountain that appeared out of nowhere.

The only certainty was that this statue had been carved from just one massive chunk of ice. There must have been a justification for the Shrine of Ice to hollow out the insides of the mountain and place in it such an enormous statue of the Ice Goddess. After Han Shuo came to his senses, he was shocked to the core, his eyes glittering.

The naked young lady situated in the womb of the Ice Goddess statue was ice cold and without any trace of life. Han Shuo's consciousness also could not detect any soul fluctuation. No matter how, he could not understand why there would be such an odd scene in the interior of this mountain.

While Han Shuo was still perplexed and pondering, rasping sounds suddenly came from the rock wall above the statue. With Han Shuo watching attentively, a huge platform slowly protruded from the wall. A few disciples of the Shrine of Ice stood on the platform.

At the first rasping noise that sounded, Han Shuo instinctively stepped backward and hastily sent a command to metal elite zombie. Metal elite zombie made one sweep with his hand. The passageway opening in front of him rapidly shrunk. By the time the rock platform above the statue fully extended, the passageway before Han Shuo and metal elite zombie had shrunk to just one small fissure remaining.

Chapter 479: Project God Making

Through that narrow fissure, Han Shuo's glittering eyes stared fixedly at the few standing on the platform above the Ice Goddess statue, cautiously eavesdropping on their conversation.

"When will the project really be complete. It's been more than a hundred years," a disciple of the Shrine of Ice sighed.

"Ever since the start of Project God Making and up until now, our shrine has consumed incalculable labor and physical resources. And it has now come to the most critical moment. We must, under no circumstances, be careless. The reason our Shrine of Ice has always been pushed under the Church of Light and Calamity Church is all because our Shrine of Ice does not have our own true God on Profound Continent, without which miracles could never be performed in this world. That is why we couldn't even recruit more followers. Once Project God Making succeeds, our Shrine of Ice will be able to change the current situation once and for all, and become a shrine that the entire continent will look up at. No more acting in accordance with the will of others," another disciple came over and explained in a cold voice.

Project God Making?

Han Shuo was stunned by what he heard.

By now, Han Shuo had long accepted that there were indeed gods in this world. Evil goddess Rose, who previously attacked Han Shuo's consciousness from across a few planes of existences; the Saintess that hid deep within the Sacred Mountain of the Church of Light; the six-horned tribal king of the Soul Race with unmatched might. All these were attestations to Han Shuo that Gods were, without a doubt, real.

However, from what Han Shuo knew, even the weakest God went through tens of millions of years of cultivation, and little by little came to comprehend the elements in the world or the true essence of nature's laws. Only then, with some good fortune, could they break through their own shackles and become a God.

This really was the very first time Han Shuo had ever heard the term “God-making”. That remark was the most egotistical, most shocking thing he had heard in years. At this point, the Shrine of Ice was, in essence, wrecking his most basic understanding about gods.

Was a god really something that could be manufactured?

“This project is already in its final stages. In due time, we will be able to complete this venture, achieving the magnificent feat of directly evolving a Divinely Favored into a God in the span of only hundreds of years. What a grandeur endeavor this is! During this period, we cannot afford any slip-up,” one of the men said in a deep voice. His tone carried an inexplicable arrogance.

A Divinely Favored? Han Shuo was again bewildered. After processing it for another while, he became fully convinced of the validity of this project.

Those who possessed a Body of Divine Favor had body structures that were different to that of an average person and usually had special abilities. They could possess extraordinary strength like Janet did, or be like Elizabeth who had the ability to absorb divine energy.

There were also many of those Divinely Favoured who could easily form connections with certain elements in the world. Once they began practicing in that line of magic, they would make astonishing, unimaginable progress. They could achieve what an ordinary person achieved, but in perhaps just a tenth or even a hundredth of the time.

For what seemed an eternity, Han Shuo had been fascinated with those who possessed a Body of Divine Favor, and baffled by the special abilities that their unique bodies bestowed on them. After listening to the conversation between the few people above him, Han Shuo arrived at a simple realization.

Could it have been that those Divinely Favoured were descendants of the Gods?

“That’s enough. Let’s hurry up. Pour those energy crystals and leave!” one of them was somewhat impatient and urged.

After he finished his words, Han Shuo immediately started paying even closer attention to the platform above the statue. He saw that from their space rings, they took out crystal fragments containing intense water element, which they carefully held using magic, and then insert them into a small chink on the skull of the Ice Goddess statue.

Once the crystal fragments containing water element fell into the statue, they rapidly dissolved with the iced water composite within. Through the mixture, threads of water element gradually flowed into the naked young lady located at the womb of the statue.

In just a short amount of time, the men had deposited heaps energy crystals into the statue of the Ice Goddess. They carefully observed for a while and after making sure that the Ice Goddess statue was operating nominally, they finally retracted the platform that split open from the wall, disappearing from Han Shuo's sight.

After the few had left, Han Shuo immediately turned all his attention back to this Ice Goddess statue. Gazing at this gigantic statue which the Shrine of Ice squandered for a hundred years to make, in his heart, he exclaimed in astonishment.

That young lady with cold, jade-like skin located inside the Ice Goddess statue showed no perceivable presence of life. She was like a unique receptacle, accumulating enormous amounts of energy from the iced water mixture in her body.

After pondering for a moment while staring at this Ice Goddess statue, Han Shuo made up his mind right away. He had to destroy this Ice Goddess statue, including what was within it that might produce a "true God". Between the Shrine of Ice and Han Shuo, there existed only an absolutely irreconcilable bad blood. It was because the Shrine of Ice currently possessed no godly existences that Han Shuo could be on the offensive in his war against the Shrine of Ice.

However, once this god-grade expert was produced, Han Shuo believed that the Shrine of Ice would never let go of him, and when that moment arrived, this godly expert would be on his trail indefinitely. Therefore, Han Shuo decided to leave Ice Celestial Corey aside for the time being, and take advantage of the fact that the God making project had yet to be completed to eradicate this enemy which could potentially pose the greatest threat to him.

All around the Ice Goddess statue, intense water element was present. Han Shuo had discovered their enigmatic magical boundaries and traps deployed right when he entered the chamber. It was rather easy for Han Shuo to reach under the building where Ice Celestial Corey was by utilizing metal elite zombie's energy. But to arrive at the Ice Goddess statue without touching any magical boundaries or traps, that wasn't nearly as simple.

His eyes sparkled. Han Shuo decided to break through the boundaries and traps, and to destroy this Ice Goddess statue by savage means. In his mind, he started to consider the procedures of his operation, weighing what would be the fastest way to destroy this possible threat in the future.

At this moment, a light bulb went on over his head. He recalled water elite zombie. Water elite zombie, refined with the yuan energy of water, possessed the proficient ability to manipulate ice and water. In this region, the boundaries and traps around the Ice Goddess statue were actually made with ice or water. With water elite zombie, perhaps he could get straight to the Ice Goddess statue without alerting anyone.

When this idea floated into Han Shuo's mind, he immediately put it to action. After reciting an incantation, water elite zombie appeared beside Han Shuo. Metal elite zombie took the initiative and stepped backwards, making space for water elite zombie to stand shoulder to shoulder with Han Shuo.

"Do you have any means of taking me to that goddess statue without alerting anyone?" Han Shuo transmitted.

Water elite zombie did not immediately reply. After some time had passed, water elite zombie still did not transmit any message. This left Han Shuo somewhat baffled.

Of the five elite zombies, although water elite zombie came relatively late, and did not possess a treasure of water attribute, after evolving for such a long time, he should have had long possessed intelligence instead of being so sluggish!

The puzzled Han Shuo furrowed his brows. He couldn't help but turn his head to look at water elite zombie to see what was wrong with him.

Han Shuo was startled by what he saw.

The water elite zombie's eyes were glittering with brilliant light, and out of his body floated puffs of misty water vapor. Standing beside him, Han Shuo could feel the humidity in the surroundings increase. Moreover, the water elite zombie seemed to be emotional, as though he suddenly came across something that caused him to be extremely excited.

Following water elite zombie's gaze, Han Shuo discovered that he was staring blankly at the young lady inside the Ice Goddess statue. His eyes did not blink at all, as though he had turned into a fool.

Oh shoot! Han Shuo was alarmed. He thought to himself, Don't tell me he's actually fallen in love with that girl in there?

Han Shuo's heart turned into a mess, not knowing what was wrong with the rather sillylooking water elite zombie.

"What's the matter?" Han Shuo shouted very loudly. He deliberately did so in order to rouse water elite zombie from his daze.

Han Shuo's shouting was indeed effective. The water elite zombie jolted. He looked at Han Shuo somewhat at a loss but shortly after, rays of light glew magnificently in his eyes. He excitedly pointed at that young lady, and said to Han Shuo, "Father, I want!"

This rascal definitely went wrong in his evolution! He could never fuse his energy into the Penta-elemental Undead Formation. So it turns out he evolved sexual desires, and even his eyes have grown malicious. Damn it! Little rascal, how come you've evolved like this!

Han Shuo incessantly cursed in his heart as he looked at water elite zombie with his imagination running wild. For a while, he didn't know what to do. With regards to the five elite zombies, Han Shuo held genuine feelings for them. Although this request of water elite zombie freaked Han Shuo out a little, looking at water elite zombie's excitement and impulsive urge, he couldn't bear to reject.

After stomping his feet, Han Shuo clenched his teeth and said, "Go ahead you little rascal. Do as you wish. But by all means, you must not alert anyone else. Damn it, even your brothers who came out much earlier than you aren't as early-maturing as you!"

After getting the nod of approval from Han Shuo, the water elite zombie suddenly jumped with excitement. He directly passed through the water magic traps and boundaries, and landed at the feet of the Ice Goddess statue in a flash, all without triggering any boundaries or traps.

While Han Shuo continued cursing in his heart, water elite zombie fused himself into the Ice Goddess statue. From within her lower leg, following the iced water mixtures, water elite zombie floated directly to where the young lady was, and excitedly embraced the lifeless young lady with perfect looks.

Enjoyed the translation? Consider supporting us on Patreon!

Chapter 480: I Want

Han Shuo couldn't bear to watch such a perfect looking young girl being defiled by water elite zombie just like that. However, just as Han Shuo was about to turn around and look the other way, he suddenly sensed an unusual transformation happening to the young lady inside the Ice Goddess statue.

Han Shuo's observed that the energy within that young girl with smooth and fair skin was rapidly flowing into water elite zombie. Water elite zombie pressed his body against this bare young lady not to perform some obscene act as Han Shuo had imagined, but to rapidly absorb the energy inside the young lady through skin contact.

Han Shuo stared blankly before he quickly came to his senses and became overjoyed. He ceased his silent profanities towards water elite zombie, and became just as excited at the water elite zombie.

The young lady was brimming with some sort of exotic icy water energy, but contained not the tiniest bit of divine energy conferred by the Ice Goddess. This was somewhat strange and contrary to what one might expect.

When he had earlier tried to break apart the Jedefrost Cage, Han Shuo attempted to have water elite zombie absorb the divine energy within the cage. However, as water elite zombie could not secure a connection with the divine energy in the Jedefrost Cage, the plan failed.

Consequently, this time when Han Shuo saw that there was a young lady inside the Ice Goddess statue, he did not think of sending water elite zombie to absorb the energy. But now it seemed that although water elite zombie could not absorb the divine energy that the Ice Goddess bestowed upon her believers, he nevertheless could absorb the water element and exotic energy from this icy water mixture.

In water elite zombie's embrace, the young lady was enveloped in a white cloud of water vapor. Energy within the body of the lifeless young girl, in tiny streams, flowed into water elite zombie's body.

Han Shuo could feel the excitement coming from water elite zombie, his eyes glowing with vigor. While he absorbed the energy from the young lady, he transmitted to Han Shuo, "Thank you father, thank you father!"

"Erm, you seem to be quite a lucky one!" Han Shuo remarked and felt somewhat embarrassed for his dirty thoughts.

"Father, I believe that after this, he will be able to fuse his energy into the formation!" transmitted metal elite zombie as he stood beside Han Shuo.

When metal elite zombie reminded him so, Han Shuo was delighted. Fire, metal and earth elite zombies had successfully fused their energies in the Penta-elemental Undead Formation. But as water elite zombie and wood elite zombie arose rather late, in addition to the fact that they did not possess treasures of their respective attributes, they had never been able to fuse their energies with the other three elite zombies.

Water elite zombie was now absorbing the energy meant for the Shrine of Ice to produce a god. Once water elite zombie completely absorbed the energy, Han Shuo had no idea what realm he would reach, although he was certain that he would make one giant leap in his evolution. To successfully fuse his energy into the Penta-elemental Undead Formation wouldn't be too challenging by then.

While Han Shuo's heart was greatly elated, he suddenly felt abnormal activity among those of the Shrine of Ice. A group of experts who were nursing their injuries, headed by Ice Celestial Corey, all of a sudden converged in a helter skelter.

The wall from which the disciples left again began to rasp and extend.

Han Shuo immediately realized that his plot had been exposed. This statue of Ice Goddess manufactured by the Shrine of Ice must have had some sort of connection with them unbeknownst to Han Shuo. As the energy inside the young lady rapidly drained away, the disciples had to have been alarmed.

Since it played out like this, Han Shuo knew that a bloodshed was unavoidable. A callous thought emerged in his heart. Immediately, he headed a distance upwards with metal elite zombie creating the tunnel for him.

At that moment, the energy inside the young lady within the statue had yet to be fully absorbed by water elite zombie. Whether or not he would evolve to his fullest capacity was all up to Han Shuo now on how much time he could buy for water elite zombie.

“Father, I want, I want this energy!” Still hugging the young lady and rapidly absorbing the energy from her body, water elite zombie greedily transmitted to Han Shuo like a child demanding candy.

“You hurry up and make every second count. Quickly absorb that energy and forget about everything else!” Han Shuo urged. He understood what that energy meant for water elite zombie and was prepared to fight with all his might to buy ample time for him.

Finally, the platform completely extended. The party of Shrine of Ice disciples cast their gazes at the magnificent carving of the Ice Goddess in the center of the mountain.

Apart from the few Shrine of Ice disciples who were leaving, there was the troupe that Han Shuo had met the last time at the dark dragon’s canyon. With just one look at the few, Han Shuo was certain that they had been involved in the long distance battle over at the place of extreme fire the few days prior.

When this party was at last utterly crushed, Han Shuo seized the opportunity and attacked their souls using his consciousness and mental strength. Having been caught off guard by his attack, they sustained heavy injuries. When they had previously met, although their bodies were ice cold, they appeared completely normal. But now, their faces were as pale as the dead.

In contrast to their unruffled manner during the great battle at the dark dragon’s canyon, their bodies gave off incredible chaotic aura. This indicated that they had yet to fully recover from their injuries.

“Oh my Goddess! What, what is that thing?!” one of those disciples shrieked, trembling from head to toe, with one hand placed over his chest and the other pointed at water elite zombie tightly hugging the young lady.

When this disciple's shriek sounded, other Shrine of Ice disciples on the platform also witnessed the situation down below. All of those disciples, Ice Celestial Corey included, instantly burst into rage, fury, and shock. Their cries and howls filled the entire chamber.

"How did that nasty thing enter the statue of the Goddess!" Ice Celestial Corey roared in wrath. A slap landed on the face of a disciple standing on the sides. He spat a mouth full of blood and fell off the platform.

Whoosh whoosh! Before the subordinate made contact with the ground below, the magical boundary around the Ice Goddess statue was suddenly triggered, sending out a few icicles which ran through his body. Before any blood could gush out from his wounds, his body was entirely frozen, and shattered into pieces when he fell on the ground.

"Lord Corey, please spare us. We really have no clue what happened. If you kill us all, it will be impossible to complete the God Making project!" one of the disciples cried out in fear, kneeling before Ice Celestial Corey.

The ashen and furious Ice Celestial Corey, who was prepared to kill all those disciples that previously came down to replenish energy crystals, already grabbed another disciple by the neck and was ready to kill him for his dereliction. But after he heard that loud pleading, for the sake of completing the project, he restrained his impulsive urge in the end.

"Immediately enter the Goddess' statue with divine energy and put that nasty thing to death. I want his soul to suffer!" Ice Celestial Corey said angrily after flinging off the man in his hand. He seemed to be very angry.

Of course he was. This God making project that the Shrine of Ice had been conducting for over a hundred years would have finally been complete soon, and Ice Celestial's cherished desire to surpass the Church of Light and Calamity Church was on the brink of being accomplished, and such misfortune had to arise at this pivotal moment. Having waited for years and years, he was as angry as anyone could imagine.

"Yes, yes my Lord!" Even those true experts who had strived to serve the Shrine of Ice for many years trembled with fear under the violent fury of Ice Celestial Corey. They hurriedly agreed and began taking care of water elite zombie.

Whoosh Whoosh Whoosh!

Suddenly, loud whooshing sounds could be heard. Multiple sharp bone spears flew up into the sky. Like scattered bamboo splinters, rows of bone spears shot towards Ice Celestial Corey and the others.

“Damn it!” Corey bawled in a stern voice. He hastily took out his ice-cold longsword. After sword rays flashed through, sparking, translucent cold air solidified to form an ice wall, obstructing the bone spears.

“You useless fools, get lost!” after hastily blocking a wave of bone spears attack, Ice Celestial rained curses while kicking the disciple that knelt at his feet.

The disciples who previously entered the chamber, despite being priests for the Shrine of Ice, studied mainly alchemy, drugs, magical arrays, and all sorts of complicated, abstruse subjects. Only then could the God making project be realized. But they were not particularly strong.

Under the high coverage attack of Han Shuo's, it was very possible that one or two might have been so careless and gotten themselves killed. If he were to lose the people who had meticulously studied the God making project for many years, it was very likely that the project would be doomed to fail. Thus, although Ice Celestial Corey yearned to kill them all at once, for the sake of the God making project, he had no other option but to put their safety on a podium.

Ice Celestial Corey yelled abuse at them while pushing and kicking with his hands and legs, forcibly squeezing these disciples who possessed true expertise in their domains of study into the tunnel they came from. After that, like a lunatic, he loudly roared, “Come out, Bryan. I know it's you, you filthy, wretched necromancer!”

Full of rage, Ice Celestial Corey's usually calm and unruffled mannerisms were. In this moment, nearly resembled Han Shuo in his demonic stupor, no different from a lunatic. Even his few subordinates around him were flabbergasted at his wildness.

“Go after those few who are escaping. Kill them all!” Han Shuo calmly transmitted an order to metal elite zombie to kill all those researches. After that, in a calm and collected manner, he walked out through a tunnel that was split open.

Chapter 481: Ad hoc Approach

With the intention of buying more time for water elite zombie, after leaving metal elite zombie with instructions, Han Shuo emerged at an unhurried pace, and stood proudly next to the Ice Goddess statue.

“It sure enough was you!” Ice Celestial Corey shrieked in great fury. The icy cold longsword in his hand pointed towards Han Shuo as he charged downwards.

Frosty aura overflowed from the longsword in his hand. Shapeless and formless fighting aura spurred up the cold air. Sharp icicles that could split space itself came down from the air with deadly force.

When Corey made a move, the few experts also whooshed behind him. Possessing strengths of sacred swordmasters, those few were not to be belittled either. Their tremendous power firmly locked onto Han Shuo, causing the pressure on him to be multiplied.

Another two remained motionless and stood tall on the platform at the top. Both wielded crystal staffs. As they rapidly chanted magical spells, the water element in this chamber which was already rich and intense to its fullest suddenly came alive. The entire region started to cool off. Multiple streams of hazy white cold air converged towards Han Shuo.

Han Shuo realized that these people, headed by Ice Celestial Corey, intended to finish him in the shortest time possible, then put all their energy on water elite zombie, who was wrecking inside the Ice Goddess statue. Eventhough they had sustained some injuries, they were certainly still a formidable force when making moves simultaneously.

This chamber in the center of the mountain, operated for hundreds of years by the Shrine of Ice, was not only filled with intense element of water. Owing to Project God Making, they had put up layers upon layers of magical boundaries and traps. To combat in such a region was extremely unfavorable to Han Shuo.

Therefore, under no circumstances could he confront them directly! If they were to lead Han Shuo by the nose, not only would he not be able to stall for water elite zombie, but escaping from this chamber would be a problem.

Seeing that Ice Celestial Corey and his party were charging over, Han Shuo suddenly pulled back into the tunnel he walked out from. The rocky wall that was split open was well coordinated with Han Shuo. As Ice Celestial swooped down, the opening rapidly healed and restored to its smooth surface. It was so well performed that even Ice Celestial Corey doubted if the Han Shuo he saw was just an illusion.

“Damn it! What’s going on!” Corey furiously shouted.

“Abra! Watch out!”

A sacred swordmaster who was rapidly flying downwards behind Corey was overcome with fear by the warning from those above him, and looked in all directions at a complete loss.

Suddenly, this sacred swordmaster called Abra felt a frightening change to the wall beside him. Crack! Halfway down his fall, the rocky wall beside him suddenly shattered. From the opening, a fierce-looking ghostly face ferociously rushed out, biting at him.

Abra froze his downward fall. Golden rays erupted from his chilling crystal sword. In a split second, hundreds of golden lights bombarded the ghoulish face attacking him.

Under Abra’s attentive watch, that sinister ghostly face was riddled with holes by the bombardment of golden lights. He let out a sigh of relief in his heart, but remained very cautious and stared fixedly at it.

Having honed his martial skills to such a stage, he was not the kind to let his guard down during combat. It was no easy task becoming a sacred knight, and Abra was evidently not an exception. With battle experiences aplenty he had grown accustomed to staying alert and responsive and not underestimating any enemy.

It was precisely such qualities that saved his life. Watching with all his attention, he saw that the malevolent ghostly face, although riddled with holes from the bombardment of his golden fighting aura, had yet to disappear. Even the speed at which it came biting at him did not slow down one bit, still charging at him with a loud hiss.

Abra's expression turned frightened. His body, which was frozen still in midair, rapidly moved backwards all of a sudden. His chilling crystal sword was brandished in a criss-cross motion across his chest. Within the golden fighting aura, frosty cold divine energy was subsequently released. The divine energy conferred by the Ice Goddess interweaved with his fighting aura, forming layer upon layer of defensive shield.

The sinister ghostly face advanced another three meters, but in the end dissipated into smoke and vanished. At this moment, after the ghostly face melted into thin air, an iron fist slowly enlarged in front of Abra. The unstoppable demeanor it carried caused him to be overwhelmed with shock.

Whoosh Whoosh Whoosh

One after another, the Shine of Ice experts above and below Abra brandished their swords, sending icicles and cold winds towards Han Shuo who had revealed himself.

Letting out a cold grunt, Han Shuo's right fist pounding towards Abra remained unwavering. Demonic light burst out from his left hand wielding the Demonic Blades. Without even looking, the demonic lights accurately pulverized any icicle shooting towards him.

However, several streams of cold air randomly drifted about under the cover of the shattered icicles and suddenly attached onto Han Shuo's body.

Once the streams of cold air deployed by sacred magi by congealing the enormous amount of water element found within the chamber latched on to Han Shuo, bone-chilling coldness seeped into his consciousness and physical body in an instant. Han Shuo's body suddenly turned stiff with his lightning speed abruptly slowed down.

However, Abra still could not evade in time!

Dong! Han Shuo's fist came pounding right in the center of the sword hilt of the icy crystal sword that Abra thrust out.

Energy which seemingly could topple mountains and overturn seas rushed towards sacred swordmaster Abra. All the fighting aura he used to resist was washed away in a split second. Only the frosty divine energy that came from the Ice Goddess barely withstood this vigorous force, which was wildly wrecking within his body as though a sword was stirring within.

A bleak, miserable howl, paired with a big mouthful of blood, forced their way out of Abra's mouth. He lost his balance. Just as he raised his head to look up at the sky, his body tilted to the back and started falling. He crashed against the rocky wall.

"Stop!" Ice Celestial Corey screamed as he charged over from below.

After the cold air currents entered his body, Han Shuo's speed continued to grow sluggish. But as Abra was very near to him, he still managed to land his attack.

Paying no mind to Ice Celestial Corey's shouting and charging, Han Shuo's right hand turned from a fist to a flat and straight palm, ruthlessly smacking Abra's heart.

"Abra! Run!" the two magi, who caught sight of the ordeal, again reminded him in a flurry.

Perhaps only Abra himself could see that there was no escape for him. Seeing the palm slamming towards his chest as fast as lightning, he exerted all his strength for a counterattack. He thrust his sword at Han Shuo's empty left hand, and clenched a fist with his left hand to throw at Han Shuo's palm that was slamming down.

Pow!

Like a peacock spreading its feathers, as Han Shuo's palm was about to make contact with Abra's punch, his fingernails dramatically grew to take the shape of Demonic Blades.

Before Abra could react, the Demonic Blades pierced through his fist with no difficulty, and continued their path through Abra's arm, finally piercing through his heart. Killed in one strike!

Drawing out his right hand drenched with blood, Han Shuo put on a callous grin. His smile was composed of three parts arrogance, one part calmness, and six parts ruthlessness.

Abra, whose heart was shattered, with his dread-filled eyes wide open, fresh blood spurting from his chest, collapsed to the ground.

It was only now that Ice Celestial Corey made over to him. Looking at the unfeeling grin on Han Shuo's face, Corey's heart sank and began to pound. However, he knew that if Han Shuo wasn't dead by today, the Shrine of Ice would never have another peaceful day. The shrine's prestige and solemnity would be destroyed sooner or later.

"Kill him! He must die!" Ice Celestial Corey demanded. He would spare no effort in making Han Shuo remain there forever.

Suddenly, Han Shuo who had just killed Abra, smilingly turned to Corey. With full composure, he moved towards the wall that Abra had been leaning against. Under Corey's gaze, the stone wall again inconceivably opened to reveal a tunnel, and Han Shuo calmly receded back into it.

Then, Han Shuo stood straight and tall in the tunnel inside the stone wall. Even as he directly faced Ice Celestial Corey who was about to mow him down, the smile on his face was as callous as before.

Ice Celestial Corey's injuries had yet to recover, his subordinates had yet to arrive at his side, and the two magi at the top were hardly prepared. The frightened Ice Celestial Corey suddenly slowed down his charging. Surprisingly, he dared not to directly confront Han Shuo.

In just two seconds, popping noises sounded from Han Shuo's body, and all the cold air currents that intruded his body was forced out using demonic arts.

"Hah, coward. Those cold streams were still in my body. You had your chance to kill me!" Han Shuo's body was no longer stiff. He grinned at Ice Celestial Corey and gave him a spiteful taunt.

When Han Shuo finished those words, Ice Celestial Corey's assistants arrived in successions, and the two magi at the top were finally fully ready.

Ice Celestial Corey's expression was ashen. Gnashing his teeth and shouting the word 'Kill', he finally took the lead and charged at Han Shuo.

It was exactly at this moment that Han Shuo took a step backward, and the wall in front of him again miraculously closed up. When Ice Celestial Corey closed the distance, all that was in front of him was a stone wall as smooth as a mirror, and Han Shuo was nowhere to be seen.

"Lord, my Lord, it won't do if we stay this way! If we continue exhausting time like this, the energy in the Ice Goddess' statue will all be gone!" when Ice Celestial Corey was again angrily cursing Han Shuo, one of the disciples finally voiced out to warn him.

Ice Celestial Corey suddenly felt enlightened as he recalled that within the statue of the Ice Goddess, that ugly creature was still hugging his test subject and sucking on its energy.

"Forget that filthy necromancer, finish that ugly thing first!" Ice Celestial Corey was shivering as he commanded his subordinates around him.

Ice Celestial Corey realized that he really had been driven mad by Han Shuo. It was only so that he would do something so unsensible. With his subordinate's reminder, Ice Celestial Corey was finally clear that he was being played by Han Shuo.

"As you wish, my Lord!" The disciples immediately put their hands to dealing with water elite zombie who was joyously absorbing energy inside the Ice Goddess statue.

Chapter 482: What in the World Are You?

Just as Ice Celestial Corey and his party turned a blind eye to Han Shuo and instead turned their attentions to getting rid of water elite zombie, Han Shuo, who had just hidden himself within the stone wall using metal elite zombie's energy, suddenly shot out like a sharp sword.

"Watch out!" This time it was Ice Celestial Corey that shouted.

The two magi who had been staying on the platform above the Ice Goddess statue suddenly felt an intense air of bloodlust assaulting their noses. A nauseating mist of vaporized blood instantly enveloped Han Shuo.

Knowing that Ice Celestial Corey finally saw the situation clearly after being reminded, Han Shuo realized that his evasive hit-and-run tactic had become useless. However, Han Shuo still wanted to buy more time for water elite zombie to absorb the energy. He wanted to intercept them at this crucial moment, even if that meant the risk of sustaining injuries.

Of the party, the two magi that stood motionless at the top were the weakest, and yet could pose the greatest threat to Han Shuo. Now that Han Shuo decided to confront them directly, the only target he could kill in the shortest amount of time was none other than these two magi.

Therefore, Han Shuo carried not the slightest hesitation. He suddenly shot out from within the stone wall, and deliberately displayed an imposing demeanor so that Ice Celestial Corey would know what he planned to do, and that he had better temporarily give up on attacking water elite zombie.

However, this time, Ice Celestial Corey paid no heed to Han Shuo. After loudly shouting a reminder, he continued on charging towards the Ice Goddess statue. It looked as if he had actually sobered up from his insanity, and realized that having one godly existence is much more important than having two sacred magi.

This went against Han Shuo's expectations. When the two magi hastily evacuated in fear, Han Shuo gave up on chasing after the two. His body, high up in the air, suddenly changed course. Carrying a cloud of blood formed by raging killing intent, he charged downwards at Ice Celestial Corey and the others.

As matters stood, Han Shuo had no choice but to fight head-on. He could no longer play hit-and-run guerrilla tactics or hide behind the stone walls.

When Corey raised his head and saw the blood cloud arriving from above, he immediately understood that it contained energy within it that could lay waste to all things. His look changed. The situation became clear to him at once. He suddenly brandished his sword at the blood cloud and shrieked, “Frost Nova!”

As though it had long been premeditated, right after Ice Celestial Corey’s shout of ‘Frost Nova’ sounded, cold lights shone magnificently in the eyes of the four sacred swordmasters beside him, and they brandished their swords to face the blood cloud’s attack. Ice Celestial Corey’s included, a total of five energies made of the mixture of fighting aura and divine energy granted by the Ice Goddess suddenly began converging at the blood cloud.

These five energies collided with each other within the blood cloud, which instantly produced a terrifying explosion of ice within the blood cloud. The ice explosion formed by the five energies was extremely violent, and completely covered the lump of blood cloud. It was simply too late for Han Shuo to escape. He sustained serious damage in the Ice Nova.

“Hahahah...” Corey howled with laughter, full of complacent.

‘Ice Nova’ was a secret technique of the Shrine of Ice. It was composed of a mixture of divine energy bestowed by the Ice Goddess and fighting aura. By colliding multiple of them together, it formed a large surface area ice blast. Those shrouded by the Ice Nova would be afflicted by terrifying icicles that possessed an unstoppable force.

After repeated rounds of defeat, Ice Celestial finally redeemed himself by using this secret technique. He was visibly delighted.

“Filthy necromancer. I want to see how you will escape this time,” Ice Celestial Corey cackled as he fixed his attention on the gradually dissipating blood cloud along with the four sacred swordmasters beside him.

The bombardment of Ice Nova had dissipated the killing intent in the blood cloud. Han Shuo's body slowly revealed itself from the blood cloud.

All they could see was that Han Shuo's body was riddled with thousands of holes. His body looked as though he had been stabbed with hundreds of thousands incorporeal arrows, big and small. His chest was split open into a big hole, and his internal organs were all out in the open.

Han Shuo's appearance now was even more unsightly than a malicious spirit, with not a patch of intact skin on his body. The shelling of 'Ice Nova' left his body in desolation, the most dire state it had ever been in.

Without a doubt, Han Shuo was heavily injured by the 'Ice Nova'. This secret technique of the Shrine of Ice, jointly deployed by one demigod expert and four sacred swordmasters, had injured Han Shuo gravely!

Soon, Han Shuo's body was completely exposed. All of a sudden, Ice Celestial Corey, who had been laughing his heart out, ceased to laugh anymore. The complacency on his face was replaced with shock and inconceivability as he stared at the morbid, mangled Han Shuo.

Han Shuo's body was riddled with holes. His internal organs were visible through the massive wounds. Yet, not a drop of blood flowed from them!

What was even more unimaginable to Corey was that the badly mangled flesh on Han Shuo's body was slowly wiggling, with each of the wounds healing at a speed visible to the naked eye!

The sight was surreal!

In all likelihood, anyone that had seen such an unearthly scene would have been just as appalled as Ice Celestial Corey and his men, stupefied and at a complete loss.

This reaction originated in the instinctive fear of the unknown!

"What, what in the world are you?" Ice Celestial Corey, who had long subconsciously harbored an intense wariness towards Han Shuo, finally could not constrain the fear in his heart, and cried out, his voice trembling. He looked anxiously at Han Shuo who was standing in midair with thousands of wounds from head to toe that were strangely free of any blood, but instead rapidly healing up.

Han Shuo forced a smile. He indeed suffered serious injuries from that Ice Nova. However, during the split second those icicles shot into his body, the extreme cold temporarily froze up his blood. This allowed Han Shuo, who possessed an abnormally valiant physical body, to contain his injuries within an extremely short amount of time.

With the circulation of demonic yuan, his muscle fibers absorbed and held onto all his blood. Therefore, after the frosty aura dispersed, not an ounce of blood left his system. Making use of his tenacious body, he rapidly healed up his wounds.

However, Han Shuo really had been injured! And his injuries were not insubstantial!

As his body had suffered such considerable damage, the whole restoration process of his physical body was going to consume an enormous amount of blood essence and demonic yuan. The rapid recovery process of Han Shuo's body, although inconceivably grotesque in Ice Celestial Corey's eyes, lost Han Shuo a lot of his firepower in battle.

However, this bitter smile on Han Shuo's sinister, hideous face that was still riddled with bloody cavities appeared to be a truly wicked smile that could make anyone numb to the scalp. In the eyes of Ice Celestial Corey and his party, that was absolutely the most terrifying scene they had ever seen in their lives.

Han Shuo noticed the trembling in Ice Celestial Corey's voice. The smile on Han Shuo's face left Corey and his party scared witless. Looking at the inconceivable Han Shuo, no matter how hard they tried, Ice Celestial Corey and his men couldn't make any mental association between Han Shuo and a human being.

Han Shuo seized the opportunity to rapidly heal the heavy wounds his body suffered and let out a laugh that oozes ruthlessness and savagery. He even took advantage of the situation and interpolated his laughter with Demonic Siren, a demonic skill that could cause one's heart to be misled.

As expected, the already gutless Ice Celestial Corey, under the effect of Han Shuo's Demonic Siren, grew more and more terrified. When he again looked at Han Shuo's hideous appearance, Han Shuo seemingly transformed into a demonic existence of ancient times, which unintentionally took a hit from him, ripping apart his everyday disguise, and revealing his demonic nomenon.

"Which, which plane of existence did you come from? The Shrine of Ice is a religion of the Ice Goddess. What, what do you want?" one of the four sacred swordmasters suddenly cried out in fear, frantically taking a step backwards. This was partially due to the effect of the Demonic Siren, while on the other it was also because they truly dreaded Han Shuo.

"Who, who the hell are you?" When he shouted, it seemed to serve as a reminder to the others, causing another sacred swordmaster to also cry out in fear.

Ice Celestial Corey, looking at Han Shuo, who was still seriously injured, seemed to have come to a sudden realization. Thinking back on the brilliant skills of Han Shuo's that he had never seen before, he seriously thought that Han Shuo was not an existence originating from Profound Continent at all. With that, the fear in his heart flourished even more. His eyes already started flickering, rapidly considering his escape routes.

"We, we are the messengers of the Ice Goddess. You, don't you mess around!" Finally, under the effect of the Demonic Siren, on top of Han Shuo's strange behavior, Ice Celestial Corey began babbling nonsense with a shiver in his voice.

At this moment, water elite zombie suddenly transmitted, "Father, I am done!"

Han Shuo, who was howling with laughter, turned his head down and saw that the naked young lady had dried out to a mummified state without any water content, and its former beauty was nowhere to be seen. The enormous statue of the Ice Goddess abruptly collapsed as water elite zombie communicated telepathically. Starting at its head, it crumbled and fell to ground.

“Hahaha... Hahaha...” Ice Celestial Corey and the others’ foolishness left Han Shuo unable to stop himself from laughing his head off. This time, the Demonic Siren wasn’t admixed.

“Boom!”

Above Han Shuo, metal elite zombie appeared out of nowhere and smashed his golden cudgel on the two birdbrained sacred magi, also scared witless by Han Shuo. They were reduced to meat patties.

“Screw it! Whichever plane of existence he came from, we will fight him to death!” When the Ice Goddess statue collapsed, Ice Celestial Corey once again went insane and charged recklessly into Han Shuo.

But at this moment, Han Shuo, his body inflicted with heavy damage, did not tangle any longer with the desperate Ice Celestial Corey. While still loudly laughing as before, he entered a tunnel that suddenly split open in the stonewall with water elite zombie, and calmly left the Shrine of Ice.

Chapter 483: I Just Want to Be Stronger

With metal elite zombie paving the way, splitting up solid rock to make a long and narrow tunnel, those tight security measures of the Shrine of Ice were rendered useless. Han Shuo and water elite zombie followed behind metal elite zombie, quickly escaping.

The statue of the Ice Goddess was key to Project God Making. Developed by numerous great masters of alchemy and chemistry, the Ice Goddess statue was where Ice Celestial Corey entrusted all his hopes and dreams. Her collapse was like the stab of a sharp sword right through Corey's heart, causing him unbearable pain.

Metal elite zombie transmitted a report to Han Shuo, informing him that the great masters who erected the statue of the Ice Goddess were all killed by him. After losing these great masters who had intensively studied the subject for many years, Ice Celestial Corey's God making project could no longer be reinstated.

Although Han Shuo's body was heavily damaged by 'Ice Nova', he managed to successfully intimidate Ice Celestial Corey and the others by exploiting their fears of him with the help of Demonic Siren. However, when Han Shuo saw that Ice Celestial Corey once again sank into madness because of the Ice Goddess statue's collapse, knowing that the maddened Corey would not be easy to handle, he had no better option but to leave.

Only after walking quite some distance in the tunnel away from the chamber did Han Shuo turn around to look at water elite zombie who had absorbed a tremendous amount of energy. When he looked, he was shocked albeit happy for water elite zombie's transformation.

He saw that the water elite zombie, after absorbing the icy water energy within the Ice Goddess statue, underwent an earth-shattering transformation from his ordinary appearance. His thick brows turned slender and curved, his nose bridge raised, and his rough, dry skin became moist and as smooth as water. Even his dry hair turned glossy. The ordinary-looking water elite zombie, after absorbing that energy, now seemed an elegant, handsome young man. And because of the energy in his body, this handsome young man even exuded a kind of beautifully bewitching quality!

A cloud of mist lingered around water elite zombie. Compared to his former self, the current water elite zombie was a world of difference in every way; appearance or demeanor.

What particularly shocked Han Shuo was – this transformation was still going on!

Han Shuo understood that the energy absorbed by water elite zombie was enormous, and the digestion process was not a short one. However, Han Shuo believed that once water elite zombie completely digested all that energy, he would bring Han Shuo even greater surprises.

“I shall send you back first. You need to quietly digest this energy!” After sensing the condition inside water elite zombie’s body, Han Shuo softly sang an incantation and sent water elite zombie back to the netherworld.

Soon after water elite zombie left, with metal elite zombie opening the path, they went back to the cliff they entered from located halfway up the mountain.

Standing outside the tunnel at the cliff, Han Shuo raised his head to gaze at the main peak covered with ice and snow. He said to himself, “Shrine of Ice, this is only the beginning of my vengeance!”

When he finished those words, Han Shuo sent metal elite zombie back to the netherworld. Given the injuries on his body, it was not wise for Han Shuo to stay there any longer. He found a suitable opportunity and flew away, turning into a streak of light as he beamed away from the snowfield of the Shrine of Ice.

Icicle City. Han Shuo lodged in a small and ordinary hotel.

For days, Han Shuo had locked himself up in his room night and day. During this time, he managed to stabilize the injuries on his physical body that he sustained at the Shrine of Ice.

This damage to Han Shuo's physical body required blood essence and demonic yuan to recover. This recovery process would not take much time at all. However, it would consume much of Han Shuo's blood essence and demonic yuan, which both required long periods of cultivation to accumulate to a sufficient amount. If too significant an amount was depleted, Han Shuo's strength would be harshly affected.

In just a short few days of time, Han Shuo's internals that were riddled with holes had all healed. Unfortunately, it also cost him quite a lot of blood essence and demonic yuan. After meditating for a few days, he somewhat regained his demonic yuan. But he had to take care not to use up too much blood essence in such short bursts.

It was only when Han Shuo's own injuries were stabilized that he recalled how Gilbert's soul was yet inside the Demonslayer Edge. The insides of the Demonslayer Edge was remotely a good place to be in. Any soul that entered the Demonslayer Edge would be corroded by it. Even though Han Shuo had specially vacated an area for Gilbert's soul, he still could not be kept inside for extended periods.

Han Shuo made use of certain materials currently available in his space ring. After spending another couple of days, he refined a Soul Depository Ring out of a translucent, shiny thumb ring. The main functionality of this Soul Depository Ring was to store souls.

In his room, he deployed a soundproofing magical boundary, and summoned a few wraths to guard outside the door. Only then did he withdraw the Demonslayer Edge.

With the Soul Depository Ring on his palm, Han Shuo slowly entered the Demonslayer Edge with his consciousness. The first thing he sensed was the main soul within the Demonslayer Edge fusing with the Crystal of Destruction. After that, based on his understanding of the interior of the Demonslayer Edge, he wandered about in the massive vault of souls within the Demonslayer Edge, seeking for Gilbert's aura that he was familiar with.

When sucking in Gilbert's soul into the Demonslayer Edge, Han Shuo spaced out a region within the Demonslayer Edge specifically to place Gilbert's soul. After Han Shuo's consciousness entered the Demonslayer Edge, he quickly found that region based on his familiarity with Gilbert.

Within the Demonslayer Edge, there were all kinds of souls in addition to a ton of negative energy. Some of this energy was strong and some was weak, but they all possessed extremely corrosive powers. Even if it was dark dragon Gilbert, if Han Shuo had not specially divides a region for him, his soul would have been subjected to the corrosion of this energy, and might have even fuse with them, turning into a mighty force aiding in Demonslayer Edge's evolution.

When he found Gilbert's soul, Han Shuo relaxed a little. He hastily wrapped up Gilbert's soul with his consciousness, so that Gilbert wouldn't receive any influence from all kinds of corrosive energy within the Demonslayer Edge, and carried Gilbert out from the Demonslayer Edge little by little.

Han Shuo's consciousness could clearly sense the delight from Gilbert's soul. Gilbert sensed the aura of his master, and was therefore so obedient. Without making the slightest resistance, he followed Han Shuo's consciousness and left the Demonslayer Edge.

A wisp of dim ghostly light suddenly drifted out from the sword hilt of the Demonslayer Edge. When that wisp light completely parted from the Demonslayer Edge, Han Shuo casted two spells, one on the Soul Depository Ring, and another on Gilbert's soul.

Suddenly, the ghostly light turned into a fine thread and entered the Soul Depository Ring. The thumb ring was suddenly flowing with a faint green and lush light. That fine thread constantly twisted and wrapped into itself within the thumb ring. After a short period of time, a hazy, indistinct shadow was formed.

"Master, master is that you?" a very soft sound like an ant talking came from the thumb ring. The Soul Depository Ring could not only hold onto souls, with Han Shuo's refining, it could even transmit the thoughts of those souls.

“Gilbert you scoundrel! How can you be so disobedient!” When the familiar voice of Gilbert’s sounded, Han Shuo’s heart filled with sorrow.

“Master! My great master! I’m so happy! I can see you again! This is incredible! Haha...” When he heard Han Shuo speaking, Gilbert shouted incoherently from the Soul Depository Ring. But as only his soul was present, even though his shouting was amplified by the ring, it still sounded as soft as an ant speaking.

The familiar voice of Gilbert’s immediately made Han Shuo once more recall those years they previously spent together. But at present, Han Shuo had a complete body and soul, Gilbert, however, possessed only his soul. If it weren’t for Han Shuo using extraordinary means to keep Gilbert’s soul, it would have slowly obscured between heaven and earth with time.

“Idiot! Enough, now shut up!” Han Shuo scolded him smilingly, his heart was nevertheless filled with warmth. Afterwards, when Gilbert stopped babbling in the thumb ring, Han Shuo sternly said, “Gilbert, in theory, you are dead. But I’ve used some special methods to preserve your soul.”

“Master, I understand,” Gilbert said after keeping silent for a while.

Suddenly, Gilbert seemed to have recalled something. The shadow in the thumb ring was rapidly moving. Gilbert anxiously asked, “Oh right master, what happened to my grandpa and the family of dark dragons? Did they manage to escape the vicious attack from the Shrine of Ice?”

“Be at ease. You grandpa and the dark dragons all broke free from the Jedefrost Cage. They should currently be in the dark dragon’s canyon. Besides, ...” Han Shuo knew what Gilbert was worried about. Therefore, he explained once through what happened after his soul entered the Demonslayer Edge.

“Wahaha... nice one, master! Kill everyone from the Shrine of Ice for me! Humph, if it weren’t for the fact that I’m now dead, I would have made them pay the price, and killed each and everyone in the Shrine of Ice!” dark dragon Gilbert shouted.

“Gilbert, the reason I put you in this Soul Depository Ring and communicate with you is to give you a choice. With your soul now, I have two ways of making you reappear in this world. One is to use necromancy magic and turn you into a bone dragon. Another is to use demonic arts and refine you into a demon general. I'm now letting you make your own choice!" explained Han Shuo.

"What's the difference?" Gilbert asked.

"If you choose bone dragon, you will only have a skeleton, but can still be considered as a dragon. But if you choose demon general, you won't be a dragon anymore," Han Shuo continued.

"Erm... Which one is stronger?" Gilbert asked once again.

"I think, demon general might be stronger!" Han Shuo replied.

"Demon general then. I just want to be stronger!" Gilbert answered resolutely.

Chapter 484: Running into Sophie

Kasi Empire, Ciro City.

Ciro was the capital city of Kasi Empire, with a population size ranging in the millions. It was a big city that enjoyed a great reputation. Ciro City possessed beautiful landscapes and represented the unique cultures of Kasi Empire. At the same time, it was a city that promoted martial spirit.

Every three years, a large-scale auction sale would be held at Ciro city center. Over at the auction sale, one could buy truly rare and precious treasures. Everytime it was held, it never failed to attract all of the city bigwigs. So much so that even certain wealthy figures from surrounding countries would travel long distances to attend the sale.

During past auctions at Ciro City, not only did all sorts of treasures frequently make appearances, even divine weapons showed up twice. Divine weapon 'Starry Sky', which was currently in Phoebe's possession after it was obtained from Celt, had previously appeared at such an auction. It was repeatedly resold before Celt managed to acquire it.

This festival was a true spectacle. Other than just auction sales, there would also be all kinds of unusual items up for sale. Those who knew what was what could always be sure to walk away with whatever goods they desired.

Everytime such a large-scale auction sale was held, it attracted people from all walks of life, and this time was no exception. Even when Han Shuo heard about the grand occasion of the auction from Icicle City, he spent three thousands gold coins, and, through some illicit methods, managed to use the magical transportation array there to travel to Ciro City.

Han Shuo, whose injuries had yet to fully recover, on one hand, needed not only some materials to forge Gilbert's body, but also to ask about the recent situation over at Lancelot Empire. That was why he came to the capital city of Kasi Empire, Ciro City.

Compared to Ciro City, Icicle City was just a small town along the borders of Kasi Empire. Dark Mantle footholds had yet to extend to this area. Therefore, in order to get accurate information about the Lancelot Empire, Han Shuo had to make a trip to a city of great significance to the empire, such as Ciro City.

The previous day, soon after Han Shuo arrived at Ciro City, he managed to get in touch with Dark Mantle members in Ciro City, and through their messages, he found out about the current situation in Lancelot Empire.

Just as Jack the little fatty said it would, Brettel City operated as usual then even without his presence. During this period, the army of Brettel City commanded by Dorcas, in addition to elite troops dispatched by King Lawrence of Lancelot Empire, officially launched military operations against the seven grand duchies.

Dorcas' outstanding talent, alongside the full backing of the empire, was a deadly combination.

In just the short span of a little more than a month, under Dorcas' command of an incomparably valiant army, and the seven grand duchies in the dark, they easily occupied the Bavenden Duchy. Then, with Bavenden Duchy as their military base, they successfully crushed the hastily united army of Bonton Duchy and Etman Duchy.

As Bavenden Duchy was located far from Brettel City, and Dorcas gave no warning before attacking, Bavenden Duchy had never expected that the Lancelot Empire would first go after the further duchy instead of the closer ones, and go far afield to take them down first. Caught off guard, they were in no condition to organize any effective resistance. In just one week's time, the military force of Bavenden Duchy was swept away, with Grand Duke Alec Ambridge killed in action.

Bonton Duchy and Etman Duchy in the surrounding areas, upon learning of the situation, immediately formed an alliance to resist, but nevertheless suffered a big defeat in their very first battle. And now, while the two duchies held fast to their city gates, they began making contact with the other few duchies at all costs, intending to join forces to deal with Lancelot Empire's ferocious invasion.

Of the remaining four duchies, Helen's Helon Duchy and Burt Zili's Boulet Duchy were effectively allied with Han Shuo. After Nehem Beige was killed by Han Shuo, Bisli Duchy sank into a great mess, and suffered disastrous damages under Burt Zili's attack. They wouldn't be able to put up any measurable resistance.

All that remained was Benedict Sackville's Narsen Duchy, which could be considered as having some military capability. However, with Helen and Burt Zili causing mischief in the dark, Han Shuo could be almost certain that this time, Benedict Sackville would not be able to escape from misfortune.

After Han Shuo learned of the circumstances and progress made in the assault against the seven grand duchies, he truly put down the rock in his heart. With the full support of Lancelot Empire, without Stratholme the old monster's hinderance, and with Helon Duchy and Boulet Duchy secretly assisting, this time, there would be no escape for the seven grand duchies.

Everything remained unchanged in Brettel City, and it became the supplier of weapons and foodstuffs to fuel Dorcas' war machine. When Dorcas prevailed over the enemy, he would utilize the powers in Brettel City to seize that country's resources and regime, simultaneously containing the situation and effectively administering the territory.

The situation was absolutely fantastic. This was the moment that Lancelot Empire would begin soaring.

While Lancelot Empire was carefreely invading, the Brut Merchant Alliance, however, was very much in a headache. As for lightning sacred magus Reynold, the late protector of Brut Merchant Alliance, his death brought the union losses beyond measure. What caused even greater headache for the Brut Merchant Alliance were the magical beasts flooding in from Tarrag Canyon. These beasts caused havoc in the cities surrounding Tarrag Canyon, destroying everything in their paths and attacking every human in sight.

The Brut Merchant Alliance was a nation constituted of multiple major merchant guilds. Visiting and returning from all sorts of regions and countries, conducting commerce activities with them, those were the channels through which they reaped huge amount of profits. However, as magical beasts roamed throughout the land, all those merchants had no choice but to stay home. This caused insurmountable losses for the Brut Merchant Alliance, a country that relied mainly on trade.

Therefore, although the Brut Merchant Alliance was aware that the Lancelot Empire was infringing upon the seven grand duchies like wildfire and enjoying the spoils of war to the fullest, due to domestic disorder, they were fully occupied and had no time to deal with other matters. All they could do was to helplessly look on as Lancelot Empire constantly expanded its territory.

Han Shuo understood that the problems Brut Merchant Alliance would be confronted with weren't merely so. For the time being, those of the Soul Race inside Tarrag Canyon had yet to make a move. But this was likely because their six-horned tribal king was injured during the battle with the Saintess of the Church of Light. Once this six-horned tribal king recovered, the Brut Merchant Alliance would undoubtedly weep at least a few tears.

Standing on a harmonious street, Han Shuo stopped contemplating and carried on examining vendors' booths for goods that fit his needs.

It must be said that this so-called auction sale indeed owned a well-deserved reputation. Before the real auction sale had even started, among the various kinds of materials in the market, Han Shuo had procured two worthy items.

Weeping Wood. A close look at this wood revealed grain patterns that looked like tear stains. By grinding the wood into fine sawdust and then refining it with a few medicinal herbs, he could manufacture medicinal pellets that pacify the heart.

Vermiculite. When refining certain magical weapons that needed to be pliable but tough, Vermiculite could be utilized for constructing a weapon that possessed extreme toughness. In reforging Gilbert's body, this would have the same effect as well. If Gilbert's bones were mixed with Vermiculite, his bones would become tougher and more durable.

Those were the two things Han Shuo got hold of in that morning. Vermiculite would prove especially useful for Gilbert.

If Gilbert had chosen bone dragon as the way to reborn, Han Shuo wouldn't have needed to spend as much time and effort. Placing Gilbert's soul into the netherworld and helping him reconstruct his skeleton with bones would suffice. However, since Gilbert had chosen to be a devil, Han Shuo had to spend a lot more energy. With his original skeleton as the foundation, he had to throw in all kinds of rare and precious materials to assemble him a new body.

As Han Shuo felt guilty for Gilbert, he made a firm resolution to make it up to Gilbert by forging his new body perfectly. That was why he went over there to gather these uncommon materials. He wanted to forge a body that would not only give him strength and energy, but also possess a demonic body with unlimited possibilities in his evolution.

"Huh? What's this? Can I have a look?" Walking down the street, Han Shuo constantly looked in all directions, seeking materials suitable for Gilbert. At that moment, he saw a deep black, unreflective stone the size of palm. From his consciousness, he felt faint traces of bizarre energy, and therefore inquired.

At the helm of the stand was an aged woman. She looked on dreamily at the traffic of people walking past. When she heard Han Shuo's inquiry, her attention immediately fell onto Han Shuo. From his outstanding physique, combined with his out of ordinary clothing, at first glance, she could tell that Han Shuo was liberal with his money. Especially seeing the space ring on his hand, which further testified to his wealth.

"Of course!" The old woman put on a fawning smile, and took the initiative to respectfully hand the stone to Han Shuo.

Holding onto the stone the size of a palm, his demonic yuan and consciousness entered the stone at the same time. After a round of analyzing with his eyes squinted, his eyes suddenly shone. Looking at the old woman with all smiles, he asked, “Ma’am, how much is this?”

“That, my grandpa accidentally obtained that thing. It’s been quite a long time. Since you want it, five gold coins then,” the old woman answered after thinking for a while.

Pa! A bag of gold coins flung out from Han Shuo’s hand, and he bluntly said, “Here’s one hundred gold coins. I’m taking this!”

“Thank you, thank you!” The old woman was pleasantly surprised and quickly grabbed onto that bag of gold coins. Looking left and right, seeing that no one was watching, she hurriedly put away this bag of gold coins, closed up her stand, and left.

She had absolutely no idea of what use that stone was. The price of five gold coins was just a number she made up in her mind. One hundred gold coins was definitely a huge amount for her. It was for the fear that Han Shuo might renege on the deal that she so pressingly left.

Holding the Yuan Storage Stone, Han Shuo’s was rather satisfied. He carried on looking in all directions strolling randomly.

Suddenly, Han Shuo was startled, and looked ahead somewhat astonished.

He saw that a youthful, beautiful young lady, wearing a faint, tranquil smile, was looking around full of zest in front of a vendor’s booth. Shockingly, it was precisely the same beautiful young lady that went through the misfortune with him in Dark Forest – Sophie!

Chapter 485: The Grand Disintegrator

A few years earlier at the Dark Forest, Han Shuo, Sophie, and fire grand magus Marceau of Brut Merchant Alliance joined forces to explore the place of extreme fire. However, when trouble came, Marceau blatantly abandoned them. But in the end, with Han Shuo and Sophie working as one, they managed to get away from the danger.

Sophie was of Kasi Empire nationality. Her father, Sulo, was a renowned sacred knight of Kasi Empire. Han Shuo had already known this from the start.

Who would have imagined that after so many years, Han Shuo would so coincidentally bump into Sophie the first time he visited Kasi Empire. Back then, before Han Shuo and Sophie parted ways at the Dark Forest, Sophie urged Han Shuo to look for her if he ever visited Kasi Empire.

Separated by seven or eight meters, staring at the beautiful Sophie, observing her as she picked out tiny, delicate ornaments full of zest, Han Shuo could not contain himself from laughing. All along this seemingly endless street, all sorts of items were up for sale. There was no lack of genuinely priceless trinkets. Regardless, Sophie was not in the least interested in exquisite war machines, but lingered over at a booth selling small ornaments.

It seemed that every woman had an innate desire to look beautiful. This sort of ornament that was garish and delicate but had no practical use whatsoever, unexpectedly, triggered tremendous temptation in Sophie.

A few years had gone by in the blink of an eye. The already beautiful and moving Sophie, like a bud blooming into a flower, looked more beautiful than ever.

Gazing at this beauty from a distance, Han Shuo did not advance forward to meet her although he desired to. Of this beautiful young lady, Han Shuo held a pretty good impression. Previously at the place of extreme fire, the grand fire magus wanted to entrap Han Shuo, but was stopped by this kind-hearted lass.

This time at Kasi Empire, the things Han Shuo had done at the Shrine of Ice would have made him a public enemy to the entire Kasi Empire. Once Han Shuo and Sophie intersected, it could very possibly spell trouble for Sophie. Although Sophie's father was a sacred knight of great influence on Kasi Empire, he was nowhere close when compared to the Shrine of Ice, whether in terms of strength or influence.

Therefore, Han Shuo only looked at Sophie for a short while before he silently left. He deliberately took a detour to make some distance with Sophie before carrying on his shopping at this harmonious street, continuing to seek material suitable for refining Gilbert's body.

That Yuan Storage Stone that Han Shuo previously obtained from the old woman was very useful for demonic arts cultivators. As the name implies, the Yuan Storage Stone could store yuan essence and demonic yuan. Among its uses was refining certain extraordinary magical weapons. It could improve a weapon's tolerance to demonic yuan, in addition to speeding up the circulation of demonic yuan inside the weapon.

When reforging Gilbert's body, as long as this Yuan Storage Stone completely integrated into the skeleton, it would be of great service to Gilbert in making rapid progress in the future. Exchanged with merely one hundred gold coins was simply a steal.

It was precisely because in just one morning Han Shuo had obtained three different uncommon goods that he was rather looking forward to this auction sale at Kasi Empire. With exuberant energy, Han Shuo did not pause to rest at all. After evading Sophie, he continued looking for things that suited him.

Possessing a consciousness with wonderful sensory power, on top of his discerning eyes, this time, Han Shuo really reaped a considerably plentiful harvest. In the afternoon, he successively obtained seven or eight exotic materials that could be mixed into the body and skeleton. It was not until dusk when the vendors began to close for the day that Han Shuo reluctantly left the area.

Tomorrow, the action sale would officially begin. Compared to goods sold at those booths, the auction sale that went on three day in a row were the real deal. The items exhibited at the auction sale were, every last one of them, precious treasures that had been authenticated. Some invaluable and unique treasures would also make appearances rather frequently.

After returning to the small hotel where he currently stayed, Han Shuo closed the door, laid out a soundproofing and an early warning magical formation. He then took out the Soul Depository Ring and began communicating with Gilbert's soul.

Throughout the past several days, Han Shuo had become accustomed to talking nonsense with Gilbert. Inside the Soul Depository Ring, dark dragon Gilbert was extremely bored. All day long he would worry if his new physical body would cause him to lose certain capabilities and appetite for males. Even with Han Shuo assuring him in every way possible, his concerns remained undiminished.

Gilbert's physical body had been destroyed. But even with just his soul left, those vile practices of dark dragons nevertheless remained deeply-rooted. It seemed that as long as his soul didn't perish, dark dragon Gilbert's nature was unlikely to change much.

"Don't worry, I will look for the rarest and most precious materials, with your original skeleton as the foundation, and a human body structure as the standard, reconstruct you a body to your satisfaction. This body will be even mightier than the body of dark dragons, and possesses unlimited possibilities in evolving. Those desires and sexual ability you so worried about will only get stronger, and you definitely will not turn into a court eunuch," Han Shuo got a headache from Gilbert's clamoring and had to again reassure him.

"That truly is fantastic. Luckily I did not choose bone dragon. A dragon with only bones but without that organ, that would rid me a lot of pleasure!" dark dragon Gilbert was churning inside the Soul Depository Ring as he shouted in excitement.

"Alright. You better behave yourself. Thoroughly comprehend those memories I gave you. It is a martial skill to make your soul even stronger.

You better spend more effort on that,” Han Shuo exhorted.

There were all kinds of secret martial techniques in the school of demonic arts. There were even secret techniques that specifically tempered one’s soul. As long as dark dragon Gilbert cultivated in accordance to that secret technique, his soul would grow stronger and stronger. When he attained a certain amount of strength, he could appear in front of Han Shuo without using the Soul Depository Ring. Moreover, his soul would not gradually dissipate between heaven and earth as time passed.

Certain malicious spirits in the world, under some extraordinary circumstances, came to master similar techniques. It was only so that their souls didn’t disperse away with each day that passed but slowly strengthened instead. Then, up to a certain point, they could even wrest control of a human’s body, and be reborn into the world.

The technique that Han Shuo passed onto dark dragon Gilbert was precisely a technique found in demonic arts to refine ferocious spirits. Any ordinary soul, so long as they were willing to make painstaking efforts to cultivate, was capable of becoming a dreadful, ferocious spirit, and being free from the constraints of the laws of nature. Dark dragon Gilbert already possessed an exceedingly strong soul to begin with. As long as he practiced according to Han Shuo’s method, he would not need too much time before he could completely break away from the Soul Depository Ring. It would also continue to be extremely beneficial to him even after his soul had re-attached to his reforged physical body.

“Master, how you know so much about this random stuff? I have never ever heard of such martial arts for cultivating the soul. How did you come to learn of these?” After cultivating for a few days, Gilbert recognized just how effective the technique was as his soul grew more and more tenacious. In the beginning, after just few minutes of talking with Han Shuo, his soul would be drained of energy. But after cultivating this technique for a few days, he could persistently talk with Han Shuo for more than an hour.

“What for do you ask so much? Practice well. After some time, when you have a new body, you will know what benefits it has!” Han Shuo lectured.

“Alright, alright! You are so annoying!” Gilbert replied in a petulant manner, and only then, he unwillingly stopped talking. He quieted down in the Soul Depository Ring, and slowly tempered his soul.

When Gilbert finally stopped talking, Han Shuo slowly sank into contemplation. During this period, Han Shuo did not continue to cultivate in demonic arts. Having reached Carnal Realm, Han Shuo did not deliberately compel himself to advance further into demonic arts, but let it go with the flow.

On the contrary, with regards to necromancy magic, Han Shuo did spend some effort. Of the three boundaries – fear, weakness, and aging – Han Shuo had mastered two, fear and weakness. In certain large-scale battles, these two boundaries could substantially weaken the enemy’s fighting strength, and could serve as a game-changer and situation reverser.

It was only the most mysterious and most miraculous Boundary of Aging that was truly beyond Han Shuo’s capacity for the time being. With no clue on how to set about and unable to grasp the solution, he did not continue on a wild goose chase, not squandering too much energy on studying this boundary. Rather, he spent time trying to master the last magic in the level of necromancy grand magus – the Grand Disintegrator.

This necromancy magic called Grand Disintegrator was the trademark magic of necromancers. It was also an extremely devastating magic. As the name implies, the Grand Disintegrator could disintegrate the enemy’s body. Any expert on the receiving end would split up into pieces and die in no time.

The only problem was that such terrifying magic was equally difficult to be executed. Even if successfully done, the Grand Disintegrator required a certain probability to unleash that kind of power. Even for necromancers exceedingly proficient in this magic, of five Grand Disintegrator spells released in a row, only one would be a success.

For some necromancers who did not have a deep understanding of the essence of necromancy, their probabilities were even lower. Some would only pull off one in ten shots. There were also variations to the destructive power released in the Grand Disintegrator. On the high end, the receiver could be instantly killed. On the lower end, it would only leave cuts on the opponent's body like sharp weapons being traced across.

It was during the two previous days when Han Shuo was recuperating from his injuries that he truly figured out the magic, although he had yet to become extremely proficient in it. Now that Gilbert stopped being so wordy, Han Shuo continued on studying this trademark magic of necromancers, in addition to reckoning when he should experiment the spell on a living person.

Unwittingly, yet another night had passed. Starting early in the morning, boisterous clamoring came from outside of the hotel. Today was the first day of the auction sale. Han Shuo stopped his studying early on and hurried to the scene, hoping to obtain an even greater harvest today.

Chapter 486: Being Pursued

Han Shuo started the day by loitering about a dazzling lineup of booths selling all kinds of odds and ends. Luck seemed to be on his side. In just a short stroll, he had gotten his hands on two chunks of clay rocks.

As the sun gradually rose high up above the sky, the nobles appeared more and more frequently along the street. They wore luxurious clothing and travelled on either tall horses or chariots. They did not stop over at the bustling street, but headed directly towards the auction place.

All thanks to the appearance of these characters, the originally congested street was cleared an empty path by a large body of knights specifically dispatched by the city defense troops of Kasi Empire. On Profound Continent, the nobilities always got to enjoy certain privileges. Those who could gain entrance into the auction place were definitely very wealthy and high-born. Naturally, Kasi Empire would treat these characters with special care.

Those commoners, abjected swordsmans, struggling merchants, poverty-stricken mages, they could only stand on the two sides of the street. While looking on with envy at those with their heads high and chests puffed as they headed towards the auction place under the protection of knights, they spontaneously stepped aside to make a clear path, lest they be an obstruct and make a rod for their own back.

One after another, sumptuous carriages passed by in the most pompous manner. There were even delicate drawings and coats of arms representing the passengers' identities on those carriages.

There were all too many pedestrians on the street. And now, having to make way for these nobilities, pedestrians were shoulder to shoulder with each other. With that, the unavoidable bumping into each other further added to the already clamorous noises.

Standing among the crowd, at this moment, Han Shuo couldn't help but furrow his brows. Stuck in the sardine can crowd, Han Shuo was unable to move an inch. At such a place as an outlander, as not to risk committing taboos and offend the locals, Han Shuo did not take off to the air to get ahead, as he usually would. It was also discourteous to shove people aside with brute force. All Han Shuo could do was blend in and wait it out.

But the good thing was that Han Shuo was tall, with wide shoulders. Standing amongst the crowd, he naturally appeared way above the common, manifestly superior. When Han Shuo creased his brows, that imposing demeanor was inadvertently divulged. If it wasn't for the fact that they had no other ground to step on, those around Han Shuo would never draw so close to him.

"Eh? Miss Sophie! That's Miss Sophie!" a cry of surprise suddenly sounded from among the crowd.

"That can't be her. I've met that beautiful lady right here just the day before yesterday. She bought a pendant at my stall, and even haggled half a day with me for two gold coins! How could that be Miss Sophie? Are you mistaken?" a stall owner standing beside the first person exclaimed his disbelief.

"Don't be silly, this lady rides on a white pegasus, and looks like a damn angel, who else could it be other than Miss Sophie? Ha, you must have had her confused for someone else. A lady like that would never haggle half the day over two gold coins!" the other person replied disdainfully.

Rounds and rounds of discussions about Sophie sounded again and again. Many of the remarks about Sophie fell into Han Shuo's ears incidentally. From the discussions of those people surrounding him, Han Shuo discovered that Sophie had an enormous reputation in Kasi Empire. And it was not simply because her father was a sacred knight.

At such a young age, Sophie was already a sky rider, merely one rank below that of her father Sulo, a sacred knight. On top of that, Sophie was a summoner. Her strength was enigmatic and unpredictable to say the least. Other than being outstandingly gifted, what was most attractive about Sophie was her kind heart and amiable, approachable personality. There was no lack of hearsays about her helping those impoverished and in need.

In the hearts of the people of Kasi Empire, the pure and honest Sophie was simply the ideal woman. Especially in the hearts of many young ones, Sophie was without doubt their goddess.

Standing in the middle of all the clamor, Han Shuo passively received countless positive news about Sophie. Han Shuo, who already had a pretty good impression of Sophie in the first place, felt somewhat touched in his heart as he gazed afar at Sophie slowly moving forward on her spotlessly white pegasus.

Han Shuo had already seen Sophie yesterday along the congested street. Compared to her distanced style today, Han Shuo much preferred her amicable manner of yesterday.

Riding on a hercules, Sophie wore a faint smile on her face. However, when she recalled of the person inside the carriage beside her, she could not contain a sigh. Even thoughts grumbling about her father somehow crossed her mind.

The curtain was lifted open from the inside of the carriage moving alongside Sophie, revealing a handsome young face. When this young man foolishly looked at Sophie, the fervent heat in his gaze was hardly concealed. Although he did not utter a word, any fool could make out the intense desire to possess from his eyes.

“Fifi, the reason I’m going to the auction sale this time, is to look for a treasure that fits you,” the young man looking at Sophie with all smiles, leaning out from the carriage, said in the corniest manner.

Sophie reluctantly put on a smile and replied, “No, no need. You know, I’m not interested in those things!”

“How will that do! My House of Pillon is of royal blood. Your father has already agreed to our marriage. As the wife of I, Braque, you shall be the most beautiful, most graceful, and most magnificent woman. There must be treasure adorned on you!” Braque said decisively.

These words of Broque’s gave Sophie a great headache. Braque was the son of Prince Bradley Pillon, and the nephew of His Majesty the King, Brady Pillon. The Pillon royal family was the de facto ruler of Kasi Empire.

Sophie's father, Sulo, without first asking for her consent, formally agreed to the marriage. This put Sophie at her wit's end.

Braque, son of Prince Bradley Pillon, could still be considered a clean character in the nobility of Kasi Empire. There weren't too many negative rumors spreading around in recent years. The eloquent Braque was a rising star in the political arena of Kasi Empire. By means of his Pillon royal family and its influences, he rose higher and higher in his career. He was truly on a roll in Kasi Empire.

Sulo agreed to the marriage proposal. It did not matter if Sophie was willing or not. In this world where men made the rules, Sophie was already considered to be Braque's fiancée. Having been indoctrinated with etiquette since she was young, Sophie could not bring herself to display any behaviour that would be deemed impolite in formal settings. Even this time, unable to defy her father's instruction, she reluctantly agreed to appear in public with Braque.

Listening to Braque jabbering on and on about his unfettered imagination of their future, Sophie's heart sank deeper and deeper. As a sky rider with extraordinary strength, Sophie had not even a mildly favorable impression of Braque, an aristocrat who was no good at magic, and did not practice martial arts, but whom had a growing hunger for political power.

If it weren't for the Pillon royal family being extremely powerful, if not for her father's forcing, Sophie would still be happily shopping the booths on the bustling street, instead of serving as Braque's prop, accompanying him to that auction place where the elite gathered.

In her heart, Sophie was incredibly distressed. She simply closed her ears to Braque chattering beside her. Riding on her pegasus, she wore a peaceful, faint smile. Her gaze swept aimlessly across the packed crowd, trying to alleviate the loathing chatter in her ears by putting her attention on other things around her.

All of a sudden, a tall, upright silhouette fell into Sophie's line of sight. Among the crowd of people standing at roughly 1.7 meters tall, Han Shuo's

1.9 meter tall magnificent physique was a crane in a flock of chickens. Besides, in the overcrowded stream of people, it appeared rather spacious around him, which further attracted the attention of onlookers.

At first, Sophie only randomly shot a glance. From her point of view, she could only see Han Shuo's lateral side. However, the distinct outline of Han Shuo's half-face gave Sophie a familiar feeling. Her curiosity had gotten the better of her when she began to carefully observe Han Shuo, and the sense of familiarity only grew from there.

As she slowly strode forward on her pegasus, Sophie's view of Han Shuo gradually changed. By the time she could clearly see Han Shuo's face, Sophie could not help but cover her mouth and cry out in surprise. Her eyes overflowed with a look of fondness. At this moment, Han Shuo, who had been looking in all directions and using his consciousness to look for goods, suddenly felt a gaze firmly locked on him. Han Shuo creased his brows, and instinctively turned to look towards its source. He immediately saw Sophie's pleasantly surprised eyes and her beautiful appearance.

He took a shock and came to his senses. He recalled that because of his height, he would appear rather unusual in such a crowd of people. As not to bring about trouble for Sophie, Han Shuo gave up on searching this area for materials that could refine Gilbert, hurriedly turned around, forced others aside and left.

With a push of his shoulders, all those strangers leaning close to him were knocked off balance one after another. For a moment, profanities filled the air. However, when they saw that imposing silhouette, they shut their mouths at once.

Sophie, staring fixedly from a distance, when she saw Han Shuo hurriedly departing, immediately let out a cry. Her slender, lily-white hand gently patted the white pegasus atop which she sat before pointing in the direction Han Shuo was leaving.

The pure white pegasus which deliberately flew in low altitudes, sensing the eagerness of its master, immediately spread its wings and soared in accordance with the command received, searching for Han Shuo from above the sky.

“Huh? Miss Sophie, What, what’s the matter?” a middle aged knight ahead of Braque queried.

Braque, who had been staring fixedly at Sophie, suddenly found that his target was becoming further and further from himself. He too spontaneously raised his head at Sophie and shouted, “Where are you going? What’s the matter with you?”

“I’m sorry, Braque. I suddenly met a friend I have not seen for many years!” Riding on a pegasus in the air, Sophie smiled apologetically at Braque before again extending her hand to pat the shoulder of her pegasus.

Whoosh! Under Sophie’s instructions, the pegasus had identified the direction and chased after Han Shuo a distance away.<

Chapter 487: Mischievous Sophie

Han Shuo was very clear about the footing the Shrine of Ice had in Kasi Empire, and therefore he was most unwilling to bring Sophie any unnecessary troubles. Even though her father was a sacred knight, once implicated with Han Shuo, the probability of things ending well for her was slim.

The only thing that Han Shuo did not quite anticipate was that Sophie would actually chase after him in the eyes of the public. Seeing Sophie charge at him on her pegasus, Han Shuo was between laughter and tears.

“Hey! That’s Miss Sophie!” The people always loved noise and excitement. As onlookers raised their heads one after another and saw the beautiful Sophie soaring over their heads on a pegasus, a huge commotion erupted.

They looked ahead in the direction Sophie was flying. Han Shuo’s rapidly departing figure immediately gathered the attention of the crowd. The pleasant surprise on Sophie’s face made it apparent that Han Shuo was running away not because he had done something bad. The scene of Han Shuo, who was exceptionally well-dressed, escaping with a bitter smile, with Sophie happily pursuing, could definitely bring about countless wild and fanciful thoughts. Consequently, the crowd got perhaps the wrong impression.

Could it be that this man was, in fact, the one that the beautiful Sophie actually fancied?

Momentarily, such a conjecture somehow arose in the minds of many as the scene played out. They then turned to look at the son of the prince, Braque, and saw that he was anxiously reproaching from where he stood. Every commoner in sight seemed to take pleasure in Braque’s misfortune, and began discussing in whispers without the slightest scruple while exchanging meaningful glances.

“Ha. Interesting. It seems that Miss Sophie already had a sweetheart.”

“Yah yah. It appears that Braque is showering affection on an uninterested party. I had long heard that it was a one-sided relationship. He made oldman Sulo agree to the marriage by exploiting his father's influences. Now it seems that this was indeed the case."

"That's right. Those amiable and approachable nobles like Miss Sophie are true nobles. Although Braque's family is wealthy, he pursues fame and profit a little too much to be a suitable match for Miss Sophie."

From time to time, such a conversation would ensue from among the crowd of people jam-packed on the clamorous street. One after another, these people who rejoiced in Braque's misfortune would cast looks of despise at Braque's luxurious carriage, as though mocking Braque for his inaptness.

"Damn it! What is the background of that asshole? Sophie is such a honorable character, how could she get acquainted with somebody muddled with those peasants?!" Braque saw Han Shuo's back distantly from inside his carriage. His ears unintentionally picked up a certain remarks that infuriated him, filling him with fury.

"Young master, never have I ever seen or heard of that man before. I believe that this was just an excuse Miss Sophie made up to keep away, young master. She wasn't willing to go to the auction sale with you and therefore did this on purpose!" a knight beside the carriage said in a low voice.

Suddenly, a cry of amazement sounded from afar, "Lift off! He lifted off! Damn, that's fast!"

Braque was shocked and immediately gazed into the distance. He saw Han Shuo's outstanding body take off to the sky, leaving behind a streak of fine thread as he rapidly flew away. Behind Han Shuo, Sophie tightly pursued him on her spotlessly white pegasus. Her silhouette transformed into a white dot, and finally faded away completely from sight.

"Now that was impressive! He must be a honorable magus. Perhaps even a grand magus! No wonder, no wonder Miss Sophie would do such a thing. Ha, only such a young, outstandingly talented magus would be deserving of Miss Sophie."

“That’s right. Definitely a talented but modest chap! Oh yes, he is definitely a amiable nobleman just like Miss Sophie. He even bought a rock from me just a moment ago. Ha, only such a character could match Miss Sophie.”

Sitting inside his carriage, Braque was, at first, only somewhat angry. But when Han Shuo streaked across the sky, Braque became truly furious. Immediately, in a deep voice, he said to the knight beside him, “Thuram, get to the bottom of who the hell this guy is!”

“Understood, young master!” Thuram knew what it meant for a person with the ability to fly. As a servant, he was well-versed with what he had to do next given the emergence of this character who could threaten Braque.

Han Shuo incessantly cried and laughed in his heart as he sped away using the Art of the Demonic Ninth Heavens. He was absolutely unwilling to let Sophie catch him and land herself in trouble. Otherwise, not only would Sophie be at stake, but her entire family could possibly be exterminated because of him. Who would have imagined that this woman would be so insistent. Even as she clearly saw Han Shuo avoiding her, she went as far as to actively chase after him. Han Shuo would have never expected such a thing.

With one running and another pursuing, very soon, the two came to a fairly remote block. Seeing that there was no one around, Han Shuo intended to deploy his demonic arts to the fullest to shake Sophie off. But all of a sudden, he heard a shout with pauses in between gasping for breath, saying, “Han! You stop right now!”

Han Shuo was bemused. Seeing that he could not shake Sophie off, he decided to explain the situation to her instead. Looking left and right, he weaved through the deserted streets at a moderate speed. After a short while, he lead Sophie, who was vigorously running after him, to a silent, spacious public square.

Han Shuo finally stopped, and stood still on a stone step in the square. He turned around to look at Sophie who had chased him all the way here, forced a smile and said, “It’s been a while!”

“You, why are you avoiding me?” Sophie’s pegasus gently touched down. She looked at Han Shuo, confused. Her tone exuded a sense of grief.

“I don’t want to cause you any trouble. You have been living fine and well here in Kasi Empire. But if you were to be implicated with me, you and your family will suffer.” For the fear that Sophie would persevere and continue her vigorous chasing, Han Shuo explained to her in a stern and deep voice.

When Han Shuo said those words, there was no hiding Sophie’s shock. The expression on her beautiful face immediately changed. After glancing around and seeing that no one else was around, she carefully asked in a very low voice, “Have you done something bad? Are you in trouble?”

Nodding, Han Shuo open-heartedly admitted, “That’s right. Something very bad!”

“Tell me about it. My father is rather powerful in Kasi Empire. Maybe I can help you!” Sophie was kind. She did not just want to stay and talk to Han Shuo, she wished to aid him however she could.

“Forget about it. Not even your father can help me,” Han Shuo flatly declined. Then, looking unflinchingly at Sophie, he continued, “I will stay in Kasi Empire for some days. You must not come in any form of contact with me. Just act as though you don’t know me.”

“How will that do!” Sophie wouldn’t let off easily, and in a most conscientious voice, she said, “Back in the Dark Forest, you once saved my life. And no matter what, we are friends. Now that you are in trouble, how could I pretend to not know? Besides, I promised you at that time that if you came to Kasi Empire, I would receive you well.”

“I’m not in trouble. It is you that will be in trouble if you so insist,” Han Shuo explained. The more Sophie acted this way, the more unwilling Han Shuo was to let her attract troubles.

But well, who knew that this woman was really quite the stubborn one. Sophie replied to Han Shuo in a righteous tone, “What trouble could I get into?! Calm down, nothing will ever happen to me. Haha. It’s such a rare occasion to have you in Kasi Empire. Therefore, no matter what, I, as the host, must properly thank you for you saved my life.”

“Lady, the one I offended is the Shrine of Ice. Do you think you can handle them?” When Han Shuo saw that Sophie was being so persistent, for the lack of better option, he revealed the identity of his enemy, the Shrine of Ice.

As expected, when the three words ‘Shrine of Ice’ were uttered, Sophie gasped. She stared at Han Shuo in appall for a while, before gently and cautiously asking, “Han, what’s going on? Why would you offend the Shrine? I know that you are a citizen of Lancelot Empire, but I don’t know you particularly well. How did you get yourself into this?”

Listening to Sophie’s words, Han Shuo realized that Sophie likely hadn’t been informed of his actual identity. Back then during their encounter at the Dark Forest, Han Shuo called himself ‘Bryan Han’ without thinking the matter through. Sophie had never heard of this name and assumed that the name Han Shuo informed was a false name. She probably had yet to associate Han Shuo with that city lord of Brettel City in Lancelot Empire.

“As for how or why we became enemies, that’s none of your concern. In any case, the Shrine of Ice will never let me off. So you better not be associated with me,” Han Shuo replied.

“But as long as the Shrine doesn’t find you, there won’t be an issue, won’t there?” Against Han Shuo’s expectations, Sophie made a crafty smile and took out two round, brownish fruits from her space ring. She handed one of them to Han Shuo and confidently explained, “My friend gave me these. After kneading it for a while and applying it to your face, you can alter your appearance. No one will be able to make it out.”

As Sophie spoke, she demonstrated to Han Shuo. She slowly kneaded the round fruit between her hands until it formed a thick, sticky substance. Then, she pointed at her own charming face before slowly applying the substance to her face and massaging her cheek and edges in front of Han Shuo.

From the looks of things, this was certainly not the first time Sophie had done this. Without using any mirrors, but merely relying on her practiced hands, after just a short moment, her face underwent an enormous transformation. Sophie's fair skin turned wheat-brown. Her cheeks and face contour transformed as well. From a beauty, she turned into a most ordinary-looking young lady. Even the skin on her neck and hands altered. Certain pharmacist possessed remarkable skills in formulating medicines. In fact, Han Shuo was also in possession of these drugs called Polyfruit, previously gifted by Cecilia. This time at Kasi Empire, as Han Shuo was emphatically not afraid of his identity being revealed, he did not use the Polyfruit.

"Ha! Magical isn't it? You definitely can't recognize me now!" Sophie proudly exclaimed after altering her appearance. Afterwards, she took out a small mirror and pointed it at Han Shuo. All smiles, she said, "Hurry, you just gotta change your looks a little with the fruit, and no one will recognize you. If the Shrine of Ice can't find you, I cannot be implicated."

Well, even the materials were all prepared. Han Shuo truly could not find another reason to decline. With no choice, he forced a smile and began kneading the Polyfruit. When the medicine liquefied into a sticky substance, following Sophie's instructions, he slowly applied it to his face.

But Han Shuo was obviously not skilled at this. More often than not, his unpolished hands would turn his appearance into something hideous and frightening. Even after fiddling for ages, Han Shuo could not shape a passable appearance. Considering that the effect would fade as time passed, Sophie hesitated for a moment before suggesting somewhat bashfully, "Let me do it for you!"

Without waiting for Han Shuo to answer, Sophie suddenly extended her slender jade-like hands and placed them on Han Shuo's cheeks. She began altering the outline of Han Shuo's face bit by bit in accordance with her familiarity and understanding of the Polyfruit.

Although the skin colour on Sophie's two hands had changed, they were still gentle and smooth as they rested on Han Shuo's cheeks. Especially when Sophie rubbed with her palms, which looked like two lovers flirting with each other, giving Han Shuo a kind of peculiar sensation.

Sophie was evidently also somewhat embarrassed. Although, due to the changes to her skin, her blushing was barely visible, Han Shuo nevertheless caught her uneasiness from her eyes.

“Done. What do you think?” As Han Shuo indulged in flights of fancy, Sophie suddenly stopped and said in a self-congratulatory manner.

In the mirror Sophie held up, an appearance unfamiliar to Han Shuo revealed itself. This person had a mellow chin and thick cheeks, a face only a morbidly obese man would have. Looking at the face in the mirror, Han Shuo involuntarily recalled Jack the little fatty.

“Hah! Exceptionally ordinary!” Han Shuo replied in a bitter smile as he looked into the mirror.

From the mirror, when he made a smile in the simple and honest face, he saw a guileless and honest look from every angle. And yet again, Jack the little fatty came to mind. This further intensified his forced smile.

“Let me tell you, a fatty is the least eye-catching! Hehe, it’s true. There are fatties all over the streets. No one will think of your original appearance,” Sophie explained with an air of professionalism before she giggled and added, “Moreover, the edges of your face are too prominent. Not the best material to disguise. It is only with chubby face that they could be concealed. Ha, I didn’t expect that after turning into a fatty, you would look quite so cute! Hehe!”

Seeing Sophie in giggly manner, Han Shuo felt as though Sophie intentionally turned him into a fatty. It was as if she would be happier the uglier he became. “Whatever. Do as you please,” Han Shuo said helplessly, not knowing whether to laugh or cry.

“Here, stuff this into your stomach!” Sophie took out a small pillow from her space ring and chuckingly handed it to Han Shuo. She clarified, “As you should know, a fatty should have a potbelly... Otherwise one can’t be called a fatty!”

When she said those words, a trace of mischievous glee flashed in Sophie’s eyes, which Han Shuo coincidentally caught sight of.

With that, Han Shuo could be absolutely certain that Sophie did so on purpose. But Han Shuo knew that Sophie did not have any intentions of malice. In any case, his face was already plump. Without voicing any opinions, he took the small pillow that Sophie handed him and stuffed it under his robes. With that, a slightly rotund tummy took shape.

“Ha, not bad! Not bad at all! You take a look!” Seeing Han Shuo with a bulging stomach, Sophie let out a somewhat malicious laughter. She took multiple looks at Han Shuo’s little belly with the mirror in her hand, and even complacently patted it. Convulsing with laughter, she said, “I shall pardon you this time. Let’s see if you dare turn on your heel and flee like a bat out of hell when you see me in the future!”

It was only now that Han Shuo became aware why Sophie did so. As it turned out, this was to retaliate Han Shuo’s evasion earlier. It seemed that women were indeed vengeful and unforgiving creatures. Even a lady as kind Sophie was no exception, stubbornly punishing Han Shuo with this practical joke.

Indeed, women must not be offended. Even beautiful, kind-hearted women are no exception! Han Shuo lamented as he forced a smile.

“Alright. Now you just need a change of clothes and to deliberately hunch your back. Then no one will recognize you for sure!” Sophie ceased her laughter and looked at Han Shuo satisfyingly, putting forward suggestions to further polish up her work of art.

Han Shuo grudgingly took out a new set of outer garments. Originally, he had planned to have Sophie look away but he immediately recalled her mischief. He decided to play tit-for-tat. Right before Sophie, as though she wasn’t there, he took off his clothes.

Han Shuo only had one item of sturdy, durable warrior’s gown on his upper body. When this outer layer of clothing was removed, the majestic bare body of his was completely revealed. His perfect physique, like the cutting edge of a sharp blade, gave off a most piercing impression, while brimming with an extraordinary charisma unique to men.

Sophie turned into a fool and stared blankly at Han Shuo’s magnificent naked body. Other than amazement, there was even a thread of intoxication in her eyes. Perhaps she had never before seen a physique of such perfection, and therefore couldn't react momentarily.

Suddenly, Sophie roused from her daze. She anxiously turned around. Stomping and panting with rage, she said, "Hoodlum! How could you do that in front of me! You thug! How infuriating!"

Seeing Sophie so frenetic, Han Shuo felt incredibly light-hearted, as though his bad luck was completely washed away. He chucklingly said, "Hehe, I'm not concerned about it. Why are you concerned for my sake?"

"You, you wretch! I knew you weren't a good guy the first time I met you, and sure enough, I was right!" Sophie indignantly denounced Han Shuo. Shortly after, she softly talked to herself, "This chap, he's really well built!"

When Sophie said so, Han Shuo suddenly recalled the time back at Dark Forest, the two once had a good time together. Han Shuo's heart was inevitably swept away.

"Humph! Are you done yet? Hurry up, we are going back there!" Sophie angrily asked with her back facing Han Shuo.

"Done. Where to?" Han Shuo asked in astoundment.

Sophie turned around and said, "The auction place of course. Where else would it be more lively than the auction place today in Kasi Empire?"

"Sure!" Han Shuo gladly agreed. It was exactly what he was hoping for.

Chapter 488: The Joys of Being Ordinary

The duo had only left for a while, but when they returned to the auction place, they had transformed into completely different persons. One was a big, tall, honest-looking fatty, and the other, an average-looking girl that seemingly came from rural area. Muddling along the bustling street, they looked very ordinary. No one could have thought that they were the center of attention just moments before.

With the city's defense troops clearing the way, nobilities that came from every city in Kasi Empire, and even from other nations, entered the auction center one after another.

"This thing is only worth three gold coins at most!" Sophie said resolutely to a vendor while holding up a crystal button in her hand.

The person manning the stand was a petite middle-aged man. Putting on a honest face, he replied in a professional manner, "Miss, this is a Blue Dream Crystal from the southern part of Brut Merchant Alliance. There is absolutely nowhere where you could buy this for less than five gold coins!"

"Ha. Ha. Open your eyes and see. Its colours aren't particularly clear, the workmanship of the button is so crude, and you actually dare claim that this is a Blue Dream Crystal from the southern area of Brut Merchant Alliance! You are truly daring in making such an unfounded claim! There, look, these crystal fragments on my chain are genuine Blue Dream Crystal. See just how different they are in terms of luster!" Sophie took out a crystal necklace from her pocket and swayed it in front of the vendor's face, forcing him to see what a genuine Blue Dream Crystal looked like.

Those wearing space rings did not usually appear in such places. Therefore, before re-entering the region, Sophie not only kept away her only space ring, but she also had Han Shuo put away his as well. With that, there would not be an item on them which would distinguish them from any ordinary person.

When the vendor realized that he couldn't deceive Sophie, his face sank and he said, "How about this, four gold coins. Take it or leave it!"

“Three gold coins! Only three gold coins! This button has coarse workmanship, and is only worth as much! Look here, the inlay site between the button and the crystal, there’s a fine scratch over here. Also, here...” Sophie was suddenly an expert and jabbered on and on, laying out each and every fault on this crystal button.

Han Shuo blankly stared at Sophie, dumbstruck. Listening to her absolutely unrestrained criticism of the crystal button for the price difference of one gold coin, he simply could not understand what the point was.

Finally, after a series of bombardments by Sophie, the vendor raised the white flag. He put on a forced smile as he passed the crystal button to Sophie, and said, “I will take three gold coins. But why would you insist on having it when everything is wrong with it as you mentioned?”

“Oh, its shape is nevertheless a little beautiful,” Sophie said a kind word for the very first time. After pleasingly attached the crystal button to the corner of her clothes, she turned to Han Shuo with a smile and asked, “What do you think? Looks nice, doesn’t it?”

“Not bad!” Han Shuo answered. After a short pause, he added, “Given your appearance now, it fits you well!”

This kind of forged jewel made of poor material and crude workmanship, other than the rather unique design, there really wasn’t anything appealing about it. However, Sophie appeared rather mediocre as well at the time. Putting on such an ordinary and coarse ornament, they actually complemented each other well.

Sophie obviously made out the meaning behind those words of Han Shuo’s. She glared at Han Shuo before turning to the vendor and said, “Shopkeeper, you may get the payment from him. Hmph, nobody asked for your cutting remarks on me!”

Three gold coins was peanuts to Han Shuo. It’s just that he found Sophie’s attitude to be somewhat funny and ridiculous. Without hesitation, he took out three gold coins and handed them to the vendor. He caught up to Sophie and asked, “It’s just a few gold coins. Given your wealth, there is no need for you to waste time haggling, is there?"

Sophie was a sky rider, and her father was a renowned sacred knight in Kasi Empire. Whichever way one looked at it, Sophie was in no way lacking in the wealth department. For such a character to engage in a debate with a hawker over a few gold coins, Han Shuo found that to be truly absurd.

"What do you know? It is only at such moments that I truly feel like a normal person!" Sophie shot a glance before she answered without thinking.

Han Shuo stared blankly and thought for a moment. When he gave another look at Sophie and saw that the worries showing in her eyes were quickly vanishing, he immediately understood the meaning behind Sophie's words.

As the daughter of sacred knight Sulo, Sophie ought to have been treasured and cherished to the most since her birth. Everyone had probably treated Sophie like a little princess all her life. Money, jewelry, treasures, whatever Sophie wanted, she could possess it with little to no effort. It was precisely because Sophie had never experienced life as an average civilian that she wasted no interest for the auction sale where the affluent and gentry gathered, but instead fancied loitering around these booths belonging to small merchants and traders.

In his previous world, Han Shuo lived an ordinary life in an ordinary household. And when his soul first arrived at the Profound Continent, he went through even pettier, lower beginnings. He had long been used to such lifestyles, and therefore wouldn't be so passionate about such things. If it was not for the presence of certain unique items, Han Shuo wouldn't have derived much pleasure in this kind of place.

"Oh, right. What did you come here for?" Sophie suddenly recalled this question after walking some distance. Shortly after, somewhat surprised, she said, "You itch for fun in places like this too, don't you? Ha, I should have made it out earlier. From your clothing and space ring, you must come from a affluent family as well. It seems we have more in common than I thought!”

After listening to Sophie’s opinionated explanation, Han Shuo smilingly shook his head and said, “Unlike you, I wasn’t born with a silver spoon in my mouth. I’ve tasted all kinds of hardship since I was young. The reason I came to such a place is that in such places, one who knows what’s what can obtain some real treasures!”

“What? That can’t be true. How could there be any good stuff in such a place?” Sophie obviously wasn’t too convinced. She came to such places purely for fun and games. Deep down in her heart, she most definitely did not feel that there would be anything truly valuable in such places.

“You don’t believe me?” Han Shuo looked at Sophie in all smiles, as though planning to prove it to her.

“I don’t!” Sophie could not resist doubling down on her words upon seeing Han Shuo’s assertiveness.

“Come with me!” Han Shuo gestured at Sophie to follow him, turned around, and headed for another area. It looked as if he was determined to prove Sophie wrong.

Sophie was rather skeptical and hurriedly followed behind Han Shuo. She thought to herself, Let’s see what tricks you will play this time!

After squeezing seventy or eighty meters through the unending stream of crowd, Han Shuo stopped in front of an unremarkable booth. He conveniently picked up a gray, average-looking rock, and smilingly asked the seller, “Sir, how many gold coins is this rock?”

“Oh, five gold coins. If you really want it, I can make it cheaper for you!” the seller replied without thinking the matter through.

“Five gold coins it is!” Han Shuo clearly did not share that unusual hobby of Sophie’s. He unreluctantly withdrew five gold coins from the space ring in his pocket and handed it to the seller.

As this point Sophie began to have some doubts in her heart, she did not ceaselessly haggle on the prices. Seeing Han Shuo leaving this vendor’s booth, she hastily followed after him. As this was a rather deserted region, Han Shuo only walked a short distance before he reached a most secluded spot where he waited for Sophie to catch up.

Looking at the grey rock held in Han Shuo's hand, Sophie astoundedly asked, "This is the so-called good stuff you mentioned? You can go to any mine and there will be this kind of grey rock all over. Doesn't seem very valuable to me!"

Smilingly shaking his head, Han Shuo said, "Don't make up your mind so quickly. Give me your weapon!"

Sophie was clueless, and yet she still did as Han Shuo instructed, taking out a longsword from her space ring and handed it to Han Shuo. With one glance at this delicate longsword, one could tell that it must be a priceless artifact.

Han Shuo groped on the scabbard and touched the glossy smooth surface of gems embedded on it. He smiled at Sophie, "Indeed a wealthy one! No wonder you get a kick out of impersonating the poor!"

"Cut the talk. I want to see just how will you prove that this stone is a good stuff!" Sophie chuckingly said and crossed her arms in front of her chest, waiting for Han Shuo's demonstration.

Han Shuo smiled and did not say any more. Right before Sophie, he drew out the longsword from its sheath, and gently flicked the sharp end of the sword. Ding! A crisp and clear tone resonated from the longsword.

Under Sophie's attentive gaze, the grey rock in Han Shuo's palm was pulverized into grey dust when Han Shuo exerted force with his five fingers. With his hand moving back and forth, he gently sprinkled the fine powder. Layers of grey rock powder were evenly deposited on the edges of Sophie's longsword. Puff! A ball of bewitching flame kindled at Han Shuo's palm.

Sophie gasped. She stared at the flame in Han Shuo's palm in appal, and said, "You even dual cultivated in fire magic? Something's amiss, there's no presence of fire element. What is going on?"

Han Shuo shook his head at Sophie smilingly. He did not explain why he could ignite a flame in his palm without using the fire element, but instead called attention, "Watch carefully!"

Sophie did not further question but focused, fixing her eyes on every movement Han Shuo made. Under the attentive gaze of Sophie's glistening eyes, Han Shuo directed the flame in his palm towards the blade edge of the longsword which was facing the ground. In the roasting of the flame from Han Shuo's palm, Sophie's longsword slowly turned scorching hot.

"Be careful! This was a gift from my dad when I became a sky rider. Don't leave a scratch!" Sophie cautioned Han Shuo as her heart began to ache watching Han Shuo cook her sword with fire.

Han Shuo signalled Sophie with his eyes, telling her to be at ease. Then, Han Shuo squinted, and his demonic yuan started operating in secret. Through his hand holding the sword hilt, demonic yuan flowed into the longsword. Under the double action of the blaze and demonic yuan, the grey powder deposited on the sword edge astonishingly melted into the blade.

"Wow!" Sophie was yet again shocked by the sight before her eyes. She exclaimed in disbelief, "You are an alchemist too! I really did not make that out!"

Han Shuo did not reply. He continued to focus on dissolving the Densinium into the sword, observing the layer of fine dust slowly vanishing into the sword edge.

Han Shuo had already spotted this Densinium rock the day before. This was an unusual ore that could increase weapon density and allow greater circulation of energy. In the canonical text of weapons refinery for demonic arts practitioners, Densinium was known to be a very useful rock. However, in this world, Han Shuo discovered that hardly anyone knew of its utility.

There was an awful lot of Densinium in the place of extreme metal at Mount Silk. Han Shuo had long mixed an appropriate amount of Densinium into the Demonslayer Edge. Therefore, when he saw the Densinium rock there the previous day, although intrigued, he did not purchase it. But to prove to Sophie that such a place was truly a treasure trove, he specifically came back and bought a piece of it.

By the time all of the Densinium powder was dissolved into the blade, the sword edge had reached an extremely high temperature. It was at this moment that the flame in Han Shuo's palm that was roasting the sword edge turned from red to purple. Other than creaking noises, light puffs of smoke were released from the longsword. It was a natural phenomenon when matter in high temperature was suddenly cooled off.

"Be careful! Don't tell me you are taking advantage of my longsword for some metallurgy experiment?" Sophie was still very worried about her longsword. As she reminded Han Shuo to be careful, she questioned if Han Shuo actually had malicious intentions.

"Take it. Inject fighting aura into it and see what difference it has compared to usual." Han Shuo did not answer Sophie's question but tossed the longsword with its scabbard to Sophie.

Sophie hastily reached out to catch the sword. When she caught it in her hand, she let out a cry in surprise at once, "It grew a few kilograms heavier!"

Looking at the rock around the size of a clenched fist, which was crushed into dust in Han Shuo's hand before dissolving into her longsword, she couldn't figure out how some finely pulverized rock could actually increase the weight of her longsword by kilograms. It was a miracle.

"Try with fighting aura," Han Shuo reminded.

Still in amazement, Sophie immediately infused fighting aura into the longsword in her hand. When Sophie poured fighting aura, the longsword suddenly glowed with silvery light of fighting aura at a speed beyond her comprehension.

"Im... impossible!" Sophie cried out. Looking at Han Shuo with shock and bewilderment, she said, "The longsword has greatly increased responsiveness towards fighting aura!"

“That’s right. This is the function of the rock! I think you should know, during crucial moments in battles, what it would mean to be able to release the power upon injecting fighting aura into the longsword,” Han Shuo said grimly.

“I understand. This means one could seize the decisive opportunity, and perhaps even gain the upper hand in an evenly matched battle!” Sophie realized. Shortly after her sparkling eyes turned to Han Shuo, and she said, “This is incredible! How did you do that? That is truly unbelievable!”

Chapter 489: Auction Place

“Hehe, this is why I say, those who know what’s what could obtain good stuff from a place like this!” Han Shuo said smilingly.

“Let’s go. Take me shopping with you. You seem like a person who does know what’s what!” Sophie said in high spirits. She grasped firmly onto the corner of Han Shuo’s shirt and pulled him towards an area bustling with activities.

Han Shuo helplessly followed along. He thought to himself, Wasn’t it you who first said that as the host, you must properly receive me? How did it become me that has to keep you company instead? It seems that words that come out of a woman’s mouth definitely cannot be trusted.

Seeing that Sophie was in high spirits, Han Shuo did not throw cold water on her. He accompanied her cramming through a congested crowd and visited various vendors’ booths. By utilizing his accurate senses for substances, Han Shuo found several worthy items suitable for her.

“Han, you are amazing! How do you know so much?” Sophie said excitedly to Han Shuo as she firmly held onto a jade bracelet of coarse workmanship.

The jade bracelet was also one of the things that Han Shuo helped Sophie select. After wearing this jade bracelet, she could sense the effect of the jade bracelet in relieving fatigueness. After listening to an entire lecture about the efficacy of jade bracelets from Han Shuo once through, Sophie truly felt utmost admiration for Han Shuo, almost prostrating herself before Han Shuo in adulation.

“It’s almost afternoon now. Let’s visit the auction sale as well,” Han Shuo suggested as he smilingly looked at Sophie.

“There’s nothing interesting about that place, might as well stay here and continue strolling around,” Sophie replied with her lips curled. She clearly had no good opinion of the auction place.

“Inside this auction which is held only once every three years in Kasi Empire, there will certainly be many interesting people and objects. Since I have already come to Kasi Empire, it is inexcusable to not experience it. And you, as the hostess, perhaps it is time for you to do the honors?" Although the stalls outside on the streets definitely proved useful, there must be even more precious treasures at the auction. Not only that, those items put up for auction had been well appraised. It was for these reasons that Han Shuo made such a proposal.

"Fine. Since you are being so insisting, I shall go there with you," Sophie grudgingly agreed to Han Shuo's request. Following behind Han Shuo, they headed towards the auction place.

The auction was located in an enormous building with a squadron of knights in shining armour sturdily guarding the entrance. When Han Shuo and Sophie over, they witnessed these knights in the doorway standing refined and courteous. Although these knights could still be considered as friendly in attitude, they no doubt obstructed the two in their path.

"Lady, gentleman, no entrance without an invitation letter," one of the knights reminded smilingly.

Given Han Shuo and Sophie's current ordinary appearance, along with the very ordinary clothing on them, after putting away their space rings, there was not one exceptional feature on them. Obviously, characters in commoner's dressing should not be appearing in such a five-star premier venue where the privileged classes congregated.

Han Shuo let out a cold scoff, inwardly thinking that this kind of people could definitely be found in whichever region. Don't get fooled by this knight's urbane manner on the surface, the ridicule and despise showing in his eye were hardly concealed. Han Shuo could tell the disdain in his heart with just one look.

"There, this is the invitation letter. Can we go in now?" Sophie casually took out two invitation letters and handed them to the knight with a light groan. The knight was astonished. He clearly never expected that someone like Han Shuo and Sophie actually had the qualifications to receive the invitation. He foolishly stared at Sophie and Han Shuo, and briefly forgot how to speak.

“Can we go in?” Sophie questioned once more in a slightly louder voice.

“Of course, of course!” the knight was suddenly roused and he hastily replied. He then stepped aside and executed a bow. In a courteous manner, he said, “Please come inside!”

“Humph!” Han Shuo shot a cold glance at this knight before marching inside in large strides along with Sophie.

As soon as they crossed the entrance, they saw a splendidly decorated beautiful scene with glorious lightings. Further inside was an incredibly spacious hall, with rows and rows of gorgeous, glittering crystal lanterns suspended high up above. The ground was overlaid with soft red carpet. The hall had tiered seating similar to that of a luxurious movie theater. Exquisite pastries and fruits were neatly laid out on each table.

Straight ahead, an auctioneer suited in evening dress was cheerfully giving a presentation about an item. Colourful stage lighting casted down on a delicate staff embedded with a rhombus-shaped gemstone water-blue in colour. Under the illumination of the lights, this staff appeared even more beautifully dazzling. For some water magi who took pleasure in beholding the beautiful, this magical staff possessed a deadly temptation.

“Ladies and Gentlemen, this delicate magical staff was assembled by Master Faler of the elf race. This reverie-blue magical staff can triple the power of water element magical spells, and allow for greater recovery speed of mental strength. As for its design, perhaps only the word ‘perfection’ could describe it. The pieces of Master Faler are all astonishingly refined with not one exception...” On stage, the presenter was promoting the magical staff in a most provocative manner.

Han Shuo carefully observed for a moment. He discovered that this magical staff was indeed not bad, but what a shame that it was somewhat overly ornate. Its extremely artistic design was in fact not especially suitable for a magus to grasp it well. That Master Faler clearly cut down on practicality in his pursuit for perfection.

Given Han Shuo’s temperament, there was no way he would select a weapon like that. However, its beauty aroused the crazy pursuit of female magi. In Kasi Empire, thanks to the presence of the Shrine of Ice, most magi majored in water element magic. When the auctioneer finished his words, the crowd immediately started to flare up.

“Ladies, gentlemen, please come with me!” while Han Shuo and Sophie stared fixedly at the stage, a male waiter said to them smilingly.

“Is there any private room that is still available?” Sophie turned to this waiter and asked indifferently.

The waiter stared blankly and looked Sophie up and down. Only then did he smilingly reply, “I’m sorry. They were all fully booked long ago.”

Han Shuo understood that in this kind of high-class auction sale, there were rooms specially prepared for those true bigwigs a few stories upstairs, away from the grand hall with tiered seating. Those characters with great status would usually book ahead a private room for themselves.

If Sophie had come over together with Braque as originally planned, she would have been in one of those VIP rooms. But as she was currently with Han Shuo, all she could do was get over it.

“Nevermind then. Lead the way,” Sophie casually replied. With the waiter’s guidance, Han Shuo and Sophie arrived at their seating near the back row. A magical console was arranged in front of the delicate pastries. One could input an exact amount of gold coins on that console.

Chapter 490: Turmoil

The auction sale wasn't at all affected by the arrival of Han Shuo and Sophie. Under the most bewitching voice of the host, the bidding price for that magical staff climbed higher and higher.

Clamorous noise and never-ending sounds of discussions filled the entire hall. Some beautiful women wearing magnificent magical gowns, not in the least concealed their strong interests in that magical staff. This directly caused the auction sale to sink into a small scale chaos.

"What's your opinion of that magical staff?" After the two sat down, Sophie could not help but ask Han Shuo.

"Nothing particularly great about it! Han Shuo's lips pursed to the side. He then added, "Flashy on the outside but hollow on the inside!"

Against Han Shuo's expectations, Sophie most agreed with Han Shuo's evaluation. She said, "Yep, this magical staff is overly ostentatious. If I were a magus, I would never choose this kind of overly flashy magical staff."

Looking at Sophie with a surprised expression, Han Shuo smilingly said, "I thought that you would be just like them, and only pursue beauty in all things."

Sophie pouted and gently groaned, "I bought those small jewels from those booths purely to enjoy that kind of pleasure of shopping, not because I really particularly liked them."

"Oh?" Han Shuo gave her a cheeky grin. He pointed at the crystal button on her chest, and mocked, "Well then, how do you explain yourself wearing this crystal button, and even acting as though it were very precious?"

Sophie dazed for a second before waving her small fist and somewhat wittily said, "That's because I'm giving you face! You bought this for me. If I were to conveniently throw this aside, how impolite would that be!"

Han Shuo laughed involuntarily. Although he understood that Sophie was purely joking with those words, he nevertheless felt really happy in his heart. For Sophie would wear a coarsely made button which was worth only three gold coins, regardless of whether she really was being considerate, as the benefactor, Han Shuo definitely felt that he received the proper respect he deserved.

It had to be said that when chatting with Sophie, Han Shuo felt a most comfortable and relaxed sensation. It was just like conversing with a confidante with no restrictions whatsoever. This made Han Shuo feel very comfortable.

“Huh? Why is he here? Suddenly, Sophie let out a soft cry and immediately lowered her head. She even grabbed Han Shuo and made him do the same.

Han Shuo, being unexpectedly pulled by Sophie, nearly knocked his head against Sophie’s. Leaning closely together, an air of wonderful fragrance rushed into Han Shuo’s nose. The naturally refreshing fragrance caused Han Shuo to reminisce of a good time. Back then at the Dark Forest, the two had once leaned so closely together, encircled with the scent of each other’s.

A delegation walking at a steady pace gradually walked past Han Shuo and Sophie by the footpath on their left. With the servers respectfully welcoming them, they slowly ascended to the VIP room on the second floor.

One of the men leading the party had a cordial smile. He wore a pithy, clean warrior gown as white as snow. He had broad shoulders and thick hands, displaying an imposing demeanor. He was obviously an experienced swordsman or knight.

“Your father?” Han Shuo only took one glance, and through his consciousness, he sensed the energy contained in this person’s body. It was extremely difficult for one to sense this energy without first reaching a certain realm. “How, how did you know? You’ve seen my dad before?” Sophie was in slight disbelief.

Shaking his head, Han Shuo replied, “You two looked rather similar in appearance and so I made a guess. I didn't think he would actually turn out to be your father."

Appearance was merely one aspect. The most significant thing was that the fighting aura that Sophie cultivated was homologous with that of this person. An ordinary person wouldn't have been able to sense it. But as Han Shuo possessed an extremely mighty consciousness, he could detect it after carefully probing it.

"He must have gone to the VIP room Braque is at. Humph! How could he, without asking for my consent, decide that on my behalf? I really hate him!" Sophie said furiously. It was apparent that Sophie held grievances towards Sulo.

Han Shuo wasn't aware of the matter between Braque and Sophie. Therefore when he heard Sophie grumble so, his curiosity pushed him to ask, "What's the matter about?"

"Not-nothing!" Sophie had turned somewhat flustered as she hastily replied.

Han Shuo could not make heads or tails of it, but he did not question any further. He pointed at the stage and said, "The next item is pretty good. I think it suits you quite well!"

After Han Shuo finished those words, Sophie sneakily took a glimpse ahead. When she found out that there was not a trace of his father Sulo within sight, she let out a sigh of relief, and gazed at the stage with great interest.

At this moment, with the auctioneer's guidance and light cast on it, an armour, deep green in colour, slowly descended from the dropped ceiling above. The deep green armour was glossy smooth and shiny. It sparkled brightly under the stage lighting.

"This piece of knight armour is a craftwork of a dwarf master artisan. Although there's no clue as to which dwarf artisan it actually came from, from the luster of the armour, "... after the armour was revealed, the auctioneer began his enthusiastic promotion again.

“This piece of armour is very beautiful indeed. But is really as sturdy as he makes it out to be?” Sophie was somewhat unconvinced, and said to Han Shuo while observing the armour from afar.

“It should be passable. There are a few kinds of rare ores mixed into it, which includes black iron, black gold, and mithril. Those forged by the dwarves shouldn’t be anything poor. You can consider getting this,” Han Shuo explained.

“Forget about it. My father is in the VIP room. Although we can’t see him from here, he could see us from high up above. I have once used this face to prank him, and even still he could recognize me. If by any chance he catches me red-handed, I’m done for!” Sophie adorably stuck out her tongue like a dead cow. But shortly after, as though she were afraid that Sulo would spot her from above, she lowered her head again.

“20 thousand gold coins! Young master Braque bids 20 thousand gold coins!” before the auctioneer even finished banging the drum for the armour, a loud voice called out from the crowd.

Sophie lightly groaned, and uttered in disdain, “Pff, scoundrel, I will not be grateful for that!”

Although Sophie lowered her voice, Han Shuo could still hear her words clearly. Raising his head to gaze upstairs, in a surprised tone Han Shuo said, “Who is this Braque? He threw out such a hefty price before the host even completed his speech!”

“He’s Braque Pillon. You are in Kasi Empire, don’t tell me that you don’t even know who he is?” Sophie was somewhat startled, and asked Han Shuo with a strange look.

Shrugging, Han Shuo frankly said, “I really don’t. Is he famous?”

Sophie made a defeated expression, and only then did she osternly explain, “In Kasi Empire, although the Shrine of Ice has great power, it is still the Pillon royal family that maintains absolute control of Kasi Empire. Braque is the son of Prince Bradley. He is not a benevolent type of person. It’s troublesome enough for you to offend the Shrine of Ice, so by all means, don’t offend this family clan.”

"Thanks for the reminder!" Though Han Shuo wore a smile on his face, he didn't exactly take the advice to heart. On the Profound Continent, there weren't many who could threaten Han Shuo's life. This so-called royal family was nothing in his eyes.

"Bradley? Bradley Pillon of Cesar City?" Suddenly, Han Shuo seemed to have recalled something and questioned further.

"Yep! In the whole of Kasi Empire, there is only one Bradley Pillon." Sophie creased her brows and added, "You are already in Kasi Empire, how could you still be so unfamiliar with it?"

The reason Trunks was currently painstakingly expanding and strengthening the Valley of Sunshine all that while was to get to this Bradley Pillon. Han Shuo realized that this was because Annie, a girl that Trunks regarded as her very own sister, had suffered an unthinkable tragedy, with one of the perpetrators being Bradley.

Florida and Gustav both died in Trunks' hand during the struggle for authority over the Valley of Sunshine. Now, all that was left in Trunks' hitlist was Bradley who was enjoying overwhelming power in Kasi Empire. When Sophie mentioned this Bradley, Han Shuo couldn't help but sneer.

Since Trunks had set his mind on this person, Han Shuo would rather not take matters into his own hands. However, if Bradley dared provoke Han Shuo, it would nonetheless still be an enjoyable thing for Han Shuo to teach him an unforgettable lifelong lesson.

"20 thousand! Can I get a 21 thousand, 21 thousand...?" the auctioneer continued, but the reaction below the stage was cold.

"In Kasi Empire, the House of Pillon wields the true power. No ordinary person would purposely make life difficult for any member of the family," Sophie explained to Han Shuo, sighing.

When Sophie uttered those words, she felt truly helpless about her own future. It was precisely because she clearly understood the influences of the House of Pillon in Kasi Empire that she would feel so powerless about her marriage to Bradley. Suddenly, a sense of dispiritment filled her heart. Sophie suddenly thought to herself that even though she possessed extraordinary strength, she could hardly oppose those politically powerful. So what was the use?

“Going once! Going twice! Sold, to young master Bradley!” the auctioneer rapped his gavel.

With Sophie in a downcast mood, she paid no attention to what was going on in the auction. Another four pieces of precious items were bidden off separately at high prices. Of the four items, two were magical robes with unusual functionalities, one was a magical scroll that could release a forbidden spell, and the last was a necklace encrusted with a hundred diamonds once wore by the empress of the former Verdun dynasty.

Han Shuo was not interested in those four items. The first three items were separately acquired by three different magi. The last necklace was bought by Braque.

Han Shuo observed for a moment, and saw that the more high and mighty Braque appeared in the limelight, the more gloomy Sophie became. This baffled Han Shuo somewhat, not knowing why would Sophie suddenly be in such melancholy.

“Ladies and gentlemen, the next item for bidding is rather extraordinary, even our experts could not determine what it is! However, this thing possesses a miraculous ability. When it is stuck on the ground, all the plants within a few kilometers around it grow healthier and taller,” the auctioneer on stage introduced.

Along with this introduction, a sheet of tender green leaf the size of his palm, stored on a crystal tray, was presented on stage. This leaf had a shiny surface and looked as though it was made with fine dark green jade. As soon as it was displayed, the polluted air in the entire auction hall was immediately purified.

It was as though they had all been teleported into the middle of a lush forest in an instant. Everyone’s body and mind seemed to suddenly loosen up.

Han Shuo, who had not been paying much attention suddenly jolted. Dazzling lights too bright to be stared into directly erupted from his eyes.

Sophie, who was right beside Han Shuo, witnessed Han Shuo's eyes widen dramatically. Her gloomy mood seemed to have been diluted by her curiosity. Doubtfully looking at Han Shuo, she asked in a low voice, "You want to get this?"

"That's right!" Han Shuo replied in a deep voice. "What is this thing? I have never seen such a strange leaf before. Do you know what it is?" Sophie was somewhat surprised, and she questioned Han Shuo closely with her eyes fixed on him.

Nodding, Han Shuo explained, "It's hard to explain to you. In short, this thing is very useful to me!"

"Then go and bid it! If you don't have enough gold coins, I can lend you some, but you must repay me!" Sophie said gleamed at Han Shuo. Shortly after, she took a look at a VIP room above before saying to Han Shuo, "I'm going to keep my head down, lest I be noticed by my father when you are bidding."

"It is rather inconvenient to say much about the origins of this piece of leaf. But still, I believe that those who are knowledgeable can feel how extraordinary it is. Alright, starting price is 10 thousand gold coins. May the best bidder win. The bidding starts now!" the auctioneer shouted.

"20 thousand!" "25 thousand!" "27 thousand!"

It seemed there were many who could tell a good buy when they saw one. Right after the auctioneer finished his words, the bidding price soared higher and higher.

Han Shuo wasn't at all in a hurry to show his hand, but observed the few contesters with his cold eyes. After a round of shouting and quarrelling, slowly, the price had inflated to 40 thousand gold coins. At this moment, many nobilities who were genuinely curious about the functionality of this treasure gradually no longer continued to participate.

There remained three people who were truly interested in the item. Of them, one was a hysterically rotund chap, another was an upper-class lady in bright-coloured clothing, and the last was none other than Bradley of the Pillion family.

Among the three, Braque was the most excited. Perhaps it was because he discovered that there were people who actually dared compete against him, but he appeared very irritated. Han Shuo could even hear his constantly quickening heartbeat due to the excitement.

That big fatty seemed likely to be a wealthy, successful merchant based on his attire, perhaps hailing from Brut Merchant Alliance. No wonder he dared fight over an item against Braque. As for the graceful upper-class woman, although Han Shuo couldn't tell her origins, he could tell that her financial resources was probably the least sufficient of the three as her face gradually grew more and more displeased. Han Shuo reckoned that the price of the item had exceeded what she could bear.

After observing for a while, when Han Shuo saw that the price had reached 50 thousand, he suddenly made a move. A string of digits suddenly came into appearance.

"A hundred... 100 thousand! Who, who is it?" the auctioneer shrieked and scanned his eyes through the crowd for the identifier number.

The whole auction house sank into turmoil!

Chapter 491: Wood Attribute Treasure

Throughout the years, by means of seizure and plundering, Han Shuo's pockets gradually grew deeper and deeper. So much so that by now, he had actually lost count of precisely how much wealth he had accumulated. In addition to the few million gold coins in Brettel City that he left under Jack's management, several million more were at Han Shuo's disposal in his crystal card alone.

'Viride Leaf' was a treasure of wood attribute. Others may not have known of it, but Han Shuo was very clear about its application. Not only could 'Viride Leaf' make barren lands thrive with life, it also possessed the miraculous ability to rejuvenate the undead. Most importantly, once this 'Viride Leaf' was in the hands of wood elite zombie, not only was he able to evolve faster, his strength was substantially increased as well.

At the moment, of the five elite zombies, water elite zombie and wood elite zombie were the weakest and of lowest intelligence. This was due in part to the fact that they were refined relatively later than the rest, but also because they had not acquired any treasures that could help them advance themselves.

During the trip to the Shrine of Ice days prior, water elite zombie had absorbed the enormous amount of energy in the Ice Goddess' statue. His appearance immediately underwent an earth-shattering transformation. Han Shuo could be certain that by the time water elite zombie had finished digesting all the energy he absorbed, he would surely be able to make a huge leap forward in his evolution. With that, the water elite zombie would be able to add his energy to the Penta-elemental Undead Formation.

Han Shuo was recently fretting for wood elite zombie, not knowing how to assist him. Who knew that he would find the treasure of wood attribute 'Viride Leaf' at this auction sale. Han Shuo was convinced that once wood elite zombie obtained the 'Viride Leaf', the Penta-elemental Undead Formation could definitely unleash its might to the fullest extent.

Therefore, Han Shuo was determined to take this wood attribute treasure home! In an attempt to rid the other rivals of any hope of winning the item, Han Shuo bid a correspondingly intimidating price of 100 thousand gold coins.

“Number 83! Number 83 put forth 100 thousand gold coins! Oh? Looks like number 83 is a friend in the hall!” the auctioneer finally found Han Shuo’s identifier number, and shrieked.

Following the auctioneer’s loud shout, the stage lighting swooshed and cast on Han Shuo. The crowd maintained their attention along with the lighting, and their eyes all landed on Han Shuo in an instant. Every last pair of eyes was filled with astonishment and curiosity.

The other three bidders for the wood attribute treasure ‘Viride Leaf’ were in VIP rooms on the second and third floors. Those on the second and third floors were the true wealthy merchants and powerful nobilities. Other than a few publicly acknowledged treasures, the high price of 100 thousand gold coins did not appear very often. This completely shocked the crowd. And when they then found out that the bidder was actually someone sitting in the grand hall, they were even more astonished.

This auction place also had its own division of social classes. Usually, those inside the grand hall were lesser nobilities. They were not usually the biggest spenders and wouldn’t compete for treasures that exceeded 50 thousand gold coins. It was only those in the second and third floors who would pursue any item they were keen on as though gold coins didn’t matter. Therefore, the highest bidders in the auction sale would usually be bigwigs from the second and third floors.

And now, an unprepossessing, honest-looking fatty, bid for an item with unknown functionality at a pricey 100 thousand gold coins. This obviously attracted the attention of everyone inside the room. Not just the guests in the grand hall, but even those bigwigs in the second and third floor craned their necks forward to see for themselves exactly who down below was being so grandiose.

“You goon, you are so damn rich!” Being at the center of attention of every person in the room, Sophie had to stoop her head even lower and bend down at her waist. She angrily said, "If you cause my father to see me here, I will get even with you!"

As not to bring the onlookers' attention to Sophie, Han Shuo did not reply her. He lazily sat in his seat with his eyes narrowed and with a smile, seemingly most leisure and carefree.

"110 thousand gold coins. Number 9 bids 110 thousand gold coins!" Suddenly, the auctioneer shrieked yet again.

Han Shuo raised his head and shot a glance, and found that the bidder was that upper-class woman of unknown identity. He noticed that after this woman bid that exorbitant price, her face grew even more unsightly.

"120 thousand! Mister Zofi of Brut Merchant Alliance bids 120 thousand gold coins!" the auctioneer hollered again. He had gotten somewhat excited. 120 thousand was the highest bidding price in the auction sale so far. Seeing that the crowd was very enthusiastic, the auctioneer was obviously very happy about it.

So that big fatty is Zofi Han Shuo thought to himself. Han Shuo had heard of him before. He was an outstanding, well-known merchant in Brut Merchant Alliance. His core businesses were primarily selling magical crystal ores and some large-scale war equipment. The six magic crystal cannons that Helen bought the last time, those came from Zofi. Sometimes if he received big orders, he could make a few hundred thousand gold coins from just one transaction deal. It was no surprise that he would be so extravagant.

After Zofi's bid of 120 thousand gold coins was announced, the auction house turned somewhat silent. Everyone noticed that as the price of the item increased, it started counting in six digits. This obviously exceeded what most people could afford.

"150 thousand gold coins! Oh! It's young master Braque!" just as the crowd was silenced in amazement, Braque again showed his hand, and directly bid up the price to 150 thousand gold coins. This is truly an astronomic price! It seems that the House of Pillion indeed has deep pockets!

Suddenly, a window to a VIP room on the third floor was opened. “My friends, this item, along with the two I previously bought, I intend to give them to my fiancée Sophie as presents. If all three of you would give me some face, I will be very grateful!” Braque said in an elegant manner with a smile on his face as he stood by the window.

The price tag of 150 thousand deemed to be somewhat excessive even for Braque. Otherwise, he wouldn’t have taken the initiative to say so. Given his Pillion royal family’s influences in Kasi Empire, when he opened his mouth, most people would never deliberately make things difficult for him.

“Since young master Braque said so, I naturally will not stand in his way!” Sure enough, even Zofi of Brut Merchant Alliance dared not to offend Braque. He stood up and bowed at Braque with all smiles.

“Thank you. If Mister Zofi found time to visit Cesar City, I will most certainly receive you well as a friend. I hope that at that time Mister Zofi will do me the honor,” Braque said invitingly.

“Certainly, certainly!” Zofi said as he smiled.

For such a big merchant like Zofi whose businesses covered every country, although he need not have been afraid of Braque, it would be enormously beneficial to his businesses if he could make such a friend. With Braque taking the initiative and throwing him an olive branch, Zofi naturally knew what to do.

After Braque yelled out that high price of 150 thousand gold coins, that upper-class woman who was also competing for it wore a face as ashen as the dead. She seemed to lack the financial capacity to continue bidding, and had to abandon this treasure which she very much wanted.

It was only at this moment that Han Shuo actually understood the relationship between Sophie and Braque. He thoughtfully took a look at Sophie who was burying her head down and in silence. From her grumbling, Han Shuo had a general idea of the situation.

With a faint smile, Han Shuo raised his head to look at Braque over at the third floor. He discovered that at this moment, it just so happened that Braque was looking back at him. Braque obviously had realized that that upper-class woman must have given up due to her limited financial ability. Zofi agreed to give him face, and not continue to compete against him. With that, the only rival left was Han Shuo who all of a sudden appeared in the grand hall.

His eyes meeting with Braque's, Han Shuo saw that Braque nodded with a smile on his face from a distance, and he seemed very friendly in attitude. However, in his eyes, there was a flavor of loftiness and threat.

Han Shuo made a naive smile and turned his head down to look at the number-displaying device in front of him. At this moment, the constantly silent and head lowered Sophie suddenly softly shouted, "Han, don't you remember what I said earlier? You already offended the Shrine of Ice. You must not offend the Pillon family altogether. If you really want that thing, I can pass it on to you after Braque gifts it to me. Don't fight with him over this thing."

Han Shuo stared blankly at Sophie before he put on a smile. Then, he reached out to the input device and entered a series of numbers. Afterwards, Han Shuo replied in a low voice, "A favor of a hundred thousand gold coins is too much. If you were to accept it, it would be extremely difficult for you to break away from the House of Pillion! Moreover, offending the Shrine of Ice is the same as offending the House of Pillon. The Shrine of Ice's Ice Celestial Corey is the oldest generation of the Pillion family, it's just you that didn't know!"

"200 thousand! Number 83 bid 200 thousand gold coins! Oh my! What a magical person!" the auctioneer suddenly yelled, his voice contained an inexplicable astonishment.

The whole audience turned into commotion once more. Their eyes again gathered on Han Shuo, trying to get a good glimpse of him.

"Who is that guy? He's got guts!"

"Hell yeah! He still won't let go even after young master Braque has spoken. He is simply not giving face to the House of Pillon!"

"Ha, what a reckless fella. Even if you're rich you gotta be alive to use it man!"

After the sky-high price of 200 thousand gold coins was announced, everyone present was once again in an uproar! Han Shuo's sharp ears could hear all the things that they were discussing. However, he was rather apathetic in his heart. Merely a puny little good-for-nothing young man from a wealthy family, how would Han Shuo even feel worried about it?

"I applaud your boldness, my friend!" Braque over at the third floor did not spiral into a fit of rage out of humiliation, but on the contrary, he praised Han Shuo.

"This guy is infamous for his dagger hidden in his smiles. His expression now indicated that he is truly outraged! You, you really are, sigh, what for do you provoke him?" Sophie with her head lowered, explained softly to Han Shuo.

"Hm?" Suddenly, a soft cry sounded from beside Braque. Sacred knight Sulo had his vision focused on Sophie's earlobe.

Sophie, someone of extraordinary strength, was shocked and grew frightened. Even without raising her head she could sense Sulo's gaze from above. She frantically covered her left ear with her hands, like she was trying to conceal something.

When Sophie was covering it up, Han Shuo noticed a red birthmark the size of a grain of rice on her left earlobe. Seeing Sophie covering it in a flurry, he instantly understood in his heart why she wanted to cover the red birthmark.

"Shoot! I'm way too careless! I totally forgot that with my dad's strength, he can see the birthmark on my earlobe from this distance away. Damn it, he must have found me!" Sophie anxiously said with her head down.

"Yep, I believe that he definitely saw you," Han Shuo said calmly. Han Shuo noticed that after Sulo let out a gentle cry, his eyes started flickering, obviously he had realized that the ordinary-looking young lady down there was precisely her treasured daughter in disguise.

“What should we do?” Sophie said frantically. She was rather out of her wits when it came to dealing with her own father.

“Just let it be. Your father did not tell Braque about what he discovered. Just continue burying your head,” Han Shuo said to Sophie. In his heart, he knew Sulo gave a lot of thought to Sophie. In any case, Sophie was the fiancée to Braque. If Braque were to find out that she disguised herself to be with Han Shuo, Braque would be furious. Therefore even though Sulo discovered this fact, he did not expose her.

“200 thousand gold coins going once!” while the audiences were in appal and Braque did not make a counterbid, the auctioneer’s piercing voice sounded loudly.

Perhaps the price tag of 200 thousand gold coins had exceeded Braque’s expectations, or perhaps Braque had other intentions, he only gazed at Han Shuo from high up with a strange smile on his face but did not compete. It seemed that he did not intend on continuing to battle it out with Han Shuo in the auction house.

“Going twice!” the auctioneer paused for a long while before he shouted, “If there is no higher bidder, if no one will raise the price, then this item belongs to this gentleman!”

Everyone had their eyes scanning back and forth between Han Shuo and Braque. It was as though they were waiting for a more brilliant follow-up. However, to their disappointment, this time Braque did not satisfy the delights of the audience.

“250 thousand gold coins! Goodness me! Mister Zofi has raised the price again! It is now 250 thousand gold coins!” Suddenly, a red sign was revealed on the second floor. The sum of 250 thousand gold coins was announced. The auctioneer was about to go crazy!

“Young master Braque would like to give treasures to a beauty, such a spoony devotion is so rarely seen! Hehe, I’m willing to use 250 thousand gold coins to help young master Braque accomplish this, and could perhaps be considered as befriending young master Braque. Friend down there, do you mind giving some face? Consider it as helping to make a beautiful story!” Zofi the true big fatty, said in all smiles to Han Shuo the false fatty down below.

“Thank you Mister Zofi. Whether you win this item or not, I will definitely take you as a friend!” Braque sent his regards to Zofi with an unusual smile on his face.

With that, the crowd became hyped once again. Every one of them looked at Zofi and Braque with inexplicable excitement, cheering, for things had taken a new turn.

Old fox, so willing to part with your hard-earned capital! Han Shuo cursed in his heart. Then, his cold eyes turned to look at that big fatty Zofi who was beaming from ear to ear. He reckoned that the reason Zofi came over here was to seize an opportunity to build a relationship with Braque. It seems that he had accomplished that goal.

“My apologies, but I really need it!” Han Shuo said decisively. Without leaving any room for reply, Han Shuo pressed on his console and keyed in another string of numbers.

“300 thousand! Good gracious! Number 83 bids 300 thousand gold coins!” the auctioneer shouted at the top of his lungs. He was so excited he almost passed out.

Perhaps it was because Han Shuo bid a really high price, or maybe because Han Shuo wouldn’t give him the slightest bit of face at all, the big smile on Zofi face shrank. Awkwardly looking at Han Shuo, Zofi didn’t know what to do for a moment.

“Mister Zofi, let it be. It appears that this friend truly needs it. Let’s not seize what others favour. Oh right, if Mister Zofi has the time later, please come over to my manor at Cesar City to some wine tasting. Hehe, I have a few bottles of truly fine wine over there. I hope that Mister Zofi would do me the honor,” as the entire auction house was in suspense in a stifling atmosphere, Braque all of a sudden smilingly made an invitation to Zofi.

Zofi stared blankly for a while. After helplessly nodding, he delightedly replied, "My pleasure!"

At this moment, Zofi no longer continued fighting over it. The auctioneer knew that there wouldn't be more drama. He crazily shouted a few times, seeing that no one else was bidding, he rapped the gavel and announced, "300 thousand gold coins. The item belongs to our friend at number 83!"

"Great, now you're in deep trouble. Let's leave quickly!" Sophie hastened.

"No worries, let's see if any more good stuff follows!" Han Shuo leisurely said to Sophie and brushed aside Sophie's concerns. He was not at all anxious.

After securing the treasure of wood attribute 'Viride Leaf' for 300 thousand gold coins, Han Shuo became much more at ease. However, with that, Han Shuo and Sophie became the focal point. When certain precious items appeared on stage later, everyone would cast their glances at Han Shuo from time to time.

After the wood attribute treasure 'Viride Leaf', another three invaluable items were revealed one after another. A bottled medicine that could restore eighty percent of mental strength in a very brief time, a delicate enchanted bow forged by a great alchemist, and the right of ownership over a small town in the southern part of Kasi Empire. As none of these were of Han Shuo's interests, he did not make a move.

Other than the 'Viride Leaf', Han Shuo did not bid for anything else until the end of the auction for the day. In his heart, he was weighing over whether or not he should attend the second day of the three-day auction sale.

After the auction on the first day had concluded, Han Shuo headed backstage. Under the admiring gazes of the crowd, he paid the 300 thousand gold coins, and received the treasure of wood attribute, 'Viride Leaf'.

However, when Han Shuo opened up the box containing 'Viride Leaf', his face immediately darkened, and he shouted, "Are you kidding me?"

Chapter 492: An Unforeseen Incident

The 'Viride Leaf' in the box looked just the same as the one on the auction stage, but the kind of energy and vitality was nowhere to be found. Han Shuo felt it with his hand, and immediately found that this thing was definitely not the wood attribute treasure 'Viride Leaf', but a counterfeit carved from a block of fine, dark green jade.

Having spent 300 thousand gold coins, only to discover that what he received was just a counterfeit article carved from regular jade. No one would be in a very good mood, let alone Han Shuo.

"What's the matter?" seeing that there seemed to be some sort of dispute, a high-level personnel wearing a dinner suit hastily came over and asked.

"Lord Zarya, the gentleman says the item is amiss!" an attendant in charge of receiving Han Shuo hastily replied.

Zarya had carefully observed Han Shuo during the auction. Extravagant characters like Han Shuo tended to leave lasting impressions on him. In any case, Han Shuo spent 300 thousand gold coins in purchasing the item. It was a matter of course for him to treat Han Shuo as a VIP.

Zarya hurried over. After listening to the attendant's explanation, he anxiously said to Han Shuo, "May I have a look?"

Unimpressed, Han Shuo handed over the counterfeit Viride Leaf. In a deep voice, he said, "Your auction house is very reputable in the whole of Kasi Empire. I suppose that you guys aren't deliberately playing a joke on me right?"

"Of course not! Of course not!" Zarya could make out the wrath between Han Shuo's words. He took out the 'Viride Leaf' and felt it with his hands, and his face fell. He asked the attendant, "Who brought the item here earlier?" "It was Galia, Sir!" the attendant replied.

Zarya took a deep breath and respectfully executed a bow towards Han Shuo. He sternly said, "My apologies, there is indeed something wrong with this item. Sir, we will first refund you the 300 thousand gold coins. Please give us some time, and we will quickly get the genuine item to you.”

“Han, it probably had nothing to do with the auction house. They wouldn’t purposely do such things that would damage their own reputation!” whispered Sophie, who has been right beside Han Shuo.

Han Shuo originally thought that the auction house was deliberately trying to dupe him. He was even prepared to give the auction house a bloodbath if they wouldn’t admit to it. But now, Zarya, the person in charge, immediately acknowledged the matter while also being very friendly in attitude. Hence, Han Shuo immediately realized that there was more to the situation than met the eyes.

“Alright then. I hope that your auction house will give me an appropriate explanation. In addition, it is I who won the item fairly and aboveboard, I hope that you will not sell it to someone else!” Han Shuo said in a deep voice as he stared coldly at Zarya.

Zarya looked at Han Shuo with fear and trepidation. He could suddenly feel this unprepossessing fatty become extremely frightening all of a sudden. From Han Shuo’s body, he felt killing intent that was as though material. That kind of stifling pressure petrified him and he knew that Han Shuo was not a man to make enemies with.

Zarya, being in the high position he was in, was no simple character. Just from that terrifying demeanor coming from Han Shuo he understood that he was not a force to be reckoned with. He agreed with him like a yes-man as he turned over in his mind how to appropriately resolve this issue.

“Please leave us a contact method. Once we find the item, we will immediately look for you to make a new transaction!” Zarya, who was scared witless, said respectfully after refunding 300 thousand gold coins to Han Shuo.

“No need for that. I will be here for the next two days. You guys better shape up!” Han Shuo coldly groaned before signalling Sophie with his eyes and striding out.

Sophie caught up to Han Shuo. When they were near the exit, seeing that no one was around, Sophie conjectured, “I think the problem didn’t come from the auction house, it’s more likely to be Braque, that two-faced guy!”

Suddenly, Han Shuo firmly grasped onto Sophie’s small hand, and before she could react, Han Shuo abruptly increased his pace, and rapidly vanished among the streets outside the auction house as he dragged her along.

Just as the duo was rapidly leaving, sacred knight Sulo hurriedly approached from another passageway. All he saw was Han Shuo pulling Sophie by the hand as they disappeared into the bustling streets. On the busy street lined with vendor’s booths and swamped with people, Sulo soon lost track of the two.

Sulo wore a gloomy face. Gazing into the crowd as the duo disappeared from his sight, he softly mumbled, “Who is this guy?”

The silhouette of Han Shuo and Sophie holding hands was deeply imprinted in Sulo’s heart. When he suddenly called to mind the influences of the Pillion family in Kasi Empire, Sulo had an instant headache. Shaking his head with a bitter smile on his face, he sighed, “Fifi ah Fifi, you really know how to find troubles for dad!”

“Mister Sulo, what’s the matter?” As Sulo was talking to himself, Thuram, a minion of Braque’s, suddenly came over and asked.

“No, nothing!” Sulo replied succinctly. Seeing Braque walk out from behind Thuram, holding up all the treasures he gained from the auction sale with a glimmer in his eye, Sulo didn’t feel the slightest bit of joy, but on the contrary, began worrying for his entire family.

Sulo knew Braque even better than Sophie. Despite his rather good approval rating in Kasi Empire, his true temperament was not at all as good-natured as one could see on the outside. This person, once he had his eyes on something, would never let go. Once he settled on something, he would not stop until he got his way. As it happened, the House of Pillon was the royal family of Kasi Empire. Sulo realized that merely with him alone, he was incapable of helping Sophie find true happiness.

He sighed. Sulo had decided that no matter what, he had to get Sophie and Braque together. Otherwise, it wasn't just a matter of Sulo and Sophie. Their collateral relatives would not need to bother thinking about having a foothold in Kasi Empire.

"Father-in-law, Fifi really is a headstrong one. She didn't even tell us where she ran to. But still, I am sure that among these things, there will be a few that Sophie will like," Braque laughed as he walked over, expressing his affection for Sophie.

He must be truly in love with Fifi. Fifi ought to be even happier with him. It must be so! Sulo consoled himself before he smilingly said, "How considerate of you. I think Fifi will surely see how much you care about her!"

"Of course, she is my fiancée! How could I not treat her well!" Braque chuckled.

While Sulo and Braque were conversing, Han Shuo dragged Sophie to the middle of the unending sea of people. It was only when Han Shuo found out that Sulo had lost track of the two that he let go of Sophie's delicate hand. He then explained, "Your father was just looking for you."

"Oh," Sophie replied without much thought. Although she appeared nonchalant on the surface, her eyes were somewhat flickering. Han Shuo's subconsciously rubbing his left thumb on her forefinger left her somewhat absent-minded.

Han Shuo too was somewhat embarrassed. As he was about to say something, he suddenly sensed a natural aura of vitality from the southwest. Immediately, he knew that that energy must have originated from the 'Viride Leaf'. He hastily said, "I have some business to take care of, wait a moment."

As soon as he finished those words, Han Shuo weaved through the crowd. He followed his consciousness southwest to the 'Viride Leaf'. Sophie only stared blankly for a short while and before realizing that Han Shuo had made some distance with her. Sophie knew that the Shrine of Ice was Han Shuo's enemy in Kasi Empire. Fearing that something bad would happen to Han Shuo, she chased up to him.

It was when Han Shuo had just left the crowd, before he took off to the air, that he found out that the energy of the 'Viride Leaf' had disappeared. Han Shuo was certain that the 'Viride Leaf' was being kept away by someone, which explained why that previously released energy disappeared again.

When that happened, Han Shuo grew even more anxious. He immediately deployed the Art of the Demonic Ninth Heavens and rapidly flew, continuing in that direction. He had to locate the 'Viride Leaf' before the thief left the area.

Han Shuo flew with all his strength. In just a few minutes, he made it to the region where he sensed the 'Viride Leaf'. It was exactly the same expansive public square at which Han Shuo and Sophie stopped over previously. He looked as far as his eyes could see, but discovered no one suspicious. When he concentrated his attention to sense with his consciousness, he could no longer feel the energy from the 'Viride Leaf'.

Han Shuo glanced all around him once more as he wracked his brain for another solution. Braque seemed the most obvious suspect of swapping Han Shuo's wood attribute treasure 'Viride Leaf'. But of course, Zofi and that upper-class woman were not to be ruled out.

Han Shuo was absolutely determined to obtain the wood attribute treasure. Unable to smoothly procure it with 300 thousand gold coins, Han Shuo had started to consider other means of taking possession of it. Although Zofi was rich and overbearing, he did not hold much power within Kasi Empire. As for that upper-class woman, she didn't seem to be a particularly politically powerful character either. Otherwise, she wouldn't have given up when the bidding price reached 250 thousand gold coins.

Having identified his objectives, Han Shuo was prepared to take the 'Viride Leaf' by force. In any case, he had already established a hostile relationship with the Shrine of Ice in Kasi Empire. Han Shuo was not about to be heedful of someone like Braque.

“Han, what’s wrong?” Han Shuo was still mulling in his head when Sophie hurried over to him, gasping for breath. As she did not summon her pegasus, this time, Sophie was even shorter on breath when she came over. Her chest was rising and falling, and seemed much bigger than usual.

“You! You hoodlum! What are you looking at!” Sophie immediately discovered that Han Shuo was looking in a strange direction, and yelled at him.

“I’m– nothing, not looking at anything!” Han Shuo replied in a flurry. After that, he explained, “I just sensed the Viride Leaf appearing here. But it seems that I’m still too late. Whoever took it probably hid it away and brought it to another region.”

“Stop thinking about it. Just leave it to the auction house. This auction house is one of the largest in Kasi Empire. Even His Majesty owns a share in it. They’ll settle it for you!” Sophie consoled Han Shuo.

“What if it was Braque who was behind it? Will they be able to handle it then?” Han Shuo raised a brow.

Sophie shrugged and somewhat helplessly said, “In that case, I don’t know,” “Alright, alright, let’s stop worrying about that! Hmm, it’s getting late. How about we meet again tomorrow?” Han Shuo said as he raised his head to look at the sky. He intended to send Sophie away and look for people from the Dark Mantle to ask about the location of Braque’s manor. And afterwards, at night, he would make a trip there to snatch the ‘Viride Leaf’.

“It’s still early, what are you rushing for! Hahah, come. First, I will bring you around to taste some interesting food. Then when the night falls, we will have a look at the nightscape of the well-known Riverie City of Kasi Empire!” Sophie had no intention of letting Han Shuo off so easily. She grasped at the corner of Han Shuo’s robes and giggled as she pulled Han Shuo with her. She then continued, “I’m only tugging on the corner of your shirt, so this can’t be considered as taking advantage of you!”

Being hauled by Sophie as she headed to their destination, Han Shuo immediately understood the meaning behind those insinuating words. He could do nothing but force a smile and explain, "Miss, that was due to the special circumstances of that time. Must you really hold such grudges even until now?"

Sophie shot a glance at Han Shuo and replied, "It's true that the circumstances were special. But hasn't that someone been acting a little too indecent while holding my hand?"

Han Shuo's mind went blank for a moment, and only then did he recall that when he held Sophie's delicate hand before, he had been subconsciously rubbing his thumb against the back of it. He was used to such intimacy with Emily, Fanny, and Phoebe, and therefore he instinctively did the same to Sophie earlier.

At that time, when Han Shuo became aware of his indecency, he immediately stopped. He even surreptitiously glanced at Sophie. When he saw Sophie acting as though nothing happened, he assumed that she didn't mind it. But who knew that Sophie would so deliberately expose him at this time.

Han Shuo's thick-skinned face blushed, but it was not visible as his skin was concealed. He awkwardly smiled and said in embarrassment, "I did not notice it. Ha ha, sorry!"

"Humph! Don't think I will ever believe your barefaced lie!" Sophie pouted and shot a glare at Han Shuo. But then, she magnanimously said, "But I'm a benevolent gentlewoman. As long as you keep me company and entertain me, I shall pardon you!"

"Umm, but, if I remember correctly, it is me who is the guest right?" Han Shuo said with a forced smile.

"That's irrelevant. If I'm happy, then you will be happy too!" Sophie giggled playfully. She started running as she towed Han Shuo, as though she wanted to make Han Shuo stagger.

Han Shuo had experienced first-hand just how unforgiving Sophie was. Nevertheless, he didn't think that this kind of harmless, petty practical joke of hers was excessive. He deliberately walked unsteadily, as though he really was staggering. However, in this situation, Han Shuo would suddenly lean closely to Sophie, and might 'accidentally' bump with her body.

Han Shuo mischievously laughed in his heart, awfully delighted in his exploit.

Credits

Translator: volaretranslations / Radiant Translations

Epub: Estevam / dotNOVEL